The secretary of the conference is Steve Douglass of California, Pa., who is also secretary of the West Brownsville Central Labor Union.

Associated Industries' Slush Fund to Fight Labor Legislation

CAHOES, N. Y., Sept. 16. — New York state employers organized in the Associated Industries, Inc., have collected a huge slush fund to defeat legislative measures favorable to labor, declared Joseph B. White, national organizer for United Textile Workers, to a mass meeting of Cahoes unionists. Union representatives must appear at the hearings of the state industrial commission appointed to investigate the many laws proposed for and against labor in the last legislatures. Unions must state their cases to the commission to get any sort of action on the compensation bill and other measures backed by labor. American Federation of Labor organizer James Roach, speaking at the same meeting, attacked the open shop operation of Cahoes textile mills.

LEWIS, WHY DO YOUR ORGANIZERS STAY AWAY FROM THE LATROBE AND IRWIN COAL FIELDS OF PENNSYLVANIA?

By JOHN BROWN, Worker Correspondent.

LATROBE, Pa., Sept. 16.—The organization of the non-union fields in the coal industry is becoming very urgent as you will see under what conditions the coal miners of the Latrobe and Irwin fields must work.

In the first place practically the whole field was shut down for six or eight months. A few of the mines worked two or three days a week. In this way the coal miners were starved into accepting the 1917 scale and then the companies proceeded to cut the wages below the 1917 scale. The mines have resumed activities somewhat.

Break Checkweighman Law.

Coal is not weighed in these non-union fields despite the fact that there is a law which damands the weighing of the coal mined and that a checkweighman must be on the tipple representing the men.

At a coal mine at Millwood, Pa., the coal is weighed. The miners working in the heading get forty-six cents a ton. The miners working in rooms get forty-one cents a ton. There are about three cars of slate to shovel back in the room from each cut, which they are not paid for. In the heading they get paid for loading a two-ton car of slate at the rate of thirty cents a car. It also seems that the checkweighman—that is the company checkweighman—must have a certain amount of dirty coal each day. When a fellow has dirty coal at this mine, they dock him anywhere from a half a ton to a ton from the car, no matter how little slate there may be in the coal.

Charge Exorbitant Prices.

Not satisfied with robbing the men of their wages at the point of production the coal operators have what is called a company store. Usually all the food is from 2% to 3% and sometimes as high as 50% higher than in any ordinary store. In fact the miner does not get any cash. He draws what they call "checks" at the store. This is common pasteboard marked 1, 5, 10 and 25 cents, with which the miner and his wife have to buy the necessities of life at the company store. It has no value at any other place. The miner must pay $9 a month for a four-room house. This is deducted from his pay. In winter, no matter how many stoves are going, your teeth chatter.

In summer it seems that it is an oven when the sun is at its highest. It is hardly possible to sleep on the place at all. Water is usually on the outside. In some cases it is close to the house. In some it is from 50 yards or more from the house.

Dirty and Gassous Mines.

Most of the mines in this region are dusty and gassous. It seems that the coal companies do not worry very much about safety devices or for the safety of the miners. This would mean an expenditure of a few hundred dollars. Why should they care whether one or more coal miners get knocked off?

They do not even go to the trouble of getting clay for the miners to shoot with. They get it only when an inspector comes around. Then they bring a couple of cars of it into the mine for display. Most of the time the miners are forced to shoot with what they call dummies, made out of paper and filled up with coal dust, despite the fact that the law calls for shooting of coal with clay. There is no sprinkling of the mines with water or rock dust, which is required by the law in gaseous mines.

Lewis Betrays Miners.

In 1922 the coal miners of this region struck 100% and fought bravely for a union and better working conditions. When victory was near, it seemed that Lewis did not want to see them organize. An agreement was signed with the operators without including the Irwin and Latrobe fields. They struck it out for three or four months after the Betrayal, but were forced to go back.

The miners are again ready for organization. The organizers of the United Mine Workers of America seem to be keeping a good distance away from this territory. The office of the United Mine Workers of America in Greensburg seems to be vacant. At any time or any day you go to it, you do not even get a cash. He draws what they call "checks" at the store. This is common pasteboard marked 1, 5, 10 and 25 cents, with which the miner and his wife have to buy the necessities of life at the company store. It has no value at any other place. The miner must pay $9 a month for a four-room house. This is deducted from his pay. In winter, no matter how many stoves are going, your teeth chatter.

AUTO MECHANICS BADLY UNDERPAID IN BOSTON SHOP

Studebaker Plant Uses Speed-Up

By a Worker Correspondent.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 16.—Notwithstanding that the Studebaker corporation is reported to have earned a profit of $16,000,000 for the fiscal year 1925, a so-called "factory system" was introduced when the Boston Studebaker service station passed from local to corporation control Jan. 1926.

The most sinister feature of this "system" is the piece-work, or production plan, which replaces the former hourly-rate for shop mechanics. There was some agitation against the installation of the plan, but due to the lack of organization (automobile shops are all on open-shop basis in Boston) the idea was put across. Automobile repair work is seasonal. The winter months' depression is looked forward to with fear by the mechanics. This fear is increased under piecework since mechanics are paid only for actual work where formerly they were assured a day's pay at least. The result is obvious—in "brisk" periods the mechanics work at fever pitch in order to earn a $10 to $12 pay slip to offset the poor returns of winter. Needless to say that a low standard of workmanship prevails and the attitude of the workman towards his fellow-worker when competition is thus reduced to an individual struggle, is appalling.

When worn out in mind and body and unable to keep pace with the younger, fresher men, he is shown the door. When business is good additional men are hired and these men, or as it often happens, some of the "regular" force are obliged to seek other fields when the rush subsides. The foremen aid in maintaining this system. The slightest protest on the part of a worker is greeted with the ever-ready reply: "If you don't like it, GET OUT."

THIRD PRIZE WINNER.

MINNEAPOLIS BROS BOILER WORKS RAT-SHOP

Long Hours, Low Wages Paid Workers

By A Worker Correspondent.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 16. — The William Bros Boiler Works is a typical capitalist slave-pen. Brutal bosses, long days of ten hours and a poor wage of 40 cents an hour are some of the conditions which make this true.

One worker told me that the company never hires a man except from an employment agency. This gives the superintendent easy money, as he gets a dollar of the fee of three dollars which the wage-slave pays the agency for the job. As one worker aptly remarked, "That kind of a man ought to be hung. He is getting a good salary and still must suck the blood of the poor workers." Such petty graft is of course, only one of many which characterizes capitalism.

Translant Labor.

Inasmuch as the slave-driving tactics of the bosses in this plant are disgusting to any worker with independence of mind, but many of the men stay long. This condition of transient workers is obviously to the mutual advantage of the superintendent and the downtown employment agency (The Briggs Employment Company, 317 Marquette Avenue), which furnishes labor for this plant.

Bosses Rawhide Workers.

One of these bosses in this Bros Works is notorious. He looks like a rat and acts as if he has perpetual constipation. It may be he is afraid he will starve to death if he loses his job which he would probably do, if he failed to rawhide the workers. This boss is the kind, evidently that the Bros Company needs to protect its profits.

"Opportunities."

"Opportunities" abound for an ambitious worker in this boiler factory. One must stay a year or more before he is given the chance to operate a machine. Marvellous progress for a wage-slave! Forty cents an hour to start with and good chances to learn a trade"—thus runs the hook, line and sinker from the mouth of the crafty employment agent for the suckers who still believe in capitalism in general and the Bros Company in particular hold out acres of "opportunities."

Union Badly Needed.

As far as known, to think of a union or union organization activity among workers of this boiler outfit would blacklist a man forever. A union would protect the workers from the brutality of the bosses, who are mostly a bunch of blockheads. The ten-hour day which now prevails could be changed to eight if a union of the workers stood for it.

The next, eleventh issue of Proletarian Tribune, the living newspaper issued by the worker correspondents of the Novy Mir, will be out next Saturday, September 18, at the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division St. It is the first indoor issue after the summer season.

HOSIERY UNION OPENS DRIVE TO ORGANIZE TRADE

3,000 Join Organization in Past Year

PHILADELPHIA—(FP)—The present time is favorable for the organization of the textile industry, said A. J. Muste, Brookwood Labor college, to the 15th annual convention of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, affiliated with the United Textile Workers.

Organization was the biggest thing before the 60 delegates from 20 cities. A study will be made of old age pensions. A scholarship for a 2-year course has been re-established at Brookwood.

Durham, N. C., is fast becoming a union center for the south since the Hosiery Workers carried on two hard strikes. The federation will keep a district manager in New York and New Jersey. Three thousand workers joined the organization in the last year.

West Brownsville Coal Miners Aid British Strikers

WEST BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 14.—Local 2230 of the United Mine Workers of America passed a motion at its meeting assessing each member $1 of each pay for strike relief. Pat Fagan, boss of the machine here, bitterly fought a proposal that some of this money be sent to the striking miners of Great Britain.

There are a number of miners on strike in the district and Fagan claimed the money should be used for them. So far little money that was meant for these miners has found its way to them. The union finally voted to send 40 per cent to the British miners and 60 per cent to the striking miners in District 5.

New York Board of Education Plans to Set Teachers' Hours

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. — (FP) — Hours of labor, ranging from five and a half to eight a day will be definitely set by the Board of Education of New York if the new by-laws now under consideration are adopted. The system puts the lengths of five and a half standard for ordinary class room teachers, with a possible additional 40 minutes at the option of the principal. Teachers of industrial subjects in vocational schools have seven and a half hours and teachers of agriculture, who are few in number, have a maximum of eight hours, the only five and a half would usually be required.

Sowing Seeds of Peace.

The visit of Thomas L. Hughes, international secretary-treasurer of the Teamsters', Chauffeurs' and Stablemen's Union, to Minneapolis last week should bring benefits to organized workers and to employers as well.

Mr. Hughes proved to be an energetic, likeable official of exceedingly good judgment. He was far different from the fire-eating, smash-'em-up type of an individual which the Citizens' Alliance seeks to picture international officials as being.

Employers who met and listened to him were impressed with his frankness, ability and constructiveness.

Workers who heard Secretary Hughes realized his capability, his sincere devotion to the movement and sound judgment. He won the confidence of all who heard him.

Both employers and workers will not forget that Mr. Hughes gave some mighty good advice not only as to protecting the union but in regard to preserving the industry and building up the industry which is dealing fairly with organized workers.

Mr. Hughes was not the first international official to address a meeting of both workers and employers in Minneapolis. Nevertheless, such occurrences are far too infrequent in this city.

It is in such gatherings the seeds of industrial peace, better understanding, and local prosperity are sown.

There would be far more prosperity and far more happiness in this city of Minneapolis if the workers and employers of every industry were organized and meeting together to solve the problems of employee and industry.

Organized workers and employers of the Minneapolis milk industry are to be congratulated upon the efforts they are making to meet their problems by co-operating with one another. It will be to the benefit of the entire city if this example is followed by every industry in Minneapolis.

—Minneapolis Labor Review, Sept. 10.

Comment.

THE editorial shova is a fair sample of the deadly dope that is being dished out to the American labor movement. The paragraphs which we have emphasized contain the fatal fallacies which, when subscribed to by large sections of the working class, make them easy victims of the bosses and their organizations more efficiency organs of the industrial capitalists.

That the well-being of the workers is dependent upon the general prosperity of capitalist industry is true only if one concedes the capitalists the right to own the natural resources and the machinery of production forever. This was the belief of the feudal lords before the capitalist system came into being and as long as the workers conceded the right of the feudal lords to the land they remained serfs.

THERE are no problems which the workers and the bosses have in common. The workers want the highest possible wages, the shortest hours and control of their jobs—in a word, a high standard of living and security.

The bosses want to pay the lowest wages for the longest hours and reduce the living standard to the subsistence level. That this is true is proved by the fact that this is done in all countries where, for one reason or another, the workers have lost the power of resistance.

Negotiations of organized workers with organized employers in order to set the basis for trade union agreements are one thing but conferences "to solve the problems of industry" based on the theory that the workers and capitalists have a common stake in industry, are another.

SUCH conferences inevitably tend to weaken the will of the workers to struggle for their demands and this in fact is the sole purpose the employers have in mind when they propose such conferences. They are cheaper than the rougher methods of strike-breaking.

That workers sometimes get an increase in wages and better conditions by following such a policy does not at all refute our statements. They may be a small but strategically section of the working class which the bosses want to placate (as is generally the case) or the first concessions are given in order to weaken the loyalty of the workers to their union as a fighting organization, as quite often happens.

Company unionism, either openly by name or covertly in fact, finds a fertile field in unions where the officials advocate the policy followed by Secretary Hughes of the Teamsters' Union and which is praised so highly by the editor of the Minneapolis Labor Review—very likely after Secretary Hughes had demonstrated in company with the editor his contempt for the Volstead act.

IN no city has the attempt to apply the theory of "worker-employer cooperation" had more disastrous effects on the labor movement than in Minneapolis. In preparation for this move the Communists and the left wing were attacked and many expelled. A virtual dictatorship was set up with an emissary of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor as the local Mussolini, all semblance of radicalism was banished and the Minneapolis labor movement died on its feet.

IT is still dead and it is now stated by honest conservatives that only the reinstatement of the once despised "reds" and the resumption of activity by them can revive the moribund trade unions. The same condition obtains in St. Paul where the same policy was followed.

The Minneapolis Labor Review is not serving the labor movement, but the bosses, when it publishes such misleading and deceptive editorials as the one quoted.

It might be remarked in passing that the Labor Review was a militant paper one upon a time when the Twin Cities had a militant and affective trade union movement. —W. F. D.

DETROIT — (FP) — The Workers Party is entering the fall elections in Michigan to encourage the formation of a mass labor party, William Reynolds, a Detroit union carpenter, the party's candidate for governor, said at a mass meeting.

The Detroit Federation of Labor, like many central labor bodies in the state, officially supported Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck, republican, for a fourth term. He was badly beaten by Fred W. Green Sept. 14.

About 30,000 were estimated in attendance at the great mass meeting finishing the parade and 20,000 heard the speaking with the aid of large lond speakers. .

LANSING, Ohio, Sept. 16. — The Lincoln mine of the Lorain Coal and Dock Co, located on the National Highway near here has reopened on the 1917 scale after having been shut down for the past six months. The announcement was made by G. G. Weiss, company official.

TETRA-ETHYL GAS SUFFERER SUES STANDARD OIL

Crippled Worker Seeks to Collect $200,000

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. — (FP) — Standard Oil company of New Jersey has a suit for $200,000 on its hands because a former worker at Bayonne claims he is the sufferer from his employment with tetra-ethyl lead. Henry Callis says that he is afflicted with a "serious disease of a nature not clearly established by medical science" as a result of his exposure to tetra-ethyl lead-treated gasoline in September 1924.

The worker says he has had to remain in bed since that time. Standard Oil company gave no warning of danger, provided no masks or gloves and did not have sufficient ventilation in the workplace.

Eleven workers in all are known to have died during various firms' experiments with tetra-ethyl lead gasoline. The scandalous list of dead and injured workers employed in the making of the supposedly "knock-proof" fuel finally brot a national conference under the United States surgeon-general and the ultimate promulgation of rules governing the manufacturing process. Tetra-ethyl lead-treated gasoline is now being made and sold generally. A Swiss scientist insists that widespread use of the fuel will mean the depositing of great quantities of lead dust on public highways and the possible poisoning of not only hundreds of thousands of workers but of the general population.

BUFFALO LABOR REACTIONARIES FEAR LABOR PARTY FORMATION

By HERBERT BENJAMIN.

On April 22 the legislative committee of the Buffalo Central Labor Council, which is composed exclusively of reactionary and conservative members of the council, brought into the council the following resolution which was adopted without a dissenting vote:

"Whereas, we believe that the future advancement of the just claims of the Buffalo labor movement along political lines depends on the intelligent use of the ballot, the only weapon that labor has in the political field to protect the rights of men and women who toil for their daily bread; and

"Whereas, we realize that up to the present time labor has failed to organize on the political field so that they would be recognized as a material factor in the political fabric of our city; and

"Whereas, the personnel of our present city council and the fruit of their labor cannot be taken as an omen of the success of the political policy of the Central Labor Council; therefore be it

"Resolved, that the legislative committee of the Central Labor Council respectfully recommends that the council instruct the officers of this body to petition the various local unions affiliated with the Central Labor Council to call a conference for the purpose of inaugurating a more cohesive political movement."

The few left wingers in the council had no illusions about the intentions of the reactionaries who are in control of the Buffalo central body. The very manner in which the resolution was worded, the proposal to "petition the various local unions to call the conference" without indicating just how these were to be induced to issue the call, all showed that the resolution was to be used only as a threat by the members of the legislative committee and their associates against some group of politicians with whom they were bargaining.

Progressives Fail to Join.

Efforts were made by the left wingers to indone the progressive members of the council to join with them in an organized effort to initiate action. But the latter, the nonrevisted "progressives" failed to respond to a call for action and proposed to wait a "little" longer.

The insincerity of the reactionary "leaders" of the Central Labor Council was further manifested when, on July 22, after three months had passed without any action being taken, a proposal of the Molders' Union, Local 84, that a conference be called to name a united labor ticket was turned down, and the matter referred to the legislative committee.

The committee reported on Aug. 12 stating, "we disapprove of the call by Molders' Union, No. 84, for a conference to form a labor party."

This report was concurred in by the safe and sane majority of the council and would probably have ended the matter in so far as the council was concerned if it were not for the fact that Brother Campbell, delegate of the Molders' Union, took the floor under good and welfare to declare that the molders would proceed with their proposed conference in spite of the decision of the council.

"Leaders" Worried.

It was at this time that the "leaders" of the council held a hurried consultation, which was followed by a motion that "at the next regular meeting the regular business be suspended in the interest of a conference to inaugurate a more cohesive political movement."

The conference of Sept. 9, which was to organize a "more cohesive political movement," showed the complete bankruptcy of the reactionaries. It showed also that the principle of independent political action is gaining an ever growing host of converts among the workers and that the reactionaries dared not make a frontal attack against the proposal to organize a labor party, but pretended that they favor the principal and are deferred only by consideration of timeliness.

Urge United Labor Ticket.

When the conference was opened and the secretary had concluded reading the call, the president of the council looked around helplessly for someone to call the conference to order as was to be done next. The chairman of the legislative committee which recommended the calling of the conference was actually at a loss. All looked expectantly in the direction of Brother Campbell. Brother Campbell did not disappoint them. The conference of Sept. 9, which was to organize a "more cohesive political movement," showed the complete bankruptcy of the reactionaries. It showed also that the principle of independent political action is gaining an ever growing host of converts among the workers and that the reactionaries dared not make a frontal attack against the proposal to organize a labor party, but pretended that they favor the principal and are deferred only by consideration of timeliness.

Urge United Labor Ticket.

When the conference was opened and the secretary had concluded reading the call, the president of the council looked around helplessly for someone to call the conference to order as was to be done next. The chairman of the legislative committee which recommended the calling of the conference was actually at a loss. All looked expectantly in the direction of Brother Campbell. Brother Campbell did not disappoint them. After making a comprehensive review of the developments which led to petition the various local unions affiliated with the Central Labor Council to call a conference for the purpose of inaugurating a more cohesive political movement."

Left Wing Sees Thru Moves.

The few left wingers in the council had no illusions about the intentions of the reactionaries who are in control of the Buffalo central body. The very manner in which the resolution was worded, the proposal to "petition the various local unions to call the conference" without indicating just how these were to be induced to issue the call, all showed that the resolution was to be used only as a threat by the members of the legislative committee and their associates against some group of politicians with whom they were bargaining.

Progressives Fail to Join.

Efforts were made by the left wingers to indone the progressive members of the council to join with them in an organized effort to initiate action. But the latter, the nonrevisted "progressives" failed to respond to a call for action and proposed to wait a "little" longer.

The insincerity of the reactionary "leaders" of the Central Labor Council was further manifested when, on July 22, after three months had passed without any action being taken, a proposal of the Molders' Union, Local 84, that a conference be called to name a united labor ticket was turned down, and the matter referred to the legislative committee.

The committee reported on Aug. 12 stating, "we disapprove of the call by Molders' Union, No. 84, for a conference to form a labor party."

This report was concurred in by the safe and sane majority of the council and would probably have ended the matter in so far as the council was concerned if it were not for the fact that Brother Campbell, delegate of the Molders' Union, took the floor under good and welfare to declare that the molders would proceed with their proposed conference in spite of the decision of the council.

"Leaders" Worried.

It was at this time that the "leaders" of the council held a hurried consultation, which was followed by a motion that "at the next regular meeting the regular business be suspended in the interest of a conference to inaugurate a more cohesive political movement."

The conference of Sept. 9, which was to organize a "more cohesive political movement," showed the complete bankruptcy of the reactionaries.

By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

There was always the problem of getting Eunice away from these excitements. She never wanted to go, not even when she was exhausted; he would half carry her out, and she would fall asleep on his shoulder on the way home, and it was all he could do to keep from falling asleep himself. There was a boy in their crowd who would carry a broken nose about for the rest of his life because he had dozed at the steering-wheel on a crowded boulevard; another had spent ten days in jail because after a smash-up, the police had smelled liquor on his breath. It was the etiquette of parties that the man who had to drive must drink only gin—not because that would not make him drunk, but because it left no odor on his breath!

The time came when Eunice decided that it was silly to take that long drive to Beach City after dancing. She found a hotel where you could register as Mr. and Mrs. Smith of San Francisco and no one would ask any questions; you paid in advance, because of your lack of baggage, and in the morning you slipped out separately, and no one was the wiser. You told the folks at home that you had spent the night with a friend, and they did not pursue the matter—being afraid of what they might find out.

All this made a great difference in Bunny's life, and before long it began to show in his appearance; he was not quite so rosy, and Dad took notice, and was no longer embarrassed to speak. "You're making a fool of yourself, son; those late hours have got to stop." So Bunny would try to get out of going to some dance, and Eunice would fly into his arms, and sob, and cling to him, moulding her body into his in that terrible, breath-taking way she had; all Bunny's senses would be filled with her, the delicate perfume she used, the feeling of the filmy stuffs she wore, her tumbled hair, her burning, swift, persistent kisses. He would have to stand and argue and plead, trying to keep his reason while his head went around.

Sometimes there would be embarrassment mingled with his other emotions, because these scenes took place in the drawing-room of the Hoyt home, with either of the parents present. But what could they do? They had raised this wild young creature, giving her everything in the world, half a dozen servants to wait on her, to answer her every whim. She had always had what she wanted, and now she wanted her lover, and all that poor Mrs. Hoyt could say was, "Don't be hard-hearted, Bunny"—really seeming to blame him for these tantrums in her presence! As for poor "Tommy," when he happened in on a tantrum, there came a frightened look on his rosy, rather boyish face, and he turned and skedaddled. He had troubles enough of his own making, and the next time he met Bunny he set forth his point of view in one pregnant sentence, "There's no such thing as a normal woman in the world!"

VI

Just before school opened, Bunny took the bit in his teeth and went to Paradise to spend a week with Dad, and found that Paul was there on a three days' furlough. Paul was not going to get overseas, it appeared; the army had put him to work at his old job—building barracks—only now, instead of two dollars a day he was getting thirty a month "and beans." That was what it meant for a workingman to be patriotic—and it was quite a contrast with Tommy Hoyt's three millions, and the hundred and twenty thousand a week of Dad's oil-contracts! But nobody thought about that, because of the eloquence of the President's speeches, and the concentrated ardor of the four minute orators.

Paul looked big and strong in his khaki uniform; and Ruth was happy, because Paul wasn't going to be killed. Neelie was happy, because there was a baby on the way, and Sadie because there was a young rancher "keeping company" with her. Dad was happy, because he had brought in another gusher, and proved up a whole new slope of the Paradise tract; he was putting in pipe-lines and preparing a colossal development—the bankers couldn't keep him down, he would finance himself with oil!

Everybody was happy except Bunny, who could think of nothing but the fact that Eunice was angry, and he was risking the loss of her. She had warned him, she was not to be left alone; if he deserted her, she would punish him. He knew that she meant it; she had had lovers before him, and would have others after him. This "petting" was a daily necessity for her, and a girl could not get it unless she was willing to "go the limit." That was the etiquette prevailing in this smart and dashing crowd; the rich high school youths would go out hunting in couples in their fancy sport-cars, and would pick up girls and drive them, and if the girls did not play the game according to their taste, they would turn them out on the road, anywhere, a score of miles from a town. There was formula, short and snappy, "pet or walk!"

Bunny took long tramps, trying to shake off his cruel fever. He would come back to sleep, but instead he would think about Eunice, and the manifold intoxication of his senses would return; she would be there with all her allurements and her abandonments. Bunny tried haltingly once or twice to tell Paul about it; Paul being a sort of god, a firm and dependable moral force, to whom one might flee. Bunny remembered the scorn with which Paul had talked about "formications," and Bunny had not known quite what he meant—but Bunny knew now, alas, only too well. He tried to confess, but was ashamed, and could not break down the barriers. Instead, he made some excuse to his father and drove back to Beach City, three days earlier than he had intended; and all the way as he rode he was hearing Paul's voice, those cruel words of the strike-days: "You're soft, Bunny, you're soft."

Peaceful Picketing Legal in Connecticut

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 16. — (FP)—The City Court discharged three ladies' garment union pickets arrested for advising non-unionists to join the organization. The pickets' release follows the recent decision of the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors that "peaceful picketing" during strikes must be tolerated. The ladies' garment union is driving on a number of small shops here that are attempting to produce for New York manufacturers whose Manhattan plants are tied up by the big strike.

The Injunction Against the I. L. G. W. U. in New York

The temporary injunction secured by the industrial council of the cloak manufacturers in New York against the 40,000 striking cloak makers indicates the desperation of the bosses in the face of the militant solidarity of the union. While the former have been affirming, until they were blue in the face, that the strikers were returning to the shops in the midst of the strike, they are now forced into a virtual admission of defeat by their column-long advertisements in the New York press appealing to the workers to return, after having resorted to the aid of an injunction with which they hope to break the strike.

The securing of the injunction shows more than the desperation of the manufacturers. It drives another nail into the coffin of the legend that the courts are impartial institutions for the solution of issues in which one class is pitted against another. In the greatest majority of decisive cases, as in this instance, the courts decide for the ruling class.

In addition, it must be remembered that the cloak manufacturers have been working in close contact with Governor Al Smith who has taken an active interest in the strike—on behalf of the bosses. The application for an injunction was undoubtedly made only after consultation and agreement with the governor, who is a notorious "friend of labor," a favorite of Tammany Hall, and the darling of the labor bureaucracy of the New York City and State A. F. of L.

There is one decisive means of fighting the injunction of capitalist courts, and it has been advocated not only by the conservative institutionalized conventions of the A. F. of L., but by Gompers himself—in words. That method is the open and mass violation of the injunction. We believe that the continuation of the militant and sharp battle spirit of the cloak makers on strike will make this policy successful. Let Tammany Hall try to arrest 40,000 cloak makers for violation of the injunction!

Furthermore, the workers have an opportunity in the coming election to give expression to their repudiation of the fake "friends of labor" who have been rewarded for just the same type of open and concealed strike-breaking as practiced by Governor Smith in this strike. Oust the enemies of labor in the capitols and their tools on the judicial benches!

Injured Shylock! Noble Shylock!

With very little comment we reprint the following item from the press service of the International Federation of Trade Unions (the Amsterdam International):

The Executive of the German National Center defends itself against the official accusation of the Communist International, that at the negotiations it had proposed 11% interest on the international loan asked for by the British General Council; it writes as follows:

"We have had constant inquiries both from Germany and from foreign countries about the false allegations of the Communists, that we would only grant the British trade unions a loan at the very high rate of 11% interest. We therefore make the public announcement that the rate of interest agreed upon between the I. F. T. U. of Amsterdam and the British T. U. General Council was 4½%. It must be well known that the rate of interest customary in Germany is substantially higher than this, so that those of our unions which have granted loans to the British are not receiving extraordinary interest—but are, in point of fact, suffering a considerable loss of interest."

Pity poor Shylock! Injured Shylock! It is not a pound of flesh he demands. He wants only half a pound. How comforting it must be to the striking coal miners in England to know that they are not alone in their sufferings. Even the bankers of the German trade unions suffer too.

Noble Shylock!

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

Report given by Comrade Bukharin at the Fundamental Meeting of the Leningrad Organization of the C. P. S. U., on July 26, on the Results of the Plenary Session of the C. C. and the C. C. C.

COMRADES! My present report on the results of the plenary session of the C. C. and the C. C. C. will differ to a certain extent from the customary reports on this theme, for the reason that the work of the joint plenum itself has been of an unusual character. A number of practical questions which formed the agenda have been dealt with from a general and from a fundamental standpoint, with reference to those political declarations and those attacks against the majority of the central committee which have been made on a developed scale against the C. C. by the opposition during this plenary conference.

IN my present report I shall thus have to restrict myself solely to fundamental questions of principle in the political life of our country, to questions of principle concerning our party, both with regard to inner policy and in part to foreign policy, as also to special inner party policy. Before analyzing the standpoint of the new opposition, I must thus give a brief survey of the general situation in the country, for the fundamental differences existing between the overwhelming majority of the C. C. and the comrades of the opposition arise from the estimation of the situation in our country and of the role played by our party at the present juncture. It is these varying estimates which give rise to the varying opinions as to the correct measures to be taken by our party at the present stage of its historical development.

Permit me then to first make a brief analysis of the general situation in our country.

The Economic Growth of the Country.

I BEGIN with the analysis of the economic situation. I must apologize for having to make recourse to figures here, for only to a very few, in our own ranks the growth of our economics, and the growth of the productive forces of the country, have become a generally acknowledged fact. And even our most obstinate opponents admit this fact. Even our bitterest and blindest class enemies have been forced by the pressure of undeniable facts, facts which cannot be even ignored under present conditions, to acknowledge our economic progress.

BUT for us Marxists-Leninists, for us who are building up a new state of society, the question of the general economic progress of the country is no more than the basis of our most general point in the analysis of the economic situation. We must follow up this question by others, and ask ourselves for our industry, on the basis of socialist development, is progressing. If it is, we must ask its rate of progress, whether it is overtaking agricultural development, or if on the contrary agriculture is overtaking industry. We must ask whether the disproportion between our state industry and the 22,000,000 farms is increasing, or if our industry is growing more rapidly. This is the first of the supplementary and decisive questions, which we must put to ourselves after being assured of the general economic growth of the country.

The So-Called "Disproportion" in the Development of Agriculture and Industry.

I NOW pass on to this first question of the relations between the development of agriculture and of our industry. Here the position may be characterised by the following figures: The gross production of agriculture has risen between the economic years 1925-26 and 1926-27 from 66.8 per cent to 88.3 per cent of the pre-war level. During this period the gross production of industry has increased from 34.7 per cent to 96 per cent. Expressed in absolute figures, agricultural production increased from 7.8 milliard pre-war roubles to 10.3 milliards, that is, an increase of 32 per cent in the time given. If we refer to the gross production of industry, we find the following figures: In 1922-23 production amounted to the value of 1949 million pre-war roubles, in the economic year 1925-26 to 5,215 million pre-war roubles. Our industry has thus increased by 274 per cent during this time."

*"Gosplan" No. 3, and "Bulletin of the Dynamic of National Economy of the U. S. S. R." 1926.

NOW to the living basis of our industry, that is, to the strength of the working class, for the question of the class struggle—and our socialist development is in reality a peculiar form of proletarian class struggle—will naturally be decided by those living people who represent in various combinations, the main basis of the socialist structure. The working class forms the fundamental human material of this socialist structure. It is the ruling class, the leading class, the vanguard class of the present transitional state of society.

If we ask how the working class itself is developing, and in particular what changes have taken place in its numerical strength, which represents under uniform conditions the decisive factor of its social class force, we find the following dynamics of development:

IN the economic year 1921-22 the average number of industrial workers was 1,240,000. By June 1925 this number had increased to 1,555,000; June 1926 shows us the figures at 1,898,000, that is, in the course of one year, from June 1925 to June 1926, the most advanced stratum of the proletariat, the industrial working class, increased by more than 300,000. We can put the same question in another way, not merely with reference to the numerical increase of the persons belonging to the working class, but from the standpoint showing us what proportion of our total national income is represented by the income of the working class, that is, by their wages. I may assume that you are fully aware that our country is in the first place an agricultural country. We must therefore not be surprised at the smallness of the absolute sum; the important point is the change which has taken place in the proportion of wages contained in our total national income. In the economic year 1922-23 the sum total of wages, that is, of the income of the proletariat, amounted to 20 per cent of the total national income. By 1924-25 this sum had increased to 26.1 per cent for the whole union, that is, almost 50 per cent increase in a comparatively short time."

THUS matters were up to now. We have however now reached a stage in our economic constructive work in which our organs of planned economics are able to set themselves the task of fixing plans of orientation for comparatively long periods in advance. For one thing we have worked out a statement, which, it need not be said, is only approximate and intended to serve as information, on the development of our economics during the next five years.

This statement has been drawn up with the greatest caution by the collaborators in the planned economic commission. According to this statement, the growth of agricultural production is calculated at about 20.8 per cent for the five years 1926-30, whilst the growth of industrial production is estimated at about 110 per cent. The growth of all agricultural and industrial production is dealt with. The proportions change somewhat if we take into consideration not the growth of the gross production of agriculture, but only the part of this production put on the market, the part consisting of goods. Our provisional calculations would then yield figures anticipating that the goods obtained from the peasants' agricultural production will increase by about 42-43 per cent during the next five years."

THIS 110 per cent growth of industrial production shows us that the informative calculations for the next five years, based upon a careful study of existing factors, indicate that the growth of industry will surpass that of agriculture. This is the fundamental tendency underlying our economics; and was consciously adopted as such at the last XIV Party Congress.

If we ask at what speed industry and agriculture will develop, we may receive the confident answer, both with regard to the years behind us and those coming, that the balance is in favor of industry, that our industry has out-stripped agriculture in its development up to the present. And a study of all available data enables us to prophesy for the next five years, with equal confidence, further progress for the industrialization of our country.

*No. 4, Articles by Comrades Tchidlovsky and Strumilin.

NOTE.—The present developments in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union have caused renewed activities of the enemies of the Russian Revolution. The whole capitalist united front from J. P. Morgan to Victor Berger and Morris Hillquit, from McCormick's Chicago Tribune to the Socialist New Leader, all the capitalist vultures sound their coarse cries of expectant triumph over the first proletarian state.

But it is really not triumph that they expect. They know better by now. Their hopes have cooled down considerably since the first days of the Russian Revolution in November 1917. Then the defeat of the revolution was predicted, and really expected, hourly. But the hours grew into days. Time grew longer—and so did the faces of the self-appointed undertakers of the Russian Revolution. And the mournful physiognomy of these unemployed pallbearers did not merely register professional seriousness but outright disappointment. And when this gentry register expectant triumph now it is not because they have really overcome their disappointment, but they want to spread it among the friends of the Soviet Union also. With such disappointment they hope to slacken the active support of the Soviet Union so it may be more easily made the target of attacks.

Fortunately, however, the enemies of the Soviet Union have broken the camel's back by loading too many lies on it. The facts of the onward march of the Russian Revolution are too obvious and too convincing to be eclipsed by lies from Riga, Bucharest, Chicago or New York.

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Bucharin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

Mediterranean road to Africa. France does not like this a bit. England is backing Italy against France. France is not anxious to let Italy have an imperialistic meal at Turkey's expense. Such a very strong Italy would not be healthy for France. Despite the league of nations and the "Locarno spirit."

HERE is more dirt on the capitalist powers: When England was threatening war on Turkey over the Mosul oil question, Italy jabbed her fascist hand in the fire and pulled out a fist full of British chestnuts, by announcing her intention to combine with Greece against Turkey. Kemal Pasha was not prepared for this, so he accepted a compromise from Britain on Mosul, in return for this favor England let Mussolini in on a little bit of loot in Abyssinia. However, the Abyssinians have a bunch of bayonets against Italy's carrying contast and perhaps Benito's blackshirts may prefer to continue assassinating unarmed workers for another while.

THE diplomatic orientation of the powers changes very quickly, but the broad outline of wast European diplomacy just now is a war between England and France, stopping just short of military action. In eastern Europe and in the Orient, Britain's main enemy is the Soviet Union, with France playing a role of benevolent neutrality towards England and in the case of Poland and Roumania—active enemies of Russia—more then that.

WHEN Germany signed the complete treaty with the U. S. S. R. shortly before the British miners' strike was declared, howls of rage went up from the British press. Britain expected to line Germany up in the anti-Soviet camp by a seat in the council of the league of nations. But Germany saw a rich market in Russia and fooled England. Now England and France are jockying with the Balkan nations, Italy and Turkey. It is well to remember that when Italy threatens France the lion's roar can be heard to the distance.

Resolutions of Second Annual I. L. D. Conference

Resolution Reaffirming the Decisions of the First Annual Conference of International Labor Defense.

THE basic principles for the guidance and conduct of the work of International Labor Defense were laid down in the resolutions and decisions of the first annual conference. The experiences of the past year have realized the basic line of these resolutions and decisions and fully justified their adoption. They have formed the ground work upon which has been built the structure of a united, non-partisan organization that coordinates and leads the work of labor defense in this country. The weaving together of the tasks of legal defense, prison relief and comfort, the organization of protests and demonstrations for class war prisoners, the reviving of interest and organization in old cases, the publicity and propaganda for labor defense, the extension of fraternal aid to imprisoned workers in other lands, and the reciprocal aid from our foreign comrades for class war victims in this country—all conducted on the basis of united efforts and non-partisan interest—has proved to be most successful.

THE second annual conference of International Labor Defense therefore reaffirms the correctness of the decisions and resolutions of the first conference of International Labor Defense and holds them to be the line which the organization must follow in the coming period. It instructs the incoming national executive committee to continue to carry on its work in accordance with the spirit and the letter of these decisions and resolutions which have so successfully formed the body and form of our work in the past year.

CHAPTER III.

THE CONTROVERSY OVER THE SOUL.

The Ideas of Immortality and God.

THO it was my original intention to deliver only two lectures, I have been moved by several reasons to add a supplementary one. In the first place, I notice with regret that I have been compelled by pressure of time to leave untouched in my earlier lectures, or to treat very inadequately, several important points in my theme; there is, in particular, the very important question of the nature of the soul. In the second place, I have been convinced by the many contradictory press notices during the last few days that many of my incomplete observations have been misunderstood or misinterpreted. And, thirdly, it seemed advisable to give a brief and clear summary of the whole subject in this farewell lecture, to take a short survey of the past, present and future of the theory of evolution, and especially its relation to the three great questions of personal immortality, the freedom of the will, and the personality of God.

I must claim the reader's patience and indulgence even to a greater extent than in the previous chapters, as the subject is one of the most difficult and complex that the human mind approaches. I have dealt at length in my recent works, "The Riddle of the Universe" and "The Wonders of Life," with the controversial questions of biology that I treat cursorily here. But I would like to put before you now, in a general survey, the powerful arguments that modern science employs against the prevailing superstition in regard to evolution, and to show that the Monistic system throws a clear light on the great questions of God and the world, the soul and life.

In the previous chapters I have tried to give a general idea of the present state of the theory of evolution and its victorious struggle with the older legend of creation. We have seen that even the most advanced organism, man, was not brought into being by a creative act, but gradually developed from a long series of mammal ancestors. We also saw that the most manlike mammals, the anthropoid apes, have the same bodily structure as man, and that the evolution of the latter from the former can now be regarded as a fully established fact. But in this study we had in view mainly the structure of the body and its various organs. We touched briefly on the evolution of the human mind, or the immaterial soul that dwells in the body for a time, according to a venerable tradition. Today we are chiefly to the development of the soul, and consider whether man's mental development is controlled by the same natural laws as that of his body, and whether it also is inseparately bound up with that of the rest of the mammals.

At the very threshold of this difficult province we encounter the curious fact that there are two radically distinct tendencies in psychology at our universities today. On one side we have the metaphysical and professional psychologists. They still cling to the older view that man's soul is a special entity, a unique independent individuality, which dwells for a time only in the mortal frame, leaving it and living on as an immortal spirit after death. This dualistic theory is connected with the doctrine of most religions, and owes its high authority to the fact that it is associated with the most important ethical, social, and practical interests. Plato gave prominence to the idea of the immortality of the soul in philosophy long ago. Descartes at a later date gave emphasis to it by ascribing a true soul to man alone and refusing it to the animals.

This metaphysical psychology, which ruled alone for a considerable period, began to be opposed in the eighteenth, and still more in the nineteenth, century by comparative psychology. An impartial comparison of the psychic processes in the higher and lower animals proved that there were numerous transitions and gradations. A long series of intermediate stages connects the psychic life of the higher animals with that of man on the one side, and that of the lower animals on the other. There was no such thing as a sharp dividing line, as Descartes supposed.

Capital Is Hostile to Labor, Miner Writes

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (FP)—"Capital and labor are striving in opposite directions in the job market," writes Secy. Wm. Mitch, United Mine Workers of Indiana, in a Labor Day message. "Their interests are not identical, in fact, they are opposite. Labor is attempting to get as much as possible for the job, but is handicapped in this competitive struggle. Capital is demanding as much of the employe's energy as possible to procure for the money given and it is no respecter of persons. Cheap labor is the objective of capital."

Rally All Labor In Fight Against N. Y. Injunctions

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 17.—The new Madison Square Garden will revive the memory of notable labor demonstrations held in the old structure now gone when every labor organization in Greater New York will participate next Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. in a mass meeting called by 40,000 striking cloakmakers in protest against the temporary injunction issued to cloak manufacturers by Supreme Court Justice Charles L. Guy.

While individual pickets are disregarding service of these injunctions on the picket line in the garment zone as an abrogation of their constitutional guarantees of peaceful assemblage, labor leaders in the city are priming themselves for a contest both in the courts and on the picket line with their traditional enemy—injunction against peaceful picketing.

Louis Hyman, chairman of the general strike committee, and Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, have invited William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to address the protest meeting. In addition the following leaders of this city are expected to participate in the demonstration:

John P. Coughlin, secretary of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council; Hugh Frayne, organizer of the A. F. of L.; John Sullivan, president of the New York State Federation of Labor. Organizations which were yesterday invited to be represented at the mass meeting Tuesday included: American Federation of Labor, State Federation of Labor, the New York Central Trades and Labor Council, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the Furriers' Union, the United Hebrew Trades and Affiliated organizations, the Capmakers' Union and the Italian Chamber of Labor.

To Rally All Labor for Struggle.

Following the mass protest meeting, a conference of representatives of all labor bodies of Greater New York will be held at Beethoven Hall Friday, Sept. 24th, to frame ways and means to combat the injunction, should it be made permanent.

The following is the appeal of the garment strikers to New York organized labor inviting participation in Tuesday's mass meeting:

Strike is Winning.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE league of nations, organized ostensibly to enforce peace, is the theater of a struggle between England and France for control. The league can be of use to the winner in the diplomatic war that is being waged between the two countries. All this beskeying for permanent seats and non-permanent seats on the council has to do with this rivalry between the former allies.

WITH Poland, Roumania, Belgium and Czecho-Slovakia on the council, France can outvote England. But England, no doubt, will drag in some other puppets and the game will continue until diplomacy can no longer solve the problem and England will find some convenient slogan to give the world as her reason for waging war against France.

THE Journal of Commerce of New York, considered the leading business newspaper in the United States, has published a special edition on the Soviet Union, with the object of arousing public opinion in favor of recognition of the U. S. S. R. by the United States. The Journal of Commerce has turned out an excellent piece of work. There are articles by prominent individuals in the Soviet Union, in Germany, France, England and the United States. All agree that the opportunities for extending American business in Russia are great. Maps are printed showing the various kinds of mineral wealth with which the soil abounds, and where those minerals are located.

THE Journal of Commerce makes it quite clear that Communism is just as repugnant to its capitalist soul as it is to William Green. But much capital is lying idle in the United States and it is looking for a job. A dollar in profit from Russia is just as welcome to the American investor as a dollar from Italy. The U. S. S. R. has no use for capitalism and is building up a socialist economy on the ruins of capitalism. Our American capitalists, those who favor recognition, believe that the sooner the Soviet Union's industries are developed the sooner will Communism be relegated to the limbo of history. The Soviet government does not think so. Neither does The DAILY WORKER.

IN all probability another year or so will see the United States well on the way to recognition of the Soviet Union. When such an influential paper as the Journal of Commerce openly espouses such a move something is liable to happen. Nothing succeeds like success. The very people who were demanding unending war on the Workers' Republic a few years ago are now spending thousands of dollars in a campaign for recognition.

TUMULTY AND CORBISHLEY HEARTILY RECEIVED BY HARRISBURG, ILL., MINERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARRISBURG, Ill., Sept. 17. — Joseph Tumulty, candidate for president of the Illinois Mine Workers' Union and Henry Corbishley, well-known as the chief defendant of the famous Zeigler frame-up case spoke to an enthusiastic audience of miners in the court house here last night.

The workers evinced much interest in Tumulty's statements of policy and generally agreed, in a discussion that followed, that the organization would have to make a change from "Farringtonism" or it cannot survive.

STATE'S CASE SHOWS UP WEAK IN SACCO TRIAL

Prosecution Fails to Shake Defense

BULLETIN

DEDHAM, Mass., Sept. 17. — Motion for a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted slayers, will be under advisement for several weeks.

Judge Webster Thayer, sitting today in Norfolk County superior court, announced at the conclusion of the rebuttal argument by defense counsel.

By ESTHER LOWELL

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

BOSTON, Sept. 17. — The prosecution in the Sacco-Vanzetti case today opened up by attacking the credibility of Celestino Madeiros, whose confession declares that neither of the two Italian workers are guilty of the murder charged against them. Assistant District Attorney Dudley Ranney said that it was common for criminals to confess crimes of others, citing the Kelly case in Massachusetts.

Ranney charged that Sacco had lacked diligence by destroying the early notes of Madeiros concerning the Braintree crime. He stated that both Sacco and Vanzetti lacked diligence by not filing the affidavit of the spy Nazamenti when former defense counsel Fred Moore obtained it four years ago, and also for apparently concealing the Moller testimony implicating Joe Morelli three years ago.

Thompson Punctures Argument

Defense Counsel William Thompson had argued that these documents were meaningless when secured without the light of the Madeiros confession.

Ranney attacked the introduction of evidence of spies being active against Sacco and Vanzetti as irrelevant. "Altho it may be called an extreme method," he said, "police intimidation is not unusual." He attacked former Federal Agents Wyand and Letherman for violating secrecy, the watchword of detectives, inspiring a "bond of loyalty." Ranney continues tomorrow.

Thompson, in closing, hit at Judge Thayer's acceptance of the theory of consciousness of guilt in charging the Sacco-Vanzetti jury. He asked for the same test for the Morellis when cornered, as the Jacob's affidavit shows.

"This case stands as a monument of persecution and intolerance," said Thompson. He attacked the notorious "Red raids" of 1920 and explained that the so-called "consciousness of guilt" of Sacco and Vanzetti was their fear of the fate that awaited them merely for being radicals. Thompson made it clear that the unanswered testimony of federal agents who believed Sacco and Vanzetti to be innocent of the Braintree crime. He insisted that no riparior purpose should be permitted to enter into the decision as to whether Sacco and Vanzetti were guilty or innocent.

Enough for New Trial.

"The mere suppression of evidence by federal authorities is sufficient to grant a new trial," said Thompson.

He reiterated the fact of the world interest in the case and said the dealing with elementary questions of right or wrong was not a legal technicality. During the speaking, Judge Thayer was smiling sarcastically and seems to be more at ease since the state's case was begun.

STANDARD OIL MIXES IN WAR ON CANTONESE

U. S. Navy Protecting Rockefeller Ships

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 17. —Dispatches from the Hankow region indicate that imperialist interests are trying to provoke a situation that will lead to United States intervention in China against the Cantonese. An outdistanced shore battery hidden behind Standard Oil property and foreign houses at Chingling Ki has fired upon an American mine sweeper, which answered with machine guns. Two Standard Oil boats are being guarded by U. S. marines.

Protect Rockefeller.

Reports of the affair synchronized to Washington by Admiral Williams of the Asiatic fleet admits there "were no hits or casualties, due to the fact that the engagements were so located that heavy gunfire would seriously endanger Standard Oil company and foreign houses."

The ship fired on was a U. S. mine sweeper, the Pidgeon. It is regarded in nationalist circles that remnants of the reactionary troops of Wu Pei-fu in collusion with imperialists in the foreign quarters are trying to provoke a clash between the United States and the Canton government.

Cantonese Advance.

The successful advance of the Cantonese continues, now being mainly directed against Sun Chuan-fang, and the fighting has forced Sun's troops to a general retreat in the Yangtze 100 miles below Hankow. The Cantonese are engaged with the retreating troops of Sun at Wusueh, 30 miles above the important city of Kiukiang.

The Cantonese are also continuing the siege of Wuchow. They have permitted foreigners to leave the city to obtain food for others in the city, mostly Americans. Here, too, the troops of Sun are surely facing defeat.

Warns Against Provocation.

The Peking government has protested to the British against any punitive expedition in the upper Yangtze, stating that anti-British feeling is so acute at Chungking that any more provocative attacks by the British may result in a slaughter of all foreigners in Chungking.

FILIPINO PROFESSOR, AN ESSENIA FOLLOWER, OPPOSES INDEPENDENCE

Leon Maximo M. Pascua, of the University of the Philippines is another of the so-called independence advocates who follow Sen. Osmena, suddenly stricken with a case of cold feet. The professor has announced himself in favor of a "reasonable conference" to compromise the question.

CHEER COOK AND SMITH IN LONDON

Excitement Reigns as Baldwin Dickers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Unusual scenes and tense excitement prevailed in Downing street today as Premier Baldwin made efforts to bring about negotiations for the settlement of the coal strike.

A huge crowd, aided by a uniformed band from Wales, assembled before 10 Downing street and welcomed the leaders of the striking miners, Herbert Smith and A. J. Cook, as they entered a conference with the premier.

As Cook and Smith entered by the front door, Evan Williams, representative of the operators, left by the rear door. Williams had been summoned into conference by the premier to discuss the possibility of the operators proceeding to negotiate district agreements for the settlement of the strike, these district agreements to be later given approval by the national body of miners. The Miners' Federation has recently opposed district agreements in previous negotiations.

After the conferences were under way the police dispersed the crowds in Downing street and Whitehall.

Raid Workers' Literature.

Flying squadrons from Scotland Yard made two raids during the night, seizing Communist literature dealing with the strike situation.

Additional terrorism of the Baldwin government to aid the mine owners break the strike is reported from Doncaster, where repeated brutal police charges against the mass picket line of 2,000 miners and their wives resulted in many miners injured, and arrested.

The pickets were posted to stop the return to work of the so-called "safety men," some of whom are digging coal while posing as workers keeping the mines in repair. The police attacked the picket line, including the women, with clubs, when the miners sang the "Red Flag" and jeered the scabs. There was no violence but that used by the police.

N. Y. Window Cleaners May Strike October 1

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(FP)— New York window cleaners who balance like flies on the narrow copings of the windows of the tall apartment houses and office buildings object to risk their lives more than 44 hours a week. They threaten—thru the Window Cleaners' Protective Association—to strike on October 1 unless the 44-hour week is granted, as well as a $44 minimum wage. They also demand the elimination of the non-union men who have been making their appearances on jobs.

Employers organized in the Amalgamated Window Cleaning Employers' Association are complaining, not merely at the union's demands but at a successful co-operative window cleaning company, the Minocia Window Cleaning Co. that the union has promoted and which has been getting a lot of business away from them.

MOTION PICTURE SHOWING PASSAIC STRIKE IS READY

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 17.—"The Passaic Strike," a motion picture of the heroic struggle of the 16,000 Passaic textile strikers for a union and a living wage, is now ready, and will be shown shortly in all of the leading labor centers of the country.

Nothing will so simply, graphically and vividly bring home the big strike and its lessons to the workingclass as will this gripping motion picture of strike events snapped as they occurred.

In this picture, the Passaic textile strikers are shown in action, facing with magnificent courage and unfortitude the brutal attacks of the mill barons, braving police clubs and shot guns, fire hose in zero weather, gas bombs, and withstanding the starvation offensives and strikebreaking attempts of the bosses and their tools.

The huge mass meetings of strikers are shown, with the strike leaders and outside speakers addressing the strikers. Relief activities are depicted, the food stores, the picket line kitchens, the Victory Playground for the strikers' children.

HARRY FISHWICK EXPOSED WITH F. FARRINGTON

Signed Names on Note for Peabody Boss

Harry Fishwick, president of the Illinois Miners' Union, by action of the district executive board after Farrington was deposed, is now a candidate to succeed himself for that office.

State Senator William Sneed, of Herrin, has withdrawn from the contest and agreed to accept the position of vice-president so that the reactionary front may not be broken when the ballots are cast next December.

Sneed was the candidate of John L. Lewis against Farrington before the latter's contract with the Peabody Coal Company came to light. When Lewis "got the goods" on Farrington and forced his deposition as district president Fishwick announced his candidacy. Fishwick is a Farrington man.

Clean-Cut Issue.

As the situation stands now, there is a clean-cut issue between the reactionaries led by Fishwick and the progressives led by Joseph Tumulty of the Springfield sub-district. The exposure of Farrington in the role of retainer of the Peabody Coal Company puts the reactionaries on the defensive. So far none of them, outside of John L. Lewis, commented publicly on the matter. To all appearances they do not consider the setout a question that should interest the coal diggers of Illinois.

To Refresh Memories.

The reactionaries hope that the miners will forget all about Farrington in the coming campaign. But the coal diggers know that Fishwick and Sneed and Lewis and the whole bureaucratic district machine are tarred with the same Peabody brush and that Fishwick in particular was Farrington's loyal lieutenant all the dirty work the deposed official was guilty of during his official life in the Illinois Miners' Union.

Some Telling Evidence.

Should Mr. Fishwick attempt to deny any connection with the Peabody Coal Company activities of Frank Farrington, The DAILY WORKER is taking the trouble to call

ILL. LABOR MAY APPEAL TO THE STATE ASSEMBLY

Pursues Legalism to Beat Injunctions

STREATOR, Ill., Sept. 17.—The reorganization of the once active Illinois state conference of printers was the principal business accomplished at today's session of the Illinois Federation of Labor here. This, and the adoption of resolution, occupied the entire day.

The printers' conference, made up of 52 different classes of printers' groups, was reorganized for the avowed purpose of securing equal and uniform wages for its members. William J. Hedger, Chicago, was elected president, Harry B. Schandt, vice-president and W. R. Bean, Streater, secretary-treasurer.

Disobedience Beats Any "Recourse."

The federation went on record as favorable recourse to the state general assembly if the state supreme court upholds the decision of Judge Denis E. Sullivan denying the constitutionality of the injuction and limitation laws.

It also adopted resolutions opposing "yellow dog" contracts by employers and favoring an increase of $10 in the state auto license fees, the excess to be held as a compensation fund for persons injured in motor accidents. Such victims, according to the federation's program would receive $4 per day while they are disabled and $2 per day while receiving medical attention. Dependents of persons killed would receive a lump sum of $6,500.

Tragic Love Suicide.

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., Sept. 17. —A clandestine love affair between the wife of a railroad engineer and the telegraph dispatcher who gave him his orders ended in tragedy here today when Mrs. Mary Young, mother of three children, shot and killed herself with a shotgun as she got in her sweetheart's automobile.

Prisoners Repair Levee.

FORT MADISON, Iowa, Sept. 17.—Twenty-five prisoners from the state penitentiary here today were pressed into service in an effort to reinforce the levee along the Skunk River, eight miles north of here.

"Keep The Daily Worker"

Every Supporter of the Daily Must Subscribe Immediately to Meet the Crisis Our Paper Is Facing.

The supporters of The DAILY WORKER are responding to the need of the $50,000 "Keep the Daily Worker" fund. Subscriptions for the "Keep the Daily Worker" certificates are being received in every mail in a considerable number.

The $50,000 "Keep the Daily Worker" fund is being raised to insure the publication of The DAILY WORKER for another year. If this amount is raised during the next three month campaign The DAILY WORKER will be on a sound footing. It will be able to clear off its pressing debts and prepare the ground for a subscription drive which will increase the number of its readers and supporters. This fund will insure to the revolutionary working class movement its daily English fighting organ to voice its program of class struggle.

The raising of this $50,000 fund in the next three months can be accomplished. The past record of the supporters of The DAILY WORKER shows that with an intensive campaign among the friends of The DAILY WORKER, with organized support from the nuclei of the Workers (Communist) Party, with mass meetings, entertainments, celebrations such a fund to "KEEP THE DAILY WORKER" will be contributed.

The achieving of this goal will be easier this year than in the past because of the broader support which the Workers (Communist) Party has won in the past year thru such campaigns in the interest of the workers as the campaign for protection of the foreign-born workers, thru the successful furriers' strike in New York, thru its achievements in organization of the unorganized workers in he Passaic strike, which represents the biggest advance in the American labor movement in recent years.

We Must Meet the Immediate Crisis!

There is, however, an immediate crisis which The DAILY WORKER must overcome. The DAILY WORKER has now to meet the accumulated obligations of the past year with the added difficulties resulting from the low income of the summer months.

To meet this crisis, which is endangering The DAILY WORKER, the readers of The DAILY WORKER have been appealed to for immediate contributions to the "Keep the Daily Worker" fund. The organized campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party organizations will take some time to get under way. Help must be secured immediately thru the raising of $10,000 thru individual contributions.

We ask the readers of The DAILY WORKER to rally to its support and carry it thru the financial crisis represented by the need of this $10,000. The money is needed to meet pressing obligations for our paper supply and plant payroll and accumulated debts. The raising of this $10,000 in ten days will leave the road clear for the main campaign and make certain that the revolutionary working class movement will retain its fighting organ.

We urge every reader of The DAILY WORKER to come to the aid of The DAILY WORKER immediately by sending in a remittance for the "Keep the Daily Worker" certificates.

Many of our readers can subscribe $10. There are some who can subscribe from $25 to $100. There are some thousands who can subscribe $5 each AND EVERY READER WHO IS NOT IN THE ABOVE CATEGORIES CAN AT LEAST SEND $1.

The DAILY WORKER needs a real demonstration of solidarity and support to carry it thru the present crisis.

Such a demonstration will not only carry The DAILY WORKER thru the present serious crisis. It will be a demonstration of the spirit of the revolutionary movement which will give a big impetus to every phase of the work of the movement.

We ask every reader of The DAILY WORKER to help make this demonstration. Keep The DAILY WORKER by helping it meet the crisis in its affairs. Give whole-hearted support to the campaign for the "Keep the Daily Worker" fund.

Send in a subscription and remittance for the "Keep the Daily Worker" certificates.

Send it immediately after reading this appeal.

Make the subscription as large as you can.

Help make an impressive demonstration of solidarity and support of the revolutionary working class movement.

And—

Colorado Voters Fear Victor in Primary May Be Pillow Case Toter

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 17. — Has Charles W. Waterman, victor over U. S. Senator Rice W. Means, director of the Klan in Colorado, a nifty K. K. K. night shirt hidden away in his political wardrobe?

This is a question that is being seriously asked today after the first wave of rejoicing over the victory of the anti-klan elements receded. Waterman and Means are both pillars of the O. O. P. In view of the fact that Waterman never opened his mouth against the klan, voters who were induced to support him on the ground that he was a foe of klanism are wondering if they were not played for a bunch of suckers.

Canada's Conservative Government to Resign Monday; King Steps In

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 17.—The conservative cabinet of Prime Minister Arthur Meighen has met and decided to resign Monday, giving over the government to the liberal MacKenzie King. The province of Ontario will hold a provincial election early in November.

WOODBURN, Ore., Sept. 17. — Struck by a bolt of lightning as they were taking refuge from a storm beneath a tree, Edith Pokorny, 14, and her aunt, Stella Pokorny, 33, were instantly killed and Edith's two younger sisters were severely burned near here last night.

...RRIERS TO VOTE MONDAY AFTER DELAY

Millstein Loses Out by Blocking Union

The election for officers of Local 46 of the Fur Workers' Union of Chicago was delayed Thursday night by the managers of Jack Millstein, right wing business agent who at the last moment usurped the authority of the union, declared the meeting scheduled to be held at the Capital Building "illegal" and managed to stall off his ballot until Monday, when a vote is to be taken in a hall not yet announced.

Millstein Usurps Union Authority.

When the furriers gathered at the Capital Building, the hall agent told them Millstein had been there and informed him that the meeting was "illegal," a "bunch of Bolsheviks" and "gunmen," and all who called by Sam Goldberg, president of Local 46, who had paid for the hall, the agent was fearful of some trouble and forced the union to hire another hall at 30 North Wells St.

Will Vote Monday—Millstein Agrees.

Meantime, Millstein had called a 6 o'clock meeting of his own at the Stone-Lake building, where about 25 of his cronies and some hecklers but deluded followers spent two hours.

Monday, however, when a vote is to be taken in a hall not yet announced.

The regular union meeting opened at 30 North Wells St. with President Sam Goldberg in the chair. Goldberg told the 800 members present that by agreement with Millstein, a vote should take place Monday at an open meeting in a hall to be announced later. The delay, said President Goldberg, was entirely because of Millstein's arbitrary and dictatorial objections.

The membership voted to approve this agreement to hold the election Monday, and to hold it in an open hall as has been the custom for years. Millstein had wanted to hold election in an office and use his own clique as tellers. But sensing out of progressive votes in the old 4-faction to find the Chicago furriers. They will not stand for it.

So incensed at Millstein were the members that many were heard to say that if the election took place on the spot. Millstein would have gotten short five votes.

SENATOR NORRIS MAY HAND LILY TO I. LENROOT

Badger Standpatter May Not Roost on Bench

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—In the hands of Senator Norris of Nebraska, leader of the progressive group in Congress, may rest the fate of Irvine L. Lenroot, Wisconsin standpat senator defeated for renomination and now awaiting an appointive job at the hands of President Coolidge.

Norris has succeeded the late Senator Cummins of Iowa at the head of the republican list in the senate judiciary committee. Unless the administration has him suddenly expelled from the party—as it expelled the elder LaFollette, Frazier and Brookhart two years ago—he will become chairman of the judicial committee when the senate meets in November. All presidential nominations to the federal bench are referred to that committee.

Expect Place to Sit.

Washington politicians believe that Lenroot will be named as a federal circuit judge during the final weeks of the present congress. If that is done he will try to get Norris to agree that his confirmation shall be made in open session of the senate as an act of courtesy to a retiring senator. Norris will have to yield to the claim of courtesy, or stand by his general rule of refusing to sanction the putting of an unfit man on the bench for a life term.

Norris knows that Lenroot is bitterly anti-labor, and that his presence on the federal bench would be a constant threat to union men who might strike.

WORKERS JAILED ON MOST FLIMSY CHARGES WHEN THEY SEEK TO LEAVE JOBS ON SOUTH TEXAS COTTON FIELDS

FORT WORTH, Texas, September 17.—Charges of peonage in South Texas counties are being investigated following the receipt of a letter from Mark Parker, in jail on a charge of "swindling" and "extortion."

Mark Parker points out that he hired a man to pick cotton for a farmer in Taft, Texas. The employment office shark told him that he would average three quarters of a bale to the acre and that he would receive $1.25 for every hundred pounds that he picked. Promises were made to Parker that he would have transportation given him for one way if he worked on the farm until the crop was gathered in.

Parker accepted the job. On his arrival at Taft, Parker and a number of other workers were refused jobs by the man that was supposed to hire them. The labor agency then sold these men in benches to cotton farmers of the vicinity.

After working on a farm where pickings averaged but a quarter of a bale to the acre, Parker quit and went to work on another farm where he was offered better wages. He had no sooner started work on the other farm when he was arrested for swindling. A ration charge of $13 was the basis of the swindling charge.

Many complaints are being made by workers in Raymondville charging that they are arrested on the most flimsy charges, and the amount of their earnings. These workers are unable to leave the fields. Those that leave their jobs and have not enough to board a train and leave the section are jailed on vagrancy charges and are then forced to work out their fines.

Last year a similar case came up in a coast county where 500 Mexican laborers were arrested by county authorities and mulcted of $5 each. A year or two before at Waxahachie several county officials were forced to resign on account of a similar scandal.

The Texas department of labor is now investigating the charges.

KLAN LEADER PRAISES REED AND W. BORAH

Case of Punishment Fits the Crime

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17. — The names of Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, and Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, were proposed today as "available for the presidency" in 1928 by Dr. Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard of the kn klux klan.

Evans Grants Interview.

Granting a political interview for the first time in the history of the klan, Evans endorsed both Reed and Borah as "first class, upstanding Americans," whom klansmen would be glad to support. He served notice too that the klan would take no "active part in all elections, particularly the November congressional elections and two years hence in the presidential campaign.

West is O. K. For Klan.

"Who are available for the presidency?" he was asked.

"There is Senator Reed," replied Evans. "He is one of our greatest citizens. He is a champion of the constitution and American institutions."

"But he is wet," it was suggested.

"He's a dry American just the same," Evans replied. "Some times, a klansman will support a wet when prohibition is not an issue and when the candidate measures up to our standards in other respects."

BATTLE OF CLIFTONVILLE, W. VA., RECALLED BY RELEASE OF FIVE MINERS FROM MOUNDSVILLE PEN

MOUNDSVILLE, West Va., September 17.—The biggest union labor defense case is drawing to a close with the release of five Pennsylvania miners from Moundsville penitentiary. Joe Tracz—serving an 8-year term—is the only remaining prisoner out of the 43 sentenced in Moundsville in 1922 for taking part in the march over the state line into the little scab town of Cliftonville in the West Virginia panhandle.

Historic Battle.

The Cliftonville battle was one of the bloodiest in the history of miners' marches. Over 1,000 deputy guards and a West Virginia county sheriff were slain and seven union miners died on that memorable July 17, 1922.

Hundreds of miners were later arrested in Washington county, Pennsylvania and taken over the line to Wellsburg, county seat of Brook county, W. Va. Two hundred and ten men remained in jail a month; thirty more were sentenced to three-year terms; seven to terms of 4 to 7 years and six to 8 to 10-year terms. The men were gradually released on parole.

An Open Shop War.

The march on Cliftonville illustrated the high fighting spirit of the Pennsylvania miners. The great strike war had swept over union and non-union fields of Pennsylvania and the West Virginia panhandle. Then suddenly the Richland Coal company, in West Virginia, in the south union district (No. 5) of the United Mine Workers, began scabbing.

Strikebreakers were imported; union families were evicted and took up quarters in a nearby tent colony. Company guards flooded the countryside and insulted the women and beat up the men. Strikers were barred from the public road that passed in front of their tent colony.

Late the night of July 16 the Pennsylvania miners began marching from the little town of Avella, Washington county, Pennsylvania, ten miles from Cliftonville. Nearly a thousand were together. Dawn found them atop the hill behind Cliftonville. [illegible] proached the tipple and a deputation of union miners stepped forward and asked them not to work.

Then the guards opened fire from a nearby shack and an aged miner fell dead. The men fired back from the hill and the guards were chased away. Later came reinforcements and the miners retired. Arrests followed subsequently.

The prisoners just released are George Cratz, Joe Diacs, John Kamlnake, Pete Radianko and Teddy Rnramsky. The prisoners' families have been cared for by the Cliftonville Relief Committee, representing the local unions about Avella. Fred Sidars, president of the Duquesne local union, heads the committee.

Hundreds Fight Wall of Fire Caused by Breaking Oil Pipes

PRINCEVILLE, Ill., Sept. 17.—After a 24-hour fight, in which hundreds of residents of small towns in this vicinity participated, a veritable river of fire, which spread for seven miles along North Creek and Spoon River, was extinguished today after it had destroyed two bridges and caused damage estimated at $10,000.

The blaze started near this place when oil flowing from two broken pipe lines became ignited. The blazing oil, carried on the surface of the high waters in the creek and river, spread out over the inundated lowlands, threatening dwellings and other [illegible]

JERSEY STREET CARMEN RENEW WAGE CONTRACT

Defeat Wage Cut But Give Up Any Raise

By IRVING FREEMAN, Fed. Press.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 17. — By a vote of 2,576 to 1,362 the trolleymen in Newark, Jersey City, Elizabeth and six other cities in the northern half of New Jersey voted to accept the proposal of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, their employer, for a three-year renewal of the present wage contract on a 65-cent an hour wage basis. Slight improvement in working conditions include heated cars.

Company Tried Wage Cut.

The company's earlier demand for a 10-cent an hour cut was met with a strike vote. The men countered with a demand for a 15-cent wage increase.

A strike loomed; all efforts to get company officials in conference failed till early September, when executives of the Amalgamated Association of Electric and Street Railway Employes met with the local workers' committees and an officer of the company.

Compromise Agreement Demands.

The compromise by which each side waived its wage demands—the company giving up the demand for a reduction and the workers their's for an increase—was put thru at last. The men had been protesting that their 65-cent an hour wage was lower than the average scale in the large cities of the country, but Thomas Fitzgerald, William Werner and other members of the union executive board argued that the company was in poor financial condition and this was the best the men could get. Newark men favored a strike, reports had it, but they were converted.

THE Knights of Columbus have issued a leaflet in connection with their campaign to raise a million dollars for a little private war on Mexico. The Mexicans are called "christ haters," "assassins," and "cut-throats." While a valiant gentlemen who has endorsed the bloody reign of the murderer Mussolini, the supporters of a church that has dug the brains out of every people who were unfortunate enough to come under its way, these worshippers of sacred ehin bones, dirty water and clay images, have the colossal impudence to call the dictator of the Mexican republic because it has declared war on subevolution or socialism.

WHILE the knights are willing to accept financial support from non-catholics in this crusade the catholic catechism tells us that only those who are baptised in that faith have the slightest chance of breaking thru the pearly gates. It is some consolation for those contributing christians who did not select the right parents, to know that even when they are roasting their shins at the devil's toasting irons, the dollars they gave the Knights of Columbus to reintroduce darkness into Mexico will have saved many human beings from a belief in evolution od socialism.

Harry Fishwick Exposed With Farrington

the attention of the miners to a little incident that occurred in the fall of 1922 which shows that Fishwick, with Farrington, paid to Jack Brown, a boss for the Peabody Coal Company at Auburn, Illinois, the sum of $230.56 as compensation for slugging a delegation of Collinsville miners on the streets of Springfield.

The slugging followed a strike of the miners in behalf of Tom Mooney, who was then threatened with execution in the well-known frame-up in connection with the preparedness parade fatality in San Francisco. Farrington declared the strike illegal and in conjunction with the Peabody Coal Company and the operators went to work to crush it.

Reign of Terror.

The strikers were blacklisted, charters were lifted and a general orgy of terror was turned loose by Farrington. This is where the Peabody slugger comes in, and this is where Fishwick is found tied up with the now discredited Farrington.

On September 1, 1923, Harry Fishwick wrote to Jack Brown, the Peabody boss, and enclosed with the letter a note for $150 signed by Fishwick and Farrington.

The note reads:

"Dear Jack:

CHINESE GENERAL TO OFFER ARMED RESISTANCE TO ENGLISH ADVANCE

SHANGHAI Sept. 17.—Reports emanating from Peking, according to a Tokio news agency report, says that General Yangsen has telegraphed the foreign office that he will offer armed resistance to the ground British naval expedition, which, according to reports, is being formed to go to the rescue of seized British cargo boats on the Yangtze river. # RALLY LABOR IN FIGHT AGAINST N. Y. INJUNCTION waged by 40,000 cloakmakers in New York City against the greed of their employers and in an effort to eliminate chaos and demoralization in their industry. For 12 weeks our members have beaten back, by their solidarity on the picket line and by their enthusiasm and inspiration every attempt by the employers to break the strike which involves principles fought for not only by cloak unions but by entire organised labor of America.

Capitalist Government Mixes In.

"These savage onslaughts against the striking cloakmakers have failed, until now in every instance. Efforts to bring the pressure of the police, the district attorney's office, the mayor and the governor upon our workers have failed. Wholesale arrests and violence by hired gunmen have failed. Now, desperate, the manufacturers have played their last card—an injunction.

A Menace to All Unions.

"You need not be reminded of the traditional opposition of organised labor to the use of the injunction to break up peaceful picketing. We know that injunction against picketing is a deadly menace, stripping labor of every one of its constitutional guarantees. Should the injunction be made permanent, it will prove a blow not only against the cloakmakers of New York but against the entire labor movement of America.

40,000 Strikers Invite You.

"You are, therefore, respectfully urged to have your organization fully represented at a demonstration called by the New York board of Cloak, Skirt, Dress and Roofer Makers' Unions at Madison Square Garden next Tuesday at 5:30 p. m. We are sure that you will be glad of this opportunity to join us in a reply to the latest tactics of a desperate, enraged group that insist upon denying 40,000 men and women the right to live.

"Very fraternally,

"Louis Hyman, general manager.

Shut Scab Shops.

In the meantime, the cloak union announces success in closing shops started out of town to supply non-union cloaks during the course of the strike. In Poughkeepsie yesterday workers downed tools in a shop operating for Wilkins and Adler of Manhattan, an industrial council manufacturer. Employers of the shop, the union announced, became so incensed at the work of pickets that they called for an injunction to stop their activity.

In Philadelphia, the out of town committee of which Jacob Halperin is in charge succeeded in stopping the shops of the Stranss company, the Lastick company and the firm of M. Isenberg, the latter working for Sprayregen and Marks, also an industrial Council member. In New London, Conn., a shop working for a New York jobber was also shut down tight.

KELLOGG LODGES COMPLAINT WITH MEXICAN GOVT.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The killing of Jacob Rosenthal, a wealthy American, by a band of bandits, was seized upon as an excuse by the state department to lodge a representation with the Mexican government calling for adequate protection for American citizens.

Secretary Kellogg, a bitter enemy of Mexico announced that he would await a complete report before deciding on making a demand for indemnity and other redress.

Expressed Regret.

The Mexican government has already expressed its regret for the incident to the American charge d'affaires in Mexico City and assurances were conveyed that every effort had been made by the federal authorities to rescue the kidnaped man.

The federal troops killed two of the bandits in a sharp battle. The remainder killed Rosenthal in revenge.

The kidnaping of Rosenthal was believed to be a plot to discredit the Calles administration.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

POTOMAC, Ill., Sept. 17. — An admission that the major promise of his articles attacking the morality of university undergraduates—the spicy bit concerning co-educational sleeping following a pajama dance in Pullmans on route to a university football game, was gleaned from hearsay, came from the lips of the man of the hour, Wilfred O. Cross, episcopal divinity student, at his home here today.

He declared, with something of the man-on-the-street air that he had participated in some of the "parties" and "hot dates" of which he wrote but admitted that he had missed out on the pajama orgy.

W. P. MEETINGS PROSCRIBED BY BOSTON POLICE

Ban Engdahl Meeting from Common

By S. D. LEVINE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 17.—Boston police have established a proscribed district for Workers (Communist) Party meetings which included the famous Boston Commons, where J. Lewis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, had been announced to speak in the local state and congressional campaign.

No Nucleo of Ban.

The territory from which Communist meetings were banned according to police pronouncement included the city's fourth police district, covering the principal downtown section.

The first indication that Bert Miller, Boston organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party, had that the police were directing their attack against the Communist congressional campaign was when he arrived at West and Tremont streets, on the edge of Boston Common, ready to open the meeting. Instead he was met by Sergeant James O'Neil, who announced that he had orders from headquarters to stop the meeting, not only on Boston Common but everywhere thruout this police district.

Miller and Engdahl went to the police station to learn the motives back of this new gag rule. They were told by Lieutenant John F. Dobbyn, in charge, that he would give no further information; that he had received orders from higher up that no meeting would be permitted, and that the only recourse was to see Superintendent of Police Michael Crowley in the morning.

Socialist Party Let Alone.

All the time Alfred Baker Lewis, the New England organiser of the socialist party, was holding a meeting unmolested only a short distance from where the Communist meeting was planned.

When approached by Organizer Miller, who asked that he protest against the breaking up of the Communist meeting, Lewis announced what had happened, denounced the police action and then continued his address.

Not to be outdone by the police, Organizer Miller announced the holding of a meeting at Scollay Square, in another police district. At this meeting Miller, acting as chairman, and Engdahl stressed the revelations brought out in the hearing for a new trial in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. It is believed that the ban on the Communist meetings grew out of the damning facts against the United States government brought out by the Sacco-Vanzetti hearings, showing that the Palmer-Wilson regime in 1920 deliberately framed-up Sacco and Vanzetti on a murder case in an effort to get rid of them, according to admissions in affidavits made by two ex-agents of the department of justice.

Inquest Into Death Of Eight Workers in Missouri River Tube

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 17.—Inquests were to be held today over the bodies of eight workmen who yesterday lost their lives in an explosion and were entombed in a tunnel 500 feet below the middle of the Missouri River. The first of the bodies was recovered shortly after midnight last night and the seven others were brought to the surface soon afterward. Dynamite, which at first was believed to have caused the explosion was found intact when workers drilled thru rock and clay to the bodies. Gas is blamed for the disaster.

Indict Four in Hall-Mills Murder

GROUP OF NOTABLES WIRE PROTEST TO POLISH LEGATION AT WASHINGTON

Signed by a group of leading progressives and radicals of the country, a telegram has just been sent to the Polish legation at Washington protesting against the imprisonment of thousands of Polish workers and peasants and urging full amnesty. The signers of the message declare that unless this is granted they will participate in a national movement of publicity and agitation against the present rule of terror in Poland.

The telegram reads as follows:

"Polish Legation, Washington, D. C.:

"In the interest of freedom of political opinion we protest against the continued imprisonment of six thousand workers and peasants of Poland for their views and political activities and urge full amnesty without discrimination. If this is not granted we shall organize nation-wide agitation to make American sentiment known. Copy of this has been cabled Prime Minister Bartel.

"Upton Sinclair, Roger N. Baldwin, Professor Robert Morss Lovett, Charlotta Anita Whitney, Sara Bard Field, Colonel C. E. S. Wood, E. G. Wentworth, William Bousk, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Elton Hayes, Robert W. Dunn, William H. Holly, Ralph Chaplin."

BRITISH TORIES ACCEPT NANCY ASTOR'S DEFY

Goes to Live in U.S.S.R. with His Family

LONDON—(By Mail)—When Nancy Astor, fiery M. P. issued her challenge to British believers in the Soviet regime to go to the U. S. S. R. and live there perhaps she expected there would be no one to accept. She was mistaken.

James Morton, a Scotchman, 48 years of age, an iron-moulder by trade, who has been living in Liverpool for years left for Leningrad with his wife and two children to work and live in the Soviet republic.

Money Paid For Fare.

Lady Astor paid their traveling expenses as she promised.

Morton declared living conditions in Russia, granted that they could be as bad as they were pictured by enemies of the Workers' Republic, could not be any worse than what the average worker is up against in Great Britain.

Had Prospects of Job.

"I can't speak the language, but I have prospects of a job," he told a reporter. "Things may be thin over there. I don't know. But they'll have to be fearfully thin to be leaner than they have been for me here. I'm a skilled man—I served a seven years' apprenticeship, but all I can get is £3 6d. a week—sometimes—and think myself lucky to get it compared with other skilled workers in the engineering trades. Since 1921 I have been out of work more than half the time. So I'm not afraid that things will be too bad for me to beer.

Complete Confidence.

"I don't think any man could show a more complete confidence in the Soviet regime than I am showing now. I'm taking what I hold most precious —my wife and my two young children, a boy aged eight and a girl a year older—and I am certain my trust won't be misplaced. If ever I went west I'd rather leave them in the hands of our Russian comrades than in the hands of the Liverpool board of guardians.

Knows Something of Conditions.

"I have been secretary of the 'Hands off Russia' and the Russian relief committees in Liverpool, so I know something of conditions in Russia. I'm not going with a money-grabbing aim. A workers' State in the stage of transition can't be a milk-and-honey land. It has to suffer for the sins of the capitalist predecessors. But I want to be there in that period of transition. I want to stand shoulder to shoulder with our Russian comrades in their struggle. I like to think that I shall be a sort of ambassador."

Mr. Morton and his family left London on board the Gersen, of the Russian State Merchant and Passenger Service.

LITHUANIAN WORKERS OF CHICAGO ESTABLISH "VILNIS" AS A DAILY

By VICTOR A. ZOKAITIS.

Today is a red-letter day for Lithuanian Communists. Today "Vilnis" (Surge) appears as a daily. With the appearance of the daily "Vilnis" the Lithuanian Communists will now have two daily mouthpieces in this country.

"Laisve" (Freedom) has been a daily for many years. It has carried on excellent work in the eastern part of this country rallying Lithuanian workers for a fight against their exploiters. It has gained in influence as the influence of the Lithuanian clericals, nationalists and social-democrats has waned.

Combats Clericals And Reformists

The need for a daily similar to "Laisve" has been felt for many years in Chicago. Here the social-democrats have their daily "Naujienos," and the clericals their daily "Draugas (Friend) By the time "Laisve" reached Chicago it was several days old. Many Lithuanian workers have not learned to read the English language. They must depend upon the daily Lithuanian papers for their news. They seek to get the paper with the latest news. The circulation of "Laisve" therefore could not grow beyond the small circle of party members and sympathisers because of the fact.

The need of a paper to combat the lies of both the social-democrat and the clerical press in Chicago forced the Lithuanian comrades to issue the weekly "Zarijas" (Ember) immediately after the left wing split in the Lithuanian socialist federation. This publication was short-lived. The persecution which followed the Palmer red raids forced it to cease publication.

A Daily Needed.

April, 1920, the weekly "Vilnis" (Surge) was issued. The Lithuanian socialists, about this time, began to run full-page ads advertising all kinds of fake promotion schemes. Hundreds of thousands of dollars saved by many Lithuanian workers were carried away in these fake schemes. "Vilnis" took an active part in the exposure of these schemes. Its influence began to grow greater and greater among the workers.

In September 1921 "Vilnis" appeared as a semi-weekly. At first it seemed as if it would be possible to carry on the fight with this semi-weekly. Later events proved that nothing less than a daily would be needed to entirely destroy the influence of these anti-working class elements.

Fruit of Six Months' Work.

Agitation for a daily "Vilnis" began. Many comrades feared to take the step. As time went on the need for a daily grew so strong that these comrades were forced by the circumstances they found themselves in to come forward and agitate for a daily.

The daily "Vilnis" now appears after an intense six months' campaign. With the appearance of the daily "Vilnis" not only should it be a day of rejoicing for the Lithuanian Communists but it should be a day of rejoicing for workers of other languages.

Co-operatives Handle Mongolian Trade; U. S. and British Shut Out

MOSCOW, Sept. 17.—Nikiforov, representative in Mongolia for the Soviet Union, reports to the official Tass News Agency that trade in Mongolia is almost wholly in the hands of the native co-operators. It amounts to about $20,000,000 annual turnover and is based chiefly on the cattle breeding industry.

American and British imports have almost ceased in the past three years, but Chinese capital represents about half of the total commercial investment. The Mongolian bank has reorganized the finances of the country and established a budget. Manufacturers are now being introduced under Russian guidance.

GERMAN NOBLES BREAK LOOSE IN MORAL DEBAUCH

Royalists Rob, Priests Pet, Masseuse Mulct

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—Members of the German nobility, from kaiser to counts, and their former retainers from the clergyman to the masseuse, are engaged in a lively competition to prove to the nation that crime, petty as well as major, is more a matter of environment and circumstance than faulty family timber.

Now that the German nobility find their opportunities for robbing the masses somewhat curtailed, they are resorting to illegal methods to live the old life of affluence and ease.

Among those who are now in the front pages because of shady practices are:

Baron Promising Boy.

Baron von Oppen, who is on trial for twenty-seven breach of promise cases and a check forgery.

Countess Hessolda von Leiningen-Westerburg is on trial for forging her husband's will.

Countess Pohlen, engaged in the business of procuring young girls for immoral purposes. To save her from trial members of the nobility had her committed to an insane asylum.

Countess Rothemer robbed home of relatives while visiting with them and is now locked up.

A Petting Sky Pilot.

A Potsdam clergymen, formerly a spiritual adviser to the kaiser, is charged with organizing petting parties in his sacristy.

A Dresden masseuse filed suit against Wilhelm Hohenzollern for services rendered to the former kaiserin's son, Prince Ferdinand. The masseuse received $7.50 an hour from the prince, but when she discovered that he was of royal blood she wanted more money.

Efforts of Syrian Labor to Organize Hailed by R. I. L. U.

MOSCOW, Aug. 28.— (By Mail.)— The executive bureau of the R. I. L. U. has sent the following telegram to the organizational committee of Syrian trade unions:

"The R. I. L. U. sends its brotherly greetings to the proletariat of Syria which is defending its class rights. The united action of all workers and slaves in your country provides a new and striking proof for the power and invincibility of the working class movement, altho there is the most terrible reaction in your country and you lack trade union organization. We are convinced that the proletariat of Syria will better its working conditions and win for itself the right to meet and all other political rights thru an energetic class struggle."

BANDITS KILL RICH RETIRED U. S. MERCHANT

Kidnapping Plot to Discredit Calles

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 17. — Jacob Rosenthal retired American merchant of Woodmere N. Y., who was kidnapped by Mexican bandits on Sunday, has been stabbed to death, according to official dispatches received here today.

Clashed With Troops.

The killing of Rosenthal came when the bandits clashed with federal troops near Cuernavana, the reports said.

The police and military had located the bandits and were closing in on them. The bandits sent out a demand for $10,000 for ransom of Rosenthal and the police resorted to a ruse, pretending to send the money to a rendezvous for Rosenthal's delivery. When the bandits arrived with Rosenthal, there was an attempt by the police to rescue him and a battle ensued. While the fighting was in progress Rosenthal was stabbed by the bandits.

Plot to Discredit Calles.

Two of the bandits were captured but the remainder escaped and troops and police are hot on their trail.

Rosenthal's body has been recovered.

Rosenthal was kidnapped Sunday while motoring to Mexico City from Cuernavaca, where he had been spending the week-end.

In some quarters it has been alleged that the kidnapping was part of a plot to discredit the Calles government with the United States.

French Force Turks to Turn Over Lotus Case to World Court

PARIS, Sept. 17.—The "Lotus affair" has been submitted to the world court by Turkey for its adjudication. Lieutenant Desmons of the ship Lotus, held by Turkey on charges of manslaughter, has been released.

Th case arose when the French steamer Lotus in Greek waters off Mytilene ran down a Turkish coaster, the Boskurt, drowning eight Turks. The French denied jurisdiction to Turkish courts, but Desmons was held as the second officer of the Lotus in command of the bridge at the time.

Premier Poincare practically had given the Turks an ultimatum, when Turkey gave in and turned over the affair to the world court. The French contend the affair took place on the high sea and should not be the subject of Turkish jurisdiction. Turkey is not a member of the league or the court.

FRANCE WARNS FASCIST RULE NOT TO MEDDLE

Right of Asylum for Refuges Upheld

PARIS, Sept. 17. — Premier Poincare has called in the Italian ambassador, Signor Avesana, and told him plainly that France will regard any further officially inspired criticism of French hospitality of foreign political refuges as an unfriendly act of an extreme flagrance.

Aimed at Mussolini.

This is aimed directly at Mussolini's Rome speech, in which he attacked France for giving political refuge to Italians who have fled from the fascist terror of Mussolini's regime.

In addition, M. Roger, French charge d'affaire in Rome, has protested to the general secretary of the fascist party, Bordonaco, against fascist demonstrations hostile to France.

Fascists Threaten France.

Coincident with this, however, the fascist party executive has issued a statement viciously attacking France and threatening reprisal.

"The land of France," says the statement, "for whose safety some of our 500,000 war dead fell, has been for years the most hospitable land for all those hatching in their perfidious hearts hatred against Italy. All this cannot longer be tolerated."

France is warned to change her conduct or the fascisti "will know how to act."

Dispatches from Rome give the names published by the fascist government of a list of political refuges who have sought safety abroad from the terror. Most of them living in France. It is announced that action is taken to deprive these refugees of their Italian citizenship. Among them are Signore Rossi, Carlo Bassi, Guiseppe Grimaini and Massimo Roca.

Martial Law at Trieste.

That the Italian people are restive under the fascist dictatorship and there exists division in authority is indicated by news leaking thru the censor to Vienna sources, telling of martial law being declared at Trieste following a pitched battle between fascists and the regular police.

RECIPROCITY IN TRADE EXPECTED WITH CANADIANS

Liberal-Progressive Coalition in View

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 17.—With the 119 liberal party candidates elected, together with eight progressives, 11 united farmers' alliance men, three laborites and two independents, which are general allies of the liberals on the tariff question, it is expected that MacKenzie King, liberal leader, will have about 50 majority over the 91 conservative members of the new Canadian parliament.

The tariff issue was the leading question. Premier Meighan of the Conservatives standing for a high tariff against imports from the United States, went down to defeat even in his own constituency and is expected to retire from public life.

MacKenzie King and the liberals stands for a low tariff policy, and as against the conservatives on this issue can get the support of the western progressives, some of whom are for complete free trade and all even stronger than the liberals for low tariff.

It is expected the Meighen cabinet will assemble and resign, leaving the way open for MacKenzie King to form a coalition liberal-progressive cabinet.

League of Nations in Talk of Disarmament; But Not One Disarms

GENEVA, Sept. 17.—The "Third Committee," which is dealing with disarmament matters in a painfully slow fashion, has taken up the matter of limiting the private manufacture of arms. France and England surprised the committee by saying that a general disarmement conference could be called before autumn of next year.

Such "haste" astonished the committee, which pointed out that the armament experts, including those of the United States, have been working for several months without arriving at any agreement on even the definition of armament.

Mr. Boncour of France held out that the matter of private manufacture could be taken up at a general conference, which need not wait until a year from now, and a compromise was reached that if a general disarmament conference could be held before the Eighth league assembly, private manufacturers would be dealt with there, but if not the question would be taken up at a special conference.

Count Bernstorff of Germany warned against too many disarmament conferences.

The budget for the league's next year's expenses, including those of the world court, was discussed. It runs up to $5,000,000.

A NEW NOVEL OIL By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

VII

The first rain of the season was falling, and Bunny got in fairly late and found that Eunice was at home, and had not carried out her threat to get another lover. No, she was trying an experiment she had read about in a book of her mother's, a thing called "mental telepathy," you sat and shut your eyes and "concentrated," "willing" that somebody should do something, and then they would do it, and the "new thought" doctrine would be vindicated. Eunice was trying it, and when she heard Bunny's step on the veranda, she sprang up with a little shriek of delight and rushed into his arms, and while she smothered him with kisses she told him about this marvellous triumph of experimental psychology. "Oh, Bunny, I just knew you couldn't be so cruel to me! I knew you'd come, because I'm all alone, Mamma has gone to raise money for the Serbian orphans. Oh, Bunny, come on!"—and she started to draw him toward the stairs.

Bunny didn't think that was quite the thing, and tried to hold back, but she smothered his protest in kisses. "You silly boy, are we going out and park in the rain? Or do you want to go to a hotel here in town, where everybody knows us?"

"But, your mother, Eunice—"

"Mother, bunk!" said Eunice. "Mother has a lover and I know it, and she knows I know it. If she don't know about you and me, it's time she was making a guess. So you come up to my room."

"But how'll I get out, Eunice?"

"You'll get out when I let you out, and maybe it'll be morning, and you'll be treated with decent hospitality."

"But Eunice, I never heard of such a thing!"

"Bunny, you talk like your grandmother!"

"But what about the servants, dear?"

"Servants, hell!" said Eunice. "You can run your home to please the servants, but that's not our way—at least not tonight!" And to save Bunny any embarrassment, she kept him in her room in the morning while she broke the news to her mother; and if there were any mental agonies Bunny never knew it, because the patroness of the Serbian orphans breakfasted in bed, reading in the morning paper the account of her fashionable philanthropies.

After that, the ice was broken—as the French have observed, it is the first step that counts, though it is doubtful if any parent in old-fashioned France has been compelled to take quite so long a step as this. The rainy season continued, making outdoor petting parties uncomfortable, so whenever he was commanded, Bunny would stay in Eunice's home, and it was all quite domestic and regular according to advanced modern standards. In fact, there was only one small detail left, and Bunny suggested that: "Eunice, why shouldn't we go and get married, and have it over with?"

He was surprised by the vehemence of the girl's reaction. "Oh, Bunny, we're having such a happy time, and why do you want to ruin it?"

"But why would that ruin it?"

"All married people are miserable. I know, because I've watched them: Mamma and Papa would give a million dollars—well, maybe not that much, but certainly a couple of hundred thousand, if they could get loose without having to go through all the fuss in the courts, and the horrid things the newspapers would publish, and their pictures and all."

"But we won't have to do that, dear."

"How do you know we mightn't? If we got married, you'd think you had a right to me, and then you wouldn't do what I say anymore, and I wouldn't be happy. Oh, let's do our own way, and not what other people try to make us. All my life other people have been making me do things, and I've been fighting them—even you, Bunny-bear." She had a score of such appelatives for him, because, as you can understand, his name was adapted to petting-party uses; they were dancing a new contrivance known as the Bunny-hug, and he heard a lot about that.

You went about in this prosperous and fashionable society, and on the surface everything was decorous and proper, fitting the marital formulas laid down in the laws and preached in the churches. But when you got under the surface—anywhere, high or low—what you found was that human beings, finding themselves unhappy, had come to private understandings. Husbands and wives set one another free, they made exchanges of partners, they brought friends into their homes, who were in reality substitute husbands or wives; there were companions and secretaries and governesses and cousins who played such roles—and when the children found it out, they were in position to put pressure on their parents, a kind of informal family blackmail, good for motor-cars and fur-coats and strings of pearls, and most precious of all, the right to have your own way.

Straddling in Streator

The Walker-Olander leadership of the Illinois Federation of Labor never displayed its lack of character to better advantage than in its refusal to take a stand for its favorite candidate for the United States senate at the Streator convention, last the apple of discord be hurled into the gathering.

The candidate of the Walker-Olander machine is Frank L. Smith. Another section of the officialdom favors the other gold dust twin of Samuel Insull, George E. Brennan. The Brennan supporters wield considerable influence and pay considerable per capita so Walker and Olander play mum and the happy family party of labor fakers remains nnruffled by an unseemly scrap.

The third senatorial candidate, Parley Parker Christensen, has a small group of supporters in the convention. It is likely that the Walker-Olander machine would not hesitate to endorse Frank L. Smith, if they only had the Christensen supporters to consider. But Simon O'Donnell got the fat janitors to back Brennan, perhaps with the promise that Brennan's election would relieve the janitors of the duty of prodncing home brew for the tunnels.

The policy of supporting capitalist candidates for office on the ground that they are friendly to labor works out very well—for the leaders. But for the rank and file it is utter folly. It should not be hard to convince the most simple-minded worker that there is something radically wrong with a policy that can find common ground on which to stand, with Samuel Insull or any other capitalist or group of capitalists.

At the same time the workers must not fall into the error of expecting any worth while results from a campaign in favor of a candidate who does not base his message on a program of class struggle. A candidate without a working class program and without the support of a working class organization of which he is the servant and not the master may be a choice of evils, but if the working class have one lesson to learn above all others it is that they must accomplish their own salvation thru their own organized efforts. They must learn to act collectively. They must learn that devious diplomacy of the kind favored by the get-elected-quick politicos will never get them anywhere. They must quit depending on "good" men to gather their harvests.

The DAILY WORKER is committed to the policy of a Labor Party for the workers in alliance with the farmers. This is a necessary step for the workers to take in the march to freedom from the toils of the capitalist system.

The workers of Illinois never had a better opportunity than is presented to them in the coming congressional elections to expose the puppets of the democrat and republican parties and their sponsors in the ranks of labor officialdom.

The workers and farmers must raise the farmer-labor banner in the elections and lay the base for a farmer-labor organisation that will outlive the campaign and thru which the workers and farmers can function during elections and in between.

Murder on the Rails

An article with this title from the pen of George Harvey appears in the current nnmber of The North American Review and severely castigates the executives of American railroads for their refusal to install an automatic train-control system that would save the lives of thousands who are killed yearly on the railroads in preventable accidents.

On last Labor Day several passengers were killed in a railroad accident within the city limits of Chicago. As nsnal the railroad fastened the blame on the engineer. But an investigation into the accident proved that had the cars been made of steel instead of wood, the loss of life would be avoided.

The railroads will take a chance on getting their passengers killed rather than introdnce safety devices, or substitute steel for wood in car construction because those improvements cost money and investors must have their dividends. This is one of the greatest indictments that could be drawn against the private ownership of what is essential to the life of the people at large. Profits must be had even at the cost of human life.

THE FREIHEIT ISSUES CALL TO ALL CHICAGO JEWISH WORKERS

After 5 years of bitter struggle and strenuous efforts, we are on the verge of putting into life our beautiful dream of enlarging the Freiheit in size and secondly, of having a DAILY CHICAGO EDITION—thus fulfilling the desire of all the progressive Jewish workers in Chicago.

The glorious day for the Jewish working masses in Chicago will be Saturday, Oct. 9, when the appearance of the first Chicago Daily Edition will be celebrated by a huge mass meeting and concert arranged for that occasion by the Chicago Freiheit management, whera such speakers as Charles E. Ruthenberg, national secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, M. Epstein, editor of the Freiheit, and Ben Gold, manager of the New York Joint Board of the Furiers' Union, will address the audience, at the Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren streets.

We do not doubt for a moment that the comrades fully appreciate the tremendous significance of this Chicago Daily Edition of the Freiheit for the Chicago labor movement, the fact that the Freiheit will be able to reflect on its pages the struggles, and achievements in the unions, Workmen's Circle branches, clubs, etc.

We urge every progressive Jewish worker to rally to the Freiheit, help us conduct the campaign successfully, in spite of our enemies of various colors: yellow, black and many others.

You must come to the Freiheit office immediately, get tickets and certificates and spread the campaign among your fellow workers in the shops, workmen's circle, clubs, and in general wherever you can find Jewish workers.

CHICAGO WORKERS' SHOOL CONCERT AND DANCE SUNDAY

The Chicago Workers' School has sent out an attractive plugger announcing its first "get-together" affair for Sunday, Sept. 16, at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd.

The dance will be preceded by a very good concert which is arranged by Comrade Hambro. One of the unusual features of the evening will be a shop bulletin display. Shop bulletins from all parts of the country will be exhibited in an attractively arranged booth.

The admission is 50 cents at the door and every worker is invited to attend.

Send us the name and address of a progressive worker to whom we can send a sample copy of The DAILY WORKER.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

By N. BUCHARIN.

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing here, with a report made by Comrade Bucharin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organisation of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

THE second question which we must consider is: To what degree has private capital established itself in our country, and what are the comparative proportions of state possession, development and private capital. Here I must anticipate a little, and insert a small observation: We must differentiate strictly between private economics in our country and private capitalist economics, a point upon which many comrades—especially those of the opposition, as we shall see later—are by no means clear. Not all private economics are private capitalist economics. The agricultural undertakings of the poor peasantry, and of the medium farmer employing no outside labor, are private economical enterprises, but do not represent private capitalist economics. But when we speak of our competition and our class warfare with private capital, we must inquire into the comparative powers of our state economics in all their forms on the one hand, and private capitalist economics, that is, economic undertakings employing paid labor, on the other. It is unfortunate that precisely on this point we are short of statistics, which should be compiled with special care on this point in our state.

THE data at our disposal on the movement of private capital, its enlargement or diminution, cannot lay any claim to accuracy. We must devote particular attention to this aspect of this question.

A functionary of the people's commissariat for finance, Kutler, recently made an attempt at calculating the extent of private capital and the annual accumulation within the private capitalist undertakings. An enquete was held among the private undertakings, but was extended to only about ten per cent of the private capitalist undertakings classed under the clearing tax. This last fact shows in itself how difficult it is to find firm ground in Kutler's conclusions. However this may be, Kutler's investigations into the role played by private capital are more favorable for private capital than any other inquiries which have been made.

ACCORDING to his calculations, the technical side of which I shall not discuss here, as involving an indirect and complicated method, the gross proceeds of the 328,865 private capitalist undertakings existing in our country are expressed in a very considerable sum, according to Kutler somewhere between 319 and 585 million roubles.

At the C. C. plenum one of the most respected members of the opposition, and one of our highest economic functionaries, Comrade Pyatakov, calculated the net gains of private capital at 400 to 500 million roubles, arriving at this result by another method, a method in which Comrade Diarchinsky and other comrades have observed a number of errors. I need not deal with these errors here. I need only mention that Comrade Pyatakov made his calculation in the following manner: 11 per cent of industrial production is placed in the hands of private dealers. In reality, however, the private dealer trades in a very much larger proportion of industrial production; his share has been calculated at 40 per cent and even more. Comrade Pyatakov based his sum total of private capitalist accumulation on these figures.

HERE he committed a number of errors, the chief of these being the following: If we place 11 per cent in the hands of the private dealer by legal methods, and he receives in reality more than this 11 per cent, then this is done by means of repeated re-sales. Let us say that the co-operatives, or our subordinate state organisations, which buy goods from our state organisations at wholesale prices, resell these to capitalist. But where such things happen—and they do happen—we need not imagine that the private trader pockets the whole difference between the factory and the retail price. When he thus buys the goods at the third step of their sale, then the second link of the chain, the state trade organ or the co-operative from which he buys, has already secured its profit, so that the private trader does not receive the whole difference between factory and retail prices.

LET us even assume the gross proceeds of the private capitalists to actually attain the 400 million roubles of Kutler's favorable estimate, (I take the mean between 319 and 585 million roubles). This figure is calculated to show its all, for either 500 or 400 million roubles is a very nice sum. If the gross proceeds of private capital are really expressed in such a sum, then this represents a very real social danger to our class. It would signify that private capital has intruded too far in its contest with But in my opinion this calculation neglects a fact of decisive importance. This sum does not represent net profits, expressing the amount of private capital's accumulation, and therefore this sum cannot by any means be compared with the net profits of our state undertakings, our trade organs, and our state industry. Such a comparison is made the more impossible by the fact that the proceeds thus calculated include the whole gross profits of the capitalist trader, including that part of the profits which he consumes.

| 5027 . . | September 15 |

About half of the party members have now paid the United Labor Ticket Assessment. During the month of August, 1,608 members paid the assessment and their payments were remitted to the National Office. During the first fifteen days of September the payments of 697 members have been received.

While the collection of the assessment is taking more time than it should, the total begins to look better.

There are still several hundred nuclei which have not responded to the numerous appeals and letters which have been sent to them. If the secretaries of these nuclei will wake up, collect the assessment and send in their remittances, it will still be possible for the party to make a creditable showing in the collection of this assessment for support of the party work.

The burden of supporting the party activities should not be placed on the shoulders of only part of the membership. Every member of the party who is employed should consider it a matter of party duty to plere the United Labor Ticket Assessment in his dues book. With a little increased activity the total at the end of September can be driven up to the 7,000 mark. That will mean a big boost to the party activities.

WE ASK THOSE MEMBERS AND NUCLEI SECRETARIES WHO ARE STILL DELINQUENT TO ACT.

Toledo Will Form Worker Correspondent Circle in Near Future

TOLEDO, Ohio., Sept. 17.—J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, following the campaign meeting here, spoke to about 50 workers on the need of forming a worker correspondents' group.

About 100 copies of the "American Worker Correspondent" were given to those present to hand out to other workers that may be interested in this movement and were not present.

In his talk Engdahl pointed out the need of a strong workers' correspondent group and stressed the fact that as many non-Party workers as possible should be drawn into these circles.

The actual date for the organization of the Toledo worker correspondents' group will be announced at the next election campaign meeting to be held in two weeks.

SECTION THREE, CHICAGO, MEMBERSHIP MEETING IS NOW POSTPONED TO TUESDAY, SEPT. 21

Section Three, Chicago, Workers (Communist) Party Section Executive Committee at its last meeting decided to postpone the general membership meeting called for Sunday morning, Sept. 18, to Tuesday night, Sept. 21. This change was made necessary as many language comrades have important meetings and conferences of non-party organizations on that morning.

Tuesday night the meeting will be held in Vilnis Hall. The reorganization of the section will be the main point under discussion and all members of Street Nuclei 5, 6, 7 and 8 and of the two Shop Nuclei in that section are urged to be present. The meeting will open at 8 o'clock sharp.

All former party members living in this section and who wish to rejoin the party will come to this meeting.

All comrades having a few hours to spare Sunday morning to collect signatures to place Elizabeth Griffin on the ballot for congress are urged to attend the meeting of Section 1 and Section 8 that is announced in another column.

TRIES TO RUN D. W. DEALER OUT OF TOWN

Pittsfield Chief of Police Gets Tough

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker)

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Sept. 17.— An instance of Massachusetts police interfornation of the foreign-born and illegal interference with their rights, is shown in the persecution of a newsdealer who sells The DAILY WORKER at 228 Columbus avenne, Pittsfield, by the chief of police, J. L. Sullivan.

The news-dealer, a Turk named Hagop Samuelian, tells the following story of the police chief's visit to his little store:

Police Chief Runs Amuck.

Chief: "What is your name?"

When told, the chief asked: "Where you come from?"

Samuelian: "From New York City."

Chief: "Are you a citizen?"

Samuelian: "Not yet, sir."

Chief: "Why not? You red: you dirty —— you —— —— trouble maker! If you don't like this country, who don't you go back? Why do you sell that paper?" (pointing to The DAILY WORKER).

The chief of police slapped Samuelian in the face and added:

Threatens More Persecution.

"You —— —— we don't want you here. Pack up your things and leave the town at once. If you stay here you will be in trouble all the time. Now get the hell out of town!"

A few days later, finding that Samuelian was still doing business, he was hailed to the chief's office, where the chief threatened to take away his ice cream license. Again he ordered Samuelian he "must leave town."

Since then, the Samuelian has stuck in Pittsfield, various frame-ups are being tried on him, with strangers coming in trying to "leave a package"—probably with the idea of having the store raided and liquor found by the police.

Complains to Consul.

Samuelian has complained of this persecution to the Turkish consul general in New York, Djelal Bey. In his complaint he says in part:

"It is true that I, a foreigner, nor being an Indian or an Americanized 100 per center thru my experiences of years in the United States—practically thrown from one gutter to another, sympathize with the laboring class instead of with the democrats or republicans. And in this case has centered on my selling The DAILY WORKER. I am mailing a copy of today's issue.

"Your excellency will find the same publication sold in New York and thruout the U. S. A."

Report Obregon Killed.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 17. — Reports circulated in The United States that General Obregon has met death at the hands of the Yneui Indians are without confirmation here. These reports it is believed are based upon the fact that General Obregon was besieged for nearly a day in Sonora but was released last Monday by federal troops.

WHAT AND HOW TO READ

By V. F. CALVERTON.

IN contemporary American literature there are few dramas and fewer novels that deal with the class struggle in a definite or direct fashion. All of them, however, reveal its influence in both style and substance.

The cry attributed to Challapin, "I am neither bourgeois nor proletarian. I am an artist," no longer arrests, since we know that art is dependent as much upon social life for its conceptions as is politics or philosophy, and the artist, therefore, is neither free of social compulsions nor aloof from social struggles. It is because art seems so removed into a blue-mist world of illusion that the connection between its substance and that of the social world is so seldom detected.

In the novels of the nineteenth century the virtues and ambitions of the bourgeoisie were extolled. Toward the end of the century proletarian sentimentalists began to multiply. With the 20th century a distinct anti-bourgeois trend had developed in art.

Theodore Dreiser is an expression of that anti-bourgeois trend. Dreiser is no proletarian. He is neither class-conscious nor class-inspired. Altho his heroes very often represent the period of individualistic development and achievement that belong to the early days of capitalism, Dreiser's whole attitude toward the ethics of the bourgeoisie is one of disgust and detestation. The smugness of bourgeois virtue he scorns. The religiosity of the Victorian bourgeoisie he ridicules with callous gusto. The money-madness of our civilization he records with weary contempt. In the optimism of the 19th century bourgeois—

> "The snail's on the thorn,
> The bird's on the wing,
> God's in his heaven.
> All's well with the world—"

he sees only hollow rhetoric.

Dreiser represents the spirit of social decadence. Futility is his dominant note. Faith has fled. Social reconstruction appears but a myth. He has no hope, no aim—only an unresistant resignation to futility. The proletariat means nothing more to him than the bourgeoisie. Man as a whole do not awaken in him the promise of prophecy. Progress is a delusion.

Yet in his very contempt for man Dreiser paints life in patterns that have social significance. That is why one should read "An American Tragedy," which is his latest and best novel, and which is the most effective literary achievement of a contemporary American.

"An American Tragedy" does not deal with the life of the proletariat, altho at times it never more than a poor foreman in a collar factory. Its tragedy is one of sex and social aspiration. Clyde Griffiths, the son of religious parents, after an automobile accident—in this drove him from his home town, finally finds work and a residence in his uncle's establishment. Progressively converted his mistress from a source of pleasure into an encumbrance, Clyde, when he marry Sondra, a girl of rich society, is endangered by the pregnancy of his mistress, who threatens to disclose their liaison. Clyde, driven by ambition, arranges a scheme for the murder of his mistress. Loses his courage at the crucial moment, but finally allows Roberta to drown, when their boat is capsized. He is tried, convicted and electrocuted.

The story is simple, and aside from its vast caliber is not peculiarly modern in spirit or peculiarly original in structure. Its protagonist is a character of weak, irresponsible type, whose aspirations are devoted neither to the promise and promise of the poetic life nor to the climbs task of reshaping an unjust and joyless world. Its substance is not new and its situations, taken in context, savor of the melodramatic. On its face, it promises little to post or prophet.

It was Voltaire, however, who wrote in his preface to Herod and Mariane that—> expression of them that the man of genius is easily discerned from the wit, and the poet from the scribbler."

And art is concerned fundamentally with the emotions and not the intellect.

"When the passions are to be described, nearly the same ideas occur to everybody; but it is in the level. Art is devoted to the projection of the passions in their relationship to their social origins, limitations and developments. And it is in Dreiser's description of the passions, his expression of them, his choice of observation to interpret them, that makes him a genius instead of a wit, that makes "An American Tragedy" a colossal creation instead of a mediocre melodrama.

"An American Tragedy" is not written in an arresting style that detains thru sheer joy of rhythm or pure euphony of phrase. Like all of Dreiser's novels, it is written in a halting, circumlocutory, obese prose. In places, however, Dreiser has outwritten himself and actually achieved the elegant. The addition and multiplication of phrase and parentheses, nevertheless, gives a formidable solidity to the book that a more finished, fragile stylist would have been unable to create. As in the novels of Zola, the indefatigable collection of detail, the slow, steady accretion of infatiguemals, lends to the narrative a realism that is almost photographically complete and which in the process of interpretation acquires artistic power.

If one is anxious to see American literature grow out of its adolescence into maturity, one cannot ignore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy." Dreiser is a transitionary novelist. His contempt for the bourgeoisie stands out in sharp contrast to the adoration of the bourgeoisie which characterised the novels of William Deans Howells, the leading American fictionist of the last half of the 19th and the first part of the 20th century. From this transitionary literature will eventually spring a genuine proletarian literature—already palpitating in embryo—which will combine hatred of the bourgeoisie with appreciation of the proletariat.

American Capital Conquering Poland

By B. K. GEBERT.

ENGLAND won a victory in Poland against France, when Pilsudsky thru a bloody uprising abolished the government of Wojciechowski-Witos. Pilsudski is England's man. Pilsudski is proving to be worthy of England's support and its faith in him. Pilsudski is busy preparing for war against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and for this Pilsudski is getting further support from England. England is ordering coal from Poland. In this month 200,000 tons of coal will be shipped from Poland to England to help break the strike of the British miners and help Pilsudski to stabilize the country to some extent.

Thanks to big orders from England, the Polish miners are working overtime. The bosses are forcing the miners to work 16 and 20 hours a day.

Every attempt of the workers to stop this exploitation end to organise relief for the British miners is met with an iron fist. All literature concerning the British strike is confiscated. The workers delegates' conference in the Zagiemble Dombrowskie coal region, which went to discuss the problem of how to help their British brothers, was broken up by the armed forces of Pilsudski's government. It is not necessary to mention that the yellow socialists are working in this matter hand in hand with the government, and some of their papers are saying openly that the British strike is permitting Polish industry to gain its place under the sun.

But Poland is not a colony of England today. American capital is busy there getting what is worth getting.

Poland is only second to America in the production of zinc. By agreement with Pilsudski's government W. A. Harriman & Co. got absolute control of the Giesche mines in Upper Silesia. The Geisha establishment was valued before the war at $100,000,000. There are about 30,000 workers working normally in this establishment. After the war part of the establishment was left in Germany, part was given to Poland. Today it is united under the American dollar.

For this huge concession Harriman paid the Polish government $10,000,000. As the Communist deputy, Varski, said once in the Sejm (parliament), "Poland is for sale, but the price is high yet. So international capital will wait patiently till it can buy Poland cheaper." Pilsudski is selling the country cheaper than the former governments. Pilsudski needs money badly for war preparations.

Giesche Zinc Works in Polish Silesia Lately Taken Over by American Capital.

But this is not the whole American capital invested in Poland. The Vacuum Oil Co. invested some $4,000,000 in oil industries in Galicia.

The Radio Corporation of America has built in Warsaw a powerful radio station.

The International Match Co., for granting the government a loan of $5,000,000 gets a monopoly on matches.

Ulen & Co. of New York are making a contract for municipal improvements in four towns for $10,000,000, the money to be loaned by American capitalists.

Dillon, Read & Co., banking firm of New York, loaned the Polish government $35,000,000.

Baldwin Locomotive Works are also doing good business with Poland.

Yes, "the republic of Poland" is for sale. The buyers are English and American capitalists and others.

The ruling class is selling its economic independence. It is selling the workers and peasants to International capital, seeing clearly that their rule is coming to an end.

Dr. Edwin W. Kemmerer and His Commission of Experts Arrive in Warsaw

And when we consider this it will not surprise us that there is in Poland now a commission of "finance experts" headed by Prof. Kammerer, reforming Polish finances so that American capital will control the affairs of Poland. This is the Dawes plan of Poland in its worst form. The enslavement of Poland by American capital means a much harder struggle of the workers and peasants of Poland for their emancipation.

Together with American capital Poland is also getting Americanization. Independence day was celebrated in Poland in every large town. The capitalist press was praying to American capital as to the saviour of the country. Five million signatures were secured, mostly from school children, as proof of the loyalty of the Polish bourgeoisie to American capital. To the signatures was attached "a message of the people of Poland to the citizens of the great American union." It ends with the slogans:

"Long live the United States of America!"

"Long Live Liberty, Equality and Justice!"

What a joke. Liberty and justice in Poland. Strange words to hear in Poland, where there are more than 6,000 political prisoners in jails for crimes no other than participation in workers' organizations and in the fight for freedom.

Liberty and justice, where workmen are shot on the streets when they dare to come to demonstrate their demands; where many are executed for their loyalty to their class, even without a trial.

Liberty and justice, where over 40 per cent of national minorities have not even the right to have school in their own language.

Equality in Poland, where millions of workers and peasants are actually starving, the ruling class robbing them of the last possession for taxes so that the government can keep a huge army ready to make a war on the workers and peasants or on Poland's neighbors.

Yes, Pilsudski's Poland is worthy of American support from the capitalist point of view. It is up to American labor to show that it is with the Poland of the workers and peasants in their dark days of Pilsudski's white terror government, against which is rising a new wave of struggle which will not subside until the final victory is achieved.

The Real Need of the Hour

Organize the unorganised is the need and the demand of the hour.

Why should the steel industry continue to be unorganized when it has been proven convincingly and beyond the shadow of a doubt that successful organization is possible?

Remember the experiences of the great steel strike.

Why should the automobile workers remain organized when in every place where they make automobiles the workers demand organization?

Or is it better for the American labor movement that these workers remain helpless victims of the "enlightened" Henry Ford and his like?

House Painter.

By a Painter.

Up and down the ladder

All day long.
The boss shouts faster.
More sweat.
More profits for the boss.
Less life for us.

And while we are in the process of asking questions, we will ask a couple more—

Why are the textile workers unorganised?

On the basis of what mysterious reasoning does the American Federation of Labor boycott the organization of the rubber industry? Why should Firestone and the other rubber barons be helped by the labor movement to exploit and oppress the workers?

Organize the unorganised—this must be the message of the trade unionists of America to the forthcoming convention of the A. F. of L.

History of the Catholic Church in Mexico

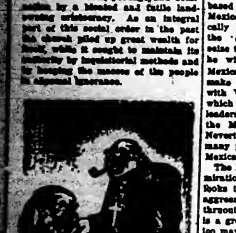
By MANUEL GOMEZ.

CHAPTER IV.

Conclusion.

BRIEF the our study of the history of the catholic church in Mexico has been, the conclusions to be drawn from it are inescapable.

The social basis of the church has been monarchism, peonage, and domination by a blessed and faithe landowning aristocracy. As an integral part of this social order in the past the church piled up great wealth for itself, while it sought to maintain its authority by inquisitorial methods and by keeping the masses of the people in eternal ignorance.



By Vose

As a religious institution the church is a purveyor of glittering superstition for the mental enslavement of the masses. But we have seen that it is impossible to speak of the Roman catholic church in Mexico or anywhere else as a religious institution. The clerical organization seeks to perpetuate every phase of economic and political life. Defenses of church privileges on the grounds of treasonous toleration" is therefore entirely specious—even if the mere mention of toleration by the institution responsible for the holy Inquisition were not in doubtful taste.

As a political institution the church is a power of reaction. It has been extremely in defense of feudal and monarchical privileges, an irreconcilable enemy of Mexican progress, an accomplice of the imperialist designs of foreign capital.

The Record of History.

From the foregoing chapters the reader will have noted that the history of the catholic people since the Spanish conquest records three great forward movements:

(1) The struggle for national independence (1810-21); (2) the great progressive reform movement led by Benito Juarez, culminating in the reforms, the Constitution of 1857 and the long-and-hard combat with Maximilian's bayonet-backed empire; (3) the Mexican revolution which began in 1910, overthrowing the military-aristocratic dictatorship of Porfirio Diaz, sweeping aside Victoriano Huerta, gradually incorporating the diverse demands of bourgeois democrats, land-hungry Indian peasants and organized industrial workers in a battle against native aristocracy and foreign imperialism.

What the role of Mexican catholicism has been in each of these historic upheavals has been made clear to us. In not one of them has the church played a part of which it dares to boast today.

A consistent foe of progress, the church cannot lay claim to a share in a single of the great liberating traditions cherished by modern Mexico.

This is a terrible indictment of any institution. The history of the Mexican people as a whole supplies the best touchstone for judging the history of the catholic church in Mexico.

Where is the Church Today?

But the last word of history has not yet been written. At the present time Mexico is living thru one of the proudest periods of her development. Mexico has not yet a workers' and peasants' government, but the peasants are still armed in great numbers and the agrarian revolution is still going forward, while the working class, 75 per cent organized in trade unions, occupies a strategic position in the life of the nation. President Calles, a petty-bourgeois, but a sincere nationalrevolutionary, is carrying out a policy based upon the principle of making Mexico economically as well as politically independent. His fear that the "class-conscious workers may seize too many of the good things that he wishes to accumulate for petty Mexican capitalism has led him to make some ill-conceived compromises with Wall Street and Washington—which proves that petty-bourgeois leadership cannot be trusted to pilot the Mexican revolution to fruition. Nevertheless, his program indicates many points on which a constructive Mexican nationalism can base itself.

The Mexican nation has won the admiration of all Latin America, which looks to it as a leader against U. S. aggression. Thruout Mexico, and thruout Latin America as well, there is a growing consciousness that Mexico may be able not only peacefully to resist the encroachments of imperialism but to build for itself a sound, independent economic foundation in the process, and at the same time to lead Latin America along the path of united resistance to the lords of Wall Street.

Mexican catholicism has no part in all this. As usual, it stands in open opposition to what is plainly the only program on which a truly independent Mexican nationalism can be embodied.

The Present Conflict.

The present conflic, between the Calles government and the catholic hierarchy is not a religious struggle, but a struggle between the revolution and reaction. The fight to nullify the national-revolutionary constitution of 1917 has been going on for a long time. It was first waged around the anti-foreign and agrarian provisions of article 27; then it shifted for a time to article 123 (containing labor provisions); it was again concentrated on article 27 when the new oil and land laws were adopted in the spring of this year.

That the general reactionary attack is now concentrated on the anti-clerical provisions of the constitution follows as a matter of course. The overthrow of Adolfo de la Huerta's attempted counter-revolution, the church is the only important organized reactionary force in Mexico.

On August 1 the anti-clerical provisions of the constitution were to go into effect. The provisions to which the church took particular exception were those prohibiting the church from holding property, requiring the civil registration of all priests, securing primary education, and denying to ecclesiastical publications the right to invade the field of politics. Against the provision for registration the clergy declared a general strike. By the advice of Rome, an interdict was laid upon the country, and the revolting caste of Victorious Martyrs gradually incorporated the diverse demands of bourgeois democrats, land-hungry Indian peasants and organized industrial workers in a battle against native aristocracy and foreign imperialism.

What the role of Mexican catholicism has been in each of these historic upheavals has been made clear to us. In not one of them has the church played a part of which it dares to boast today.

A consistent foe of progress, the church cannot lay claim to a share in a single of the great liberating traditions cherished by modern Mexico.

A PEEK EACH WEEK AT MOTION PICTURES

"VARIETY."

AS I write I am still under the spell of this film. One feature after another crowds my mind to beg to be mentioned, to break the space limitations of a scant two columns. A brief few words pay no full justice to "Variety;" they are but the chirp of an humble critic to add to the deluge of deserved praise it is receiving.

The story is simple. A beautiful little creature comes into the life of "Boss" Haller, a full-chested Hamburg carnival performer. He deserts wife and child, and with a great trapeze artist, they form a trio that becomes a theatrical success. "The Great Martinelli," with whom they have joined forces, wins the girl away from "Boss" Just that and no more.

The pictorial narrative is everything. No unnecessary scenes or sets mar the film. Every picture, every flash is trimmed to center full attention on the story itself. It gripe you from the beginning and you follow it thru its full development until the crashing end. It rolls up to this point with force and conviction, ever larger like a rolling snowball, until it hits a wall—and the spell is broken.

The picture is German made. The direction of Dupont is the work of an artist. Emil Janninga, he who played the king in "Passion," that splendid picture that brought Pola Negri to America and success, plays the part of "Boss." It is a brilliant characterization. This truly fine actor is coming to America this fall and American pictures are going to be the better for it—if the producers will only give him an opportunity. And then there is Lya De Putti. This girl is already in American films. She's here, but she will never be given another such medium to act in. Her work in the picture, the directing, scenario, photography—and the capable performance of Ward, an English actor, are all complimentary to the great acting of Emil Jannings. Together they make "Variety" pictorial art it is seldom our good fortune to see.

Once before this column has brought attention to this film. Once again, on its arrival in Chicago (Roosevelt Theater), we repeat, see "Variety." It is such rare film-art as this that gives us a glimpse of what a great art some day the motion picture will become. —W. C.

- THE THEATER -

"THE SONG OF THE FLAME."

YOU are thrown into absolute darkness. A strange song is in the air. Then the curtain goes up on a scene that will thrill your aching, broken bones to their very marrow. A sea of hands—just hands, gnarled, abused hands of labor—are the only things you see in a stream of light from the west lost in a gradual dimness that fades into black.

This is the first scene of "The Song of the Flame," showing at the Apollo theater in Chicago, so beautifully unexpected in a "romantic opera" it will thrill you as few things can. It is Russia—March of 1917. And the next scene is "October." An agitator is in the street—the people are moving, moving—you can feel something big in the air. At this moment you hope and you wonder—is this—can this be—? But no, it's the American stage. Don't worry, you won't be disappointed. The theme is too big for the authors and the producers. It degenerates into just an operetta that is worth seeing, it is true, but only because it has some good music, costumes and scenery. The big thing you feel for a moment is lost sight of.

Its social viewpoint is a hodgepodge. In the first act "the flame" tells us she is against the czar and nobility, but also against the Communist government—"against all government that preaches class hatred." So the bourgeoisie is pictured as degenerate, a Bolshevik commissar as a crook (but without whiskers for a change), and the flame as a savior of "the people of Russia." You'll recognize "the people of Russia" as our old friend "the public."

But the singing is something else again. A Russian art choir of some fifty voices is magnificent. All the old Russian folk songs you've heard are made beautiful by these people. You will forget the social aspects of the play, you will forgive the comedy (if you're big-hearted), you will overlook even the symbolic last scene, tho you will find it hard to do this—and you will wink an eye at most of it because you will have heard that choir and will have felt that this at least was alone worth the price of admission.

The music is splendid. It carries you along and follows you home. You will hum "The Song of the Flame" and "the Cossack Love Song" and whistle stray snatches of other tunes that tantalizingly stay with you. Joseph Urban made the scenery a pretty background for striking costume display. Tessen Kosta plays the flame—she sings well. Guy Robertson is the romantic lover of the matinee type. You've seen the kind before.

If you are provoked by stupidity you don't go. The authors are full of it. But if you can bear part of it patiently you will be rewarded with good song and music—and despite the authors you will feel moving masses, something big, something that someday, someone of "our" artists will bring to us workers and we will gladly acknowledge as "our own." W. C.

The Theater Season In Moscow—1925-1926

By Ruth Epperson Kennell.

The State Ballet, Costume Design

BEING chiefly interested in finding something new in Moscow theatre, we shall not here consider the "Bolshoi," for in this great opera house of red and gold the ballet and opera continue much as in pre-revolutionary days. Kings and queens, fairies and mermaids appear in magnificent costumes in settings the grandeur of which leaves one breathless; huge choruses of townsfolk fill the stage with colors, swans sail in a blue background, ballet dancers float like clouds in their filmy skirts. The main difference now is that there are no kings and queens, lords and ladies in the audience.

And to those who thought that the old Moscow Art Theater was actually presenting a "revolutionary" play at the opening of the season, "Pugachevschina," the historic tragedy of the bandit leader, was disappointing. It has no revolutionary appeal and at the same time falls short of the classic standard of Stanislavsky's theater. The play depicts a rising in Siberia 150 years ago, when Pugachev played the role of the legendary "Czar Peter" and was accepted hy the oppressed people as their deliverer. Moskvin as Pugachev does not create a strong theatic character, and the play itself makes of him a weak adventurer. The fourth scene alone lives in the memory: the inhabitants of a village welcome the approach of Pugachev as their last hope, but in place of a deliverer, a detachment of czarist troops appears and in punishment for their rebellion ons ont of every three hundred inhabitants is executed. The setting—which follows the almost crude simplicity of the other scenes—the desolate village on the steppes, the poor huts, the crushed people, leaves an impression of the hopeless life of the Russian peasants before the revolution.

But in a little theater in the Arbat, the third studio of the Art Theater, we find the classic art of the past linking itself with the present. The splendor of what was formerly a palatial residence creates an appropriate environment for the versatile art of these gifted players. On one night they give you a fantastic fairy tale like "Princess Turadot," which holds all the childhood thrills in lovely princesses and charming princes, taking the audience into their confidence by changing their costumes and sets before your eyes; or perhaps they give you an old French melodrama like "Marion de Lorm," in which they play with such emotional intensity that you weep inwardly—and then on the very next night you see them in a play of today whose realism hurts. "Verenea," which, from the point of view of coevantional drama, is the best play of the season.

"Verenea" has been dramatized from the novel by Lydia Sifulina. The scene of the story is a village in the period previous to and just after the October revolution. The characters are everyday types of villagers, so real that they seem, all unawares, to have been transported from their village to the stage. Verenea is the type of village girl often foend in Russia, strong, gracefully poised and independent, in her full, winsome face both fire and tenderness. And this splendid young creature is married to a weakling and is a domestic drudge for him and his harsh mother.

The first act ends with their rebellion and final departure from the squalid one-room home, from the whining husband and the nagging mother-in-law scolding her from her bed on top of the brick stove—out into the darkness of the village, where, afar off, can be heard a chorus of young voices singing.

A member of a fanatical religious sect has announced that God will summon him to die on a certain day. In the next scene we have a wedding road with a fence, a piece of the thatched roof, steps and a section of the room of his log cottage. The other members are preparing his last bed; against the wall stands his wooden coffin. Outside are gathered the villagers. The deacon standing before the roster announces importantly: "The death will now take place" and the prophet, his huge figure clothed in white linen, takes a lighted taper and lies down. The others take lighted tapers and begin chanting. The villagers draw nearer to watch thru window and door.

"Turandot" as produced by Moscow Art Theater, First Studio

At this point there comes a long intermission, during which the audience, in the European custom, gravely promenades thru the rooms of the mansion. The audience is "NEP" in character, for in spite of fifty per cent reductions to trade unions, a great many workers cannot afford to come.

While we have been promenading, drinking tea in the tapestried dining hall and eating apples, the people in our drama have been waiting for the prophet to die. The curtain goes on the weary watchers. Candles are burning to splutter, and tired heads to droop. The skeptical young people, among them Verenea, begin shouting ribald remarks. Suddenly, raising himself, the prophet attacks the two lookers nearby, drives the frightened watchers out, throws after them the stand, the ikon, and lastly the coffin, and then curses the God who betrayed him. The boys and girls, lifting the coffin on their shoulders, form a rakish procession, and the accordion breaks into a merry tune as they pass out of sight.

The fourth scene is a country crossroad. By the fence sits a crowd of young men and women singing. They have been drinking and are very hilarious. A slender youth in a red rubashka plays on his accordion the most sentimental of Russian village songs and, leaning amorously on one another, the boys and girls sing. Pavel, the Communist, comes down the steps at the cross-road and turns to look at Verenea, who is sitting against the shoulder of a strapping youth. At his stern words of disapproval she springs up indignantly. Left alone by her companions, defiant, a little drunk, she is just in the mood for the chief engineer of the village factory, who has more than once made unconscionful advances to her, and abandons herself to his kisses. In this compromising situation the deserted husband finds her, and, mad with grief and jealousy, he appeals to the half-insane old prophet to do that which he is too weak to do himself. The scene ends with the murder of the engineer in the gathering darkness of the lonely road.

Verenea has undertaken to look after the house of a neighbor who has been called to the bedside of her wounded husband. Pavel drops in to talk with Verenea about taking care of his motherless children. Pavel is a heavy, dependable type, so natural that he seems quite accidentally to have dropped into the play. Verenea, having learned something of men, tells him that she does not want to be his servant and mistress. He answers that he quite agrees with her—a woman is a free human being now—has a right to earn her living and love whom she chooses. They are both young, and if they should want one another, well and good, but that has nothing to do with her work.

The neighbor, returning that evening with news that her husband is dead, lifts her voice in a shrill lament which summons the villager. But Pavel, entering, bids them cease mourning for this victim of the czar's war—the czar has been dethroned! The mourners break up into excited groups, and are driven into Bolshevike and counter-revolutionists. As Pavel is leaving Verenea speaks to him: "I am coming to work for you now, Pavel."

Then we see the first elections after the revolution. A bare room with window and door at back and the village street visible at the side. Pavel is in charge of elections, and a Menshevik is election clerk. The villagers are hanging thru the open window, impatient for the balloting to begin. When the wooden ballot box is produced and the people are permitted to examine it, they approach it in fearful curiosity, tap it timidly and shake it, looking warily with a knowing air. It is then locked and that most solemn of Russian ceremonies—the application of the wax seal—is performed. The voting begins, the villagers entering one by one, thus giving us an opportunity to study the types singly. One old fellow in a high fur hat and dirty shirt, his expression childlike in spite of his grisly beard, wants to show his ballot to the clerk. "No, it is secret!" shouts the horrified Menshevik. "But I already showed it to everyone outside," he answers. The act ends in a general fight ont by the fence. A sleek kulak (rich peasant) makes some remarks which the Bolsheviks object to and Verenea challenges him. Enraged, the kulak attacks her and a battle ensues. At last, Pavel deserts his post. Dragging her inside, he tries to conceal his pride in her, while she, calmly arranging her hair and replacing her kerchief, looks pleased with herself.

Verenea is sitting in Pavel's home. She is wearing a new holiday dress of white cotton with a pattern of small flowers. The widow, entering, starts to cross herself and, seeing no ikon, spits instead. Her open hatred of the Bolsheviks exasperates Verenea to the point where she throws her neighbor out. Pavel, observing only this part of the controversy, comes in and scolds her for her violence. Verenea laughs and, sitting down beside him, tells him that she is expecting a baby. They begin laughing happily like two children. Then he seizes her and kisses her, sweeps and throws his hat on the floor with great fervor. A brief moment of happiness—and then to the serious business of life. He must go away at once; the whites are coming. With a stricken face she prepares his knapsack and then sits waiting for the simple farewell. At the door, turning once more to look at her, he lifts his hand and brings it down at his side in a gesture of suppressed grief.

The last scene takes place some months later in the house of Pavel. Verenea enters carrying a bundle. She has been in prison and gave birth to her baby in the hospital. One of the Bolshevik girls comes in with three comrades. Verenea begs the men to undertake a dangerous mission to Pavel in the woods. They turn away in fear, but her scorn overwhelms them and at last they agree. When they have gone, she lifts the baby, her face radiant with tenderness. But outside we see her friend creeping to the window. In a hoarse voice the warns Verenea to leave at once. Verenea hands the bundle to the old nurse and runs out. On her bed on top of the stove the old woman, her head lifted in an attitude of tense waiting, begins crooning a lullaby. Almost at once two rough soldiers led by the Menshevik and the kulak enter the yard and bang at the door. The crooning stops sharply. Finding no trace of Verenea in the room, they hold a conference.

"Wait," says the sleek kulak, stroking his beard, "she will come back. The baby must have its milk."

When they have gone, the old woman blows out the lamp and the place is in utter darkness. The crooning begins again. Gradually the light of morning comes. The two soldiers can be distinguished sitting against a tree. At last, in the greyness of light, the figure of Verenea approaches, moving stealthily toward the door, toward the baby waiting for its feed. She is seized, she frees herself, turns and runs—into the arms of the other soldier. A brief struggle and she falls. The two soldiers creep away, clinging in terror to one another. A far-off chorus of boys and girls returning from some festival dies away.

"JUST a mak mat flier."

"There you ever seen such a mother!"

"Come here, Jennie; let me fatro-duce you to . . ."

That's how we met. Afterward we got acquainted.

Girls have a way of telling you things, if you're lucky. I was. That's how I happen to know about Jennie. And if the story I tell doesn't read the way I would normally tell it, it is because, somehow, it must be told the way Jennie would tell it. If it reads too quickly for you, get the point nevertheless, and don't quarrel with me.

* * * *

JENNIE was going to write him. At last that she couldn't "happen" to meet him; maybe near his place of work, and try to say it to him. Only, at the appointment, she might say the wrong thing. Or say the right thing badly. Jennie knew her deficiences. She also knew Sam's weaknesses. She doesn't bungle. Better write him.

She'd write on Sunday—the day on Long Island, with Yetta. Yetta had company her self for the day. There she'd have time and quiet to write him a long letter—say all that should be said, clearly and unapologizeating. Then she'd have one mail again her son would shine.

Jennie and Sam had quarreled. Over a senseless thing, a foolish trifle. Over Sam not liking Robert in a picture and fail to quarrelsing her quality as an actress. A stupid thing to quarrel over. If it had been over the labor movement . . . But over Pola!

Queer! and she'd always been so patient with him. Sam wasn't yet a real-winner—just on the way. So they'd quarrel a lot about those questions. But always without quarrelling. And here, over a trifle, over a thing that didn't matter, she had to go and fly off the handle, on account.

Ten minute more it never would have happened but for the day. A spring day. Something about a day like that always gets you. Guessed it was the kind of day you're just in love. If she had then had been married she thought it would have been different. Just the one she shouldn't have let that day get by and over a thing like that. Or she should have apologized, right away. Instead of letting him go the way she did—then saying it that's the way she felt about it he guesses she didn't care to see him again. So won't trouble her any more.

She began to write written him that very night. But was too tired. You know how. A spring, Saturday night, on top of a hard week's work. Tired? She was that tired, thought of Sam somebody long her awaken. Dropped right off. Slept like a log, didn't how what she was.

Next day Jennie didn't wake till eleven. By the time she'd made the bed, swept, dusted, took a bath, got breakfast, it was one. Then there were the things to wash. Some of them to be done. You know how it is with a Sunday. All the week's work to be done. If you don't do them things you have to let them wait till next Sunday, and next Sunday it might rain. Of course, if you've got plenty of things to wear, it don't matter. She? Well, she couldn't get along unless she washed. There was no other time. Monday? Monday night, function night. Tuesday night, union meeting. Wednesday night, that course in economics. Thursday night, shop committee. Friday night, that course again. Saturday night, if there wasn't some meeting, was the only night to go a movie or a lecture, a show or a concert. You had to draw breath one night in the week.

No, Sunday was the only washday, clean-up day, day for chores—darning, mending; baking the loan pay envelope look like it did a fat lot more for you than it really did.

For Jennie Sunday had become a little less dradge day because Sam called. Nearly a year of Sundays brought him. He never failed. But this Sunday Jennie was nervous, excited. Will he come? Jennie's married sister, with whom she lived, had gone off for the afternoon, taking her two children with her and leaving Jennie alone. Course her sister understood. Jennie hustled. Doubting, hoping, pushing the hours. She dropped things, did things wrong, undid, and did things over again. Thinking, did he mean it? Wasn't he really coming any more?

Sam must have meant it, for he didn't come. Then Jennie sat down and cried. Like a baby. Just as if she'd never been steeled in struggle. All evening, thru tears, she hoped. Maybe he'll come yet. Then she fell away and slept.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday.

A week to drain you.

She tried to write during lunch time. Made several starts. It didn't work. She was too fagged to think. How her back ached! Jennie trendered why she was in the industry anyway. Or how she left it. Took a job as an Italian girl—served Children in an Italian restaurant. It was a nice job, too. But you were so much by your self. Cut off. You know how it is: Where a lot of workers work together in one place you don't feel lonely. You get organized. You feel alive. The world's full of workers—men, women, boys, girls.

Just the same, Jennie now wished that she'd kept on being an Italian girl, serving Chianti in an Italian restaurant. She'd have had time to write Sam.

Well, she must wait till Sunday. Out there on Long Island, with Yetta, she'll have the whole afternoon. Free—in a quiet, restful place.

* * * *

CAROT to have jumped all over him and him so good. He didn't see all she saw, but he was good as gold. And she'd been so different with him in everything else. Mother, sweetheart, wife—how patient! She had misgivings—little such a long time go by, making him think maybe she didn't care. But, never mind, he'll understand.

He might have taken to younger, prettier faces, more carefree girls. He wasn't yet thirty; she well past. But he never let her remember it, because he had a serious mind. Had she been sweet and pretty, and all the thoughtful thirties, maybe he wouldn't have cared at all for her. Years don't matter between two who belong together. And they belonged. And didn't Sam see it first. She was crazy to have called names! So mean, over nothing!

* * * *

THURSDAY, then another workday. Then a half-day, when you work like a steam engine till you get out of the shop. It's more than half a day, only the boss don't see it. Then you rush around looking for this, that and the other little thing you need—cheap: in the Five-and-Ten mostly. Darning cotton and such, maybe. Jennie got a fresh writing tablet and hurried home. To be free on Sunday. She had Sunday's chores to do. She didn't get thru till nine-thirty. Took a bath and dropped off to sleep the moment her head touched the pillow.

* * * *

YETTA and Jennie at the little Long Island station, and a twenty-minute walk brought them to the "camp" a mile away.

"Camp" was a small stretch of field and a clump of four bigrish trees, with a few scraggly sumachs at the far end. To this Yetta had added a table, a bench, an oil stove and a few cooking utensils. Just the same, it was heaven to a tired working girl. It took only a few minutes to look the whole place over.

* * * *

JENNIE had thought that once she'd got "into the country" she'd sing, shout! She never opened her mouth. She was just too tired somehow. She and Yetta got the lunch. They puttered over the oil stove, one of them humming. But it wasn't Jennie.

After the few dishes were cleared away Yetta looked at Jennie for quite a while. Then, sticking a cushion into Jennie's arms, she said: "Here, kid, you go lie out there in the sunshine—or the shade. Anyhow, scoot. If I need ye, I'll call ye."

Jennie blessed Yetta in her heart, took the cushion and her writing tablet, went as far as the field went, dropped the cushion close to a sumach tree and sank down in the long grass.

At last, the hour for writing Sam!

Let's see, how should she begin? Her eyes stared up thru the sumach tree to the blue sky.

She'll tell him first what was really the matter with her—why she had flown off the handle. No, she couldn't do that! Maybe first she should say how sorry she is. She owes him that. Then she'll say . . .

She had thought it all out during the week. Now she couldn't remember. She gazed at the far clouds. They moved slowly. As if they, too, were tired. White, soft clouds . . . Heaps of dainty muslin waiting to be made up into nice underthings . . . Fancy thinking of underthings, of few things she did up last night had taken all the tuck out of her . . . Such a feeling . . . all in! The boss, too. So busy! After! eating she could sink. Shouldn't have taken it before writing that letter.

* * * *

DELICIOUS air . . .

First she'll tell him . . .

Air like wine . . .

The shop, stifling. And such a din. Here, so still, so green! sumach tree . . . Like those in the Bronx, on the empty lot across the street . . . She might rest on her elbow, sit up, like this.

No. You're not so tired if you lie back. Better lie back.

Dear Sam: You know I love you. You know I didn't mean a word of what I said. Forgive me. I . . .

No, she must do better than that. Begin again . . .

Air, shade, sunlight . . . Hard to think. Arms like lead . . . Funny!

* * * *

ONCE, twice, Yetta called across the field. No answer. Supper time. Jennie still slept. When Jennie opened her eyes there stood Yetta, before her. Yetta was saying. Damn it all, a working girl's ideal Sunday! You'll catch that train if you're in luck!

* * * *

AS it turned out Jennie never wrote that letter.

It happened that Sam left town that week—hitch-hiked it ont to Pittsbergh, she'd heard. Jannie worked hard and spent her evenings much as she'd always done. But Jenie wasn't the same Jennie any more.

When the strike was called Jennie threw herself into it like an army. She led the pickets, she harried the strikebreakers, she mocked the police-man's club, she lashed the strike-shirkers with her tongue till they fell into line. She was always on the dot when strikers were called together. In the hall, outside. She said things to a judge, she went to jail for some days. She came out smiling. She inspired thousands. She learned to make speeches. No, she just spoke and put it across. She was in the strike like an army.

A rise in wages? Good. Bettar working conditions? Good. But two rest days in the week—Jennie went fighting mad for that!

No wonder they called her the Red Striker.

* * * *

WAS the strike won? Yes.

Which industry? No fair telling.

If you knew maybe you'd recognise Jennie. Better not. And, by tha way, her name isn't Jennie.

Strike-spirit!

Whom do we appreciate?

Jennie!"

Funny, how I find myself sticking that in.

Guess it's because I heard the crowd sing-songing it when I came into the strike meeting that day Jennie was introduced to me.

* * * *

No rumor yet of Sam's return.

But here's hoping.

HEY, YOU FEL-LOWS!

Nobody sent in any "Bunk in History" that the teachers gave you in school. Waisamatter? Do you believe George Washington never told a lie? Do you think that was against all wars? Well, what do you think?

Ok, boy, we got all kinds of letters and some nice poems and we are going to print some of them but there oh where is did the Bunk in History go?

Barnard Masarov of New York sends us this one:

Frankie said to Jimmy: "Coolidge helps all the workers and even the Passaic strikers."

A STORY By DOROTHY RED Minneapolis, Minn.

Leo's father was a Rabbi in Russia, Leo's family in this country was the smallest of five children. His oldest brother was a tailor and a good red union man.

Leo went to school and was the brightest in the class but the teacher always gave the bad marks because he would not believe some of the things she said. She said that Washington was better to the poor working man than Lincoln and that every child had the same chance to become President or a millionaire like Ford or Rockefeller.

On Decoration Day the children were told not to forget to bring an American flag. Leo came neatly dressed carrying a small red flag. The teacher, frightened, asked why he brought a red flag, instead of an American flag. Leo answered: "This red flag was the first American flag and it is the only flag that looked like the blood of all the people, white, yellow, black or copper.

Leo was sent home for punishment by the teacher but he marched home like a little American hero with his red flag.

Jimmy said: "Ghee, you still believe in fairy tales don't you?"

"That's good Barney. Send us some more!"

Ethyl Is Back - - -

By N. SPARKS

SO now that we know that lead means "lead drop," "lead colic," paralysis, sterility, convulsions, insanity and death, let us proceed to the surgeon-general's conference called to examine the harmful effects of tetraethyl and see what attempts have been made to project the workers and the public against tetraethyl lead.

The conference is made up of representatives of Standard Oil, General Motors, the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation and professors and physicians retained by them, a few public health authorities, some individual professors who have helped the campaign against tetraethyl, and a representative of the A. F. of L. and two from the Workers' Health Bureau. The conference is opened by the secretary of the Interior and the chair is taken by the surgeon-general. The delegates are welcomed, thanked, congratulated and told not to be apprehensive of the outcome. The cabinet officer and the surgeon-general address the delegates rather differently. They are aware of the immense difference in rank between themselves—more government officers—and these representatives of mighty corporations. The chairman regrets that there are too many debates for them all to "get together around one table." He begins by informing them that there aren't any laws under which the government could control the manufacture and sale of ethyl gasoline anyway. The whole tone of the conference is extremely cordial. Everyone carefully refrains from quarreling with "I suggest" or "I submit." Only occasionally a Standard Oil delegate "insists" or "declares." Occasionally the weak and dilute humor common at scientific katherings floats out over the meeting.

But the first thing we must notice is the explicit statement by the surgeon-general that the conference was called to consider the possible hazard to the public involved in the distribution and sale of ethyl gasoline. In other words the conference is not in the least concerned with the hazard to the workers involved in the manufacture. And it may pay us to remember that whatever findings this conference reached do not apply to the dangers to the workers involved in the manufacture.

From time to time the fact is reiterated that the conference is not considering the hasards involved in manufacture. Just how little anyone is considering it may be seen from the statement of Mr. Frank Howard of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. In his eagerness to show how safe it is to handle ethyl gasoline he oversteps himself and lets the cat out of the bag (from the stenographic report): "It has been handled without any precautions at all, without anything more than the most obvious precautions, until the unfortunate accident which happened in our pilot manufacturing plant last November. That was a manufacturing hazard, and is not a point of discussion hafe."

Other representatives of the corporations speak on the indispensability of tetraethyl lead, of the tremendous industrial advance involved in ethyl gasoline. Then Dr. Kehoé of the Cincinnati College of Medicine, employed by the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation, recounts lengthy experiments which he has performed, all of which prove that ethyl gasoline is quite harmless to the public.

However, the corporations are far from having a walkover. Some of the independent scientists who are there at their own expense proceed to give the corporation representatives several bad half-hours. Chief among them is Yandell Henderson, professor of physiological chemistry at Yale. Prof. Henderson is apparently a man with a conscience. Certainly he is a man of broad knowledge and experience in his line. He identified and fought the occupational disease of mercurry poisoning among the Danbury hatters. During the war he was in charge of important work for the government on poison gas and gas masks. And thus knowing something about poison gases, he was one of the least unwarned of any danger, filling tanks with the pure tetraethyl lead, getting his arms soaked in it, and contracting lead poisoning. But Dr. Kehoe has a ready answer for that. "Oh, yes," says the doctor blithely, "we know of that case. But we had one of our own physicians examine the man. He didn't have lead poisoning. He had neurasthenia."

By Jerger

After that we had better stop to catch our breath. For ourselves we believe the man had whooping-cough.

Prof. Henderson informs the conference that the fact that few cases of lead poisoning were reported where ethyl gasoline was used proves nothing as "999 ordinary practicing physicians out of a thousand would fail to recognize lead poisoning when the lead is inhaled." He thae delivers a parting shot. "On March 13, 1923, I . . . and others were asked by the company to make an investigation. . . . I intimated I was willing provided we could do it freely, without any dictation, and simply to find the facts. The investigation was not made."

Miss Burnham of the Workers' Health Bureau estimates that, roughly, 770,000 workers, not reckoning those engaged in its manufacture, would be exposed to the danger of lead poisoning if the use of ethyl gasoline becomes general. She wants to know why there is no authoritative list of the actual deaths and injuries. It seems the conference admits 11 killed and 149 injured. Amidst all these claims and counterclaims she wants to know what happened to the poisoned men after they were laid off or discharged. Were they re-employed in other industries or did they remain permanently injured?

However, these are trifles. The conference passes a resolution calling for an investigation by a small committee of the lead poisoning by the surgeon-general, and adjourns.

The conference was in May, 1926, and in January, 1926, the investigating committee made its report. The report vindicated ethyl gasoline. And yet, as we read the report itself, it seems to be far less of a vindication than we had thought after seeing the headlines in the papers. In fact, it seems as if the gentlemen comprising the committee are exceedingly cautious about attaching their names to any definite statement that ethyl gasoline is safe in use. We read: "In conclusion we beg to say that we are conscious of the fact that the conclusions to which we have come in this report, altho based upon most careful conscientious investigations, are subject to the criticism that they have been derived from the study of a relatively small number of individuals who were exposed to the effects of the ethyl gasoline for a period of time relatively brief when we consider the possibilities in connection with lead poisoning. A more extensive study was not possible on account of the limited time. It remains possible that if the use of leaded gasoline becomes widespread conditions may arise very different from those studied by us, which would render its use more of a hazard than would appear to be the case from this investigation. Longer experience may show that even such slight storage of lead as was observed in these studies may lead eventually in susceptible individuals to recognizable lead poisoning or to chronic degenerative diseases of a less obvious character.

"Your committee begs to report that in their opinion there are at present no good grounds for prohibiting the use of ethyl gasoline of the composition specified, provided its distribution and use are controlled by proper regulations."

And now the joker! Quick! A list of regulations are drawn up which are recommended to the several states. Somewhat similar to the way regulations against lynching and child labor are recommended to the several states.

However, altho this report is a half-hearted vindication, it is nevertheless a vindication. Was it based on an impartial investigation? Let us consult the technical journals.

An editorial from Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering: "Early resumption of the national distribution of ethyl gasoline as a result of the favorable outcome of the surgeon-general's investigation will be welcomed by more than one of the chemical engineering industries. . . . The raw material required in this synthesis . . . and other ingredients in the anti-knock compound held an interest for many branches of chemical industry."

An engagingly frank note in the Journal of Industrial and Engineering chemistry: "Too often the enthusiasm of the manufacturer leads him to minimize the hazards both to the employe and the public and his investigations are not as thorough as could be wished. Then, too, in contrast with the present case" (of course, in contrast with the present case) "an emergency may arise and pressure be brought to bear upon him before he discontinues manufacture."

And now, having seen how dangerous ethyl gasoline is, let us attack the whole fraud about its indispensability. Are there, as the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation would like to maintain, no other substances which eliminate the knock? There are several. Each has its own advantages and disadvantages.

First: A mixture of 60 per cent benzol and 40 per cent gasoline produces absolutely no knock. So effective is this mixture that it is taken as a standard in discussing anti-knock properties. "Mitchell's gas" is an example of a benzol blend. The disadvantage is that there is no present possibility of producing benzol in anywhere near sufficient quantities to take care of all the gasoline used.

Second: Gasoline produced by the process known as "cracking"—so-called "cracked gasoline"—has natural anti-knock qualities, due to the fact that it contains oils of the benzol type. It is to be claimed, however, that cracked gasoline does not increase in efficiency with higher compression.

Third: The Gulf Refining Company, the Sun Oil Company, the Texas Company are all selling gasolines of unspecified composition which they claim are anti-knock. Their claims as to the efficacy of their fuels are just as much (or as little) worthy of belief as the claims of the louder-mouthed Standard Oil.

One thing is certain, that in a couple of decades the attempt of the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation to manufacture and distribute for general use such a fatal substance as tetraethyl lead will be recognized as one of the most colossal pieces of impudence and stupidity in the whole history of chemical industry.

But for the present "Ethyl is back!" And unless the workers who have to handle it take drastic action there will be increasing lists of victims of this "great industrial advance."

YOUNG PROLETAIRE

YOUNG Proletaire was born somewhere, but belongs to no country, he is the world's adventurer. He speaks the living languages of east and west.

Hard as nails, shaggy as bark, a laughing, fighting young giant. Dangerous and magnetic, with red hair like a bonfire, nine eyes like bayonets, and a chest like the bulge of a mountain.

Hands like machines. Precise and hard. His wonderful hands can create anything man needs; he knows all the trades.

He works; he digs coal, scoops foundations, flings up vast skyscrapers like songs roared by a drunkard: He plays with rivers of white-hot steel. He fashions subways, aeroplanes, nervous cars, modern locomotives. Wheat, green and gold he paints over miles of prairie uplands. Firm grace of his Panama Canal. Tosses thunderbolts thru the air, is electrician and radio man. Understands art very much and is actor in huge plays. Artist, scientist, worker—is everything.

Working girls are crazy about him—father of bold, courageous, sun-tanned children. Healthy as a wild mountain-ash. A lover thrilling as a ride on a Coney Island roller coaster. Burns John Gilpin forget pale Phi Beta Kappa husbands, when he's around.

For he's no slave but the world's immortal wild human adventurer. Hurrah for him! He knows how to make up his mind.

2. FIGHTS PAUL BUNYAN.

PAUL BUNYAN, a middle-aged American giant, was a foreman over the workers of America. He had been a worker himself for long years, but had been corrupted by a man—a little Miser who owned, thru black magic, the fields and factories of America. This ogre gave Bunyan a Ford car, a house, a pretty lawn and a white collar, and thus corrupted him. Paul Bunyan handed the Miser his soul for these things. He was not versed from a man into a merciless go-getter and driver, a scissor-bill with a lash.

Young Proletaire was sprawled lazily one noon the length of the high palisades, dreaming over New York, that giant's best dream. Paul Bunyan suddenly was above him, kicking at his face with hob-nailed boots. Said snarling: "Now I found yeh, yeh agitator! Get the hell back to the country you come from, I'm boss here!"

Young Proletaire was taken by surprise. He sprang to his feet.

"I'm a worker. So are you. Why do you fight for the Miser?" Young Proletaire said clearly.

Paul Bunyan went raging mad.

"Make your guts—don't argue, fight," he shouted. "You are the guy who makes rules and slackers. American isn't big enough for both of us."

So they fought. The battle thundered over mountains and down valleys for a bloody year. Lakes were dried up; railroads (without a rusty junk; cities smashed to splinters like toothpicks. Blood flowed in rivers down the smooth auto roads. Farms died and were choked into old dead work horses. Factories were smitten, and rats and spiders haunted them, as the they were deaded castles.

A terrible time it was: worse than a Wall Street panic year, but not quite as bad as one of the Miser's financial international wars. Revolution!

They met once in Seattle. Young Proletaire was licked. He collapsed in the dirt. Young Proletaire loomed over him, steady and silent. Decided to finish Bunyan forever. Said it aloud, to demonstrated. Wanted another woman, given the man's driver.

"Incredible," pronounced Young Proletaire clearly, "and he himself said there wasn't room enough for two of us in America."

He finished the job. Old lady went back filled with added sorrow to rocking chair and pussy-cats and Hindu poetry. Young Proletaire drived from a mountain into his fortune and splashed about lustily, let the good sun and weather heal his many wounds. In a month he was hooked and ready again for work and play. Hurrah for him!

3. CLOSES THE HOT AIR FACTORY.

THERE was a factory of hot air, run by lawyers. The chief of government, manufactured the "have." No one contested it, but all seemed to like it.

The Miser owned all the lawyers, bought them with Plunder. To him their hot air was necessary—a screen between his throne and the workers, who believed in democracy.

Young Proletaire watched the lawyers at work.

"Useless!" he muttered. "Hot air grows no wheat, weaves no fabrics, writes no poems!"

He hated hot air, had always loved the cold clean electric air of truth.

How to govern the fields, factories, mines and harbors of America? He called to him miners, farmers, mechanists, artists, engineers and other workers.

"Shall the lawyers govern you with hot air," he asked.

"No!" they shouted, "we can govern ourselves."

So the lawyers were shipped on the Buford to the North Pole to harvest the next summer's ice-crop. Useful at last. North Pole is no place for hot air, which is why it was chosen.

The workers governed themselves. Things really were much better. There was no one to confuse them at their creative tasks. Truth became the fashion. This was his first achievement.

4. WRESTLES WITH A SPIRIT.

YOUNG Proletaire was sowing the Bad Lands of Wyoming with garden cities and workers' communes. A huge epic. One day, weary, he took a rambio thru Montana, Idaho, Nevada, and other great places nearby. A refreshing holiday, but when he returned to camp, a strang picture met his eye.

Work had stopped and the men and women were lying on the ground, disheveled and maudlin. Some rolled in filth like animals; others roared insane laughters; some wept; others were quiet as corpses.

"What's wrong?" Proletaire asked.

A woman lifted a tragic, tear-blown face.

"We are slaves," she moaned, "born to slavery. We want a master. Responsibility is horrible."

"I'm afraid," another shrieked. "We are too daring. we are going too fast. Something terrible will happen."

"We are defeated," the eerie chorus arose.

"Let us go back to democracy. Let us find, instead of our old corrupt rulers, a few honest hot-airists and misers. Then all will be well again.'

Young Proletaire guessed what had happened. The Spirit of the Past, bootlegger of wood alcohol and poisonous ideas, had sneaked into camp. Young Proletaire kicked some of the grovelling pessimists upright and made them tell him where the Spirit was hiding. They told. He found the Spirit and wrestled with him, while the camp watched. The old man was a tough, wily, expert battler, knew a thousand tricks. But the young giant had youth and steel. Proletaire won after a severe bout.

And he smashed the barrels of rotgut in the bootlegger's closed car, and kicked the Spirit clean over the Rockies into the interior of Tibet, to land in a monastery of Lamas droning over their beads.

"That's where you belong," Young Proletaire shouted, shaking his fist after the old scoundrel. "Do your dirty work there for another fifty years, till I've time to clean up that part of the dynamic world."

By Fred Ellis

The camp went back to work, with only a slight hangover. Watching his people toiling and singing in the sun, Young Proletaire knew these orgies of pessimism might occur again.

"But their children! their children! born in the sunshine of the free commune: they will not succumb!" the young giant muttered in his fist, and his words were like a paean of victory, and they were like a grim prayer.

5. MAN AND WOMAN.

HE met a man and a woman bitterly fighting before a Home. They were middle-aged, exhausted by life and they owned a swarm of children, nervous and unhappy.

Young Proletaire stopped and asked:

"How long have you two been fighting?"

"Twenty-five years," the woman screamed," and don't you dare interfere. Matrimony is a holy bond. And if we were divorced what would become of the children?"

Young Proletaire whistled and the children ran after him gladly. They followed him to a children's commune where they were treated like free scientists and poets, and not like slaves of Home.

Then the careless young giant went back and broke up the Home.

"Unnecessary and evil," he said briefly.

"Make egotists of men and women—barrow, stupid. Must release them into the world.

"Based on private property. Father necessary to support child-bearing woman, and educate the children. Community now does this better. No more private worrying.

"Home hurts children. Breeds inferiority—breeds fear. Reproduces stupid delusions of the parents; no forgiveness possible.

"Children belong to the world—not to parents.

"Parents not trained. Better leave children to genius teachers who love the job—not sick prisoned mother and sick slave father.

"No more gratitude to silly parents. No more ties with past—all clear ahead. Fly, young eagles!

"What function has home? Community runs better schools, kitchens, hospitals, workshops, laundries, houses, art centers, centers of indorsianding, etc., etc. What function remains?

"Is useless and evil—based on private property and egotism—must go."

This is another achievement.

A Fable

By MICHAEL GOLD

1. IS AN AMUSING ORATOR.

A BUNCH of elderly scared artists had run away from the new America and were living in a cave. Here they spent the gloomy days painting and writing. Each suspected the other and wrote and painted only for himself.

Their work was mostly a rehash of the contents of old museums and libraries. They agreed on one thing: all heled machinery and yearned for the past.

But some wanted Greece, others India, others Africa. A few craved the middle ages, inquisition, guilds and handmade pottery. A few the happy days of Daniel Boone in America: not a new social world, but Indians to fight. No toilets, bath-tubs, typewriters. The simple simple life. Quiet. Art. So they lived in a cave and hated each other.

Young Proletaire thought he would sanitate them. Teach them to accept change. To be young, dynamic and brave. He dragged them blinking from cave-sleep and hose into the world sunlight.

He was a doctor and made them as orations.

"Fellow-workers, are you happy? No. Has your work improved since you fled the New America and took to a cave? No, it has become progressively rotten.

"Why do you fear the machines? Their noises? The ugly environment they create for themselves? The slavery they have set up? Yes, but all that is part. Only four hours work a day now, in factories built by sculptors, doctors and engineers. The nation owns the machines now. No more wage slavery, cheapness, adulteration, commercialism. All that was part of the miser's America—not ours.

"The machines give us leisure. They are our slaves now. And they give us creative joy.

"Yes, we have joy of the machines. They are truth in action. Their swift lines are the new sculpture. Their rhythms are in the new men's music. Precision; mathematics; world law.

"Have destroyed hunk. In art and science, have killed rhetoric, metaphysics.

"No, they have not killed Art. Only weak art, false art. Art will always live. Needs no protective tariff, gentlemen.

"Introspective art has died, you say? Noble study of the umbilical? Good. We will now study the world.

"Machines move like the planets, with grand and awful precision. And we are the gods who set them moving.

"They have given us a thousand fingers, eyes, ears and senses.

"Our thought moves at a ratio of 25 to 1 over the old humanity. Earth diggers behind a plow plodded in thought at four miles an hour. Our minds move with aeroplane wings, 100 miles an hour. Speed.

"The ecstacy of speed is better than the ecstacy of fear grovelling before a god. is not a lie, but physics. is healthy. is controlled by men. Needs no dogma or priests or inquisition. Machine-speed.

"Machines are the death of child-magic. But are the birth of man-magic.

"Machines are the will of when. He is master of life.

"Machines make men social. An individual cannot create a dynamo.

"Machines unnatural, you say? But what is natural? Only rocks, trees, fleas and germs? Is not man's thought natural. Machines are thought expressed in steel.

"What have you to offer the worker in place of the machines?

"Serfdom to priests and feudel landlords. Wattled huts.

"What have you to offer the artist in place of the machines?

"Roses and nightingales in libraries. Quiet cultured decay. Museums. Oscar Wilde and art for at's sake. Despair. Little complaints. Hand-woven neckties. Lurid ego-retchings. Parisian post cards of naked ladies. Peter Pan. 'Villazo morbidity. Inbreeding. Academic cowardice. The Oxford moaner. Tom Jones, the picaresque. O, the picaresque! The spiritual! The soul! The vacuum!

"And love—in three jealous acts in a bedroom, with a shooting or heppy clinch at final curtain. This is your art. Stupid. Smells of the cave.

"Machines take man out of the bedrooms and villages, into immense arenas known as factories and revolutions. Better than bondoirs and mousetrap. Heroic.

"Machines have come to stay. We love them heroically, as men once loved the Thunder-God.

"Accept the machines or continue in your damp, dismal subjective cave.

The writers and painters chose to remain in their cave. They were old; it was an effort to pull one's life about one's ears, and build anew. New thoughts are agony at first, like a boy's puberty.

But millions of better artists were being born among the workers each year. So Young Proletaire did not lack for art.

7. THE HOUND OF HEAVEN.

SOMEONE warned Young Proletaire of a rumor.

"You have persecuted god, changed his temples into gymnasiums and movie houses. Therefore, in his infinite mercy, he is planning to shatter you with his infinite and divine revenge."

Young Proletaire picked his teeth with a fir-tree.

"There is no god," he said easily, "there is Man."

"But how do you explain the world?" it was stuttered.

"The world was not meant to be explained, but to be changed by man," answered the young giant with a smile, who always enjoyed a little metaphysics after lunch.

"But—but—but—"

"No buts please."

"It in the future—?"

"Let tomorrow make its own discoveries," he answered tolerantly.

"And you do not fear god?"

"No, how can one fear primitive science? A thought in the brain? What, would you have me turn masochist?"

8. THE REVOLT OF THE INDIVIDUALISTS.

THERE were individualists in the New America. Some were cured and happy, but many were still vain, pompous, jealous. Auxions for medals and special rewards. Afflicted with the obsession of the elder world that each man was the center of life, and ceused the sun to rise and set.

They did not believe in organization, but one day they came together to organize a revolt.

"I used to be a great writer of novels," one wept, and ten thousand intellectuals read my books, and I received honor and royalties. Now a million people read my books, and I receive, not royalties, but a worker's wage. It's awful."

"I was a shopkeeper, a free man. I was free to buy and sell, to cheat and be cheated," said another. "But I'm a slave now—can't make any money—must work with others."

"I was a technician. If it were not for me the factories could not run. I was the enemy of the workers —their master. Now I am their fellow-worker and must pretend to be their friend."

"I worked my way up from the bottom and became a millionaire. Now there no millionaires."

"I was a supermen," welled still another, "and they took my income and forced me to work like everyone else."

And so on and so on. The complaints were as bitter and numerous as there were individuals at the meeting. All agreed on one point, however—that each men created his own life by his own efforts, and was entitled to his special success. And they sent a delegation to Young Proletaire and demanded a return to individualism.

"We do not believe in your social order," they said. "This is a hive, an army, a mechanism that crushes our souls. We are free men. Give us back our little shops, our incomes, our royalties and medals and rank, our god-given right to feel better than others. We want freedom."

"Certainly," said Young Proletaire with a smile.

He had them shipped off to the Rocky Mountains, where each was given a private farm e hundred miles from his neighbor? There they were free to run stores for themselves, to write novels, teach their children, grub their own food, dig irrigation ditches, study language, make laboratory experiments, discuss philosophy, fell trees, build subways, acquire new libraries and earn e million dollars. Freedom. Individualism. But they did not enjoy it. They were free now. Lonesome impotent. They trooped back in a week and asked to be restored to their old jobs.

"Science is social. It depends on numberless experiments by or studies of unknown workers."

"Art is social. It is the growth of multitudes of minds since tha primitive."

"Language is social."

"All thought is social."

"All economic effort is social. A million dollars is created by a community—not a man."

"And so on and so on," Young Proletaire repeated with a bored expression to them, for this was old stuff and only these lunary anachronisms hadn't heard of it. And that ended that.

9. MANY EXPERIMENTS.

MANY experiments were tried under the leadership of Young Proletaire. Everything seemed possible of accomplishment in the New America; there was a naive optimism abroad, a belief in miracles. And thus many miracles did constantly take place.

"Let us change the course of the Gulf Stream, and spread eternal spring over America," a worker would suggest to Young Proletaire.

The leader did not command that the man be thrust into a mad house, as was always happening under Coolidge.

"A good idea. Have you a plan?" he would say, instead. If there was e fair plan, the nation tried oneh experiments.

Men grew afraid not of experimenting, but of standing still. Once it had been said human nature could not be changed, but now it was changing rapidly. It was found to be as controlable as the nature of horses or dogs. Environment was the clue—and the community now controlled environment.

Young Proletaire established thousands of Behaviorist laboratory communes where the human nature of children was constantly changed and bettered thru training. Thus a race of supermen was being formed.

Once there had been an army. Many sincere people believed murder was part of man's heritage. But Young Proletaire abolished the army—armies only protected privaté property and there was no more private property, he said.

After the army was abolished, life went on as before, and even liberals were convinced murder was not necessary.

Fighting went on—but in the realm of ideas, and it sharpened the mind and will of the fighters.

Young Proletaire rebuilt New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh—all the ugly theatic man-slaying American cities. Yes, he made of them throbbing, beautiful communities —huge works of social art—planned affort of the masterartist.

There was no money to be made out of these things, so no one obstructed, all had something to gain.

A curious wave of health set in, there was much less disease, because no one worried over old age or poverty. Workers were always provided for, the future was certain. There were no savings banks, but neither were there pauper homes.

Everyone belonged. Everyone had some useful job. It was queer, hut people grew friendlier, the world was an enemy no longer, but exactly like one's own house. Men were like a family. Yes, this was health.

No one whimpered. All crested. There were endless adventures each year, and enough hard work. And America was thankful Young Proletaire had come, the first most had feared him because new thought is an agony.

At first they called him a mad dog, but then later they called him the Messiah. As in Russia, so here too, the human race grew by a few inches. Great deeds were done and there was no money.

This is the end of my fable.

Scenes From the Hell of Europe

II.

By HENRI BARBUSSE.

ONE could not undertake with any pretense of completeness, the narration of the martyrdom undergone by the prisoners of Bulgaria, of Roumania, of Jugo-Slavia.

In Roumania there is a special prison for political prisoners. It is the central prison of Doftana. It consists entirely of dungeons. The beds are screwed to the walls. During the day they are raised up and the prisoners are compelled to stand up. The food is vile and the "inmates" suffer from hunger. The prison possesses a special section, Section N, called the torture-section. Hundreds and thousands of workers and peasants are tormented there. The inmates of this section are chained hand and foot and are submitted three fimes a week to the "black fast" (dry bread and water).

Shut up in veritable sacks of stone, called "gnerlos," constructed out of e single block of fortified concrete, the prisoners await death which will liberain them from the vermin and from suffering. They are unable to stir and must sleep standing. It is a vertical coffin.

For the least infraction or error, for example, failure to salute, they lock them in casemates where they are obliged to remain seated on the cement and in water, hands and feet chained. Those who beseech for human treatment are noted down; they condemn them to one, two, five years of prison and they make them travel from jail to jail. They do not remain longer than a week in each prison and are always shut up in dungeons, chained hend and foot, without linen, in rags; thus they make a round of all Roumanie.

At Doftana, there is a "Section H" where they put the "undisciplined" prisoners. There the dungeons are three meters by one meter (about nine and a half by four and e half feet—transl.), without air, without beds, without tables or chairs, without sankary installations No water for washing oneself, no linen for months. The food is unclean, and yet insufficient! (Thirty kilos of soup for two hundred prisoners). They give them unpeeled potatoes which they put into a bucket: they boil them, then they add salt wator ap to the top of the bucket (water which makes the body swell up and causes nephritis). The prisoners drink out of the same bowl, even tha tubercular and syphilitic. They put such menacles on them that one can soon see the very obvious thinning of their wrists. They continually apply the cudgel to them. Beaten on the soles of their feet, the prisoners are unable to walk when they are sent back to their cells; their comrades are forbidden to support them.

One cannot endure this regime for more than several months. When one leaves there, one leaves it hebetated or epileptic, but usually one dies there. In six months, out of sixty-three prisoners put in Section H, only twelve remained alive. During the spring of 1923, there were thirty-eight deaths at Doftana, thirty-six of which were from Section H.

When the prisoners are ill, they let them die. As for example, Ivanuz, tubercular, at Jilava. To be sure, there is a doctor, hul he never touches a prisoner. He contents himself with demanding jugs of wine from relatives for transferring the sick person to the sanitarium. I have seen a poor woman without any resources from whom the doctor hed demanded 10,000 lei to have her husband transported to the hospital; she was unable to do it.

According to the regulations, one should not remain at Doftana more then six months. There are some who hevo been there for five years for "pacifist" or "syndicalist propaganda."

M. Tchernats, director-general of prisons, has instituted compulsory labor for prisoners in order to draw profit from it. They work under the cudgel. Soldiers with beyonots ten centimoters (about four inches—transl.) from their bodies, keep them from drinking or from relieving themselves as long as the work is unfinished.

Naturally, the prisoners try to commit suicide. But outside of the hunger strike, it is difficult for them. I have been told the story of one of them who tried to die by swelling tincture of iodine.

There are "rebellions" conducted by the management and the convict-guards. An epileptic having fallen upon a keeper in the course of a fit, they spread the rumor that he had wanted to kill him; and thon followed a feast of reprisals.

The military fortress of Jilava hed been transformed into a prison by the Gormans when they occupied Bucharest. It is a living tomh. The prison, buried ten meters beneath the ground, is entirely of concrete. The regime is particularly severe. The "disciplines" are shut ap for ten days in "cement sacks" where they cannot make a single move.

The prison of Vakarechts is the largest in Roumanie. It was constructed for 2,000 persons; nevertheless, it actually confines no less than 8,000 entries. The disciplined are shut ap in special dungeons of two meters and are obliged to remain standing there.

The regime of prisons and prisoners in other Balcan centers is identical with the Roumanian regime. To describe it would mean to recommence the descriptions which I have just given only changing the proper names.

Rights of defense? They do not exist. In Bulgaria, the lawyers are not allowed to converse in private with the prisoners whom they are defending. An official is present at the conversation.

Escaped Bulgarian prisoners who had succeeded in gaining the Turkish frontier have told us of the arbitrary manner in which they proceeded in their examinations: at times it was an ordinary corporal, an agent, in many cases, enormously long imprisonments before trial without examination. In Roumania there are innumerable cases like that of Ivanuz who was arrested for no special reason, solely for his opinions or because he was a supporter of the plebiscite in Bessarabia, serving four and a half months of prison before trial and dying thore of tuberculosis; others have served years.

The Rumanian lawyer, Boujor, chained in a dungeon without a window, went insane. The Bulgarian, Asen Vapisarov, during some insane following the compression of his head by an instrument of torture, bit his bones in his home. He kills his wife and child with an axe—and hangs himself.

They now have proof that the journalist, Herbal, had been burned alive in the central heating apparatus of the organization of National Safety at Sofia (the very building which had been confiscated from the large cooperative, Osvabojdenie), together with two former officers and another journalist; he offered a constant opposition to the government and had written an article in his journal, Vik, which has displeased the higher-upe.

Max Goldstein, condemned to life imprisonment at Bucharest, went on a hunger strike, his life in the dungeon being nothing more than a long torture. On the fortieth day, he agreed, after supplications by his family, to take food again, but the director of the prison gave the order that he should not be allowed to eat. He died ten days later. The same order was given in the Roumanian prison of Doftana in regard to twenty-seven political prisoners who had begun, then suspended, a hunger strike. When the news was published, these twenty-seven prisoners had not eaten for three weeks. In many cities of old Roumania and of Transylvania, they proceeded to arrest the workers en masse who protested against the murder of Max Goldstein.

To render the fury of their executioners impotent, the prisoners have only this voluntary sacrifice, the hunger strike. The growing terrors of this carnal punishment, directed by the will, requiring during the first days an almost superhuman strength of spirit, have been minutely described. In this Roumanian prison of Jilava where there are prisoners who have been so fortunately transferred, the blood came thru their clothes, statistics of the month of May, 1925, have established the fact that seventy prisoners had together completed 1,840 days of a hunger strike.

I am preciously treasuring a wretched bit of paper: a letter which the Roumanian political prisoners, informed, I do not know how, of my pleading there the cousiry, succeeded in giving me to keep. The treatment which these men undergo surpasses all imagination, and they are only accused of delinquencies of opinion, and, as I have said, it is even sufficient for them to be suspected of "sympathising" with the adversaries of the government.

Here are a few lines of this heart-rending appeal: "The tobacco passage" to the point of blood, with the help of knotted cudgels and hall pizzles, hair torn out, heads beaten against the wall, feet trampled upon to the point of fainting, all these things which you have read are little beside that which we have suffered at the hands of the Safety's police of . . . . (I have suppressed the name). Tied upright, with knees touching the chin, arms crossed over a peg, we were gagged, the heel of the executioners on our throats in order to keep us from crying out. This lasted for hours and whole days. When we fainted every time they drenched us with water in order to make us suffer martyrdom anew to the point of exhaustion after we had been revived. Hesands maltreated before their wives, parents before their children, were exposed to one another as examples. Some of us were lodged next to the torture chamber amidst the sound of blows, of cries, and of death-rattles."

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

A CIVIL war veteran walked into this office recently and after chatting with the writer sprung the following question: "Do you think there is any danger of The DAILY WORKER going under?" And the author of this column assured the visitor that there was a possibility that The DAILY WORKER might stop right in its tracks and refuse to appear again, but that the PROBABILITY was that it would continue to appear, thereby constituting a first class nuisance in the eyes of the bourgeoisie.

OUT of the jeans of the civil war veteran appeared a five dollar bill which the business manager used to purchase postage stamps, said business manager considering the editorial department more or less of a liability. What a blessing it would be if The DAILY WORKER could be produced without an editorial staff. This would mean that three perfectly normal persons would be available for other services. This is a diplomatic way of telling the gentle reader that four staff consists of three persons just now, which may account for a multitude of errors.

TO reduce the story to minimum proportions, the big question that confronts The DAILY WORKER is, the proposition that stared Hamlet in the eye, namely: "To be or not to be." And in my opinion "to be" is the word. Last Friday night I repaired to my anxious meeting. In plain English this means that I attended my branch meeting. What happened? A collection of $37 was taken up to defray the expenses of distributing Communist propaganda in the mining fields and a considerable sum was pledged to keep The DAILY WORKER alive.

REMEMBER that our nucleus is a small one. Had every one appeared there would not be more than 20 present. But only seven or eight of the 30 showed up. Therefore the seven or eight that did show up devised ways and means of getting the laggards to become active. A committee was appointed whose business it was to visit the members who did not attend the meeting and convince them that not only was it their duty to get busy but that a lot of fun could be had in the process.

IF Communists are notorious for one thing more than another it is for frankness. Communists are not worshippers of the naked truth for truth's sake, but it happens that the working-class cannot get too much of the truth, ignorance is the greatest foe of the labor movement. Communists are in favor of every effort that tends to dispel superstition. Queer contradiction is it not? Capitalism must educate a certain number of wage slaves in number sufficient to operate the machinery of production. But this necessity also writes the death warrant of the bourgeoisie, that happens to be running that particular institution. The worker who feels that he is on an intellectual level with his master is no longer a slave.

BOILED DOWN, the preceding paragraph means that The DAILY WORKER needs money. It does. The life of the paper is in the hands of our readers. In all probability the daily will continue to appear. But its appearance depends on YOU. Therefore the first order of business is to send a contribution to The DAILY WORKER fund.

FOR many years before the world war England was everything but friendly to Russia. The "bear that walke like a man" was on every well informed tongue. Czarist Russia was dangerously close to India and Rudyard Kipling being a successful novelist and poet placed his talents at the disposal of the empire. During the world war Kipling was a Jingo. The war is over. Germany is busily engaged as a dangerous rival to Britain for a few more years. But the United States has a bill to collect and John Bull gets his lackeys busy to work up the necessary propaganda so that those who have something coming to them will forget about it. We should never lose sight of one fact and that is that whoever wins this diplomatic game the workingclass is sure to lose.

BALDWIN MAKES NEW ATTACK ON BRITISH MINERS

Arbitration Ruse Used to Break Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 19. — Again playing the game of the mine owners against the 1,000,000 miners who have been striking over four and a half months against a wage reduction, lengthening of hours and an effort to destroy their union, Premier Baldwin has returned from his vacation at a French summer resort to place before the miners' leaders a new crafty proposal to bait the heroic miners into the ground and bring their exploiters out in triumph.

The prime minister's proposals are:

Baldwin Tries Strikebreaking Move.

1. That the men go back to work and leave everything in the hands of a national arbitration court to be established by act of parliament.

2. That the miners' union agrees to accept district agreements with the mine owners provisionally on the basis of the longer work day, and appeal their case to such arbitration court.

3. This arbitration court will have the power to confirm or modify questions of wages made on a district basis.

Wants Union Destroyed.

This is plainly an attack on the miners' position against district agreements, a reduction of wages and lengthening of hours and in addition asks the national union to abdicate its powers to a legalized arbitration court, whose decrees it must obey.

This sort of a proposal will be recognised by American workers to have a similarity to the infamous "Industrial Court Law" of Kansas, where the coal miners also were the objects of attack by the capitalist government. In that case Alexander Howat and his militant supporters dafied the law and defeated the mine owner controlled government.

Miners Will Not Surrender.

It can be safely said that although the million miners of Britain are suffering the bitterest privation and rely solely on the foreign relief funds so needed to maintain their families against actual starvation, they will probably reject this flagrant proposal to surrender the power of their union into the hands of an arbitration court elected by their enemies, this proposal made by the Tory premier, Baldwin, who is himself a mine owner.

Tom Mann Writes of Strike

By TOM MANN.

The Miners' Fight is Still On.

LONDON, Sept. 4. (By Mail) — Today completes the 18th week of the stoppage in the coal industry. The spirit of the men is real good at the hour of writing, enthusiasm are rarely heard, the women and children in many districts are showing signs of lack of nourishment, but even here

PORTO RICAN WORKERS GO TO ARIZONA

Poverty - Stricken Men Leave Native Isle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Rafael Alonzo, general secretary of the Free Federation of Workingmen of Porto Rico, has reported to the Pan-American Federation of Labor the departure of 300 families of laborers from Porto Rico to Arizona. He asks that inquiry be made in Arizona as to whether they are to be used in breaking strikes or for any other purpose hostile to the program of organized labor.

"Cotton growers in Arizona have sent to Porto Rico for these workers because the island has employment at present for only one-third to one-half of its workers in a population of 1,400,000. Wages in the island are miserably inadequate to maintain a decent living standard.

America's Gigantic Press.

Nearly two quadrillion words come out of the printing presses of the United States every day. Today, only an insignificantly small proportion of these words are in behalf of the workers. Almost the whole of the propaganda, editorials, articles, books, pamphlets, and advertising material, are either directly or indirectly against the working and farming masses.

These eleven billion linear miles of words are enough to go clean around the entire solar system. Here we have a powerful chain watching down on the workers' minds and dragging them down deep into the mire of capitalist hypocrisy, lies and exploitation.

Hundreds of Millions for Advertising.

More than half that comes off the American press is advertising material. Newspaper and magazine advertisements are the most costly and dangerous forms of subsidy to the bourgeois press being paid at the expense of the working class. The fact of the matter is that the American working men and farmers annually subsidize the employers' press to the sum of $847,000,000 thru advertising alone.

Surely we are not making impossible demands when we ask the American workers and farmers to give $50,000 to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

From forty to seventy-five per cent of the bourgeoisie newspapers is consumed in advertising matter. The New York Times, the outstanding capitalist paper in the country, gives away about 75% of its space to direct advertising by bankers, manufacturers and merchants. Of course, the color of the advertising pages is invariably the dominant color of the editorial, literary and news page. This is true of the best of our employing class sheets. The New York Times does not have to engage in money raising campaigns. It will not ask you for $50,000 to keep itself alive the next year. Whether you know it or not, and whether you want to or not, you are actually spending millions annually to enable the New York Times to mobilize the masses of this country daily in behalf of the exploiters.

The High Cost of "Newspaper Talk."

Just to show you how much of the surplus value wrung from the exploited workers goes to maintain the poisonous press, let me cite the case of the Saturday Evening Post. This well known bourgeois paper, followed by hundreds of thousands of workers, gets $11,000 for every full page advertisement insertion.

Remember, if the American work-

SACCO DEFENSE SAYS EVIDENCE WAS WITHHELD

Atty. Thompson Makes Charge Against State

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DEDHAM, Mass., Norfolk County Court House, Sept. 19. —"I sincerely believe that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent and I believe so more than ever today." This was the declaration that Attorney William G. Thompson, demanding a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti, hurled into the face of Judge Webster Thayer, at the close of his argument here.

Attorney Thompson swept aside the irrevelant arguments, piled up thru hours and days of speech-making by Dudley F. Ranney, assistant district attorney of Norfolk County. He declared the court did not need to read the record of the trial.

Frame-Up Past.

Attorney Thompson demanded that this new trial be granted on the unrefuted facts brought out in the affidavits of the ex-agents of the department of justice, who had confessed that there was an agreement between the federal government and the county prosecutor to frame up the two workers.

Denounces Secrecy.

Attorney Thompson denounced the attempt of the prosecution and the government to bury the facts that would set Sacco and Vanzetti free. "If this government values its secrets more than the lives of its citizens, then it has become a tyranny, whe-

UNITED TEXTILE WORKERS' MEET REVEALS MacMAHON AS AN ENEMY OF PROGRESS OF TRADE UNIONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(By Mail)—The 24th biannual convention of the United Textile Workers which opened on the 13th and at present is still in session is a picture of the resistance of the reactionary labor bureaucracy to any struggle of the workers, the in this case the MacMahon machine is not wholly successful. It has been forced to act.

Passaic Permitted to Observe.

Representation is on the basis of one delegate to 200 members, giving 127 delegates, but the Passaic local is not allowed even fraternal delegates, being permitted only to seat five observers without voice or vote. They were barred from delegation rights on the ground of having not been three months in the organization.

In spite of this, so opposition to the MacMahon-Conboy machine has shown some fighting capacity for progressive measures. This comes from the Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers and the Carpet Workers, being led by Holderman and Smith respectively. This group shows a fairly militant spirit in fighting for a better organization and defends the Passaic strikers from the attacks and insults of MacMahon.

MacMahon Proves Himself Reactionary.

MacMahon has shamelessly attacked the Passaic strike, just as he did in the mass meeting at Passaic. Here he said it was an "ill-advised" strike and admitted that he took the strikers into the union only because he was forced to do so. He admitted having had emissaries in the strike zone from January 25th on-ward, and claimed falsely that the U. T. W. offered to take the strikers in last April, but Weisbord refused to withdraw from leadership.

He wound up by saying that the present local of the U. T. W. at Passaic will be scattered within a year. However, now that the strikers had forced their way into the union, we must do everything possible to help them organize and to get relief.

CHINESE MILITARISTS PREVENT REOPENING OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS

TIENTSIN, Sept. 19.—Except for two universitiesno school in Tientsin has yet made any preparation for resumption of classes this autumn because the reactionery militarists have stopped payment of all salaries of teachers and other school employes. A large army of mercenary soldiers remain in the city under orders of Marshal Wu Pei-fu who has been defeated in the central provinces. The government into law college has been converted into a military hospital.

In Kiangsu the conservative Marshal Sun Chuang-fang has ordered the abolition of co-education in the middle schools and has established censorship of all reading material while restoring the ancient classics.

Laborers Choose New President.

QUINCY, Sept. 19. — Joseph V. Moreschi, of Chicago, today was elected president of the International Building Laborers' Union to succeed Domenico D'Alessandro who died last week. Moreschi has been vice-president of the organization for 10 years.

3 Killed, 2 Severely Injured in Fall of Mine Roof in Penn.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 19.—Three men were killed and two severely injured in a roof fall today at the Red Ash vein of the Lehigh Valley Coal company mine at Exeter, according to reports received at the company's office here.

The dead:

James Loftus, 55, miner, Exeter.

David Owens, 60, fire boss, West Pittston.

Michael Pedro, 48, miner, Exeter.

The night fire boss at the mine on his last round had noticed a roof fall. The miners were set at work repairing the roof when the second fall occurred, killing and injuring the men.

CALLES FAVORS ANTI-IMPERIAL BRUSSELS MEET

Mexico Will Send a Delegate

Pres. Calles has cabled to Henri Barbusse of the International League Against Colonial Suppression promising to send an official representative of the Mexican government to the conference of the league to be held in Brussels, Belgium, the middle of November.

Called cable was in response to a message of support in his fight against the catholic church wired him by the international organization committee of the league in Berlin.

Bishop Brown Cables.

Support and pledges to send delegates is daily being cabled to the international Committee from all parts of the world. Bishop William M. Brown, of Galion, Ohio, recently sent the following message to the headquarters of the league at Berlin:

"Big nations are asserting their interest in China. They have no business there. Neither has America any business in Europe. Success to the league and Brussels' conference.—Bishop and Mrs. Brown."

Delegates From China.

Delegations from the Kuomintang Party of China, as well as from branches thruout the world are assured. The Young India Movement will have a delegate at the conference. The nationalist movements of Syria, Dutch East Indies, Philippines and many other countries will have delegates at the conference.

League At Work Here.

The All-America Anti-Imperialist League, cooperating with the International organizing committee, is endeavoring to insure delegations from the United States, Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico and all South and Central American countries, in the United States anti-imperialist, labor and Negro organizations are being circularized with invitations to attend the Brussels conference.

The conference will consider imperialist suppression in the colonies. Reports will be made by speakers from almost every colony now under imperialist domination.

Emancipation movements in the colonial and semi-colonial countries and the aid given them by the labor movements of the home imperialist countries, is one of the main items on the agenda of the Brussels meet.

Leading figures in the movement for the liberation of the colonies will speak at the conference. George Lansbury, British publicist is on the agenda, S. Saklatvala, M. P. will speak on British rule in India. Plumnen of the International Transport workers will also appear at Brussels, as well as a number of other prominent leaders in the world labor movement.

BIG CHECKS TO FIGURE IN TRIAL OF DAUGHERTY

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—With court adjourned until Monday in the trial of Harry M. Daugharty, former attorney-general and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, charged with conspiracy in connection with the return of war-time seized alien assets, defense counsel were occupied today in studying the mass of documentary evidence" submitted by the government.

The prosecution is attempting to show by checks, government expense vouchers, hotel registry entries and official correspondence the alleged link between the defendants and John T. King, late Connecticut politician, who was paid $441,000 by Richard Marton, German financier, for putting thru the $7,000,000 claim for the Society Suisse to recover the seized property of the American Metals company.

HOCKING VALLEY MINERS' UNION IN BAD STRAIT

But Miners Determined Not to Take Cut

NOTE—The article below is the third in the series on the bituminous districts being distributed by The Federated Press. The Ohio series will be followed by articles from other pens on Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, Okla homa and the southwest, the Rocky Mountain districts and the southern fields east of the Mississippi.

By HARVEY O'CONNOR, Federated Press.

NELSONVILLE, Ohio — (FP) — 25,000 workers in central and southern Ohio mine coal mining as their occupation, but only 5,000 ors actuelly working in the mines. Of thess a mara fraction work 5 or 6 days a week. At least 4,000 regard themselves fortunate to get t to 4 days work a week.

These fields embrace the Hocking Valley and Cambridge sub-districts of District 6, United Mine Workers, where thousands of miners have got dug or loaded coal for 3 years. In probably no field was sufferlog more intoso last winter, as cold and misery swept down on icy winds from the north, than in the valleys of the Hocking sub-district. Union relief lailed to save miners' families from want. This winter, with relief funds so low that even the pitifully small $3 a week payments may be discontinued, no part of America will present a more abject picture of destitution than the valley where the United Mine Workers of America was born and cradled.

Operators Drive.

Big operators, union by compulsion but non-union at the first opportunity, have picked Hocking Valley as the second sub-district where unionism will fall. Last winter they conspired with hooper to drive the union out of Pomeroy Bend and this winter they plan to conquer this field. Already Pittsburgh coal, successful at Pomeroy, is opening one of its Hocking mines. 25 scabs were sneaked into the pit, but the picketing of the union men and women down the county road along which the scabs had to march proved too much and operation ceased —for the time. A second effort was made a week later, but with no more success.

Unlike their brothers around Bellaire on the Ohio river, where the steel mills take up thousands of jobless miners, the Hocking Valley can give only a few brick and clay plants which dot this section on which to rely for outside employment. Many have thus been absorbed, while roadwork has taken others. Thousands have left Akron, Cleveland, Toledo and Detroit.

Exodus Impossible.

But a general exodus is impossible. Most of the men own their homes, utterly valueless because there is no one to buy them in these isolated industry towns. If they leave for the industrial cities, they must support themselves and send money home to their families. Aside from the cruelty of family separation, they find that it is impossible to make enough to exist this way. Nor can they move their families to the big city, for the men are penniless. And above all, employment possibilities in the north are limited. Those who get jobs in the tire and auto industries find the closely-housed, monotonous work so galling that they drive it up in despair or revolt, and return to the mining fields to eke out a livelihood in some manner.

Wont Take Cut.

Nevertheless these union miners don't intend to take a cut. "Not a bit of good," asserts Harry Bishop Jones, who led the Hocking Valley miners in Kaiser of Labor strikes long before the U. M. W. of A. had been thought of. "Why, back in '24 they induced us to take a cut. We "co-operated." Then forced us to "co-operate' some more until we were working for 25 cents a day.' Here in Shawnee, where the miners union was first started, we have many old timers who remember that one cut only means another. Never trust an operator."

Cambridge, with 9,000 union miners, reports but 2,500 working, while Hocking Valley, with 11,000 members, reports the same number. Pomeroy has 200 working out of several thousand and only one mine, the Powhatan operator, rotates work by running 1 mine a month out of 5. Candidate collieries, with half a dozen mines normally employing 1,500, are completely shut down. Manhattan, with 7 mens, is running 2 small pits. Sunday Creek is the only bright spot, with several big mines going. Work is picking up now, due to the British situation, and the opening of fall domestic demand, but the end of the overseas coal lockout will radically change the valley's situation for the worse.

THE DAILY WORKER---THE BEST INVESTMENT FOR THE WORKERS

By JAY LOVESTONE.

No capitalist newspaper would have a hard time raising $50,000. The Standard Oil Co., the Peabody Coal Corp., the American Telephone and Telegraph trust, need only give any employers' paper a few ads for the year. Then the poisonous pens will continue to pour out their venom against the workers without stop.

The exploiters of the workers and the poverty-stricken farmers know a good investment when they see one. The DAILY WORKER is without any reservations against the ruling class and for the working class of the United States. Therefore, to the loan sharks, financial wizards, real estate Shylocks and industrial overlords running and ruining the American masses, The DAILY WORKER is no field for investment.

It's up to the toilers in the mills and the tillers of the land to invest in The DAILY WORKER because it is the only newspaper in the English language that fights unflinchingly for their interests day in and day ont.

America's Gigantic Press.

Nearly two quadrillion words come out of the printing presses of the United States every day. Today, only an insignificantly small proportion of these words are in behalf of the workers. Almost the whole of the propaganda, editorials, articles, books, pamphlets, and advertising material, are either directly or indirectly against the working and farming masses.

These eleven billion linear miles of words are enough to go clean around the entire solar system. Here we have a powerful chain watching down on the workers' minds and dragging them down deep into the mire of capitalist hypocrisy, lies and exploitation.

Hundreds of Millions for Advertising.

More than half that comes off the American press is advertising material. Newspaper and magazine advertisements are the most costly and dangerous forms of subsidy to the bourgeois press being paid at the expense of the working class. The fact of the matter is that the American working men and farmers annually subsidize the employers' press to the sum of $847,000,000 thru advertising alone.

Surely we are not making impossible demands when we ask the American workers and farmers to give $50,000 to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

From forty to seventy-five per cent of the bourgeoisie newspapers is consumed in advertising matter. The New York Times, the outstanding capitalist paper in the country, gives away about 75% of its space to direct advertising by bankers, manufacturers and merchants. Of course, the color of the advertising pages is invariably the dominant color of the editorial, literary and news page. This is true of the best of our employing class sheets. The New York Times does not have to engage in money raising campaigns. It will not ask you for $50,000 to keep itself alive the next year. Whether you know it or not, and whether you want to or not, you are actually spending millions annually to enable the New York Times to mobilize the masses of this country daily in behalf of the exploiters.

The High Cost of "Newspaper Talk."

Just to show you how much of the surplus value wrung from the exploited workers goes to maintain the poisonous press, let me cite the case of the Saturday Evening Post. This well known bourgeois paper, followed by hundreds of thousands of workers, gets $11,000 for every full page advertisement insertion.

Remember, if the American work-ers would contribute for this year the cost of five full page advertisements in the Saturday Evening Post to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER, we would have no difficulties for many months ahead.

We Aren't Asking Much.

Certainly, this is not asking much.

There is hardly a worker too poor to invest a few dollars to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

What we must have and have in a hurry is $50,000, or less than the cost of five full page advertisements in the Saturday Evening Post to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

This is every worker's job. We know we won't get one cent from the capitalists. The exploiters of the proletariat will never invest in The DAILY WORKER which they look upon as a sort of an undertaking establishment to bury them.

The Workers Will Answer Decisively.

Let every worker answer: Is it not worth while and absolutely necessary for himself, his shopmates and friends, to help boost and put over the $50,000 campaign to keep The DAILY WORKER in order to

To fight for militant trade unionism.

To help the workers win their strikes.

To build a labor party.

To protect the foreign-born workers.

To organize the unorganized.

To defend the workers from the capitalist attacks.

To abolish capitalism.

To establish a workers' and farmers' government.

We know the answer. The coming weeks will see us well over the top in the drive to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

Now, GIVE until it hurts your bosses AND PROTECTS YOUR OWN CLASS INTERESTS!

STREATOR MEET SHOWS REACTION STILL IN POWER

Progressive Measures Meet Defeat

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STREATOR, Ill., Sept. 19. — The convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor adjourned Saturday after having killed all resolutions of a progressive nature. The report of the resolutions committee was deliberately delayed by the machine until the last day's session, when all delegates were unwilling to listen to any debate and hundreds had already left for their homes on Friday.

Olander Chooses Fascism.

A resolution introduced by delegate Antonio Presi of the Granite Cutters, condemning fascism was amended to include Bolshevism. Olander, who by this committee. Victor Olander presently denounced the Soviet Union and declared that he preferred the black shirt government of fascist Italy to that of the workers' and peasants' of the Soviet Union.

Delegate Presi pointed out the difference between the two governments; that under Mussolini's rule all trade unions, which had numbered 2,500,000 members, a few years ago, were completely destroyed, and that in Russia before the revolution there were no unions.

Quite A Difference.

"Today," said Presi, "there are 5,000,000 workers organized in trade unions in the Soviet Union and that ought to be proof enough for a labor gathering here to stop believing the lies in the capitalist press."

The solidarity shown by the Russian unions in the British strike was also brought out, but no argument, no matter how logical, could work against the prejudice aroused by Olander's lies, with all the machine's power opposed hostile demonstration, so Presi was forced to cut his address short.

So-Called Progressives Dumb.

All so-called progressives and former socialists who professed formerly to believe in the recognition of the Soviet Union, failed miserably to show any sign of courage and what they were doing in Streator is hard to say.

The resolution calling upon the convention to support the Mexican labor movement against the reactionary clergy went the same way. The committee non-concerned with the resolution and referred the matter to the A. F. of L. convention.

Delegate Overgaard pointed out among the boos and tremendous noise from the reactionaries, that such a stand would simply destroy the Pan-American Federation of Labor and that the American labor movement could not afford to play "neutral" like the Coolidge cabinet, but owed an obligation to the Mexican labor movement to support it in the struggle against American imperialism, with which the clerical forces were joined.

The main "struggle" in the convention took place over the part of President Walker's report which endorsed a list of candidates for the legislature on the old, capitalist parties.

Machine Opposes Labor Party.

Delegate Overgaard of the machinists flayed the report vigorously, pointing out that there was no more doubt in any worker's mind as to the reliableness of the two old, capitalist parties since the recent exposure of the slush fund investigations, and that it was high time to stop fooling with these parties and build a labor party in the state.

Walker headed the reactionary comeback, followed by Brigan of the Teamsters and A. B. Cline, once an I. W. W., now of the Anto Mechanics, with ridiculous fairy tales and personal attacks on Delegate Overgaard, the so-called progressives did not fight and only some 50 or 60 week "no's" were registered.

The vote on the next convention city, on the Carswell affair and the question (already settled by the machine) of increasing the salaries of Walker and Olander from $5,000 to $6,500 took up the major energy of the convention. The climaxof bouquet-throwing came with the withdrawal of Walker's opponent for re-election, East St. Louis was chosen as the next convention city.

ELECTION MEETING OF FURRIERS' LOCAL 45 POSTPONED TO SEPT. 22

A meeting of the Furriers' Local 45, scheduled to take place today to elect new officers has been postponed until next Wednesday, Sept. 22, at Ashland Auditorium West Room, 8 p. m. Progressive members are urged to attend this meeting to aid in electing a progressive administration for the union.

Just a Small Part of the Program of Militarism

This huge new airplane carrier, the U. S. S. Lexington, being built in the Fore River Channel, Mass., obliges to carry scores of airplanes in its hold to be launched at any time from the spacious deck, rather scotches the secretaries circulated by the jingoes that the U. S. air development is lagging. This ship is so big that dredging operations will have to be undertaken to get it out of the channel when it slips off the ways. It has a draught of 28 feet. The channel at low tide is 22.

UNITED TEXTILE WORKERS' MEET REVEALS REACTIONARY LEADERS

took the floor and said that the Passaic representatives could tell the convention more about the strike than MacMahon, and moved they be given the floor. Gustav Desk of the Passaic local then spoke briefly, and without mentioning names refuted the slanders against the strikers made by MacMahon at Passaic.

"Any impartial investigation," said Desk, "would prove that it was the mill owners and their agents who used violence against us. We were deprived of every constitutional guarantee. All civil liberties vouchsafed under the constitution of the state of New Jersey and the United States were denied us. We have been brutally assaulted; we have had to have recourse to the law in order to compel Sheriff Nimmo to obey the law. The mill owners have imported thugs and gunmen and have subsidized the city and county officials and the police powers against us.

Hits at MacMahon's Lies.

"There is nothing new in all this. It has been the some old story of violence used against workers on strike that has been repeated in Passaic, as in Homestead, the Corr de Alene, Logan county, West Virginia, and dozens of other battle grounds of the working class.

"Therefore we believe that any public statements blaming the Passaic strikers for the violence in Passaic will hurt our cause and will be misinterpreted so as to absolve the mill owners and the city, county and police officials who alone are responsible for all the violence and unlawful attacks upon persons and property of the Passaic textile workers.

Resents Imputation of Bad Faith.

"In joining the U. T. W. we wish to assure your convention that we did so without reservation. It was from the beginning our intention to organize and thus affiliate with the main body of the labor movement—the A. F. of L. Last April we approached the U. T. W. and elected a committee to negotiate for affiliation and so notified your general officers. It is unfortunate that it should now be intimated that we had other motives.

"The history of our strike is an open book. This historic strike has been investigated by our country's most prominent labor leaders, publicists, journalists and statesmen. Our strikers have at all times and under the greatest provocation obeyed the law. At all times our strike committee and our leaders have counselled us to refrain from violence.

All Labor Involved.

"It is to the interest of the entire labor movement in general and to our own national body, the U. T. W., in particular, that relief and defense shall be maintained in order that our strike shall be won and not broken by starvation.

"But whether our joining the U. T. W. would have the effect of increasing such relief or not, we still would have joined hands with our brothers in the U. T. W. in the interests of unity in the textile industry.

Proud of Their Struggle.

"We place this statement before the convention in order to assure you of our single-minded and whole-hearted loyalty to the principles of the A. F. of L. and the U. T. W., and in order to make our record clear: a record that we are proud of and that will do honor to the great organization of which we are now a part."

This was quite a rebuke to the unspeakable attack of MacMahon and stood out in contrast to the reactionary speeches of the first two days of the convention, opened by MacMahon with a eulogy of "our government" and all capitalist institutions, condemnation of Communists as enemies of the labor movement and such rot.

The Army Welcomed.

In addition a colonel of the U. S. army, representing the National Defense League, spoke saying that the purpose of the army and the unions was the same. In response to such reactionary agitation, the convention adopted a motion to support the Citizens' Military Training camps.

In the discussion on Passaic, Smith of Philadelphia asked why Weisbord was forced to withdraw, if the union had no better man to put in his place. MacMahon said that Weisbord had written an article in The DAILY WORKER, was a college man and not a textile worker and didn't believe in God.

God Not an Issue.

Smith came back through the statement that many delegates present did not believe in god, and that religion and politics could not bar workers from membership, and forward, even if he were a Communist, should have been retained as an organizer and advisor, as Weisbord had not opposed going into the U. T. W.

MacMahon answered that the convention could decide on Weisbord, but that if it should take Weisbord in, that he, MacMahon, would refuse to retain his office as president.

Relief Asked—With a Statement.

Upon the question of relief to the strikers, the convention was told by MacMahon that it could not "bleed the U. T. W. for the benefit of the A. F. of L. for Passaic." But upon the motion of Smith the following action supporting Passaic was taken:

"That a letter be sent to all locals of the U. T. W. by the president and executive council, urging them to support Passaic and to give until it hurts." It was amended after discussion to add "That a statement be sent with the letter explaining the U. T. W. position on the strike."

A fight was made that open financial reports be made, since the U. T. W. has not issued a financial statement for 20 years, but this motion was defeated.

Two Good Actions.

The convention, however, adopted a resolution against company unions, urging all workers in company unions to take steps to turn them into real labor unions of the U. T. W. Also, it adopted the following on organization of the unorganized:

"Resolved, that the United Textile Workers of America at this, its 24th convention, goes on record for the initiation of a systematic and intensive campaign for the organization of the unorganized throuot the entire industry, for the purpose of bettering the textile workers' conditions, hours and wages and for building up the U. T. W. of A. into e powerful union."

Bandits Repulsed By Gas.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 19. — Two bandits who were repulsed by tear gas while attempting a bank holdup today made a second attempt at another bank a few minutes later and escaped with $3,000.

KLAN CHIEFTAIN HURLS DIRK AT ALIEN WORKERS

Knight of Night Shirt Takes on Big Job

By LAURENCE TODD.
Federated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept 17.—No sooner had the predicted march of 75,000 members of the ku klux klan thru the national capitol simmered down to a parade of only 15,000 than Imperial Wizard Evans disclosed the ominous fact that he is going to try to force an alien-registration bill thru congress. The first session of the national convention of the klan which followed the parade was marked by emotionary speeches by leaders whose names were kept secret. But at the next session Evans became the public spokesman for these ideas.

To Save the Nordics.

"To save America from alienism," is the first of his obscurantist slogans. By that he means "to prevent the mongrelization of our race and to promote a steady nationalism rather than to permit the strength of America to be dissipated thru an insipid cosmopolitanism."

In definite terms, Evans explained this means the enactment of a law which will keep every alien under the official eye by means of compulsory registration at stated intervals. This is the scheme which Secretary of Labor Davis has advocated for the past five years without making any favorable impression upon congress. It is favored by the big non-union employers such as U. S. Steel.

Down With Melting Pot.

Next, the head of the klan proposed to bar all immigretion of any kind so that America for the future would depend for her growth upon the human elements already here. The refuge of the oppressed of foreign lands and the melting pot of races and cultures would cease to be.

Third, he would establish protestantism as the unofficial but nevertheless actual state religion in America. This would be achieved by putting "the bible and the flag" into every school. By the bible he meant protestant religious instruction. One of the "hooded" speakers at the first session indicated that the klan would "abolish religious freedom" as a constitutional right, Evans said it would "remain and hold a sturdy protestantism" as the key to national destiny.

Woven thru these phrases was the general theme of political opportunism. The convention was told that the klan would use its power in every political contest, to elect its supporters and defeat men who did not stand for its national principles.

CLARKSDALE, Miss. — (FP) — 20,000 additional cottonpickers will be employed in the Delta this season and arrangements have been made by J. H. Fallis, representative of the U. S. department of labor to bring in all the white tenant farmers, Negroes and Mexicans available.

FLORIDA HURRICANE WRECKS MIAMI; 75 DEAD, MANY BUILDINGS RAZED

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 19.—Meagre wireless reports reaching here from Florida say that Miami is in ruins and seventy-five persons are dead as the result of a ninety mile an hour hurricane that swept the Florida coast from the Bahamas and left a trail of death and wreckage.

The reports add that the strongest buildings in the down-town section of Miami were razed by the terrific wind while the streets are flooded and hundreds of boats have been beached.

Toilers Will Challenge "Open Shop Plan" of the Bosses in Hartford, Conn.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARTFORD, Conn.—(By Mail)—Walk down the main street of this industrial center of Connecticut and a huge sign on the giant building under construction hits you a striking blow in the face with the declaration:

"OPEN SHOP PLAN"

Great delight was displayed in the announcement that this was an "open shop" job of the Associated General Contractors of America. It screamed it.

This is the spirit of the employers not only in Hartford, and thruout Connecticut, but over all New England—bitter war against the workers.

This "open shop" pronouncement meant that all work done on this building job was non-union. Bentz O'Brien & Co., Hartford, were proclaimed as the general contractors, with Lockwood, Green & Co., of Boston, Mass., as the engineers.

But there was also the Baldwin, Stewart Electric Co. that wanted it known that it did business in Atlanta, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Charlotte, acting as an instrument in all of these places for the spread of "open shop" rule.

They all had slogans. The Baldwin-Stewart slogan for its dans was "Skill, Integrity, Responsibility," whatever all this means in bread and butter to the plundered working class. Not much!

Organized labor here numbers its members almost exclusively in the building trades. The unions here are very weak. The billboard blasoning "Open Shop Plan" sounds rather the tocsin of victory over rather than a threat against the working class.

This is in Connecticut where even the democratic party in state convention denounces the fraud of Coolidge "prosperity," declaring that instead the Coolidge-Mellon-Butler regime has brought wage cuts in the unorganized industries, that it has brought growing unemployment and poverty among the masses. But in republican Connecticut this democratic mail comes from a helpless middle class minority that suffers thru loss of working class patronage. So it cries aloud in resolutions.

Here in Connecticut the workers listen eagerly to the Communist message. I found this out by addressing an unexpectedly large and attentive open air audience.

There was but one disturber in the gathering, a well dressed, satisfied upholder of the Coolidge dynasty. But his efforts were short-lived.

"Keep still!" yelled the crowd. "This speaker has got something we want to hear."

And the meeting continued peacefully, an excellent contribution was made to the collection, and an encouraging amount of literature was purchased.

The approach to the workers, however, must be carefully and systematically built up. The next day we were not successful in holding a meeting in a factory district that employes an estimated total of 25,000 workers.

The workers had not been appraised of our coming and the police permit had been secured for the wrong location.

Most of the workers lived within a few blocks of the various plants. The noon whistle, giving them an hour to eat, sent them pell mell down the streets to their homes. No time there to listen to a Communist speaker. But there was the consolation that they would soon be coming back again. But this only resulted in a fresh disappointment. The return tide of toiling humanity did not set in until almost on the minute when the whistle would blow for the one o'clock resumption of the day's labor. Then the race of the tide returning was as rapid as before. If a banner had been displayed in the early morning announcing the noon-day meeting, then many workers would have come back as quickly as possible to listen to the speaker, and many who remained within the buildings would come out to join the throng. This holds true everywhere.

As it was, here in Hartford, a physical cultorist had secured the strategic spot, at the very entrance house of this great prison house of toil, where a few gathered to get a breath of fresh air before rushing back to the machine. He had stolen his problem in advance and solved it.

On this occasion we had to be satisfied to distribute our literature to these Hartford workers "on the run." The eagerness with which they took the literature and carried it back into the shops with them, was sure indicating that they would read it. That is a beginning. Successful noonday factory meetings here will came.

The standards of opposition to the "open shop plan" of the employers will be lifted triumphantly in time.

CALLES SENDS BIG ARMY TO FIGHT YAQUIS

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 19.—Fifteen thousand troops were being mobilised against the Yaqui Indians, reported in violent revolt, instigated by the church.

The original war department estimate was that 5,000 men would be sufficient for the campaign, but this number is now considered too small, the government being desirous of swift and decisive results.

Entrenched Themselves.

In former campaigns against the Yaquis where smaller bodies of men were dispatched the Indians usually succeeded in entrenching themselves thoroughly, thus ansuring a long-drawn out campaign without decisive outcome.

The whereabouts of General Obregon and his fate are still obscure.

One report has it that the statements earlier in the week that General Obregon had been besieged and then relieved, were arroneous.

No Word From Obregon.

Apparently no direct word has been received from General Obregon, since it was reported that General Manse's troops had relieved him.

According to one version now in circulation General Manso's troops failed to actually relieve General Obregon, but merely joined with the troops defending him and were last reported still giving battle to the Yaquis.

Six Bandits Killed.

Six bandits have paid with their lives for the kidnapping and killing of Jacob Rosenthal, American business man of Woodmare, N. Y., according to a government statement today.

Unofficial statements declared that as many as fourteen bandits had been executed or killed during the fighting between the bandits and troops.

Taken to Kidnapping Scene.

Three bandits, who had been held as suspects, were taken to the scene of the kidnapping to act as guides. Twenty other bandits swooped down from the hills and attempted to effect their release. In the fighting that ensued, the three bandits attempted to escape and were killed.

ther it is a republic or any other form of government," declared Thompson. The prosecutor had previously declared that the government must hide its secrets to combat revolution.

State Under Heavy Fire.
By ESTHER LOWELL,
(Federated Press.)

DEHAM, Mass., Sept. 19.—Thruout the hearing on the final motion of Sacco and Vanzetti for a new trial, William G. Thompson, defense counsel, has emphasized the fact that he urged joint examination by both sides of all witnesses to forestall disagreement as to what was said or occurred. In contending that this would have been the only fair procedure, Thompson strongly attacks the state and implies that its representatives were not seeking the truth but rather to save their case.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Dudley Ranney is not blamed by Thompson. Responsibility is placed at the door of his superior, Dist. Atty. Winfield Wilbar, and State Atty. Gen. J. R. Benton. Benton never called for joint examination and Wilbar flatly refused such procedure.

Former District Attorney Frederick Katzmann and his assistant Harold Williams who prosecuted Sacco and Vanzetti in the trial in 1921 are particularly assailed by Thompson. Williams is now U. S. attorney and could certainly state that the Boston files of the U. S. department of justice he shown to Thompson if there were nothing there to clear the defendants. Neither Williams nor Katzmann deny the affidavits of former federal agents Fred Weyand and Lawrence Letherman.

Katzmann is charged with paying his part of a bargain with the federal agents in the murder frame-up by egging Sacco on to give a long speech on his radical views while on the stand. Katzmann says this was done in the hope that Sacco would give information which the federal men could use against friends of the defendants. The case turned against Sacco after his arrest is not disputed by the state. Sacco justly feared the first approaches of Madeiros, the convict-groom from Providence, who sent a note to the convicted Italian while both were in jail here, saying that he, Madeiros, was in the gang which committed the South Braintree payroll murders which had been laid to Sacco and Vanzetti.

Condemns Government Agents.

Thompson unsparingly condemns the government agents "who were plotting for money against an unprotected woman with two children and who played on the hysteria of some men and women about reds (The Palmer red raids occurred in spring, 1920, when Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested.)

"I leave it to the judgment of mankind whether Sacco was justified in hearing spies," declared Thompson, "and whether or not an American can face the world in the opening of his government's case to do that sort of thing. Courage to convict Sacco and Vanzetti? Moral courage is that required to acquit these men." Once he insisted that it looked as tho the state wanted to execute Sacco and Vanzetti rather than face the facts fairly and convict those really guilty of the payroll murders."

BRITISH MEAN TO MAKE WAR UPON CHINESE

Armed Intervention to Bring in U. S.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 15.—Great Britain is steadily moving toward a war of intervention in China, and it is expected that sufficient indncement will be made to bring the United States into line with Britain in a combined armed assault on the growing national movement for liberation from foreign imperialist rule.

Practical State of War.

In two places a practical state of war exists. On the upper Yangtze the British are involved with their own allies, the troops of Wu Pei-fu in the province of Szechuan, where two ships are still held by Wu's subordinate, Yang-sen, after the battle of last week, in which the Chinese claim the British slaughtered great numbers of noncombatants wantonly. The British are trying to make another punitive expedition to recover the ships.

Also in Canton the British have taken the offensive by seizing anti-British strike pickets and declaring they are pirates and will be treated as such. At that point a fleet of 15 foreign ships is held up in the river by the Chuen-pi forts, while British war vessels are constantly provoking clashes with Canton authorities.

Appeal to Chang in Vain.

Both Wu Pei-fu and Sun Chuan-fang, the latter the military dictator of the five lower Yangtze provinces, have appealed to Chang Tso-lin at Mukden to come to their aid against the northward drive of the Cantonese armies now consolidating their positions at Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang arsenal on the central Yangtze. But Chang has troubles of his own in the north.

This Manchurian dictator, the well supplied with materials by Japan, particularly, and his great munitions factory at Mukden, cannot trust his own troops overmuch, and is menaced by the Kuominchun or "Peoples' Army" outside of Peking, the Kuominchun being allied with the Cantonese and preventing Chang going south by their menace to his rear.

Chang Massacres Mutineers.

How risky are the chances of Chang is seen by the mutiny of his troops at Kaigan, where he crushed the mutineers only by ambushing them and slaughtering several hundred at the railway station after inducing them upon a promise they would be disbanded.

The Peking government, such as it is, has taken the side of the troops of Wu in the upper Yangtze fight, and demanded Britain make an apology and pay reparations.

In a Dilemma.

The imperialists are disturbed by the dilemma, for if they attack China in combination they fear that the whole nation will turn to the Soviet Union for an ally, yet if they do not act quickly the Chinese under Canton leadership will steadily drive all imperialist interests out and unite the nation under a strong central government which will repudiate all the extra legal privileges of foreign powers.

Bomb Thrower Given Year Sentence by a Fascist Tribunal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Sept. 15.—Dino Lucetti, an architect held here on charges of attempting to assassinate Premier Mussolini on last Saturday, was today sentenced to one year's imprisonment by a Carrara tribunal for wounding a fascist in an altercation in September, 1926, prior to his departure for France.

Reports were circulated today that the senate and chamber would be called into extraordinary session in October to enact a bill for capital punishment for assassins and would-be assassins. If this bill is passed and Lucetti is made to serve his sentence in Carrara first, he may be made to suffer capital punishment.

CZECH PAPER RUNS SCAB AD FOR CIGARMEN

So-Called Marxian Sheet Is Caught

Spravedlnost, a Czech newspaper that parades as a labor sheet and is run by a group who call themselves the "Marxian Federation," has been caught running an advertisement for strikebreakers. In their current issue is to be found an ad calling for cigarmakers to apply at 324 N. Wells street for work at their trade. An investigation of this advertisement led to the Metropolitan Cigar Co., against which union cigarmakers are now on strike.

Union Verifies Story.

This was verified at the office of the Cigarmakers' Union, Local 14, when John Slavery, secretary of the local, said that not only the Metropolitan but a number of other firms in the city have been struck by the union.

All of which would seem to indicate that Spravedlnost needs to look after its Marxism.

British Governor of Hongkong in Speech Attacking Cantonese

CANTON, Aug. 27.—(By Mail.)—A few days ago a new building of a cloth merchant was opened in Honkong. The British governor spoke at the opening and referred to the "uselessness of the attempts made by a body of organised bandits and pirates wrongly called the Canton committee, to damage the colony."

The governor also commenced to criticize the Canton government:

"The Canton government itself has not yet grasped that its first duty as a government is to maintain law and order, for it is in accordance with the organization of robbers and pirates even in its own capital."

These remarks have caused the greatest indignation amongst the toiling population of the Kwang provinces (Kwang-Tung and Kwang-Tsi). Numerous meetings have taken place as a protest against this act of provocation. A great demonstration has been arranged to take place this week to support the strike and boycott movement of the Chinese population of the Kwang provinces.

Poland--The Land of White Terror

The Saym Committee Reports.

REGARDING the treatment of the prisoners during the police investigations, the committee heard numerous complaints on brutal treatment and maltreatment, and in some cases the prisoners showed signs of maltreatment. The great number of complaints and the equality of the details which were stated by the various prisoners, as well as the circumstance that the government did not deny cases of maltreatment of prisoners recently and in districts where the committee undertook no investigations, all these facts lead to the supposition that the treatment of the prisoners by the political police during the preliminary investigation leaves much to be desired and that the complaints of the prisoners are very probably justified . . ."

The Role of the Socialist Party.

THE socialist party of Poland is playing a most shameful role in all these questions. Hated by the majority of the class conscious workers, this party tries to maintain its power in the labor movement by the annihilation of the Communist Party, it works hand in hand with the political police in the struggle against the revolutionary labor movement. Workers suspected of Communism, are denounced by the people of the P. P. S. from the ranks of the P. P. S. come the most capable agents provocateurs (Tchubala, Trojanovski and others) of the political police. This role was played by the P. P. S already in the first period of Polish independence, when the government was in its own hands . . . Also in the following years the P. P. S as oppositional party was one of the most active co-operators of the political police.

With regard to the well-known trial of Trojanovski, the leader of the political police made the following statement:

"What I do as a profession, Mr. Prazer (a leading personality of the P. P. S. and member of parliament) does as an amateur."

When the P. P. S. entered the coalition government in December, 1925, it found itself compelled to raise the demand for political amnesty. This demand was only the result of a pressure from the working masses and afterwards, as a government party, the P. P. S. did nothing to carry it out. On the contrary, at the time when the P. P. S. participated in the government, the persecutions and the treatment of the political opponents only got worse.

Lead—Instead of Bread.

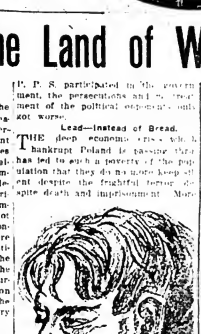
THE deep economic crisis which has led to such a poverty of the population that they do not more keep silent despite the frightful terror, despite death and imprisonment. More and more frequently the workers go into the streets. The unemployed are the initiators of this movement, they are forced by need and starvation to rise up and by the armed "fighting groups" the social democrats were allowed to hold their meetings in peace and even the prime minister, Count Skrzynski, attended it. In the meantime, however, communist demonstrations were attacked with gas bombs by the police and when this had no effect against the strong number of the Communists, the fighting groups of the social democrats were mobilized. On forties they drove in the Communist demonstrations and fired from their revolvers into the peacefully demonstrating masses. Seventeen dead and over 90 seriously injured workers and an immanse number of slightly injured were the result of this frightful murder.



JAKOB ZITTERSPIELER
A Victim of the Polish White Terror.

Unemployed Mass Movement.

OUT of this and the mass movement of the unemployed develops. The series of demonstrations move from one town to the other. The campaigns of the unemployed do not only take place in larger industrial centers such as Lodz, Dombrowa, Upper Silesia, etc., but also in significant towns such as Wloclawek, Kalisch, Lublin and others.

The worst peculiarity of unemployment in Poland consists in the fact that the unemployed find nowhere a place where they could use their labor power. The immense army of the starving people finds a refuge even in the village, which are overcrowded with unemployed, nor abroad are there needs no emigrants at present.

The reaction government of the capitalistic barbarism and social democrats applies the severest measures against the workers' demonstrations. (Only after the bloody events the social democrats left the government). They offer them lead instead of bread. They receive them with rifle shots. They mobilize bayonets, swords and even machine guns against them. Dozens of dead and hundreds of wounded prisoners are the bloody harvest of the police.

In Styra (Eastern Galicia) in the end of March, 10 dead, 30 wounded; in Kalisch, 3 dead, 60 wounded. Also in Wloclawek, Lodz, Warsaw, Sawiercie and other places the blood of the unarmed was shed in the streets.

THE events during the last May Day celebrations characterize best the attitude of the Polish social democracy. Guarded by a strong police force in the government.

Plans of Boston Labor Politicians Get Big Set-Back

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15. —In the Labor Day parade the Workers (Communist) Party succeeded in frustrating the plans of the local labor politicians who sought to turn the celebration into a tribute to the republican party. The Workers Party distributed 5000 copies of the Boston Worker, which contained a number of illuminating articles on the capitalist candidates of the two major parties, called on the workers to fight for a Labor Party, and to organize the unorganized. Every worker in the line of march received a copy of the paper which helped to counteract the poison which was later disseminated from the band stand by Governor Fuller and his crew.

Sunday, September 12, the party held its regular weekly meeting on the Boston Common which was attended by over 500 workers. The speakers were Hubert Riley, Lewis Marks, candidate for governor, George Siskind, Bert Miller. Current political issues were discussed and the tactics of the two major parties in the present campaign, also the real problems which confront the workers at this time. The question period was interesting, in so far as the workers displayed a very deep interest in what is going on in Soviet Russia. The question repeatedly turned on this topic.

H. M. Wicks will speak at the meeting to be held Sunday, Sept. 19.

New Leader Refuses to Admit Fabrication of Stalin's Speech

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, Gen. Sec'y-Workers (Communist) Party.

THE statement of the central committee of the Workers (Communist) Party containing the telegram from the head of the Agitprop Department of the Communist International declaring that the speech attributed to Joseph Stalin, general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union was an out and out fabrication, was sent to the New Leader, the New York Socialist organ with a request for publication.

The New Leader had published the speech attributed to Stalin on August 14 with some additional misrepresentations of its own.

The following reply to this request has been received from James Oneal, the editor of the New Leader:

"Mr. C. E. Ruthenberg,
1113 W. Washington Blvd.,
Chicago, Illinois.
"Dear Sir:

"I am in receipt of your astonishing note of September 9 with enclosure of a mimeograph statement alleged to be an answer to a news story carried in The New Leader of August 14. You ask that this statement be published in The New Leader.

"My dear Mr. Ruthenberg, I am astonished at your request and the 'petty bourgeois' prejudice which you display in your note. You want us to print your statement. My dear hero of the Michigan woods, don't you know that you could not get a line in The New Leader and that you have wasted two cents in postage in sending your statamant to us!

"Let me explain. We believe in dictatorship—especially for you and your kind. Good dope, isn't it? Comes direct from the holy city of Moscow and bears the imprint of the Plenum of the Presidium of the C. C. of the C. P. of the G. P. of the C. C. C. of the C. P. S. U. You subscribe to it. Fine! We apply it to you. Not a line in The New Leader. Good Leninist organizatory tactics, isn't it? (See Thesis 231 adopted by the E. Z. extraordinary session of the Plenum and unanimously endorsed by the Presidium of the C. C. of the C. P. of the G. P. of the C. C. C. of the C. P. S. U., chapter 92, section 64, verse 23, page 1,781). It is all clear in this reference as to what no 'betrayer of the working class' or 'countar-revolutionist' can pervert it from its true meaning.

"How did you happen to fall into the 'bourgeois deviation' of thinking that The New Leader would accept anything from you? Moreover, where we get our story is none of your business. We are under no obligation to you to explain anything that appears in the columns of The New Leader and we do not expect you to explain to us anything that appears in your publications. Please understand this and don't trouble us any more with your 'petty bourgeois prejudice' about the 'workers and peasants government of Russia.' Anybody that can sell you that idea will be able to sell you stock in a flower garden at the North Pole. Forget it.

"Hoping that you will soon recover from your Bolshavik sousa, I am,

"Very truly yours,
(Signed) James Oneal."

WE need not comment on the mass of verbiage under which the editor of the New Leader hides the direct refusal to correct an out and out lie which is published. Every intelligent worker can draw his own conclusion as to the calibre of the editor who writes such a letter.

THE fact that stands out in this matter is that Editor Oneal of the New Leader took from the capitalist press a dispatch purporting to quote the general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, published this in his paper, without giving the source of the dispatch and then when caught in having published a manufactured speech, refuses to tell the truth to the readers of his paper.

THE Socialist Party has sunk low indeed when it is necessary for it to publish manufactured speeches assigned to Communist leaders in order to carry on the struggle against Communism and Communist principles. The triumph of the proletarian revolution in Russia, the success of the proletarian dictatorship in building a socialist state, has become a thing so clear to the workers that the socialists can no longer challenge it on the basis of the facts. The alternative is to use manufactured documents such as the capitalist governments have been using against the Communist international. It is to this method of carrying on the fight against the Communists, that the New Leader and its editor have now descended.

The letter of Oneal is a confession of bankruptcy in the fight against Communist principles, which today give leadership to the revolutionary workers in the struggle against capitalism.

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'Flaherty.

in the current issue of The Witness, a weekly published by the episcopal church. But, in substance, the writer states that college morality did not begin to slip until the arrival of the flapper. The gin delivery man is now as obvious a figure in early dawn as the iceman. Campus women go on drinking bouts with premeditation and malice aforethought and the male student is considered a curfew hero and for self-protection from bands of marauding co-eds.

WHAT is the world coming to if such doings can take place in a christian country? What have our spiritual shepherds been doing for the last hundred years? The saloon was bad enough, but now every man's home is his brewery and the wife who does not carry a flask in her sock is considered a weak sister. What the indigent episcopalian actually witness to is hardly maliable unless the man is a liar, which is quite possible. At any rate, the lads who used to predict a "nation of fatherless children" under socialism did not have to wait so long for the millenium.

PEOPLE suffering from the delusion that they were radicals because of a subterranean wart somewhere in their anatomies came to the assistance of Almo McPherson, the foxy evangelist, when the authorities went to investigate her kidnapping yarn and ran into a romance. No doubt the same type will yell for Gene Tunney when they read that he ordered the "four volumes of Marx's Das Kapital." For the benefit of those who do not read the sporting column, Tunney is a populist of parts, who is scheduled to fight Jack Dempsey some time in the near future. Tunney is an examarine and "hero" of the world war. Dempsey claimed exemption and escaped shell shock and a lot of favorable editorial comment in the capitalist press. Now pick your favorite.

MINE WORKERS IN OHIO FEAR BOSS ATTACK

overtures to 11,000 men to work at the 1917 scale of $5 a day.

Wage Cuts Object Lesson.

West Virginia, just across the Ohio river, is a powerful object lesson to the miners on the dire consequences of union defeat, and they are determined not to succumb to honeyed promises of more work at lower pay. Nevertheless unemployment, poverty and semi-starvation have made a break in the Hocking valley if the national union does not succeed soon in lessening the pressure on the Ohio miners. If non-union West Virginia and the ever-growing non-union circle in western Pennsylvania are allowed to operate without effective opposition, starving hunger cuts winter may force capitulation in the isolated coal regions of south central Ohio. Already the blight of non-unionism has secured a firm foothold in Pomeroy Bend, in southern Ohio across the river from West Virginia, while the West Virginia panhandle, a part of District 6, is now lost to the union.

Hope for Brass.

Miners and their officials are hoping for the lucky breaks, either in a readjustment of freight rates, a diminishing of the boycott on union coal or an uprising in West Virginia, to open the Ohio mines, not more than a quarter of which are operating. In the meantime there is nothing for them to do but await national developments, as Ohio is quite dependent on the general coal situation. Unlike Illinois, she enjoys no extensive rate preferential into big cities such as Chicago and St. Louis. West Virginia coal is as near Cleveland and other lake ports as is Ohio coal.

Majority Out of Work.

Only 12,000 to 15,000 miners are working five days a month or more out of a district membership listed between 40,000 and 50,000. In the past two and one-half years nearly $1,500,000 has been paid in relief and this winter union funds, it is admitted, will be near zero. Even the pitiful $3 a week may be lessened or cut off.

The British coal situation is absorbing millions of tons of West Virginia coal, leaving a shortage which encouragon Ohio operators to open mines here and there in the state at the union scale. When the British coal lockout is settled, however, Ohio will feel pressure acutely as an effective boycott has been placed on union coal in this state by class-conscious wholesale and retail dealers to lessen the domestic demand for local coal.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE IN CONVENTION PASSES RESOLUTION ON CRIMINAL SYNDICALISM STATUTES

Resolution on Freedom of Press, Speech and Assembly Under the Criminal Syndicalist Laws as Presented in the Cases of Anita Whitney, Fiske and Ruthenberg Now Before the Supreme Court.

THERE are now pending before the Supreme Court of the United States the cases of Anita Whitney, charged with membership in the Communist Labor Party in California in 1919, the case of Fiske, charged with membership in the I. W. W. and that of C. E. Ruthenberg, charged with "assembling with" the Communist Party at Bridgeman, Mich., in 1922.

All these prosecutions are based upon the so-called "criminal syndicalist" laws, which are an invasion of the constitutionally guaranteed rights of freedom of speech, press and assembly. These laws punish by sentences of from 10 to 20 years the advocacy of certain principles in relation to the struggle of labor and membership in an organization advocating certain principles and the "assembling with" such organizations.

Constitution Says.

The First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States declares categorically:

"Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble. . . .

The freedom guaranteed to the workers under this provision of the constitution which is binding upon the states under the 14th amendment, has been progressively whittled down by the Supreme Court as required by the interests of the ruling, exploiting class of this country.

Passed During War.

During the period of the war congress passed the conscription and espionage laws which prohibited speech, and writing in opposition to the war. When these laws were appealed to the Supreme Court the court declared, in spite of the clear provisions of the Constitution that Congress had the power to prohibit and punish speech and writing when there was a "clear and present danger" that the speech or writing would result in violation of law. In other words, the interests of the capitalist rulers of the United States required that opposition to the war and conscription be stifled under which laws prohibiting freedom of speech and press were declared to be constitutional.

At the close of the war the movement of the workers against capitalist exploitation and oppression grew in strength and the capitalist rulers of the United States needed new laws with which to destroy this movement. To fill this need the "criminal anarchy," "syndicalist" and "criminal advocacy of sedition" laws were enacted in 37 states. Under these laws hundreds of workers have been imprisoned for long terms for other "crime" than speech or writing advocating the principles of the I. W. W., the Communist Labor Party, the Communist Party and the Workers (Communist) Party.

The First Test.

The first test of these laws came before the supreme court in the case of Benjamin Gitlow, charged with "criminal anarchy" because of the publication of the manifesto of the left wing of the Socialist Party. Under the test of the rule laid down by the supreme court in the free speech and press cases which arose during the war the supreme court could not uphold the constitutionality of the "criminal anarchy" law of New York as applied in the Gitlow case, because their was no proof in the case that anyone had read the manifesto and could be no "clear and present danger" which the court had said was necessary in order to punish speech or writing under the constitution.

Dangerous!

The supreme court, in order to protect the interests of the ruling class of this country found it necessary to go a step further in the interpretation of the constitution so as to prohibit freedom of speech and press. It found the way to do this by declaring that certain forms of speech and writing were in themselves so dangerous to the ruling capitalist class that their utterance or publication under any circumstances created "a clear and present danger."

In the cases of Anita Whitney and Fiske, now before the court, the court is asked to go another step further and declare that membership in an organization advocating ideas prohibited by the "criminal syndicalist" laws is a crime, although the individual involved may never have spoken or written a word in advocacy of those ideas.

"Assembling With."

In the case of C. E. Ruthenberg, the court is asked to uphold an interpretation which goes still further than the one made by the lower courts in the Whitney and Fiske cases and declare that the mere "assembling with" an organization advocating the prohibited ideas is a crime punishable by a long prison sentence.

This convention of the International Labor Defense declares that the constitutional interpretation made by the supreme court shows clearly that what is in law is not a matter of the provisions of the constitution, but what the interests of the ruling capitalist class requires at a certain time. The record of the free speech cases show that the supreme court is prepared to completely nullify the constitutional provision that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or of the right of the people peaceably to assemble. . . ." as required to protect the right of the capitalists to exploit and oppress the workers and to still any opposition to this exploitation and oppression.

Fight For Rights.

The convention of the International Labor Defense declared that the only way the right of the workers to freely speak, and write their opinions and ideas and to organize and assemble in support of these ideas and principles can be upheld, is to unite in support of the right of freedom of speech, press and assembly and to carry on an uncompromising fight against any attempt by state legislature, congress or the supreme court to limit these rights.

The convention of the International Labor Defense declares that it is only thru the power of a mass movement of the workers that the provisions of the constitution can be made effective and the workers really will secure the rights of freedom of speech, press and assembly, and it calls upon all workers to join in the struggle to achieve these rights.

AUTO WORKERS' UNION MEETS IN DETROIT, MICH.

Organize Unorganized Is Big Problem

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 15.—The organization of the vast mass of unorganized workers in the automobile industry is the task that the incoming general officers of the Auto Workers' Union will have, according to instructions given delegates to the Auto Workers' Union convention that has been opened here by their locals.

Each of the delegates coming to the convention has a plan as to how to organize the workers in this important industry. Delegates from many locals come with instructions to work for the affiliation of the Auto Workers' Union to the American Federation of Labor and plan their organizing drives in cooperation and conjunction with the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor.

There are about 5,000,000 workers in the automobile industry. New York has the strongest local. Detroit is next. Detroit membership is constantly increasing. Any worker that seeks to join the Auto Workers' Union should communicate with the general office, 4620 Beaubien street, Detroit, Mich.

Telegraphers Thrown Out of Work by New Machine Cable Device

The new Pormalloy cable between New York and London is another triumph in eliminating human operators from the telegraph and cable service, it appears from the announcement of the Chicago division of the Western Union Telegraph Co. "The unheard-of speed of 2,500 letters per minute, about five times faster than any long distance submarine cable of the old type, is attainable over this circuit," City Superintendent Herbert Brown declares.

Detroit Auto Workers Want to Join A. F. of L.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 15.—Local 127 of the United Auto, Aircraft and Vehicle Workers of America at their last meeting adopted a number of resolutions signifying their desire for affiliation with the American Federation of Labor and calling on the national convention of the American Federation of Labor which will be held in Detroit starting Oct. 2 to launch an active organization campaign in the automobile industry.

The Detroit union signifies its willingness to enter into negotiations with the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor with the intention of affiliating itself with the American Federation of Labor.

Some of the slogans that the Detroit union points out should be used in the organizing campaign which they urge the American Federation of Labor to conduct are: "Against wage cuts," "For an increase in wages," "For a general improvement of working conditions," "Establish the 8-hour day and the 44-hour week."

CHICAGO—(FP)— Two test cases by the Chicago building trades council ended victoriously when the unions went back to work on the downtown skyscrapers. They returned minus the nonunion cement that had been employed in violation of the council's interpretation of the contracts.

BUILDING TRADE UNIONS NEED UNITED ACTION TO FIGHT THE RENEWED OPEN SHOP CAMPAIGN

By ARNE SWABECK.

The Chicago building trades workers have won a victory. The announcement came just before Labor Day that two big construction jobs now under way, the De Wolfe building and the Jewelers' building, were ready to finish these jobs with union labor. The jobs had been struck on August 23 and 28, respectively, and the announced settlement shows that the so-called "citizens' committee" to enforce the Landis award failed in its pretentious promise to furnish enough scabs to replace the strikers.

Must Look Ahead.

This means a further setback to the "citizens' committee" which has suffered many reverses since the memorable day of the mighty demonstration against the Landis award on April 30, 1922. But it is also well to remember that with the slackening of the building boom, the powers of this "open shop" outfit may again increase, while the most complete solidarity of the building trades workers will be necessary to maintain their gains made.

The Chicago Building Trades Council has at last begun to function. During the critical days following the issuing of the Landis award it failed completely. The immediate unity of the smaller trades became pledged to the Landis award, while the Building Trades Council ceased all functions. For a considerable period it even held no meetings.

An Open Shop Move.

The Landis award was the first gun in the determined campaign of the bankers and manufacturers to completely crush the building trades unions. The so-called "citizens' committee" became organized immediately thereafter and inaugurated its policy of bringing scabs to the city and placing them on the jobs under gunmen and police protection.

When the council failed, the rank and file of the local unions demanded action. The Building Trades publicity committee was organized, composed of delegates directly from the local unions. The publicity committee immediately sounded a note of unity, against the attempt to smash the unions and demanded to maintain the right of sympathetic strike. The progressive elements took the leadership and a splendid demonstration was organized at which 140,000 workers turned out in parade against the Landis award.

International Officers Reorganize Council.

Later the international officials of all the building trades unions came to Chicago, but with one exception could recommend nothing but compliance with the Landis award. They came to Chicago a second time and finally succeeded in reorganizing the Building Trades Council.

However, with the carpenters still outside and the building trades under the control of Pete Shaughnessey, the carpenters and building laborers even later signed an agreement identical with the Landis award containing the clauses of:

1. No restriction of use of any raw or manufactured material except prison made.

2. That no union men have the right to stop work individually or collectively because of nonunion men of other trades being employed.

Progressives Led Struggle.

The progressives continued to demand a united fight against the "citizens' committee" based on the slogans of "closed shop," no use of nonunion material and a uniform agreement for all trades to expire at the same time. Only the building boom existing ever since the Landis award prevented the success of the outstanding endeavors of the "citizens' committee."

Thus summer several trades entered into new agreements with only the carpenters and the marble setters retaining the "closed shop," while other trades, for instance the carpenters and structural iron workers having been promised wage increases, to take effect October 1st. The Iron League in agreement with the various employers' associations, fought for this postponement of wage increase. Evidently the employers are preparing for a fight, but postponing the date to gain further strength, expecting the slackening season may weaken the unions.

Boom Slackens.

The building boom is now slackening. All authorities agree that a period of the former normal demands for buildings have been reached. In Chicago during the first four months of the year there was a drop of 5 per cent in building compared to the same period the year before.

July and August show a further falling off particularly in residential buildings both from previous months this year and from the same months last year. This is the estimate made by the "Engineering News Record" which is generally quite reliable, despite attempts of juggling with figures being made by some so-called authorities.

Bosses Hopeful.

Undoubtedly the bosses are eager to regain the opportunities which at one time were offered by the situation created by the Landis award. The bankers and the industrial capitalists are not only their solid supporters, but even are taking over the direction of the fight. The important question is: "Do they feel themselves strong enough by October 1st or will they seek a further postponement?" There can be no doubt that they are looking for a complete showdown. Even during the time of this recent strike, machine guns were mounted in the De Wolfe building structure, while heavy cars were manned by thugs and gunmen.

Unity of Action Urgent.

The very life of the building trades unions makes necessary that the issue of the closed shop be put squarely and that the greatest amount of unity of action be established amongst the various unions. Much precious time has been lost. The time of the building boom should have been the real opportunity to make all Chicago building jobs union jobs and it is to be hoped that the Building Trades Council does not permit any further delay.

The fight cannot be avoided, and it is necessary to establish the solidarity required. The building trades unions must insist upon uniform agreements with the right to sympathetic strike, the elimination of nonunion made material and the agreements to expire at the same time together with the organization of the men employed in the building material manufacturing shops.

No Strike, But Judge Issues Injunction to Forbid Union Campaign

By ART SHIELDS.
Federated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15. — Supreme Court Justice James A. Dunne goes other injunction judges one better. Dunne does not wait till the workers go on strike, but issues his writs against peaceful union appeals. His temporary restraining order in behalf of the Yek-It-Rite Paper Box company of Brooklyn forbids the Paper Box Makers' Union "from endeavoring to persuade employes of the plaintiff to join the defendant union."

There is no strike at this big plant, but the union is distributing circulars telling of the advantages of the 44-hour week, of higher wages and the protection of a union.

George Powers, organizer for the union, laid the amazing open shop order of the justice before the American Civil Liberties Union which is having a local analysis made of it. He pointed out that the injunction goes further even than the "yellow dog" injunctions of West Virginia and Ohio, places forbidding a union from persuading men from breaking individual contracts of employment. For the paper box firm has no such contracts with its employes.

RAIL UNIONS' STRENGTH REASON WHY ARBITRATION MAY GIVE MEN "SOMETHING," EXECUTIVES ADMIT

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

A general advance in the wages of railroad employes will not surprise many railroad executives, according to an obviously inspired note in the New York Times financial section. They feel, says the Times, "that the strength of the unions and the prosperity of the carriers will force the granting of something."

Here is admitted that the mere justice of the demand for a better living standard does not determine the decision of arbitration boards. The executives, according to the Times, hold—and rightly—unjustified but that the strength of the unions will help to influence the arbitration board.

The executives apparently have a definite idea of the coming increases. They tell the Times that they expect an addition of at least $100,000,000 to the railroad payrolls. This would mean a little over $1 a week in the average railroad worker's wage.

Record Profits in 1926.

Each month's figures add to the certainty that 1926 will show record railroad profits. The Wall Street Journal's estimates of the 1926 earnings of 40 leading carriers show that only 3 expect to earn less than in 1925. Actual results for the 12 months ended July 31, 1926 show only 7 of the 40 roads behind the full year 1925. A majority show considerable gains in stockholders' profits.

The actual earnings on common stock in 1925, in the 12 months ending last July, and the estimated results in 1926 for 15 important railroads are:

| Railroad | 12 Mo. Ended Year to Aug. mated | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| | 1926 | 1926 | 1926 |
| | % | % | % |
| Baltimore & Ohio.... | 12.1 | 15.0 | 16.0 |
| Delaware & Ohio | 19.3 | 20.5 | 22.0 |
| New York Central.. | 12.7 | 13.4 | 13.8 |
| Nickel Plate ..... | 16.1 | 20.2 | 22.0 |
| Pennsylvania ..... | 12.4 | 13.8 | 14.0 |
| Reading ..... | 20.6 | 19.8 | 22.0 |
| Atlan. Coast Line | 26.9 | 27.3 | 28.0 |
| Illinois Central ..... | 12.9 | 13.0 | 18.0 |
| Louisville & Nash.. | 16.0 | 17.3 | 18.3 |
| Southern ..... | 16.2 | 17.1 | 18.5 |
| Chicago & N. W..... | 6.2 | 7.5 | 8.0 |
| Northern Pacific .... | 7.3 | 8.1 | 8.4 |
| Great Northern ..... | 8.6 | 8.8 | 8.8 |
| Santa Fe ..... | 17.2 | 20.1 | 21.0 |
| Southern Pacific .... | 10.2 | 11.7 | 12.5 |
| Union Pacific ..... | 15.4 | 15.9 | 16.5 |

In many instances the 1926 return is reckoned on larger outstanding capitalization than 1925. The increase in actual profit is therefore larger than the percentage figures indicate.

Retrenchment by the Wall Street Journal of the statement that reduction in operating expenses is swalling Baltimore and Ohio profits emphasizes the justice of the B. & O. shopmen's demand for increases long overdue. The profits of this leader in shop co-operation are running a third larger than in the same period of 1925. For seven months the stockholders' return is $6,507,800 ahead of 1925, the gain being equivalent to $4.28 a share.

In July the ratio of B. & O. expenses to receipts was down to 66.8 per cent compared with 72.6 per cent a year ago. This means that the profit hog is getting 31.2 per cent of each dollar paid for B. & O. railroad service compared with 27.4 per cent in July 1925.

MADISON, Wis.—(FP)—Three problems facing organized labor were stressed by Sec'y. Frank Morrison, American Federation of Labor, in an address to Madison unions on Labor Day. These were the company union, the fostering by privilege of the Mussolini-dictatorship idea as a substitute for congress, and the injunction judge.

BOSTON—(FP)—Upholstery workers local 37 is suing for an injunction against Kay Parlor Upholstering Co. to enforce the contract clause that only union workers be employed.

GENERAL MOTORS COMPANY RULES FLINT ELECTION

City Must Build Sewer for Fisher Body Plant

By R. BAKER.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

FLINT, Mich., Sept. 15.—In Flint, Mich., are located several large plants of the General Motors Corporation. The biggest of these is the new Fisher Body plant, well known for its speed-up system. A new sewer was needed for this plant, which was to cost $220,000. The General Motors Corporation decided that the town of Flint should pay for it. Much to their surprise, when the question was voted on in August it was rejected by 812 to 716.

Seek to Change Vote.

General Motors immediately set its machinery into motion in order to revise this decision. A new vote was set for September. The writer predicted in The DAILY WORKER that the second vote for the sewer program would carry because the majority of the voters are employed by the General Motors Corporation.

Lay Down Law.

The Flint Daily Journal, controlled by General Motors, carried front page articles urging favorable action on the issue. Special meetings of business men were called. The law was laid down to them. In one of the largest hotels free meals and drinks were served along with speeches by hirelings of the General Motor Corporation. All factories issued special shop bulletins dealing with the sewer question. On voting day all shops closed one hour earlier. The extra number of street cars necessary to take the workers home was held back in the car barns, and in their place a fleet of brand new Buicks and Chevrolets appeared displaying the sign: Get Out Your Vote and Vote Yes; Car to Polling Place and Home."

Naturally the workers, who were standing on the corners waiting for street cars, boarded these.

Voting System "Elastic."

The system of voting was very "elastic." In spite of the fact that only taxpayers have the right to vote on such a question, democracy on this occasion took the form of any citizen residing in Flint for over three months being allowed to vote at any of the six polling stations. No registration was required. Many company hirelings voted "yes" at all six places.

These facts easily explain the relatively immense vote cast. The vote was 7,526 yes, and 1,205 no.

Political Sharps Turn to Watch Results in Maine, Barometer State

(Special to The Daily Worker)

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 15.—With the announcement that election returns in this "barometer state" showed the victory of Ernest Gross and Ralph O. Brewster, republican, by 18,000 votes over Mayor Ernest L. McLean, Augusta democrat, political sharps of the nation turned to see what the mercury revealed.

They found that the republican majority was considerably less than it was two years ago but compared well from a republican viewpoint, for an "off year." Democrats had reduced the republican majority, but not as much as they hoped.

Rabid American Legion Leader Denounces All U. S. Peace Advocates

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 15. — America, he prepared to defend yourself against all enemies!

This was the appeal voiced today by Alvin M. Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, in an address before the convention of the American Legion, department of Illinois, holding its closing sessions today.

The American people have no patience with those well-meaning but misguided people who even now are making strenuous efforts to palsy the arm of America and deprive us of the small defense we now have," McQuire declared.

One Killed, Dozen Hurt as M. P. Limited Hurtles Track

McCONEE, Ark., Sept. 15.—One man was killed and a dozen persons hurt, one seriously, when the Missouri Pacific's Sunshine Special, St. Louis to New Orleans, wrecked here. George Hashing, engineer of the train, of McCaee, was killed.

The wreck was caused by a broken rail, according to information at the office of the yardmaster here. The engine, mail car and one passenger coach left the rails.

Bushing's fireman had both legs broken and is in a local hospital. All the passengers in the wreck were in the one coach that left the rails, but none of them was injured seriously, it was believed.

Marine Pilot Killed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15. — Lieut. Armond J. Norton of the marine corps, was instantly killed today when a plane he was piloting fell into the Potomac River near Haine Point.

A NEW NOVEL By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

IV

Up at Paradise things were booming. All the men were back at work—even the blacklisted ones, at a dollar a day more, and with another rise promised; a good driller was worth just about his weight in gold. Here too came the "four minute men," and were listened to gladly; the oil workers were patriotic, and would have enlisted to a man, but they were needed on this job—there was nothing more important than oil, and the way for them to serve their country was to keep the stuff flowing, and watch out for fires, and for obstructions dropped into the wells, and other acts of vandalism by enemy agents.

Paul was back as Dad's boss builder. But then came the first draft, and Paul had one of the lucky numbers. Dad offered to get him exempted, for obviously there had to be shacks to house the men who were to drill and operate the news wells. Dad had power to arrange matters—you can understand that when you learn that the chairman of the exemption board was Mr. Carey, the rancher who had accepted money from Dad to get the road built for the drilling. But Paul said no, there were married men with families who knew as much about building houses as he did, so Paul would do his share in the field.

Paul and Bunny were friends again, and had no end of arguments. Paul wasn't nearly as keen for the war as Bunny thought he ought to be; he agreed that we had to win, since we were in, but he wasn't sure it was necessary for us to be in, so Bunny had to retell the arguments he heard from the orators at school. There were lively times at the Rascum cabin—because, strange as it may seem, Ruth was taking exactly the same attitude to the war as Grandma, whom Ruth had never met. Ruth declared that all wars were wicked, and she would never have anything to do with one. But of course you could see what she really meant, she didn't want Paul taken away and killed! When Paul read his number in the first draft-list, Ruth became quite frantic, and there was nothing that would pacify her. She clung to Paul, vowing he should not go, she would die of grief if he did; when she realized that he was actually going, she went about her work, pale and silent.

Paul went away to a training-camp, and after that paleness and silence became the dominant notes of Ruth's character. She went back to her father's home to stay at night, which meant that on Sunday's she had to go to church with them, and sit and bite her lips while Eli preached. For Eli was a prophet after the old testament model, calling down judgment upon the enemies of the Lord, smiting them hip and thigh, leaving not one alive, not even the little ones, the "spawns of the devil." Eli, being a preacher, did not have to do this killing himself; he was exempt, and so was his sister Meelie who solved the war problem for herself by marrying a young derrick man and getting Dad to make him a foreman and have him kept at home. Meelie, who was a chatter-box and a fresh young thing, said to Bunny that Ruth ought to find herself a husband instead of mourning over Paul; maybe the day would come when Bunny would want to be exempted and they might both solve the problem at the same time!

V

That was a fourth summer in Bunny's life, between the war and his raptures with Eunice. He spent a great deal of time at Beach City, because he had the excuse of the military work, and because the girl was so imperious in her demands. Indeed the first rift in their happiness came because he would persist in paying visits to Paradise, where Eunice could not very well come. She took up Bertie's phrase that Bunny was a "little off gnome." "What do you want with so much money?" she would argue. "My God, let me get some from Papa, if you need it!" Tommy Hoyt, of course, had made a huge killing, buying old hulks down at the harbor just before the country entered the war; it was reported he had cleared a cool three million. There had been a lot about it in the papers—all very complimentary since that was everybody's dream of glory.

How could Bunny explain that it wasn't the money, but the fact that the country had to have oil, and he wanted to do his share; what kind of preternatural solemnity was that for a youth of eighteen? He put the blame on Dad, who wasn't very well and needed his son; and so it became an issue, which did Bunny care for most, his Dad or his sweetheart? Eunice would grab him by the shoulders and shake him; she had to have someone to take her to a dance, and if he went off and buried himself in the desert she would get another fellow.

She was insatiable, ravenous for pleasure; she never knew when to stop, what more it might be. "One dance more! Just one!" she would plead; and then it would be one kiss more, or one drink. She was always pleading with Bunny to drink, and having her feelings hurt because he refused. How could he count his promise to his father more than his promise to be her pal? And, how could she take him out with her crowd if he played the part of a skeleton at a feast?

Not for long was she content to lose themselves in the sand-dunes, and share their secret with the moon. Eunice loved the bright lights, the free and conspicuous spending of Papa's sudden wealth. They would drive to Angel City where in fashionable hotels were palatial dining-rooms, with jazz-orchestras, and crowds of revellers, celebrating new contracts and new financial coups. The rooms were decorated with flags of all the allies, and the men wore the uniforms of all the services. This was what the war meant to Eunice, to be in this shining company, and stand up while the orchestra played the "Star Spangled Banner," and after that to dance all night while it played, "Kiss me, honey-baby," or "Toodle-ums too," or whatever amorous quietness the saxophone might present. She was an aggressive little dancer clinging to her partner, her body fitted into his as if it had been moulded there. Bunny would not have thought it quite decent to behave like that in public, but it was the mood of the time, and no one paid any attention to them, especially after the hours had passed and the drinks had taken effect.

U. S. GOVERNMENT PRINTS ATTACK AGAINST COMPENSATION LAW FOR INJURED WORKERS OF AUSTRALIA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15. — In the United States Daily for Sept. 7, appeared the first instalment, three columns long, of a hostile report on the new workmen's compensation law of New South Wales. This report, quoting the statute enacted by the labor government of that Australian state, emphasizes the claims made by business men and conservative politicians that it will be a heavy burden upon industry. The report comes from the American in Sydney, and was given out by the state department.

Employers Oppose Laws.

The labor government in New South Wales has adopted a forty-four hour act, against which the employers raised a similar outcry, and on July 1 its second measure, which provides government insurance, paid for by the employers, against industrial accidents and industrial diseases, took effect. A refusal by the private insurance companies to write the insurance caused the government to undertake that job at the last moment.

Under the new law, an injured worker, in case of total or partial incapacity, will be paid two-thirds of his weekly earnings, but not more than $15 nor less than $10 a week. In addition, if he is married his wife will get $5 a week, and for each child he will get $2 a week. He will also be provided with medical and surgical attendance, to an amount not more than $250. If a worker is killed while on the way to work, his dependents will collect compensation as tho he had been killed while at work.

U. S. Government Fights Labor.

The state department "information" which it has lately made public says that "certain labor elements" backed this measure and the 44-hour law in order to gain improved conditions "whatever the toll that such legislation might exact." It predicts that the workers will now suffer unemployment because employers cannot pay the insurance rates.

Birds of a Feather Flock Together in the Coal Miners' Union

William Sneed, republican state senator from Herrin, supporter of John L. Lewis and until a day or two ago a candidate for president of the Illinois district of the United Mine Workers of America on a "purity" platform following the exposure of Farrington as a paid tool of the Peabody Coal company, has made peace with Harry Fishwick, Farrington supporter, and will become his running mate as vice-presidential candidate on the same slate instead of opposing this outstanding defender of the $25,000 per year standpigeon of the coal operators.

As the close confidant and brother in arms of Farrington in his expulsion campaign directed against the most militant elements in the union, Fishwick is just as guilty as Farrington altho probably less well paid.

The Lewis administration knows this and the united front between Sneed and Fishwick is proof that Lewis is accepting support from the operator-debauched district machinery of the Illinois union. It means that Lewis and Farrington are rivals for the favor of the operators and that Farrington having been exposed first, Lewis takes up his connections and henchmen in his war on the membership.

Lewis is as deep in the mud as Farrington is in the mire and the Sneed-Fishwick combination, containing all the Farrington gang with the exception of Farrington himself, represents the same coal operators' influences in a slightly new guise.

It is significant that Sneed, speaking on Labor Day to a picnic held by the miners' union of West Frankfort and vicinity, never mentioned Farrington by name or made other than a passing reference to one of the most important developments of years in the trade union movement. The united front with the Farrington machine was already in prospect.

The struggle of the membership of the union, represented by the opposition to Lewis headed by John Brophy, to clean out the corruptionists has forced all the shady elements into one camp. In Illinois this membership revolt with its program for building the union is headed by Joseph Tumulty and around Tumulty will rally every section of the Illinois membership that has not been completely corrupted by the Lewis-Farrington machine which has ruled and which still rules the union in the interest of the coal operators.

Chinese Nationalist Successes

Reports of a mutiny among the troops of Chang Tso-lin before Kalgan, where the Kuomintchun army has occupied strong positions, and the wholesale slaughter of revolting soldiers by machine-gun detachments are added confirmation of the news from China which indicate a growing demoralization of the anti nationalist forces and the rapid weakening of the imperialist grip on the country.

The northward and westward march of the southern revolutionary armies has surprised the military experts of the imperialist nations. The revolutionary armies are sweeping the Yang-tze valley clean of Wu Pei-fu's forces. There seems little doubt but that his army has been annihilated in the military sense and no longer represents an effective fighting force. Some of his former generals may offer resistance for a while, but the capture of Hankow, "the Pittsburgh of China," and the capture of the Hanyang arsenal, together with the collapse of Wu Pei-fu's forces, are evidence that the southern armies of national liberation probably will encounter little difficulty in moving north on Peking along the Hankow-Peking rail way.

A movement on Peking likewise can be expected now on the Kuomintchun northern army and Chang Tso-lin, threatened on two sides by nationalist armies whose morale because of the recent victories is of the highest, while that of his own troops is sinking under the handicap of his Japanese backing and terrific losses in the field, will probably have to withdraw again into Manchuria.

The political situation is favorable for the Chinese nationalist movement. The successes of the southern armies in the Yang-tze valley have weakened the British base there and given new hope and courage to the workers and peasants in the interior.

Armed intervention by Britain on a scale large enough to offer hopes of success, would serve merely to further solidify the Chinese masses. Armed intervention in conjunction with America and Japan would probably check temporarily the progress of the armies of national liberation, but the conflicts between these three nations are of too serious a nature to make this possible at present.

It is possible that Great Britain may undertake to dispatch large forces to China, but it is hardly possible for these to prevent the establishment of a militant nationalist government in Peking. Once this is done the cancellation of the existing unequal treaties with the imperialist nations will be a matter of a short time.

American imperialism is trying to remain on friendly terms with the nationalist movement in order to have the advantage of Britain and Japan if the nationalist movement is completely victorious.

The Soviet Union will undoubtedly negotiate an offensive and defensive alliance with the new Chinese government and the struggle will then become one of the rising peoples of the East, allied with the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union, against world imperialism.

Such is the present Chinese situation and the immediate possibilities as the result of the series of recent brilliant victories by the nationalist armies.

The Truth About Fascism In Italy

An interview with Luigi Candela, secretary of the Chicago branch of the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America.

The latest attempt to rid Italy of he fascist dictator Benito Mussolini has revived working class interest in asclism and particularly with the result of the black shirt reign since the eventful march on Rome in November 1922.

That the great majority of tha Italian workers and peasants are opposed to the fascist regime is beyond question but they are held down by fascist bayonets and able to make their voices felt only with the greatest difficulty.

Bourgeois writers who visit Italy are continually writing glowing accounts of the fascist regime and eloquently lying about the economic conditions of that country and the "peace" that prevails there.

Getting Tha Facts.

With the object of getting the facts of the situation before its readers The DAILY WORKER sought an interview with L. Candela, an italian-born worker, secretary of the Chicago branch, of the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America and as an authority on the fascist movement in Italy.

The first question asked of L. Candela was:

"What is the internal composition of the fascist party?"

"It is a heterogeneous body from the point of view of the social groups that have formed the party," he replied. "The workers represent from 15 to 20 per cent. There are small merchants and middle-class elements which form the greatest percentage. Another group is composed of the industrial and financial lords. Altho this group is in a minority it is the real dominant factor in the party today. In the beginning the fascist party was dominanted by the middle class elements. After the march on Rome the conservative elements, grouped around the Giolitti group, joined the fascist party and since then the internal policy of the party was directed to giving full power to the industrial and financial group—the owners of heavy industry and the big agrarians. The political figure of this group is Hon. Federzoni, member of Mussolini cabinet."

Weak in The South.

"In the southern part of Italy the fascist party is very weak. But it governs by means of prefects. The members of the fascist party here are either state employes or aristocrats. The bourgeoisie in this party of the country is not united. There is no unity politically or economically.

"Who are the real rulers of the fascist party?" was the next question.

Ruled By Government.

Candela declared that the fascist party was governed thru government ministers and prefects." He said. "There are rules which prohibit the members to discuss any political question. All the activities of the fascist members are directed towards orgsoizing social affairs and entertainments for the benefit of the fascist leaders. Members of the party are never allowed to discuss proposed laws, in fact their first acquaintance with a new law comes from publishing about it in the paper. There is much dissatisfaction among the members because of the pressure of the big industrial and finance capitalists who dominate the organization."

New Fascist Decrees.

"What are the new laws that have been recently passed or decreed by the fascist government, and how did the masses receive them," Candela was asked.

"The principal decrees issued lately were the abolition of parliament, the substitution of workers' trade unions by fascist corporations in which the workers and employers are supposed to collaborate with the help of the government. The nine-hour law which was forced on the workers without an increase in wages and the detested podesta system thru which government officials are appointed from the center at Rome, and which has stripped the masses of every vestige of elective power in the hands of them. The latest measures regulate the production of bread, the closing of dance halls in working class districts, and prohibition of vacations. All those drastic decrees give the lie to the fascist boast that Mussolini is solving the economic crisis in Italy.

Workers Are Indignant.

"The workers have not received those laws with pleasure contrary to fascist publicity" Candela declared. "On the contrary they were received with indignation by the workers, farmers, middle class elements and peasants. Fascism is exerting every nerve to keep internal dissension secret but I am in a position to give the facts of the real situation."

Candela then produced several typewritten, mimeographed and printed documents issued by peasant and workers' organizations in various parts of Italy, which prove that the masses are not lying down and meek by submitting to the reign of terror.

Called For Revolt.

One document was a ringing appeal issued by the Peasants Federation of the region of Veneto, calling on the peasants to revolt against the podesth law. The appeal stated that the peasants wanted the old established right to elect their own public officials.

In all the shops of Turin, the industrial heart of Italy, a very remarkable statement was distributed in tens of thousands among the factory workers in defiance of the fascist terror.

"Wages are very low," it reads, "the cost of living has gone up and the government has taken away our democratic political rights and is piling more taxes on us. Why does not the government strike at the profiteers who are reaping fortunes without working? Why does not the government appropriate the swollen incomes of the big industrial and agrarian lords, they have amassed those late years? The reports of the industrial companies show that they have earned approximately 50 per cent on their investments, yet the government does not touch them."

Active Defense Waged.

Continuing to draw a terrible indictment of the Mussolini regime the statement urges the workers to "gather their strength and regain their courage and then begin an active defense against this exploitation and tyrant autocracy."

In the factories of Milan a leaflet has been distributed among the workers which states that there is no work now for all the workers, yet the fascist government is imposing a nine-hour day for eight hours pay to help the big industrial exploiters. How the fascist government has lowered the fascist standard of living is shown as follows:

Wages Reduced.

1.—Since the march on Rome (November 1922) real wages have been reduced 25 per cent.

2.—During the same period the cost of living has increased in Milan 32 per cent.

3.—The necessities of life have been hit by an enormous tariff on imports, which has raised the price of bread 50 centesimi per kilogram and sugar 1 lira and 40 centesimi per kilogram.

4.—The laws that protected the town tenents were abolished, leaving the tenants now free to be fleced by the landlords.

The Peace of Oasth.

"According to capitalist correspondents there is no political excitement in Italy and law and order prevails. How do those reports square with your knowledge of the situation?" Candela was asked.

"This is my reply," he declared, extracting a hulky mimeographed bundle of papers from his pocket. Despite the fascist censorship an Italian labor defense organization was able to get the information to the foes of fascism in the United States. This is the story told by the documents:

Here is The Record.

During the month of June 1926 the record of violence was as follows:

|---|---|
| Killed in political clashes | 5 |
| Three were fascists. | |
| Wounded in political clashes | 34 |
| Sixteen were fascists. | |
| Political assaults | 41 |
| Political arrests | 233 |
| Three were fascists. | |
| Sentenced for political offenses | 50 |
| One was a fascist. | |
| Political searching | 158 |
| Confiscation of papers | 23 |
| Organizations dissolved | 5 |
| Workers' demonstrations | 2 |

The month of July the following is the picture:

|---|---|
| Political assaults | 15 |
| Political arrests | 311 |
| Political searching | 91 |
| Political sentences | 32 |
| Newspapers confiscated | 13 |

"This is the kind of law and order that prevails under the rule of fascism in Italy" commented Candela.

"What is the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America and what is its program for helping the Italian people rid themselves of fascism?" was the final question.

To this Candela replied:

"The Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America is a united front organization formed among various anti-fascist organizations in America with the purpose of preventing any development of fascism among four million Italians in this country and to prevent fascist influence on the American government and to help in every way possible to weaken the fascist in Italy. At various times the fascist regime was in the throes of a great economic crisis which would mean its end, had it not been for the assistance rendered by the American government.

On Verge Of Collapse.

"The American government funded the Italian war debt at a time when the fascist government was on the verge of collapse. The debt settlement was followed by a $100,000,000 loan from the House of Morgan with the approval of the government. This loan saved fascism for the time being. Without doubt new loans will be sought by fascism in the future.

"The chief aim of the Anti-Fascist Alliance is to rally the American and Italian workers around its agitation and to prevent the help of the big industrial interests of America to fascism in Italy.

Sent Fascist Agents.

"There have been cases in the past where the Italian government has sent fascist emissaries to this country to build fascist branches and persecute anti-fascist workers. They also succeeded with the support of fascist branches in America and by means of delective agencies, under the direction of a discharged police sergeant, to kidnap two political refugees in New York. A friendly judge helped them in taking steps towards their deportation. Thanks to tha energetic intervention of the Anti-Fascist Alliance, this was prevented. But there are lesds of thousands of Italian refugees in America who have escaped from the fascist persecution and there are signs that fascism will influence the American authorities to send them back to Italy. It is the purpose of the Anti-Fascist Alliance to prevent any abuse of this kind.

"What is your opinion of the attempt on Mussolini's life?

Candela replied: "Several times Mussolini has organized fake attempts on his life in order to increase his prestige before the Italian people. But there were times when real attempts were made. Those attempts give the lie to the fascist boasts that everything is peaceful and quiet in Italy. The italian people hate fascism and in my opinion the last incident will not add to the prestige of Mussolini, chief investigator of all the political murders committed by the black shirts since they got to power.

"Mussolini's restrictive laws to crush organized labor have not succeeded. The Italian Federation of Labor and the Peasants' Federation still exist and together with workers and liberal political parties still exert great influence over the italian masses.

"On the contrary, due to the pressure of fascism, those organizations are uniting under various anti-fascist slogans into one great united front body, and are offering serious resistance to the fascist measures. During the past three months, several strikes and riots have been registered in Italy."

UNDER WHICH FLAG?

By ROBERT MacDONALD.

My enthusiasm was keen, and I was impatient to see my first labor demonstration in America. The news of the Passaic textile strike has spread all over the world, and last spring even the English capitalist papers gave accounts and photographs of the sturdy resistance of the strikers against police clubs, fire hose and tear gas. Surely such workers would be class-conscious and disciplined!

Last Saturday a huge parade was planned to welcome the strikers, now Loom 1603, U. T. W. of A., into the ranks of the A. F. of L. Down the street we could hear a band playing, and with the sound for a guide, soon found the parade. But was it the parade? Or a belated Fourth of July celebration?

The leader carried a huge American flag! Behind him, other men dressed in their Sunday best carried smaller flags, like guns, on their shoulders. I could not believe my eyes—the "Stars and Stripes" was everywhere. It was a labor parade, tho, for a sign said "Passaic Trades Council," and there followed other banners of A. F. of L. locals—mostly building trades. Not a placard bearing a militant slogan could I see. But the painters, decorators and paperhangers announced meekly, "We are backing the Strikers." I looked for some few red flags to offset the red, white and blue symbol of the boss class. Not one. Red roses in buttonholes? None.

In England (and everywhere else in Europe) the Red Flag is the workers' flag. The Union Jack is used only by the imperialists and the fascists.

At last came the strikers themselves, ten thousand strong: men, women and children. Even they carried some American flags, altho they did not predominate. But the spirit was different. Here was living proud defiance to the bosses. Here after seven long months of struggle against police, bosses, citizens' committees, judges, courts, cold and hunger, was a united, enthusiastic, disciplined body of workers. They sang "Solidarity" and "Hold the Fort." They cheered the union to the echo, and chanted militant ditties. Some kids carried a coffin which was marked "Company Union." There were signs like this: "The Boss' Family Spent Six Months in the Orient. Our Mothers Work Nights in the Mills;" "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness' For I's Means: Tuberculosis, Starvation and Misery." And many, many others.

Then I knew that there was new life in the American movement, and that some day, discarding the red, white and blue flag of the strikebreakers, the state militia, the police, Wall Street and the American Legion, the American workers will march forward under the Red Flag—the flag of international working-class solidarity in all countries.

Ernst Haeckel on "Last Words on Evolution"

By ERNST HAECKEL.

CHAPTER II.

THE STRUGGLE OVER OUR GENEALOGICAL TREE.

The reserve strictures that I have passed on the sophisms and trickery of this "ecclesiastical evolution" are not directed against the person and the character of Father Wasmann, but the Jesuitical system which he represents. I do not doubt that this able naturalist (who is personally unknown to me) has written his book in good faith, and has an honorable ambition to reconcile the irreconcilable contradictions between natural evolution and the story of supernatural creation. But this reconciliation of reason and supersitition is only possible at the price of a sacrifice of the reason itself. We find this in the case of all the other Jesuits. Fathers Cathrelo, Braun, Bessier, Cornet, Lioismeher, and Muckermann—whose ambitious "Jesuitical science" is aptly dealt with in the article of R. H. France that I mentioned before (No. 22 of the Frele Wort, 16th February, 1904. Freiburg i. Breisgau).

This interesting attempt of Father Wasmann's does not stand alone. Signs are multiplying that the church militant is about to enter on a systematic campaign. I heard from Vienna on the 13th of February that on the previous day (which happened to be my birthday) a Jesuit Father Giese, had, in a well-received address, admitted not only evolution in general, but even in its application to man, and declared it to be reconcilable with catholic dogmas—and this at a crowded meeting of "catechists"! It is important to note that in a new catholic encyclopaedia Bonifacius "Library of Science," the first three volumes issued at Einsiedeln and Cologne, 1903) deal very fully and ably with the chief problems of evolution, the first with the formation of the earth, the second with spontaneous generation, the third with the theory of descent. The author of them, Father M. Gander, makes many remarkable concessions to our theory, and endeavors to show that they are not inconsistent with the Bible or the dogmatic treatises of the chief fathers and schoolmen. But, tha there is a profuse expenditure of sophistical logic in these Jesuitical efforts, Gander will hardly succeed in misleading thoughtful people. One of his characteristic positions is that spontaneous generation is the development of organized living things by purely material processes is inconceivable, but that it might be made possible by "a special divine arrangement." In regard to the "gulf" of man from other animals (which he grants), he makes the reserve that the soul must in any case have been produced by a special act.

It would be useless to go thru the innumerable fallacies and untruths of these modern events in detail, and point out the falsehood and sophistic reply. The vast power of this most dangerous religious congregation consists precisely in its device of accepting one part of science in order to destroy the other part more effectively with it. Their masterly act of sophistry, their equivocal "probabilism," their mendacious "reservatio mentalis," the principle that the higher aim sanctifies the worst means, the pernicious casuistry of Liguori and Gury, the cynicism with which they turn the holiest principles to the gratification of their ambition, have impressed on the Jesuits that black characterial trait that has shown has so well exposed recently.

The great danger is that menace real science, owing to this unmasking into all of the Jesuit methods, cannot be undervalued. They have been well pointed out by France, Esclerich, and others. They are all the greater in Germany at the present time, as the government and the reichstag are working together to prepare the way for the Jesuits, and to yield most pernicious influence on it. We cannot say these deadly enemies of the free spirit of the country. However, we will hope that this clerical reaction represents only a passing episode in modern history. We trust that some permanent result of it will be the recognition, in principle, even by the Jesuits, of the great idea of evolution. We may close provisionally with its most important consequence, the descent of man from other primary forms, will press on victoriously, and soon be recognized as a beneficent and hopeful truth.

Employment Improves Says U. S. Labor Dept.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(FP)—Employment in bituminous mining, in textile manufactures and in the boot and shoe industry improved during August, says the monthly report of the U. S. Employment Service. The general volume of employment for the country at large is claimed to have been better in August than in July. A shortage of metal miners in Montana is reported.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

NOTHING quite as tame as the Streator convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor has taken place on this planet in the memory of the oldest inhabitants. It was so dull that reporters, some of them endowed with reasonable integrity, were at a loss what to put on the prines. Capitalist reporters don't bother with anything that is not sensational, but a wide-awake labor reporter would find plenty of material for a first-class story on the Streator convention. What is not done is sometimes better news than what is done.

THE salaries of Walker and Olander were boosted to $7,500 a year. No mention was made of the salary of Frank Farrington to the Peabody Coal Company. The convention did not go on record for or against Frank L. Smith, republican candidate for senator; George E. Brennan, democratic candidate, or Farley Parker Christiansen, progressive. Lots of good writing could be gotten out of a situation like this, but the labor fakers have succeeded so well in wet-blanketing their powwows that the capitalist press does not take the trouble of sending reporters that can write and the radical press cannot afford the expense.

THE next conference of the All-Union Soviet Congress will be held next spring instead of this fall, as originally planned, according to a Moscow dispatch in the New York Times. The Times, quick to draw a conclusion unfavorable to the Soviet regime, immediately attributes the postponement to dissatisfaction on the part of the peasantry with the policies of the government. No intelligent person will try to prove that Soviet elections are infallible, but every reasonably impartial visitor to Russia will admit that it will take a lot of blundering on the part of the workers' and peasants' government to convince the emancipated Russian people that they should return to the czarist system.

THE Mexicans have a liberty bell, which they ring once a year on the anniversary of the summoning of the Indians of the state of Guanajuato to the revolt which resulted in the expulsion of Spanish rule from Mexico. The signal for the revolt against Spain was given by a Spanish priest who was executed for his trouble by the Spaniards. Today the Mexican clergy are doing their level best to undo the work of that rebel priest. Here we have the spectacle of President Calles, denounced as a "christhater" by the catholics, honoring the memory of a rebel priest while the hierarchy is engaged in fostering counter-revolutions in their attempt to wreck an administration that is trying to educate the Mexican people.

THERE is an article in number 22 of the Communist International which should receive the attention of every revolutionary worker in the United States. It is an appraisal of James Connolly, the leader of the Irish revolt in 1916, and one of the outstanding Marxists of his time. The writer of the article quotes liberally from Connolly's great work, "Labor in Irish History," to prove that the Irish revolutionists had the Leninist conception of the role of the national struggle in the fight against imperialism.

CONNOLLY saw the value of mobilizing all the forces of discontent against the British empire. Because of this attitude imperialistic British "socialists" branded Connolly as a nationalist, while they went on their way, either hailing the war as a struggle against German militarism or giving expression to their irritation over an unpleasant situation by becoming conscientious objectors.

IT is well that Connolly's great contribution to the working class movement is receiving some attention Connolly has been misunderstood. Many comrades have mistaken his elastic fighting strategy for opportunism. Connolly was no dogmatist, except on the main point. He based his strategy on the fundamental proposition that the struggle for Irish freedom from foreign rule must be coupled with the fight for emancipation from capitalism and that in this struggle the workers must have the lead. The writer of the article in the Communist International, official organ of the comintern, urges the publication of "Labor in Irish History" in German and Russian. Now that such an authoritive publication has dealt thus seriously with Connolly it is likely that some American radicals who have hitherto ignored his work will get on the band wagon and toot.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 20.—Gen. Obregon has arrived safely at his home in Cajema and is not in the field fighting the Yaqui Indians, as had been reported here, according to Gen. Under-secretary of war.

LEAGUE PLOTS NEW WAR UPON SOVIET UNION

"Peace" in West May Mean War in East

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Sept. 20. — A new indication of the intention of great imperialist powers controlling the league of nations to solidify themselves for another effort to destroy the Soviet Union by armed intervention is seen in the proposal, backed by the U. S. delegation to the preparatory "disarmament" committee, to be introduced by the Finnish delegation to the seventh assembly of the league.

The scheme was proposed by Foreign Minister Hoisti of the white guard Finnish government, and will be brought before the league's council committee Wednesday, after which it may go before the assembly.

League Is To Judge.

The scheme provides that unlimited financial assistance should be furnished any nation, member of the league, which is "attacked" by another country, with a concurrent shutting off of all financial assistance and supplies from the "aggressor." The league of nations, which has proven its complete subservience to the exploiting interests of the big imperialist powers, is, of course, to do the deciding as to who is "attacked" and who is the "aggressor."

The crux of the proposal is that it follows the policy of the "peace of Locarno"—a peace based upon an attempt to quiet the rivalries and hostilities between the various capitalist powers, but only that a united front between them be made against the Soviet Union, whose progressive successes in building up its economic is becoming a strong incitement to the workers of western Europe to follow the example of the Russian workers.

"For instance—Russia"

This is as much as admitted by a capitalist spokesman for the league, who has this following to say about the practical working out of this proposal for "peace" submitted by white guard Finland:

"For instance, if Poland should be attacked by Russia, the members of the league would advance financial credits which would enable Poland to buy unlimited supplies of munitions, cannon, and airplanes from Germany, England, France or any other accessible market."

Poland A War Camp.

When it is understood that Poland is a virtual fascist dictatorship, with Pilsudski holding down the workers only by the most brutal persecution, jailing thousands, dissolving the trade unions, openly preparing for war against both the Soviet Union and Lithuania, and acknowledged by every observer as provoking war under the orders of England and with the aid of the United States, the proposal of the Finnish white guard government, an ally of Poland, can be seen in its truly sinister aspects.

This may be also seen in Poland's treaty signed last week with Yugo-Slavia. But another sign of the "peace" among the capitalist powers is shown in the full admission of Germany into the league council and the rapprochement between Germany and France, signalized at a secret meeting last week between Stresemann, German foreign minister, and Briand, foreign minister of France at the Swiss village of Thoiry.

Germany No Longer "Enemy."

There is no news of what was discussed. Only the semi-official Temps says that all has been said that the public needs to know. The assorption of Germany into the imperialist schemes of the league powers can be seen fully as creating a new threat of war against the Soviet Union.

Church Punctures New Economic Heaven Myth

WASHINGTON — (FP) — Employe ownership of stock in American industrial corporations is too slight in amount to have any effect on the social policy of the management, says a press bulletin of the social action department, Natl. Catholic Welfare conference.

"In some industries employe ownership is practically nil," it declares. "In the gas industry less than 1-10 of 1% of the common stockholders are employes of the industry and they own 4-10 of 1% of the stock. 3-10 of 1% of the preferred stockholders are employes and they own less than 1-10 of 1% of the stock."

"All this goes to show," concludes the bulletin, "how steep a road American labor must travel to reach the goal where the working people will share proportionately in the ownership of industry. It punctures the myth that has been carefully blown in the United States. American industry is not on the high road towards democratization through diffusion of stock ownership."

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Sept. 20.—Apathetic disregard of the pacifist problem will avantually leave the United States an unprepared giant at the mercy of any armed and ambitious nation, says Paul V. McNutt, commander of the Indiana department of the American Legion.

McNutt has made the combating of pacifism one of the major objectives of his administration of the Indiana Legionnaires.

"Most of us assimilate propaganda designed to destroy our army and navy without realizing it," the commander declares. "There are pamphlets and magazines carrying pleas for reduction of armament because of the costs that really are pacifistic in intent."

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 20.—The appointment of William J. Sneed to the vice-presidency of the Illinois Miners' Union, by Harry Fishwick, president, by virtue of Farrington's contract with the Peabody Coal company, straightens out a troublesome jam in the ranks of the reactionary officialdom of the district organization.

John L. Lewis is mainly responsible for the peace treaty. Responsibility is shared by the coal operators who have brought their influence to bear indirectly in favor of peace between Sneed and Fishwick, lest Joseph Tumulty, the progressive candidate should win out in a three cornered contest. As a matter of fact, even as the situation stands now, nothing remains between Tumulty and victory except faulty organization. ## DEAD AND DISCOURAGED BANDITS LEAVE YANKEE TOURISTS ENJOY TRIPS

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 20.—Undeterred By the banditry on the highway to Cuernavaca which resulted in the murder of the American, Jacob Rosenthal, a week ago yesterday, the foreigners in this city made their usual week-end trips to the near-by resorts. The near-by regions now are safe, being well covered by soldiers searching for outlaws. Officials believe that most of the bandits responsible for the latest outrage have been killed.

HUNDREDS DEAD IN WAKE OF BIG FLORIDA WIND

Millionaire Playground Wiped Out

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Sept. 20.—Roaring out of the southeast, the West Indian hurricane that left a grisly trail of death and destruction in Florida continued with undiminished vigor today and at noon had struck the gulf coast with a paralyzing blow.

A wind of a velocity estimated by meteorologists at 100 miles an hour swept up and out of stricken Florida and in an hour had cut off Mobile and Pensacola from outside communication. In the wake it left ruined buildings, stricken ships and death.

At noon, more than 24 hours after the hurricane struck America's playground along the southeast Florida coast, only a general estimate of the appalling damage wrought in Florida could be obtained.

A Scores of Places Hit.

The cities of Miami, Miami Beach, Hollywood, Coral Gables and a dozen other winter communities were still cut off from communication, while special relief trains, airplanes and automobiles sped toward the area with badly-needed supplies.

The death list is variously estimated at from 500 to 1,000, and those who attempted to check up the disaster admitted it may be several days before anything like an accurate count is possible.

Buildings Raised.

Property damage is so enormous that relief agencies and eye-witnesses

CANTON ARMY SWEEPING ON TO SHANGHAI

Feng's Forces Ready to Drive Southward

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, Sept. 20.—Forerunners of victory for the national revolution against foreign imperialism and its native militarist tools are seen in the further retreat of Wu Pei-fu to a point north of Yellow River in the province of Honan, and the rallying to a fresh offensive against Chang Tso-lin of the Kuominchun army of Feng Yu-hsiang northwest of Peking.

Drive for Shanghai.

At the same time, the most immediate important development is the drive of the Cantonese down the Yangtze eastward toward Shanghai, the next great city of China at whose entrance from Sun Chuan-fang, native militarist tool of foreign imperialists, the Cantonese are aiming.

The walled city of Wuchang, on the south bank of the river, enveloped by the Cantonese when Hankow was captured, is still under siege, with Wu's troops certain to be forced to ultimate surrender, while the next scene of a battle between the Cantonese and the troops of Sun Chuan-fang is expected at Kiukiang.

Treason Deserters Reactionaries.

The desertions of Wu Pei-fu's troops continues to such a degree that it is doubtful if he can recover any of the ground he has lost, altho troops are leaving Peking to reinforce him. But if these also desert at the moment they engage the Cantonese, as others have done, even this present ally, Chang Tso-lin, may lose interest in bothering to save Wu from his fate.

Two National Armies to Unite.

While Feng has also suffered severe losses by desertions, and there is a clear possibility that the Kuominchun commanded by Feng may march south, make peace and continue until a juncture is formed with the Cantonese marching northward.

The result of this inner unity of nationalist forces would be a tremendous strengthening of the Cantonese government and a sweeping advance from Mid-China outward to drive the militarists and imperialist intervention forces into the sea.

FRANCE STIRRED AT FASCIST MOB WAR ON CONSULS

PARIS, Sept. 20. — Serious complications may follow the confirmation of news reports from Italy that fascist violence against foreigners has taken the form of black shirt attacks on French consuls, particularly the consul at Florence, where it is reported that a black mob stoned the French consul's home and attempted to set fire to it.

Violence Starts Retaliation.

Fascist attacks on the French in Italy have been extremely violent, and have resulted in a counter-demonstration in Corsica. Anti-fascists in this French island mobbed the fascist consulate and forced the consul to raise the French flag beside the Italian banner, also compelling Italian boats in the harbor to raise the French flag. This is retaliation for similar action by Italians.

Beat U. S. Vice-Consul.

Other attacks in Rome of foreigners include the beating up by black shirts of a Frenchman, an American vice-consul, who is said to have been set upon and beaten into unconsciousness and left on the street by a gang.

KEEP THE DAILY WORKER!

By WM. Z. FOSTER

The DAILY WORKER is our party's greatest single weapon in the class struggle. It is the sole English daily paper defending the interests of the workers. To build it and to strengthen it in every way is a central task of our party.

Since The DAILY WORKER was established, almost three years ago, it has led a militant fight against the employers and against their agents, the trade union bureaucracy. Despite every obstacle and a systematic campaign of persecution, it has made effective warfare against class collaboration and against corruption in the unions. It has been an unflinching fighter for the labor party, for the organization of the unorganized, for amalgamation, and for the whole left wing program necessary to build the trade unions into a movement with real power and fighting spirit. By employers and reactionary bureaucrats it is the most hated of all publications, which is its best recommendations.

Although The DAILY WORKER has already a splendid record of achievement, its usefulness is just beginning. The trade union bureaucracy is moving every more to the right. The employers are placing increased pressure upon the workers. Great fights loom ahead. In the mobilization of the masses against the double enemy of employers and reactionary labor leaders, The DAILY WORKER will play a central part. But in order to fulfill its mission, it must be made into a high class Communist paper with a wide circulation among the masse.

The history of labor papers that make a real battle against the employers, is a history of struggle and sacrifice, of loyal support by unstinting comrades. The DAILY WORKER is no exception. The party has had to make the most strenuous efforts to keep it in the field. At times the issue has seemed doubtful, so deep was the crisis. But always the readers and supporters of the paper, realizing its tremendous value in every phase of the class struggle, have rallied and pulled it through. Now it will be necessary to make another big effort. The DAILY WORKER needs assistance. This must be given quickly and in the fullest measure.

The slogan "Keep The DAILY WORKER" must be raised in every unit of our party and in every organization where the left wing has a following. To translate it into reality by the collection of funds and by the general building of the paper must be made a first order of business. All hands to the task! Every effort must be expended to strengthen The DAILY WORKER

GITLOW CALLS FOR DEFIANCE OF INJUNCTION

Accuses Gov. Smith of Strike-Breaking

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—In a statement issued by Benjamin Gitlow, candidate for governor of New York state on the Workers (Communist) Party ticket, he condemns the injunction obtained by the Industrial Council of Manufacturers against the striking clothing workers as an attempt to compel the workers to submit to compulsory arbitration, characterizing compulsory arbitration as compulsory slavery.

Smith Behind Injunction

Gitlow declared that Governor Smith is behind this injunction. Of how recalled in the statement that the governor declared that if the negotiations between the manufacturers and the cloakmakers failed "he expected that the cloakmakers would submit to arbitration." Following the negotiations, the manufacturers lost no time in at once calling upon the governor for action in line with this threat.

The One Way to Fight.

Benjamin Gitlow further declared that there is only one thing for the workers to do in case of injunctions, and that is to continue their picketing and ignore the use of this weapon which has been condemned by the entire labor movement as a use of the court as a strike-breaking agency.

Meeting Sunday.

Gitlow will speak on September 26 at the opening of the campaign to be held at Central Opera House, Friday evening. His main address will be devoted to the use of the injunction and violence against the workers and suppression of free speech. The other speakers will be William F. Dunne, candidate for United States senator; Juliet Stuart Poyntz, candidate for state comptroller, William W. Weinstone, candidate for congress in the 20th District; Ben Gold, manager of the joint board of the Furriers' Union; Jack Stachel, chairman.

Dupes of Pope Suffer for Excessive Piety

(Special to The Daily Worker)

EL PASO, Tex., Sept. 20. — Federal troops have defeated the main body of rebellious Yaqui Indians in Mexico and are driving them out of the valley, General Alvaro Obregon, former president of Mexico, telegraphed Enrique Llekens, Mexican consul-general here today.

General Obregon who has been reported wounded, missing and dead for the last several days, advised that he was unharmed in skirmishes with the Indians. He was at his plantation camp at Cajeme, seeing to the Yaqui Delia.

General Francisco Manzos and his troops of federals are forcing the Yaquis to retreat, Obregon said. At Corral Junction the Indians carried off the Mexican telegraph operator, Manuel Encinal, after destroying the wires.

MACHTMAN AIDS MILSTEIN KEEP CONTROL

Local 45 Progressives Get Valuable Letter

Just extant to which Business Agent Millstein of Local 45, Chicago, Fur Workers' Union, and General President O. Schachtman of the International, heve conspired to steal the election in Chicago is exposed in the letter printed below which came into the possession of the Chicago progressives thru Millstein's carelessness.

The letter follow in full:

"Long Island, N. Y. Aug. 27, '26

"Mr. J. Milstein,
"166 W. Washington St.,
"Chicago, Ill.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"In reply to your communication of August 26th, I wish to say that I was under the impression that the $5,000 was received from the Forwards. You will release your $2,000 and also Ida's and the remaining $1,000, and whatever comes in from the initiation fees and so forth will be used to pay up the debts.

"Will Give No More Money.

"I cannot understand what you have done with the money. Do not expect any more money from this office. You had better take care of that in the way outlined above.

"You did not answer me one of the most important questions that I was interested in and that is, how many shops are not accepting their people, objecting to the new agreement. How many people does it involve and how many people have you placed in other shops. What chances have they to replace our workers with scabs. I am greatly concerned about this problem which threatens to become serious if not checked. Please, give the best attention you can and let me know how it stands.

Pick Business Agent.

"I have read in the press about the famous meeting and I think you have done good work. However, of the future I still am of the opinion that your brother has the best opportunity and in my opinion the qualities to continue the work successfully for a short time at least. Of course, if he absolutely refused, it seems to me that you will have to run. I think with the explanation of the terms of the Chicago Agreement in the press of Fur Worker, even those who are not satisfied will see the right light and change their mind.

"Of course, it requires a good deal of labor to adjust everything to normal and to quiet down in the proper manner.

"Have you called any local meetings and when is your next meeting.

To Aid Millstein.

"If you should find it advisable wire to me and I will send a credential to Brother Greiner to come there for a day to help you.

"Trusting to hear from you soon, I am

"Fraternally yours,
"(Signed) O. Schachtman,
"General President.

"P. S.—Give my best regards to the executive board officers."

Schachtman in his letter after giving Millstein advice as to who should run for business agent in Chicago offers to send Business Agent Gmeiner of St. Paul, Minn., to Chicago to help Millstein carry the elections. Gmeiner is known as one of the worst reaction aries in the union.

The elections in Local 45 are to be held Wednesday. A full ticket has been placed in the field by the progressives. Local 45 members should support the progressive candidates.

COOLIDGE SEEKS TO SAVE TYRANT FROM REBELLION

Stops Arms and Works for Compromise

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. —(FP)— President Coolidge has ordered that shipments of arms from the United States to Nicaragua be stopped and has thereby forced the liberals who are fighting to restore constitutional government to negotiate a compromise with Chamorro, military dictator and reactionary usurper of the government.

Evasive Support of Chamorro.

Latin-American diplomats in Washington believe that any compromise which does not restore the liberals to power will be considered in Central America as a palpable evasion by Coolidge of the American guaranty of support for elected governments there.

The Game Progresses.

Latest dispatches say that this game has progressed far enough so that the American chargo d'affaires, Lawrence Dennis, has arranged a conference, with the consent of dictator Chamorro, into which he hopes to inveigle the leaders of the national liberal party to consider a settlement.

Naturally, under the circumstances, this is plainly a protection of Chamorro from complete defeat at the hands of the revolutionists. That U. S. agent holds out the bait to those imprisoned by Chamorro of release in order to take part in the conference and arrive at "peace." Which means a compromise in aid of Chamorro.

May Not Fall into Trap.

It is not certain yet that the national liberal party will consent to fall into this trap. Communication is cut off with the liberal party leaders in the field. But Dennis is trying the trick and hopes to get the conference by Sept. 26.

The U. S. pretends, of course to be "neutral" and will arrange for the conference to be held on the "neutral" place on board a U. S. warship.

LEWIS PATCHES RIFT IN SNEED-FISHWICK LUTE

bel could win in a walk provided the votes are counted fairly.

The Illinois Miner.

There is a loading story on the front page of the Illinois Miner, official organ of the old Farrington machine, which proves that Farrington's deposition has not changed matters even slightly. In fact the removal of Farrington solidifies the Lewis machine in Illinois, as Fishwick and Lewis can open a new ledger in accord with the latest innovations in political bookkeeping, since Farrington's removal cancels the old debts.

Farrington's Role.

Fishwick is Farrington's man, or he was before the blow-out. The progressives believe he will be an faithful to the Peabody Coal company as Farrington was. With Farrington drawing $25,000 a year from the Peabodys and Fishwick on the Illinois Miners' Union payroll, the operators have no reason to regret the strategy that turned over the Farrington contract to John L. Lewis. All the official supporters of Lewis and Farrington believe in co-operation with the coal operators. Whether they "co-operate" on a straight salary or on a union salary with a commission from the operators does not make much difference to the coal diggers.

Two Machines Grind as One.

The outstanding fact of the situation in the Illinois Miners' Union just now is the Fishwick-Lewis alliance. To say that the Farrington and Lewis machines have united is no exaggeration.

The Illinois Miner publishes a statement from Lewis, Fishwick and Sneed. All three express pleasure with the turn of events, praise each other and say nothing about the issues that confront the miners. Lewis testifies to the whole-souled disinterestedness of Fishwick. Fishwick hands a bouquet to Sneed and Sneed declares that his withdrawal was determined in no small degree by his old friendship with Fishwick.

Whether the miners take it out in laughing at those flunkeys or whether they will organize their forces to elect Joseph Tumulty and the entire progressive ticket will not be known until the votes are counted next December.

RABBI SPEAKS TO U. T. W. IN LAST SESSION

Refutes MacMahon and Defends Weisbord

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 20. — (FP) — Inspiring praise for Albert Weisbord and the United Front Committee for their leadership of the Passaic textile strike thru long months of attack by the employers and their agents was voiced by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of this city in an address at the final session of the United Textile Workers' convention.

"That fight in Passaic stands out as the greatest labor demonstration in the textile industry's history," declared Rabbi Wise. "It is to be hoped that the United Textile Workers will carry on the struggle as militantly as it has been waged in the past."

He pointed out that success in Passaic was vital both to the U. T. W. and the A. F. of L., if the right to collective bargaining were established in Passaic. It would help greatly in organizing workers everywhere. He said that of his own knowledge the Passaic strikers had been consistently peaceful, and that the violence in that section was done by the police, acting in behalf of the employers.

Hollywood, which is about 100 miles south of here, is practically destroyed. The town was leveled by the storm, which started late Friday night and reached its highest intensity between 7:30 a. m. and 9:30 a. m. Saturday.

Martial law has been declared in Miami and Hollywood.

BABSON TALKS ON DEPRESSION AND WORKERS

Predicts Reaction from Present Boom

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

Most American people are living in a fool's paradise and may be rudely awakened at any time, Roger Babson, head of the Babson statistical organization, told the national business conference at Wellesley Hills. Babson was predicting the probability of two or three years of prosperity followed by depression and possibly panic.

Follow Expansion.

This depression, said Babson, will follow the overextension of the installment business which is now eating into business like a cancer. He mentioned as other causes for gloom the foreign situation and the fact that the manufacturing capacity of almost all industries exceeds the consuming power.

Labor Weak.

"Labor," Babson pointed out, "is today generally quiescent with the exception of a few desperate strikes. Owing to the failure of the railroad strike two years ago and of the recent coal strike both here and in England, union labor is fairly quiet.

The American Federation of Labor has lost membership and important labor leaders have left their jobs to enter private concerns. Notwithstanding these conditions, we must not think that any permanent change has taken place. The labor problem will always be with us and a nation would not be progressive if its people were satisfied with their lot."

Lame Ducks Hail Lenroot as Latest Rocky in Their Club

MILWAUKEE — (FP) — U. S. Sen. Irvine L. Lenroot has joined the distinguished Lame Ducks club by the Wisconsin senatorial primary vote of Sept. 7. The voters tumbled him over by a majority of about 25,000 votes for his rival, Gov. J. J. Blaine, who got over 215,000 votes.

Lenroot first sneaked into the senate a reactionary from a progressive state, when Sen Paul Husting killed himself in a hunting accident during the world war. He sneaked in again with the Harding landslide of 1920, but this year, with both the war and Harding dead, Lenroot was added, politically, to their number.

Lenroot was effectively assailed by the railroad unions for his reactionary labor attitude during his senate incumbency. They will have to stand some of him if Coolidge makes him a judge.

MONEY PIRATES POSSESS SELVES OF RICH BOOTY

Banker Toll Would Keep 300,000 Families

The huge toll taken by bankers from America's annual income is revealed in a report of the federal reserve board on the earnings of member banks for 1925. The report shows net profits totalling $1,619,484,000, a gain of $58,141,000 over the profits for 1924.

9 Per Cent Return.

This 1925 profit would have provided a living wage on a National Industrial Conference board basis to about 300,000 worker families, approximately 1,600,000 persons. It means a return of about 9 per cent on the $4,699,751,000 capital, surplus and undivided profits of these banks and of 20 per cent on the actual paid-in capital. The owners of these banks get back in profits a full fifth of their capital in a single year.

In 1925 these banks paid cash dividends totaling $272,686,000, representing a return of about 13 per cent on the total paid-in capital. The remaining $146,798,000 of the year's profits went to swell surpluses and undivided profits. The combined surpluses now total $1,760,076,000, about 38 per cent of the capital, while the undivided profits total $434,952,000 or 40 per cent of the capital. The two funds, amassed out of the excess profits of past years, combine to add 120 per cent to the investment of the owners.

New York Leads.

New York banks lead in the return on the combined capital, surplus and undivided profits of the owners, with 10.9 per cent in 1925 compared with 10.4 per cent in 1924. Philadelphia banks lead in the percentage of return on actual paid-in capital, the owners of banks in this district taking a 1925 return of 31 per cent."

GITLOW CALLS FOR DEFIANCE OF INJUNCTION

Workers' Union are mobilizing their membership to come en masse to the meeting. The following is the text of Gitlow's statement:

On the Injunction.

"The sweeping and unprecedented injunction issued by Justice Guy in favor of the Industrial Council of Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers against the striking cloakmakers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers is intended for only one purpose—to break the strike and rob the cloakmakers of the fruits of their struggle by compelling them to submit to compulsory arbitration.

Follows Arbitration Move.

"This injunction follows close on the heels of the threat of Governor Smith to the general strike committee of the cloakmakers that they are expected to submit to compulsory arbitration if the negotiations with the manufacturers fail. There can be no question that Governor Smith, who is being groomed for the presidency, is behind this injunction.

"It is his answer to the courageous stand of the cloakmakers in rejecting a method of settling the strike which means returning to work on the manufacturers' terms.

Aid to The Bosses.

"Compulsory arbitration means compulsory slavery, and injunctions go hand in hand with this method of prevent the workers from using their only power to win their just demands. Compulsory arbitration is intended to prevent the workers from using their economic power and injunctions to prevent picketing and strikes when workers resort to their economic power.

Keep on Picketing.

"The labor movement has quite emphatically declared that injunctions are unconstitutional and that workers must continue with their strikes and with picketing and destroy the effectiveness and defeat the injunction. The cloakmakers of New York City, now engaged in a bitter struggle for most elementary demands, must not be intimidated by injunctions and threats of compulsory arbitration.

Mass Strike Spurning Unpopular.

"If Coolidge rode into the White House by winning the favor of the capitalists of this country thru his strikebreaking activities in Boston, the workers of New York cannot allow Governor Smith to achieve his aspirations for the presidency by victimizing the thousands of striking cloakmakers of New York."

WEISBORD WILL TOUR NATION FOR WORKERS PARTY

Many Party Units Ask Speaking Dates

The organization department of the Workers (Communist) Party announces the beginning of a big party building and membership campaign. Albert Weisbord, the leader of the Passaic strike, now in its thirty-first week, will open the campaign with a series of mass meeting in the biggest industrial centers of the country from coast to coast.

Requests for speaking dates by Weisbord have been pouring in from cities in every section of the country.

Weisbord is planning to tell the workers what happened at Passaic, how it happened and why it all happened. There is no man in the country who can do this job as well as Weisbord who has played the leading role in this heroic struggle.

The trade union movement in this country has shown no more stubborn resistance to wage cuts and degrading conditions of employment than have those hitherto unorganized and by many believed-to-be unorganizable workers in the Passaic textile mills.

Special interest has been evinced in many sections of the labor movement as to the attitude and role of the Communists in strikes and particularly in the Passaic strike where the Communists have played a very important role. Weisbord will clear up many of the misconceptions and much of the misrepresentation which have been spread in the labor movement regarding the tactics of the Communists in strikes and trade union campaigns.

All party and other organizations which desire to arrange meetings to be addressed by Albert Weisbord should immediately communicate with the National Office of the Workers (Communist) Party. The arrangements for these meetings are the Workers Party National Office is to receive 60 per cent of the collection taken at the meetings addressed by him. A flat admission rate of only ten cents is to be charged by the locals of the Workers Party, trade unions and workers' societies so as to enable the workers thruout the country, especially the unorganized workers, to hear Weisbord tell the inside story of Passaic. Special arrangements are to be made for meetings arranged by trade unions and workers' societies.

ANGLO-RUSSIAN COMMITTEE ASKS TRADE UNION CONGRESS TO CALL AMSTERDAM TO UNITY CONFERENCE

MOSCOW, Sept. 4 — (By Mail).— The Central Council of Soviet Labor Unions has ratified upon the basis of the report of Comrade Andreyev, the following unity declaration which was unanimously adopted at the last session of the Anglo-Russian committee in Berlin:

The Berlin Resolution.

"In its 4th session in Berlin on the 3rd, 4th and 5th August 1926, the Anglo-Russian committee dealt with the international situation and the tasks of the working class. It unanimously agreed as to the necessity for definite steps towards the establishment of international trade union unity and for the creation of a united international of labor unions.

"The present session of the Anglo-Russian Committee expresses its regret that the attempt decided upon at the Berlin conference of the committee in December 1925 to establish international trade union unity by a conference between the Amsterdam international and the Central Council of Soviet labor unions, was unsuccessful on account of the attitude of Amsterdam which refused to meet the Russian unions without previous conditions.

British Must Act.

"Nevertheless, the Anglo-Russian Committee will continue its efforts to establish real unity in the international trade union movement with increased energy.

"As the first essential step in this direction, the Anglo-Russian Committee confirms its decision adopted at the Berlin conference which declares that the General Council of the British Trade Union Congress must immediately carry the resolution of the Anglo-Russian Committee into fulfillment, according to which the General Council must on its own initiative and under its own control and without any preliminary limiting conditions call a conference between the Amsterdam international and the Russian unions.

During October.

"This resolution was ratified at the time by the General Council and later by the British Trades Union Congress. The Anglo-Russian Committee recommends that the General Council fix this conference for not later than the end of October."

LABOR UNIONS LOSE MILLIONS IN MEMBERSHIP

10 Million Drop Away in Three Years

AMSTERDAM — (FP) — In its 4th yearbook, issued in German, French and English, the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions shows that more than 10,000,000 members were lost by the combined labor organizations of the world in the 3-year period ending Dec. 31, 1924.

Examination discloses the amazing fact that the I. F. T. U. has claimed the American Federation of Labor in its own total for 1924, while the A. F. of L. was classed as "various" in 1921. The yearbook states that the I. F. T. U. has partly balanced its own losses by adding "countries with organizations sympathetically disposed towards it." This includes the 2,893,117 members of the A. F. of L., 49,130 in Denmark, 225,694 in Germany, 5,000 in Esthonia, 148,501 in Ireland, 17,000 in Japan, 40,000 in Canada, 750,000 in Mexico, 39,552 in Austria and 1,177 in Memel.

When these 4,000,000 sympathetically disposed unionists are taken from the I. F. T. U. total there remains 13,700,000 (a loss of 8,500,000 since 1921) in actual affiliation with Amsterdam.

At the end of 1921 the total membership of all labor organizations reported to Amsterdam was 46,273,132. At the end of 1924 it was reduced to 36,062,711. Reasons for this decline are various, but postwar economic depression and the persecution of the working class movement by reactionary forces in many countries are held chiefly responsible.

In contrast to the general trend is the record of the unions affiliated with the Red International of Labor Unions at Moscow. In 1921 they had a total membership of 7,069,000, which was 15.3% of the total for all international trade unions. Three years later they had 7,333,545 members, or 20.3% of the world total. The Amsterdam organization, hostile to the Communist group, admits this 3% gain by the radicals, but says this does not mean that the sphere of influence of communism in the international trade union movement has correspondingly increased. In 1921 only Russia, Bulgaria and Juso-Slavia had Moscow labor affiliations, but in 1921 Chile, Czecho-Slovakia, Esthonia, France, Holland, Japan, Latvia, Lithuania and Roumania had been added.

The Intl. Federation of Trade Union losses included 2,741,555 in Germany, 2,216,951 in Britain, 556,180 in Italy, 666,663 in Czecho-Slovakia, 262,473 in France, 122,698 in Belgium 212,127 in Austria, 113,220 in Greece, 74,320 in Switzerland and 70,753 in Poland.

WELSH MINERS IN ANTHRACITE FIGHT TO LAST

By BILL ROSS, Federated Press.

BRYNAMMON, South Wales—(FP)—That the Welsh anthracite miners will be the last to surrender surrender before the combined forces of employers, government and starvation, was the assurance given The Federated Press by John James, their leader.

"We are facing terrific odds," he said, "our enemies are out for a humiliating surrender. There is a bit of truce in the midlands. But no matter how bad the end, the Welsh miners will stick. And the 20,000 anthracite miners will be the very last to accept defeat."

Welsh anthracite is among the best paying coal fields in Britain. The miners in this district will lose less than most other districts, regardless of the eventual terms. But the many decades of industrial warfare taught them unity so that there is no talk of separate agreements.

Hunger is the most immediate enemy in this and other districts. "When our soup kitchens close down the fight is lost," James admitted. He spoke with pride of the relief work accomplished with limited resources. In 4 months of the strike the total relief per head amounted to slightly over $5.

"Most of our relief funds have come from Russia and Germany. We can expect little more from Europe," James stated. "America is the only country able to come to our assistance. If that does not come, then we will face the worst defeat in our history."

Anthracite miners are proud of their relief work. The 97 kitchens they operate rank highest in the coal fields. Some of them have such luxuries as white tablecloths and flowers on the tables. Men with experience in the army or navy usually supervise the work. For many weeks 2 meals a day were being served, but shortage of funds cut the relief to 1 a day.

Another Welsh leader divided the miners' enemies into three groups, the coal owners, the government and certain trade union leaders.

"Because Cook of the miners and Thomas of the railmen are Silver Knights," he said, "there is no embargo on coal. Because ours is viewed as a left wing leadership the right flout over our difficulty position."

Applause and Cheers Mark Entry of Germany Into League of Nations

This picture shows Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister, on the right, going to get initiated into the league of nations from which the defeated country had been restricted for years. Now the economic reproachments between the former belligerents have reached the stage where it is impossible not to accord Germany full political recognition. All of which shows how easily the financial lords of the various lands can lose their hatreds when dollars, pounds, francs and marks are at stake.

TOM MANN, VETERAN LEADER OF BRITISH LABOR, SPEAKS TO THE NATIONAL MINORITY CONFERENCE

The National Minority Movement, or revolutionary left wing of British trade unionism, recently held its third annual conference at Battersea Town Hall in London. The DAILY WORKER gives below the address of Tom Mann, chairman of the N. M. M., veteran labor leader of Great Britain, as an interesting and graphic picture of the scope and purposes of the British left wing.—Editor's Note.

• • • •

Tom Mann's Address.

COMRADES: In extending a very hearty welcome to the delegates at the third annual conference of the National Minority Movement I rejoice to see such a fine body of delegates numbering over 750. Under the exceptional conditions prevailing in consequence of the prolonged lockout of the miners and the effect of that upon the funds of the unions and upon the workers generally, we are entitled to congratulate ourselves up such an excellent representation.

At our second annual conference a year ago we had 683 delegates representing 700,000 workers, and at our special conference of action in March of this year we had 853 delegates representing 957,000 workers. We are now in the eighteenth week of the lockout of one million two hundred thousand miners who, with their dependents, number four millions of persons; and there are two millions of unemployed, apart from the miners, and large numbers working short time.

When we realize the effects of these conditions upon the unions and individuals we see how genuinely the Minority Movement is appreciated for so many delegates to be present today. Had conditions been normal it is fair to assume that we should have had a representation of fully a million workers.

Necessity for Minority Movement.

HOW vitally necessary the Minority Movement is to stimulate, to vitalize and to direct the Industrial movement has been shown abundantly during the last few months. When we met a year ago our resolutions predicted the great struggle which took place in May, and we indicated measures of preparation to cope with the same.

A definite stand was also taken at the Trades Union Congress held at Scarborough in September last. That congress made it quite clear that it desired and determined that vigorous militant action should be taken to meet capitalist offensive.

How the General Council of the T. U. C. applied the policy agreed upon by our conference in August last, and more especially at our conference of action in March of this year, beyond question the miners would have won, and we should have had the satisfaction months ago of celebrating a workers' victory; but even if the General Council had acted upon the policy emphatically approved of at Scarborough—victory should have been achieved.

The General Council simply made no real preparation, declaring that such preparation would only be provocative, but this supine attitude did not prevent the mine owners and the government from making the fullest preparations on their side. The General Council not only did not make preparations, they failed lamentably to pursue operation the decisions and instructions given them at Scarborough.

The president of the Scarborough congress, Mr. A. B. Swales, in his opening address said: "There is a limit to the concessions that the unions can be forced to make. That limit has been reached; union policy will henceforth be to recover lost ground, to reestablish and improve our standard of wages, hours and working conditions, and to co-ordinate and intensify trade union activity for the winning of a larger measure of control in industry for the workers."

Our Charge Against the General Council.

THAT was the policy laid down at Scarborough and heartily backed by the delegates of that congress. Our charge against the General Council is that, without a mandate from the rank and file, they abandoned that policy in favor of the coal commission report, which meant reductions in wages.

On February 26 the industrial committee of the Trades Union Congress re-affirmed its adhesion to the miners' policy of "no reductions in wages; no lengthening of working hours; national agreements."

On April 5, in a letter to the Miners' Federation, it refused to re-affirm that policy, whilst it continued to make public declarations couched in equivocal language, that it still supported the miners' demands. The General Council did this under the influence of the coal commission report.

In my speech at the conference of action in March last, held here, I referred to that report and quoted approvingly the statement of Mr. Vernon Hartshorn, who, speaking in parliament, said: "The report does nothing but make the blackness more intense. It is simply a pronouncement that we have reached a stage where nothing but a deadlock can ensue; a settlement on the basis of this report is impossible."

The coal commission consisted of three capitalists and one capitalist-minded economist, all of them entirely out of sympathy with the workers; still the General Council counted this report sufficient to justify the calling off of the general strike and tried to get the miners to accept it. It was clear that the General Council had decided that reductions in wages should take place even before the general strike was called.

It is now necessary for the whole trade union movement to boldly declare its attitude. Does it stand by the policy of the Scarborough congress embodied in the quotation from Mr. Swales, namely: "No further concessions to the employers, stop the retreat and prepare the advance," or does it stand for the pacific policy of the General Council, with its absence of militancy and pandering to the insolent demands of the capitalists?

The failure of the general strike was a failure of leadership and we must make the subject a study in order to become intelligent in being aware of the question of a new leadership in the British labor movement.

SCIENTISTS SAY NEW DISCOVERY IS EPOCH MAKER

Synthetic Atom Is New Find

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Sept. 20. — The world's leading chemists are displaying great interest in the claims of two German scientists that they have succeeded in making helium out of hydrogen. Two days ago Professors Paneth and Peters of Berlin made the announcement of the most recent advance in chemical research, the synthetic atom.

Seeking Helium.

Both of these gases had been considered as basic immutable elements. While making experiments for the manufacture of the valuable non-inflammable helium gas for use in dirigible balloons to take the place of the explosive gases now used, the scientists claimed that by raising the atomic number of hydrogen they created helium.

New Source of Energy.

If the discovery proves to be true, scientists are pointing out, it will have far reaching consequences, not only for the future of chemistry from the point of view of mere scientific advance, but practical consequences for humanity in an economic way.

The intensive heat that is released in the transposition from hydrogen to helium holds the possibility of being exploited as power that, if developed, might easily displace all known forms of energy, creating means such as steam and electricity.

All Elements the Same.

The basis of all the elements is the same, says advanced physics, positively charged particles known as protons and negatively charged "electrons." The various elements are composed of protons and electrons in varying degrees of intensity and number and are governed by a rhythmic motion comparable to that of the solar system. The professors claim they "raised" hydrogen atoms to helium atoms.

R. I. L. U. PRAISES FRENCH SECTION FOR SOLIDARITY

MOSCOW (By Mail).—The Red International of Labor Unions has issued the following statement on the French mine workers' strike in solidarity with British miners:

"The Red International of Labor Unions considers it necessary especially to emphasize the whole significance of the active support rendered the British strikers by the French workers under the leadership of the revolutionary organizations.

Boycotts Coal Shipments Also.

"Besides the solidarity action shown by the transport workers and dockers, as in Rouen and Dunkirk, in boycotting the handling of coal and striking, the 24-hour strike of the 1,000,000 French miners gave a clear example of real international solidarity and demonstrated before the capitalist world the firm determination of the proletariat to resist the capitalist offensive with all the forces it has.

"The French miners' act of solidarity has undoubtedly supported the British miners in their great struggle.

"The Red International of Labor Unions welcomes the action of the French miners, who, despite opposition from the employers and reformist leaders (the latter having refused to take any part in the display of solidarity), took action to the number of 100,000 men against international capitalism, thereby demonstrating that no frontiers can destroy the community of interests that exists between the miners of France, Britain and other countries.

"The Red International of Labor Unions calls on the Unity Federation of Miners of France to use the experience of the strike in question to strengthen its organization so that it may be prepared to take energetic action against any fresh attacks by the employers."

Esperanto Gaining Favor in Europe

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R., Sept. 20 —An international Esperanto language conference held in Leningrad attended by delegates from France, Germany, Sweden, Czecho-Slovakia, Holland, Austria and other countries indicated considerable progress is being made in the adoption of study of this international language in European schools. Esperanto is being taught in schools of 150 cities in Germany and 38 cities and towns in Holland. School authorities have ordered its introduction in Czecho-Slovakia and Austria.

Preceding the international conference was held the All-Union Esperanto Congress, which was attended by 150 delegates representing nearly 10,000 members of study groups in 350 cities throut the Soviet Union. Dresen, the general secretary, reported that Esperanto in the Soviet confederation is an instrument of working class activity and is used in establishing communication with workers in all western European countries.

The Sunday Worker Slogan Contest

THE Sunday Worker needs a slogan. Not one coined in the office of the management, but given to it by its readers.

It must be short, snappy and descriptive. A few words have been strung together describing the contents of The Sunday Worker? Suggesting its great interest and value to workers urging them to get acquainted with it, to read it, to make a habit of it? Or that they will look forward to it as anxiously as they do to Sunday while at work Monday morning?

And the "Sunday Worker" will like to pay for it! Prizes will be given for appreciation of the Movement to those workers who will send in the most and thought produce such a slogan.

CHICAGO WORKERS' SCHOOL OFFERS ACTIVE MILITANTS MANY COURSES

Taking as its main slogan, "Education for the Struggle," the Chicago Workers' School has built its curriculum on the basis of theoretical guidance for practical work.

During the last week more than a hundred active militant workers have received letters assigning them to take one of the classes scheduled for the coming semester starting October 4. An effort has been made to assign each one of these comrades to a class that will particularly fit in with his work in the party and in the labor movement.

All militant workers are invited to attend the school—whether they are Workers (Communist) Party members or not. In this year's work a foundation will be laid for the school as a permanent institution, rallying around it all class conscious workers.

Enrollment is open for all classes up to October 4. The cost for the eleven weeks' term is only $1.50.

Schedule of Classes.

The schedule of classes follows:

Mondays—A. B. C. of the Class Struggle, Teacher, Nat Kaplan, South Side Class, Community Center, 3201 S. Wabash Ave.

Trade Union Tactics and Strategy, A. Swabock.

Tuesdays—Role and Function of the Party, M. Abern.

Wednesdays—A. B. C. of the Class Struggle, Wm. Simons.

Thursdays—Theory and Practice of the Three Workers' Internationals, Max Shachtman.

Fridays—Elements of Communism, A. Bittelman.

All classes except the south side class will be conducted at 19 S. Lincoln St. Enrollments will be taken at 19 S. Lincoln St.

District 8 Active Group Meets Tonight

That there has been a recent increase in activities within the Chicago party units is primarily due to the initial work of the activization group which has been organized by decision of the last district conference held on August 29.

The members of this group have been visiting party units and helping them along in the work. However, there is still room for more members in this activization group.

Any active party member ready to give his time to help bring in more life into the units will be accepted in the group which meets again Tuesday Sept. 21st at 8 p. m., at 19 S. Lincoln street.

CALHOUN ADDED TO NEW YORK'S WORKERS' SCHOOL

To Teach Two Muchly Needed Courses

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Workers' School announces another addition to its faculty for the coming year in the person of Arthur C. Calhoun, instructor at the Brookwood Labor College. Last week they announced that Scott Nearing had been added to their staff.

Calhoun is scheduled for two courses during the coming year. One is a short course of four sessions of a symposium entitled, "The Problems of Working Class Women." Calhoun's part of this course is entitled, "The American Family, Its History and Social Development." Calhoun, it will be remembered, is the author of what is generally estimated to be the outstanding work on the American family, "The Social History of the American Family."

In addition to the above course, Calhoun is scheduled for a three months' once-a-week course in "The History of the Working Class in the United States."

The Bulletin of the Workers' School can be secured by writing to Bertram D. Wolfe, director, 106-108 East 14th St., New York City.

DAILY WORKER AGENTS HOLD ROUSING MEET

Gather for Big Drive in Earnest

The DAILY WORKER and literature agents' meeting held Friday night at 19 South Lincoln was the best and livest meeting for over a year and shows signs of a revival of interest in the needed work of building a DAILY WORKER army in Chicago that will put our paper in every union meeting.

Many Present.

Comrades Stanlekelle, Shop Nucleus 1; Waida, Shop 21; Adamson, Shop 23; Penoff, Street 11; Garfinkel, Street 13; Zuckin, Street 15; Jaffe, Street 17; Perryman, Street 18; Pollock, Street 23; Hammersmark, Street 25; Visconti, Street 29; Reinstein, Street 38, were present.

Comrades Vallentin, Street Nucleus 24; Kitty Harris, Section 5; Bjornson, Section 6, and Harry Cohen, Street 31, all reported that because of other important meetings they could not be present, but are going to do their share to put over the drive to have The DAILY WORKER sold at every union meeting in Chicago.

All Live Comrades.

It is expected to have the name of every live comrade in every nucleus on the sales force within two months, and it is hoped to have 200 union meetings covered every month.

It is found that renewals of expiring subscriptions are much easier to get than going out for new readers, and hundreds of live prospects should be visited at once. Comrades are asked to come into the office at 19 South Lincoln street and get a few names to call on or see that their precious agent supplies you with some at your next meeting.

Beginning October 1 a prize will be awarded each month to The DAILY WORKER agent bringing in the most money on subscriptions during the month and $3 worth of literature will be given the nucleus to which the agent belongs.

Penn. Labor Party to Have Candidates

HARRISBURG, Sept. 20. — (FP) — Charles Kutz, chairman of the Labor Party of Pennsylvania, announced on Sept. 15 that Gov. Pinchot had declined the nomination of that party which he won in the April primary, and that E. E. Beidleman had surrendered the nomination for governor. These withdrawals had been anticipated, Kutz said, and the party would proceed to select new candidates to appear on the ballot in the November election.

The situation in Pennsylvania, Kutz declares, is "highly favorable to the prospects of a successful campaign by the forces lined up against Mellon, Fisher, Grundy and Vare."

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Local 132, United Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners, laid the cornerstone of its new factory building in the capital Sept. 11. The structure, located one block west of the headquarters building of the American Federation of Labor, will cost $450,000 and will be completed soon, union officials say.

B. & O. Tardily Falls in Line With Other Roads on Shop Wage

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad by granting its 20,000 shopmen pay increases of 2c an hour and time and a half for all work on Sundays and holidays now takes the lead among the larger roads of the country in the treatment of its employes. It takes a position among the northeastern carriers which the Pennsylvania and New York Central have to follow in order to maintain their good faith under the new railroad labor act.

The B. & O. increase establishes a minimum rate of 75c an hour for mechanics and 51c an hour for helpers. The 75c rate for mechanics has been accorded for more than 6 months on most of the southern roads. Those include Chesapeake & Ohio, Georgia Florida & Alabama, Seaboard Air Line and Southern among the union roads and Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville & Nashville, Norfolk & Western and Norfolk & Southern among the non-union roads. But among these only the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Norfolk & Western had also granted both the full 5c over the old labor board rates to less skilled members of the shop forces and the time and a half pay for Sunday and holiday work.

Important railroads which have been paying time and a half for Sunday and holiday work for a considerable period include the Seaboard Air Line, Central of Georgia, Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago Burlington & Quincy, Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul, Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Grand Trunk.

Recent reiteration by The Wall Street Journal of the statement that reduction in operating expenses has been an important factor in swelling this year's B. & O. profits shows that the present wage increase was long overdue. With last year's profit at $12 a share and this year's profit likely to run over $16 a share, the leader in shop co-operation should also have led in rates of pay and working conditions.

B. & O. profits for the first 7 months of 1926 are $6,567,800 ahead of the same period 1925. In July expenses absorbed only 68.8% of revenues compared with 72.6% a year ago. This means that the B. & O. profit bag is getting 31.2% of each dollar paid for B. & O. service compared with 27.4% in July 1925.

Whether B. & O. will raise its 5% dividend to 6% or 7% is still discussed in financial circles. The Associated Press quotes P. E. Blaser, assistant to vice-president Galloway in charge of B & O. operation, as stating that the present wage increases meet the men's demands. He made it plain that they were not volunteered by the road.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE WAS A HOME TO SMITH

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Charles E. Stewart, formerly chief clerk in the department of justice during the administration of Harry M. Daugherty, was called to the witness stand today in the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy trial in federal court.

Daugherty, formerly attorney general, and brother Allen Property Custodian Thomas W. Miller are accused of having accepted a bribe of $441,000 for their services in connection with the return of $7,000,000 of property of the German-controlled American Metals Company that had been seized as alien property during the war.

Close Relationship.

Stewart, questioned by United States Attorney Buckner, told of the relationship that existed between Daugherty and the late Jesse Smith.

Richard Merton, German financier, who came to this country to effect the return of the seized alien property, had testified that he lent Jesse T. King of Connecticut had introduced him to Smith when he was trying hard to have the property returned to the foreign owners.

Smith Was Everywhere.

Stewart testified that he frequently saw Smith around the office of the department of justice shortly after Daugherty assumed office; that he saw Smith in the corridors of the building at different times, and that Smith was continually paying visits to Daugherty's office.

The witness said he had assigned a room on the sixth floor of the department of justice building for Smith, which he understood Smith was "performing certain confidential duties assigned to him by the attorney general."

Then Stewart testified regarding an expense voucher he signed for Smith. It was brought out by Buckner that the expense voucher signed by Smith was dated: "Headquarters of the Department of Justice, Columbus, Ohio."

Dairy Workers Make Big Gains in Chicago

Great improvement in wages and working conditions is reported by Dairy Employes' Union No. 754, Chicago. In the old days they worked long hours for $25 a month and board. Now they have the 8-hour day with $1 an hour rising from $35 to $40 a week.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

THE PARTY AND THE LEAGUE.

By ALBERT GLOTZER.

DURING the past year an unhealthy attitude has been created regarding the question of the correct relationships between the party and the League. If this attitude is to continue it can do no good for the organization; on the other hand it will retard its progress.

Because of obvious reasons of the past history of the party, the party has to an extent neglected the Young Workers' League. The reaction of league comrades not yet understanding the basic fundamentals of the movement, has been an opposition to co-operating with the party. This opposition was of course together with that party on those fields necessary. That it was a mistake for the party to adopt such an attitude or rather neglect the League, is obvious and is being recognized by the party itself (this is witnessed by the recent changes of attitude by leading functionaries of the party and by the units themselves.)

The Real Relationship.

Let us now try and discover the real relation between the party and the League. What is the Communist Party? To quote from the English League Training Syllabus: "The Communist Party is based on the Revolutionary class struggle and represents the interests of the workingclass, as a class, and generally in all questions. It is the vanguard and leader of the working class. The party is the only leader of the workingclass. This leadership cannot be divided."

Now then what is the role of the League? Some comrades have and will bring this question up. What is the Young Workers' League? Has it any function? Let us again quote from this Syllabus: "The Young Communist League is the mass organization of the working youth. It is the organization of the workingclass which has the task of enrolling all young workers within the ranks of the workingclass and organizing them to take part in the class struggle alongside the rest of the workers. Its task is to gather the mass of young workers into its ranks, to represent their interests in all spheres; to educate them in the struggle and in the theory of the struggle and pass them into the ranks of the Communist Party."

League As Training Ground.

We find the League therefore playing a special role in the revolutionary movement. The role of the youth is a special one in the class struggle. The League carries on its own particular work amongst the working youth and does not seek to be the second edition of the party. It is the revolutionary reserve for the party and should turn over every year trained eager comrades into the ranks of the party.

The league is politically subordinated to the party, yet it retains organizational autonomy. However, the fact that the league is politically subordinate to the party does not mean that it mechanically and without thought prescribed and operates the decisions of the party. It means that the league members must closely participate in the life of the party, play a role in hammering out of its decisions and applying them to the youth. Since the league is a political organization and our work political, participation in party activity heightens our level and helps to unite and weld together the two organizations. Yes, the league is a training ground where our members arm themselves theoretically and practically to enter the party. In the party the league members play an important role for they have had the proper training. The league is in reality a training ground, a reserve guard, for the party.

We have the attitude of league comrades in Chicago who when holding open-air meetings refuse to sell the DAILY WORKER in addition to the Young Worker, because it is the party organ. There is also the attitude of some comrades who do not think that it is necessary to carry out our factory work together with the party. On the other hand, the attitude of the party often corresponds with these. Such an attitude from both angels is incorrect. However the party because of its political maturity should be the first to correct this and help the league do likewise.

Mutual Representation.

There must be an interchange of representatives and all the units must work together. Let us look at the following decisions of the E. C. C. I. on the question of the relationships of the league and the party. This is addressed to the party.

1. Formation of local Y. W. L. wherever local W. P. groups exist.

2. Formation of Y. W. L. factory nuclei wherever local W. P. nuclei exist.

3. Appointment of young party members for work in the Y. W. L. particularly in weak local groups and factory nuclei, also in other organs.

4. Exercise the special care when taking over Y. W. L. members in the party in order not to weaken the Y. W. L.

5. Practical support for the work of the district executives of the Y. W. L. thru the party district executives.

6. Strict adherence to the rule concerning the dispatch of party representatives into all organs and committees of the youth and vice-versa. The representatives of the party in the youth committees are not only to "represent" but to collaborate in a practical manner.

7. Eventual formation of a special permanent committee in the central committee of the party, to watch and support the Y. W. L. activities.

There are other points such as the agitprop and trade union work that the E. C. deals with, but these points on organization our comrades must understand. With such a program we can proceed to our work clarified. The program can be applied thruout the country for the whole party possibilities these weaknesses. The league on the other hand must accept guidance from the party. While we cannot expect the program to be initiated at once, steps towards such activity must be carried into effect immediately. When these basic principles are understood, when the above program is carried out, the progress of the league and party will be noticeable. This is the only method that will sustain the real relationships between the party and league.

Educational Meet of Concentration Group

By Young Worker Correspondent.

NEW YORK CITY — On Tuesday, Sept. 7, we held an educational meeting of our concentration group. Every comrade was present as well as many sympathetic workers from the shop as possible. The topic of discussion was "The necessity of belonging to a union." Comrade Mike made a short introduction and then it was followed by questions in which every comrade and sympathizer participated very enthusiastically. I think it was the most interesting and well attended meeting we ever had of the group. I am convinced that every one of us learned a good bit of the importance of belonging to a union. After the meeting we sold some trade union literature. Thus we can see the importance of educational meetings with sympathizers.

BACKWARD UNIONS OF NO. CAROLINA SHOW PROGRESS

But Reaction Is Still Very Strong

By ADAMS ALLEN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 20.—Progress is being made by the workers of North Carolina, since the employers by the large steamships such as the Duke tobacco factories in Durham, the textile mills and various other plants remain unorganized.

The work of organization so far has been effected mainly in the small crafts. The industrial and agricultural feudalism of the state still holds the masses in a frenzied vise.

President Progressive.

C. F. Barringer, president of the State Federation of Labor, who was just re-elected to his fourth term in Salisbury a couple of weeks ago, is the most badly handicapped by the backwardness, ignorance and provincialism of the majority of the workers, in the Salisbury convention over his protest a resolution was passed denouncing the teaching of evolution "in tax-supported schools," and the vote in his favor was startling, few delegates voicing opposition. His own re-election was by the narrow margin of two votes.

Barringer, a progressive with mild socialistic leanings, supported La Follette in 1924—an act of "radicalism" which in the eyes of hard-boiled, backwoods southern democrats still dabbling the Civil War and the reconstruction wrangle, was frightfully revolutionary.

Protestant Influence.

Much approval of the acts of the Calles government is expressed among workers in North Carolina unions, due chiefly to the protestantism of the state rather than to any clear understanding of the economic causes of the Mexican crisis. Barringer himself has expressed strong sympathy with Calles because he heads a semi-labor government.

The talk about a farmer-labor party, which was widespread after the recent primary in which Senator Overman defeated Attorney General Brummitt of Asheville for the senatorial nomination on the democratic ticket, continues intermittently. Reynolds had the almost solid support of organized labor and workers. After he was beaten third party gossip was prevalent. Sooner or later such a party will be organized. It will have the backbone of a large element of the population. The feeling that a party of and by the workers must be organized is going around, albeit very slowly.

Workmen's Compensation Issue.

Workmen's compensation is a dominant issue among the workers. The state has no such law and organized labor will make a determined effort to secure one statute this winter. Representative R. O. Everett of Durham, one of the three legislators in the lower house who supported the anti-child labor amendment, is counted on to take an active part in backing the compensation bill if he wins a seat again. He is now the object of a bitter attack by the combined forces of big business and fundamentalism. Everett is a "modernist" and made a forceful speech last winter denouncing the Poole anti-evolution bill—something which advocates of "the old-time religion" have never forgotten nor forgiven.

Child Labor Curse.

Child labor is still the curse of North Carolina. There are thousands of cases of puny, under-grown children dragging out their weary days in factories, while able-bodied men in the same families loaf about the homes. The capitalists of the state savagely resist any effort to ameliorate the condition. Collective bargaining itself is still an unknown quantity in the larger factories and the very idea is branded "Bolshevism."

Nash Motors Cut Piece Rates 20%.

RACINE, Wis., Sept. 20.—Piece workers in the Light Six (old Ajax) plant of the Nash Motor Co. at Racine are getting 20 per cent less in wages with the cut that went into effect Sept. 16. They were unable to offer resistance as the Nash plants are unorganized and foremen are under orders to discharge known union men. Wage slashes for men on hourly rates are also rumored.

PASSAIC PARADE, MEETING AND SPEECHES REVEAL CONTRAST OF PRES. MAC MAHON AND STRIKERS

PASSAIC, N. J., (By Mail).—What a spectacle was the giant parade held here to welcome the coming of the United Textile Workers' Union to Passaic! And what a contrast between the speeches of MacMahon, the conservative and even reactionary head of the U. T. W. and the spirit of the strikers as expressed by the speech of Chester Dale, and by the 15,000 members of Local 1603, who marched together with 5,000 other Passaic unionists in the great parade of 20,000!

"Here We Come!"

Under their militant banners came the strikers. "Here We Come! Local 1603, United Textile Workers, 10,000 Strong!" was the one banner and there were scores. Only 3,000 marched with the Slavic Committee, which incidentally had tried, to control the parade, against the wishes of the strike committee. The Central Labor Union of Passaic and Patterson marched with 2,000 in line.

At the mass meeting following the parade were 25,000 workers. Here the contrast became apparent in the speeches of the leaders.

A Traitorous Speech.

MacMahon's speech was an accusation not of the mill owners but of the strikers. A encouragement to the mill owners.

Here are glimpses of MacMahon's speech—impossible words to come from the lips of a leader of labor:

Be Nice to Bosses.

"We must avoid attacks on mill owners . . . How can we get recognition of our union if you call mill owners bad names? . . . You must stop engaging in violence . . . throwing bricks and fighting the police . . . It does no good to try to destroy the authority of those elected by you in your city and turning Passaic topsy-turvy . . ."

Be Kind to Scabs.

"Those on the inside of the mills will not be put out, you will have to go back and work alongside of those who are now in the mills. What have you got out of this strike of eight months? Officers of the U. T. W. are not fooled. Before receiving recognition of your union you must prove that you did not come in to get more wages. We will not sign an agreement with each individual mill owner and act up separate mill locals united in an executive council . . . God, in his mercy, see that we win."

Received in Silence.

After the above sort of cold and malignant sentiments that were received in dead silence by the strikers and every worker present, the speeches of Louis Boudens, Adolph Musto and others, more encouraging, were received with applause. But Gustav Geisak won the greatest applause when he delivered the following address:

Geak's Speech.

"Ladies and gentlemen, and fellow-workers:

"I have been selected by the striking textile workers of Passaic and vicinity to speak in their name on this great occasion.

"The step which we have taken in joining hands with the great body of organized labor under the banner of the American Federation of Labor was taken after mature deliberation and by a vote of our entire body.

Fought All Obstacles.

"We fellow-workers, today, we pay our respects to our President, Tom Mc Mahon, and to the leaders of the A F. of L.

"We urge them to lend us on to victory. We will do our part as we have done in the past.

"We will man the picket lines; we will stand shoulder to shoulder and fight on let come what may.

Ready To Die For Our Cause.

"We are ready to die in this cause and we will win.

"Let no man think that we can ever accept defeat; because the health and safety of our people and the prosperity of this community depend upon our victory.

"Long live our Local Union Number 1603 of the United Textile Workers of America.

"Long live the great American Labor Movement—the American Federation of Labor.

"Long live the United Textile Workers of America.

UNITED LEATHER WORKERS' UNION DRIVE SUCCESS

Few Shops Non-Union in Chicago District

The United Leather Workers' Union is meeting with success in the campaign it began Aug. 17, to organize the Chicago district and is under full swing for the remaining five shops. Of those not yet in the union fold, one has been struck for refusal to negotiate but the others are in more conciliatory mood.

"These are the first union agreements conceded by the manufacturers since the lockout of 1920," declared the union head. "The 5 shops already signed employ 35 per cent of the workers in the industry in Chicago. A shop which is about to sign will bring the percentage still farther up.

"The agreement deals principally with recognition of the union, as most of the shops already pay the union scale or better and keep to union hours or less. The union minimum is $38 for a 48-hour week. We are pushing our organization campaign energetically, having voted at the last meeting of Local No. 13 to levy an assessment of $1 a week on all members in the shops signed."

Chicago is a relatively small leather goods center, New York is the focus of the industry and is well unionized. Milwaukee is almost wholly non-union. The fancy leather goods workers and pocketbook workers in Local No. 20 have renewed their agreements with the manufacturers in accordance with the union custom of making agreements to run indefinitely, subject to notice of change by either party.

The pocketbook workers in the union comprise 98 per cent of those in Chicago shops. The agreement grants the 44-hour week and a minimum of $37.40 a week at hourly rates and $44 at piece rates. Floy helpers get $15 a week and women helpers $22. About 200 workers are employed.

Union Official Says Canadian Labor Glad Over Election Result

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. —(FP)—Canadian labor is pleased of the outcome of the election for the new Dominion parliament, says George Richardson of Vancouver, B. C., general secretary of the International Association of Fire Fighters.

"Canada has enacted more laws favorable to the workers during the recent regime of the liberal-progressive coalition," said Richardson, "than in any previous period. In the new parliament the liberals fall four votes short of a majority, and they have still to secure election for the members of the new cabinet. They must continue to deal with the progressive elements who hold 35 seats, in order to overcome the conservatives who have 91 seats.

"Public ownership and operation of the National Railways is absolutely safe under the new government. Labor laws will be enforced and new ones will be enacted, although the liberals would have been more anxious to please organized labor in this respect if the liberals had not come so near to having a majority of their own."

Fire Fighters Find Joining Union Pays; Convention Coming

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. —(FP)— Every member of the International Association of Fire Fighters—some 20,000 in all—has secured a wage increase which averages $1,000 a year since the International was formed in 1918. This is the high light in the annual report to be presented to its convention which opens October 8 in Philadelphia. In the fire departments that have been unionized the personnel has been increased from 20 to 30 percent in the same period as a means of reducing long hours on duty.

Membership in the international has increased over 1,000 in the past two years. This convention will comprise about 100 delegates. The previous ones have had no more than 75 delegates. New York City furnishes 22 percent of the total membership. The dues rate is 75 cents a month—almost the lowest in the entire labor movement. Should the convention vote to increase the dues a number of organizers will be put on the road to form new locals.

Manufacturer Found Dead.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 20. — The body of Carl A. McCamish, 32, son of Jos. McCamish, president of the McCamish Manufacturing company of Winchester, Ind., was found dead in an automobile on a main road today.

AIMEE'S PIMPLE FURNISHES GOOD PUBLICITY YARN

"Death's Door" Stuff Used Artistically

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20 — Aimee Semple McPherson, the vanishing evangelist, who lived in the Pacific Ocean on May 18 and came up in the Mexican desert on June 23, with a phony tale of being kidnapped, has developed her persecution publicity with an art that does credit to her former profession as an actress.

No sooner had the announcement been made that she was to be arrested for perjury in connection with the "kidnapping" hoax, then she suddenly became ill, even on the point of death, yet well enough to send out excellent defensive publicity to her deluded followers.

What About the I. W. W. in San Quentin.

She was "a persecuted little woman," "never was any criminal so persecuted as I," "my heart is near the breaking point," and like emotional appeals did excellent propaganda among her followers, who responded with a demonstration of 500 persons holding bibles aloft, before her residence where she lay "stricken" with what turns out to be "a pimple on her nose."

Chief of detectives Ben Cohn will serve Aimee with a felony complaint some time today, according to early indications, and after being arrested on a charge of preparing perjured testimony, the pastor will probably be released immediately on bail.

The Cause of Her Illness.

Complaints charging preparation of perjured evidence are ready today for service upon Mrs. McPherson, Kenneth Ormiston, her former radio attendant at Angelus Temple; Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of the evangelist; Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Seaff, who confessed to negotiating with the pastor for the production of a woman masquerading as "Miss X" and "John Doe" Martin of San Francisco, whom Mrs. Seiaff said first approached her with a plan to manufacture a "kidnapping" case, evidence.

What Will Her Paramour Say?

District Attorney Keyes today had extended to Ormiston an offer of immunity from prosecution if the radio announcer is prepared to be in Los Angeles, will come out of hiding and make a full statement of his connection with the McPherson case. Ormiston is the mysterious people name "Miss X," into the McPherson case by stating that Mrs. McPherson was not his companion at Carmel and that his companion was a San Francisco nurse, "Miss X."

Something the Matter With Her Cheek!

Angelus Temple attaches denied today that Mrs. McPherson had collapsed; their pastor, they declared, was merely "very tired," and suffering from an abscess in her cheek.

Assistant District Attorney Keyes, in the most vigorous statement he has made during the investigation, declared that the "brazen activities" of Mrs. McPherson and her friends has become a nation-wide scandal."

Three Cleveland Union Officials Sent to Ohio Workhouse

CLEVELAND, Sept. 20.—Trent Longo, Mose Donley and Charles Green, of the painters' union, have been sentenced to workhouse terms in the work house and $200 fine and costs, for an assault on non-union painters alleged to have been made on August 31 in Cleveland Heights. Following their arrest, the three men and Claude Beach, another business agent of the union, were indicted for a purported assault in the city of Cleveland. Non-union men declared that they were attacked when refusing to get off the job after the termination of the painters' strike.

An appeal has been made in the first case, the second one not yet having been heard.

CALCUTTA, Sept. 20. — Nearly 200 lives are believed to have been lost when a boat carrying natives capsized in a storm in the Bay of Bengal.

NEW NOVEL By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

Bunny went to Paradise and stirred the new wells, and the drawings for the new pipe lines, and the "set-up" of the proposed refinery, he wandered over the hills with Dad and shot quail, and at night he lay in his hammock and writhed in misery. It seemed to him that he was turning into an old man—surely he would find all his gray hair in the morning. He was losing more sleep than if he had taken Eunice to the dances, and what was the sense of that? At school they were teaching him biology and nineteenth century English poets, and how was that going to help drive the Germans out of France? Eunice was so fragile, so beautiful, and she was going to be so unhappy! She was different from other girls, difficult to understand, and the next fellow would not be so good to her as Bunny had been! And the world that was trying to tear them apart, was the same blind and stupid world that was killing millions of people; maybe Grandma was right after all, the whole thing was a chain of cruelty, and it didn't matter what you did, or which side won.

Then in the morning there would be Dad, and the din and grinding of their tremendous big machine. Dad at forty-six got bendable, Dad had something he was sure of. Also, he seemed to know all about Bunny without being told; he was pathetically sympathetic in a tactful way, not saying a word, but ceased to entertain Bunny, and find things they could do together. Came to think of it, Dad had been through things like this himself; it would have been interesting to talk straight with him—only it would have embarrassed him so. Bunny thought of his "little Mamma," whom he had not seen for more than a year, she had gone to New York and Bunny suspected that Dad had increased her allowance on condition that she would stay there. Bunny wished that he might talk with her about Eunice, and get her opinion on the subject of exchangeable lovers.

He stuck it out and when he went back home he did not go to see Eunice. Whenever he met her his heart would give a jump that hurt, but he would turn the other way and walk a few miles to get over it. The news spread among the "Zulus" that the pair had broken for good, and several sprightly young ladies turned to making overtures to the young oil prince. But Bunny hardly saw them, his heart was dead within him, he told himself that he would never look at another girl. One of the nineteenth century poets was Byron, and in his romances Bunny found exactly the mood of aristocratic broken-heartedness to which he could respond. As for Eunice, she went on petting parties with her former football captain and apparently managed to escape every one of the calamities which Bunny had feared for her.

CHAPTER IX

The Victory

I

The first term of Bunny's school ended in February and he passed his examinations with reasonable success; then there was a brief holiday and Dad produced a wonderful scheme. He could not help feeling a little uncomfortable, with the Watkins family living right there on the tract and he taking millions of dollars out of the ground for which he had paid them three thousand. Dad had an impulse to do something, yet he was afraid to do too much, for fear he might spoil them and give them the notion he owned them all. What he finally hit upon was a trip abroad; he would take Bunny and Ruth and Meelie and Sadie in the big limousine and hire an extra car for old Mr. Watkins and his wife and drive to the cantonement where Paul was working and pay him a visit and see the new army in the making. They would stay a couple of days at some hotel nearby, and see all the sights, including the revival meetings which Ell was holding in a huge tent near the encampment.

The girls of course were wild with happiness. It was the first time they had ever had a long automobile trip in the whole of their unsophisticated lives. Bunny spoke to Ruth, who spoke to her mother, who in turn spoke to her husband and obtained his promise that he would do his best to persuade the Holy Spirit not to send them any revelations or inspire any ruling or talking in tongues until they had got to the camp-meeting. As a matter of fact, the Holy Spirit had recently declared, through Ell as prophet of the Third Revelation, that these inspirational hymnasties had served their purpose and were to be dropped. No reason was vouchsafed, but there were rumors that the well-to-do people who were backing Ell in his evangelical campaigns were opposed to the rolling and did not regard the speech of the archangels as having any meaning for mortal ears.

One of the disciples was an eminent judge and another was a proprietor of chain grocery stores; their wives had taken Ell in hand and rubbed off the rough spots and improved his grammar, explaining that because one said heathen, one did not necessarily say healen; also they had taught him where to get his clothes and how to hold a knife and fork, so that Ell was becoming a social success.

It was almost like going to see the war; this tremendous city of canvas and corrugated iron and redwood siding which had arisen as if by Arabian Nights magic, swarming with eager young men in khaki, all of them as busy as ants—yet never too busy to take note of the presence of three good looking girls in a row! You could go through this city at certain hours, if you got the proper permit and see a bit of the drilling; at certain other hours Paul could not get off, and while the old folks and the girls went to hear Ell, Dad and Bunny and Paul sat on the hotel veranda and talked about the state of the world.

The Russians had just concluded a peace with Germany, withdrawing entirely from the war and giving up a lot of territory to the enemy. Dad discussed this event and repeated his opinion of the treacherous "Bolsheviks." Then Paul said how it seemed to him; and it appeared that, even here, while all the work he had to do, Paul had found time to read and to think his own thoughts. "Bunny," he said, "do you remember our oil strike and what we read about it in the papers? Suppose you had never been to Paradise and didn't know the strikers, but had got all your impressions from the Angel City newspapers! Well, that's the way it seems to me about Russia. This is the biggest strike in history and the strikers have won, and seized the oil-wells. Some day maybe we'll know what they're doing, but it won't be from newspaper stories made up by the allied diplomats and the exiled grand dukes."

Coolidge and Prosperity

The other day a Mexican newspaper carried a story involving American foreign policy as given by one Paul Smiths, said to be the unofficial spokesman for President Coolidge. Now that the nation's chief executive has left his vacation grounds in Paul Smith's, in the Adirondacks, many of the unofficial bulletins issued in recent weeks are being translated into official republican party policy.

From all present indications it appears that the main slogan of the republican campaigners in the coming congressional struggle, as well as in the next presidential contest, will be: We have brought you prosperity. Things are in good shape now. Why change?

Of course, even the merest tyro in poltics recognizes that there are many months ahead of us before the 1928 campaign. In these intervening months much can happen to the so-called prosperity now prevailing. A poorer crop, a couple of big business failures, a disturbance in Europe, a sharpening of the tense situation in the Orient, a gigantic national bituminous miners' strike, which is a probability, are only a few of the factors that may upset the presently loaded American economic applecart. In economic relations, much more than in the political, a few months, a year are a long period.

But we must rip the veil off this prosperity dummy that is being so idolized in the employing class press. It is true that dividends this year are bigger than ever. The corporation profits are mounting. The bigger the corporation, the bigger the profits—seems to be the rule of the day. Yet, how are the workers faring. The most skilled section, a small proportion of the working class, is getting some fairly steady employment. The efficiency of the American worker has on the whole increased about twenty-five per cent in the last two years. Still not even the most loud-mouthed Coolidge prosperity mongers would have the brass to say that the workers' wages have increased to that extent. Even the members of the big railway brotherhoods, well organized, are going to get at most only a few cents increase. In fact the leaders of the Big Four are beginning to admit that the amount that will be offered their unions, as an increase, is an insult of the most shame-faced character and is a slap in their own faces—in the faces of those who have put the Watson Parker law over for the bosses and their Coolidge administration.

When Coolidge speaks of prosperity he is speaking of prosperity for the eleven thousand millionaires in this country and for the employing class as a whole. The exploiters of labor owe much to Coolidge and his strikebreaking clique.

What shall we, the workers, do? What should the workers do to answer this prosperity slogan of the most notorious strike breaker who has ever occupied the presidential chair?

The time is over ripe for the workers to band themselves together as a class to assume political power and the control of the industries of the country which they have built. The coming months should see the workers taking some effective measures towards the first step to genuine and permanent prosperity for the working and farming masses of the country—the organization of a political party of the working class, by the working class and for the working class—a labor party.

China Is Winning

Capitalist press correspondents in China are compelled to admit that Wu Pei-fu is on the run and that the probability of a junction between the armed forces of General Feng and the Cantonese troops is liable to become a reality one of these days.

Should this desired development take place China will be in a fair way of liquidating the chaos that has prevailed in that country for many years and establishing a national government capable of enforcing its decrees.

Apparently Great Britain has come to the conclusion that Wu Pei-fu is a poor bet. He is showing a clean pair of heels to the Cantonese and tho he is travelling in the general direction of Chang Tso-Lin we are not in the possession of any evidence that would lead us to believe that Chang is sharpening his knife to kill the fatted calf for Wu. On the contrary, from what we know Chang's knife has designs on Wu's jugular vein.

Chang is the Japanese tool and Wu is, or was the British lackey. When a tool is played out the users generally bid it good-bye with a brick. Wu cannot serve Britain, therefore a kettle drum is attached to his coat tails and he is advised to move on. Other traitors should please stop and think.

Not so long ago the capitalist press chuckled over the retreat of the nationalist army from Peking to Kalgan. THE DAILY WORKER maintained its equanimity and hoped for the better. It has come. There is nothing left of the Kuomintang opposition around Peking but a bad dream. One of these days Feng is liable to break into the news from Peking. His head will not be on a spear either, unless he is careless.

Those who are weary and faint of heart may imbibe consolation from the present situation in China. After reading what took place at the Illinois State Federation of Labor convention, one would be justified in realizing a loss on his optimism. One might be inclined to assume that the workers were starting in on a perpetual snooze. But there is more to this old world than Illinois and if the Chinese succeed in bestowing the order of the hobnailed boot on British imperialism, quite a little hiatus will make its appearance in the capitalist system. And things that make trouble for capitalism furnish us with gravy.

Come to think of it, a class conscious worker who reads the news with a critical slant has many reasons to thank the stars that propelled him into this world about this period. From Riga to Vladivostok is quite a distance. The Red Flag flutters between those two cities wherever there is any political bunting. And from Moscow to Hankow is more than a day's travel. Unless all signs fail, within a short time imperialists in China will be getting tho bum's rush and the influence of the Soviet Union will be as potent as the influence of Morgan's millions in the Chigi palace, Rome.

The Chinese are winning in China which is equal to saying that the workers of the world are so much nearer their day of delivery.

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Bucharin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

The Growth of the Co-operatives.

ONE of the factors characteristic of the situation in our country, and one which is universally admitted to play an important role, is the stage of development attained by the co-operatives, especially by the agricultural co-operatives. If we examine the balance of the agricultural co-operatives, we see that this increased four and a half times the original balance between January 1, 1923, and January 1, 1924, and between January 1, 1924, and October 1, 1925, it was again nearly doubled (90 per cent). This extreme rapidity of agricultural co-operative growth speaks to a certain extent for itself. It shows that altho our efforts are still extremely faulty in this direction, and tho we are still lacking in the necessary energy in this task, still a mighty work is developing here.

The Total Balance is in Our Favor.

HAVING established the fact of the general economic progress of the country, we may ask ourselves the second question, the question of the relations between the positions of state economics and of private capitalist economics. We shall find that private capital, expressed in absolute figures, has increased, while at the same time the position of the socialist elements in our economics has become comparatively stronger. It may be observed that this same specialist, Kuiler, to whom I have referred here, and who has estimated the maximum figures for the accumulation of private capital in our collective economics is falling steadily. That is, despite the fact that in his opinion the gross proceeds of private capital amount to 400 million rubles, still the sphere of socialized economics is increasing with so much greater rapidity that the percentage of private capital is sinking. Thus even this expert has acknowledged that our growth is outstripping that of the private capitalist, and assuredly and finally this is the decisive factor. If private capital has increased to this extent, and we still outstrip it, then this is a proof of general growth of our whole country, and of the strengthening of our position within this growing economic life.

WE thus see, firstly, that the city, city industry, and all industry, are outstripping agriculture; and secondly, that nationalized economics, that is, state economics, communal economics, and the co-operatives, are outstripping private capital.

These are the most important conclusions to be drawn from the analysis of the our economic situation. It need not be said that when I speak here of these conclusions I am not asserting that our progress is not accompanied by contradictions. On the contrary, I am assuming their existence. I do not in the least attempt to conceal either from you or from myself. It would simply be stupidity to do not the fact that private capital is growing. I have intentionally adduced the figures showing most clearly the extent and importance of private capital in our country, and its relatively favorable position. And yet the trial balance, after recording the consideration to the contradiction involved in the growing power of our class opponent, is in our favor, in favor of the working class, in favor of the proletarian dictatorship, in favor of the socialist part of our economics.

WE now pass on the political situation in our country. I shall make this part of my speech extremely short, for the political situation mirrors in all essentials the events of the economic situation.

If we regard the situation from an entirely general standpoint we must first mention, as one of the most important factors determining the political situation in our country, the pacification of the peasantry, the pacification of the mass of the middle peasants.

OUR life develops at such a rapid pace nowadays that we often forget what the situation was like only a short time previously. But if you will recall to your memories the time before our ninth congress, and go back a few months, you will remember the unrest at that time among the peasantry, including the masses of the medium and poor peasantry. In many districts the middle peasants joined with the kulaks, and actively expressed dissatisfaction with the Soviet power which took its rise among the big peasant elements. We see that this peasant unrest has died away. Confidence is growing in the Soviet power, in the Communist party. This is an immediate consequence of our correct political life, especially of our course towards vitalizing the Soviets, towards revolutionary legality, towards the regulation of the conditions in the whole system of our Soviet organs on the one hand, and towards creating a number of economic facilitations in the sphere of agricultural taxation on the other.

THIS pacification of the peasantry can only be rightly considered if taken in its connection to the strengthening of the proletarian dictatorship. The political state of the peasantry is one of the most decisive factors for the security of the proletarian dictatorship. A proletarian dictatorship at war with the peasantry and with its main mass, the middle peasants, can never be secure. It was not by accident, and not an empty phrase, when Lenin told us that the supreme principle of proletarian dictatorship is the alliance with the peasantry.

It is not by accident that this saying has become a winged word. It was and remains one of the most important theses of Lenin's teachings. The favorable alteration which has taken place in the political temperature of our peasantry, and not of the cost of growing passivity, but accompanied by growing activity among the peasants, is one of our greatest successes in the political life of our country. It signifies the firmer establishment of the proletarian dictatorship, and an increase in the guiding influence of our party.

Resolution Adopted at the Second Annual Conference of International Labor Defense

Resolution on Sacco and Vanzetti.

THE imprisonment of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti has continued now for more than six years, and the shadow of a dead murder of innocent men committed by the state of Massachusetts, has hung over the heads of these two Italian workers during this whole period. These two workers who committed the unpardonable crime of being devoted to the labor movement and of having opinions considered heretical by the bourbons of Massachusetts, are completely innocent of the murder and robbery crimes charged against them. Yet, despite the fact that literally millions of workers and prominent public men in every country in the world have protested against the shameless frame-up and urged their swift release, and in the face of the overwhelming evidence which proves their innocence and which is now strengthened by the written confession of a man who admits that he and his companions are actually guilty of the crime charged against Sacco and Vanzetti, the two Italian workers are still kept in prison, daily confronted with the menace of a legal execution.

THE persistent and evasive refusal of the authorities not only to free the men, but a refusal to even grant them a new trial on the basis of the voluminous evidence now at hand, has aroused anew the determined protest of millions of workers. The authorities of Massachusetts are now playing the cunningly malicious game, so well known in labor persecutions, of delaying the case in an attempt to erase from the minds of the workers the memory of the case and to cause the agitation in behalf of the two workers to subside. In addition, the capitalist politicians are delaying the issue until after the November elections in order that they may avoid taking the consequences of any action at election time, hoping that when their political positions are secured they may deal with Sacco and Vanzetti as they have always intended.

THE second annual conference of International Labor Defense reemphasizes its firm belief in the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti and sends its brotherly greetings to them, assuring them of the resolute intention of the International Labor Defense to continue with greater energy and devotion than ever before its efforts in their behalf. The conference gives its unreserved endorsement to the campaign of publicity, protest and organization conducted by the national executive committee of the I. L. D. for Sacco and Vanzetti, and instructs the incoming national executive committee to continue this work unremittingly until Sacco and Vanzetti have been unconditionally released.

THE conference vigorously protests against the attempts being made by the Massachusetts authorities to delay the case when the innocence of the men is so clearly established and demands of Governor Alvan Fuller and Judge Webster Thayer that Sacco and Vanzetti be either summarily released, without conditions, or that they be granted the new trial which they have requested so that their innocence may be more plainly proved than ever before. The conference orders that a copy of this resolution to Governor Fuller, Judge Thayer and the press.

Sex License Charges of University Heads Come Home to Roost

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 30—(FP)—Charges of illicit practices between men and women students at the university, made by Wilfred O. Cross, former University of Illinois student, are but the echo of similar rumors industriously circulated by the university authorities against progressive instructors on the Illinois faculty during and after the war, it is stated in Champaign. President David Kinley and dean of men, Thomas Arkle Clark, who are frantically denying the Cross charges, were among those eager to discredit their opponents on the staff by circulating falsehoods among them.

Ernst Haeckel on "Last Words on Evolution"

I was led to make a very close study of these unicellular protists and their primitive cell-soul thru my research on the radiaria, a very remarkable class of colcroscopic organisms that float in the sea. I was engaged most of my time for more than thirty of the best years of my life (1856-87) in studying them in every aspect, and if I came eventually to adopt a strictly Monistic attitude on all the great questions of biology, I owe it for the most part to my innumerable observations and uninterrupted reflections on the wonderful vital movements that are disclosed by these smallest and frailest, and at the same time most beautiful and varied, of living things.

I had undertaken the study of the radiolaria as a kind of souvenir of my great master, Johannes Muller. He had loved to study these animals of which only a few species were discovered for the first time in the year of my birth, 1834; in the last years of his life, and had in 1855 set up the special group of the rhizopods (protozoa). His last work, which appeared shortly after his death (1858), and contained a description of 50 acries of radiolaria, went with me to the Mediterranean when I made my first long voyage, in the summer of 1859. I was so fortunate as to discover about 150 new species of radiolaria at Messina, and based on these my first monograph of this very instructive class of protists (1862). I had no suspicion at that time that fifteen years afterwards the deep-sea finds of the famous Challenger expedition would bring to light an incalculable wealth of these remarkable animals. In my second monograph on them (1887) I was able to describe more than 4,000 different species of radiolaria, and illustrate most of them on 140 plates. I have given a selection of the most prettiest forms on ten plates of my "Art-forms in Nature."

I have not space here to go into the forms and vital movements of the radiolaria, of the general import of which my friend, Wilhelm Bolsche, has given a very attractive account in his various popular works. I must restrict myself to pointing out the general phenomena that bear upon our particular subject, the question of the mind. The pretty flinty skeletons of the radiolaria, which endless and protect the soft and unicellular body, are remarkable, not only for their extraordinary gracefulness and beauty, but also for the geometrical regularity and relative constancy of their forms. The 4,000 species of radiolaria are just as constant as the 4,000 known species of ants; and, as the Darwinian Jesuit, Father Wasmann, has empowered him self that the latter have all descended by transformation from a common stem-form, I have concluded on the same principles that the 4,000 species of radiolaria have developed from a primitive form in virtue of adaptation and heredity. This primitive form the stem-radiolarian (Actissa) is a simple round cell, the soft living protoplasmic body of which is divided into two different parts, an inner central capsule (in the middle of which is the solid round nucleus) and an outer gelatinous envelope (calymma). From the outer surface of the latter, hundreds and thousands of fine plasmic threads radiate; these are mobile and sensitive processes of the living internal substance, the plasm (or protoplasm). These delicate pseudopodia (thread-, awl-, or needle-like), are the organs that effect the sensations of touch, the locomotion (by pushing), and the orderly construction of the flinty bones. At the same time they maintain the nourishment of the unicellular body, by seizing infusoria, diatome, and other protists, and drawing them within the gelatinous body, where they are digested and assimilated. The radiolaria generally reproduce by the formation of spores. The nucleus within the proto-plasmic globe multiplies into two small nuclei, each of which surrounds itself with a quantity of plasm, and forms a new cell

Lunary Pants

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

MUCH the we would like to devote our time to a portrayal of the sweet side of life, we find it impossible, for the very good reason that every piece of bunk that obtrudes itself on our vision carries with it an appeal to be swatted. Which brings us to the point. Buried deep in a news item, concocted in the office of the International Labor News Service in Washington, is an choice a morsel of offal as ever made a printer wish he were a scavenger. The writer was trying to do Mexico a favor when he turned out the junk but the side is what emerged from the editorial basbery:

"WHAT is needed is opposition of the clergy of Mexico. Such a thing as the splendid support of the struggles of the American Federation of Labor by the clergy of the church of this country is unknown in Mexico. If the clergy of Mexico could be brought to the modern and enlightened point of view of the clergy in the United States it would be a new thing in that country and the present difficulty would end; even the laws that are resented would not exist."

IF this is not the opposite of bunk, I will have to be shown. Did you ever see a hangman supporting a condemned person with a rope? In all probability you have not, as I assume that you are too humane to enjoy the sight of a person getting his neck broken. But anyhow, you have heard of such incidents. The kind of support that the church has given to the American labor movement is the kind the hangmen gives to his visible means of support. May the ghosts of their fathers help the Mexicans if their spiritual liabilities ever get wise to the methods so effectively employed by their United States brothers.

In these days of compromise one can absorb a healthy kick from Mexican news. Calles has the weak spots, and a scientific diagnosis would attribute them to the economic situation existing in Mexico and the position of that country in the international scheme of the capitalist system. What should be done and what can be done are not always one and the same thing. Guns, bombs and budgets are decisive—all other things being equal.

WHAT I went to say about Calles is, that he is injecting the raspberry into reaction, and the a socialist form of economy is not yet operating in Mexico, the working class have many reasons to defend the Calles administration. Latin peoples have a way of doing things dramatically. The way Calles is putting the spurs to the pope is good in a general way. And the fact that Calles is telling the Mexican people the reason why, is doubly meritorious.

WHAT is a progressive? An appropriate answer to this question would fill a book and as I have neither the time nor the energy to commit such an atrocity, the readers will be spared the pain. But, please get your mental machinery threshing out and answer to the query formulated above. Did a progressive ever serve a useful purpose? Is a progressive not a reformist? And does a reformist not spend most of his sober moments tinkering the capitalist system into workability? Therefore, argues the superficialist, the progressive is as big a nuisance as the chiropractor and should be annihilated.

THIS is where we disagree with you. The progressive, like some evidences of our kinship with the monkey, is a product of evolution. "But so is your old appendix!" you will re-

U. S. DELEGATES AMAZE BRITISH TRADE UNIONS

Hutcheson Satirized; Farrington Absent

The first issue of Lansbury's Labor Weekly to deal with the recent British Trades Union congress at Bournemouth has reached Chicago. It contains a delicate reference to the absence from the conference of Frank Farrington. Farrington, the recently deposed president of the Illinois Mine Workers, had been elected fraternal delegate to the British movement by the Atlantic City convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Lewis Pleased Him.

International President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers was instrumental in Farrington's election to the post. After Farrington had gone to Europe to attend the congress Lewis made the revelations that impelled the Illinois district board to depose its president.

International President Hutcheson of the carpenters was the other fraternal delegate. Writing about the pair, Ellen Wilkinson, who is a labor member of parliament and who spent the month of August in America appealing for funds for the British miners, says:

Mr. Hutcheson Did Not Know.

"An interview (in the Trades Union Congress newsletter) was supplied by Mr. Hutcheson, president of the carpenters' union of the United States, who had to represent America all by himself. Mr. Farrington, the other delegate appointed, was not present for some cause which Mr. Hutcheson did not know, but which the London Times said was due to the fact that Farrington had just left his post as president of the Illinois Miners' Union to accept a position with the Peabody Coal corporation at $15,000 a year.

Capitalists—They're Alright

"It was curious to watch the effect on the congress of Mr. Hutcheson's remarks that the A. F. of L. did not object to a man belonging to the capitalist classes provided that he did not seek to prevent the workers from improving their conditions. For he, the congress rose to his suggestion of a saving wage as opposed to the slogan of a living wage. Mr. Hutcheson perfectly represented the prosperous and kindly American!"

Hutcheson And His Diamond.

The cartoonist J. F. Horrebin in the same issue pictures Hutcheson in all his bulk looking at a large brilliantly flashing diamond on his index finger. Underneath is the caption, "The A. F. of L. delegate advocates a saving wage."

Pugh's Defeatist Speech.

(By Scott Nearing, Federated Press.)

Arthur Pugh, president of the Trades Union Congress, in his opening remarks laid special stress on the tendency of the Tory government to lengthen the working day. He pointed out that the Baldwin government had sabotaged the Washington Eight-Hour convention, and was now doing what it could to force the miners to accept a longer working day.

Struggle Sharpens Yearly.

As for the mine crisis, which is engaging the attention of the entire British nation, "We have left its mark upon the whole organized movement." Pugh pointed out that the struggle in the industry had been growing more fierce with the passing years. "Each recurrent conflict seems to deepen the antagonism between the parties."

The mining industry is disorganized, he said. The miners have suffered be-

Early Economic Meet to Be Called by The League; Germans Busy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Sept. 21.—Germany is speaking up for the German populations of territories given to other countries by the Versailles treaty. Foreign Minister Stresemann has spoken several times in behalf of the Germans in the cities of Memel and Danzig.

The league has approved in a subordinate commission, the French proposal to convoke an international economic conference at an early date. It will be open to both members and non-members of the league. Whether the Soviet Union will be invited is not known.

Packard Workers Hear Engdahl.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 21.—Carrying the Communist congressional campaign to the doors of the Packard automobile plant, J. Louis Engdahl, the party's candidate for United States senator from Illinois, spoke to a large gathering of auto workers at the noon hour here today. The workers showed great interest as Engdahl told them of the great profits taken by the czars of this industry as well as in the affiliated rubber industry.

British Kill Five Hundred Chinese in Reprisal for Commander's Death

When a couple of British river boats got between the line of fire on the Chinese from several sailors and a commander, F. C. Darling of H. M. S. Despatch were killed. Other gun boats were sent to the scene and were not satisfied until 500 Chinese lay dead from artillery and machine gun fire. The troops who paid with their lives were under the Chinese General Yang-San. The whole point is: What right have the British to be in China at all? The Centenese are answering that question by saying "none."

GERMANY MAKES OFFER OF CASH FOR EVACUATION

$125,000,000 Offered to Free Rhineland

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—In order to secure the evacuation of the Rhineland, the cessation of military occupation and the recovery of Eupen and Malmedy, the German government has offered to place 500,000,000 marks, or $125,000,000 worth of preferred stock in the German railways company in the hands of bankrupt France and Belgium.

In addition Germany will not object to the marketing of an equal number of railway stock, the total issue of which runs up to $2,750,000,000 under the Dawes' plan control, by which the German nationally owned lines were turned over for exploitation in behalf of reparations.

Tremendous protests have been made of the intensive profit-taking from the railways. The speed-up of the workers and the lack of proper repairing are charged as the cause of an increasing number of railway wrecks and disasters.

The offer, made by Stresemann, is known to have the consent of Hindenberg, and its acceptance by the cabinet is regarded as a mere formality.

Engdahl, at Cleveland Meeting, Urges Workers Save Sacco–Vanzetti

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 21.—Urging the workers of Ohio to join in the nation-wide fight to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, opened the congressional campaign here, this being his second meeting in the state; last week he spoke at Toledo.

Engdahl pointed out that the Mellon gang in the republican party is planning to pick Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati, speaker of the house of representatives, as a presidential candidate in 1928. It is felt that Coolidge cannot be put over again. Engdahl exposed Longworth's record as one of the most reactionary in the whole capitalist congress.

Packard Workers Hear Engdahl.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 21.—Carrying the Communist congressional campaign to the doors of the Packard automobile plant, J. Louis Engdahl, the party's candidate for United States senator from Illinois, spoke to a large gathering of auto workers at the noon hour here today. The workers showed great interest as Engdahl told them of the great profits taken by the czars of this industry as well as in the affiliated rubber industry.

CHICAGO WORKERS ARE ASKED TO ATTEND THE MASS MEETING TONIGHT

The connection of the slush fund poured into the campaign of both the republican Smith and the democrat Brennen by Samuel Insull, the open shop public utility magnate, with the Illinois labor movement has exposed the felsity of so-called "non-partisan" politics of the trade union bureaucracy to the eyes of every worker.

What is to be done about it will be the subject of a lecture tonight, Wednesday, at Mirror Hall, 1138 N. Western Ave., at 8 p. m. The candidate for U. S. senator on the Workers (Communist) Party ticket, J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne, editor of the THE DAILY WORKER, and Max Shachtman of the Young Workers League will be the speakers. All Chicago workers are invited.

DISASTER HALTS TRANSATLANTIC PLANE FLIGHT

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Two members of Captain Fonck's airplane crew that hopped off for the Paris flight this morning were killed when the ship crashed to the ground, Fonck and Lieutenant Curtin escaped.

The Geer Dregged.

The plane started to make its takeoff run about 6:30 a. m., and the accident occurred a few seconds later. With the right side of the landing gear dragging on the ground, the plane ran off the end of the runway, struck a shallow gully, turned slowly over on its back and caught fire. Fonck and Curtin managed to get out as the plane was turning over.

Collapse of the right landing gear while the plane was rushing across the mile-long-take-off path to gain momentum for its rise into the air caused the accident.

Fall into a Gulley.

Fonck and Curtin, sitting at the controls in the nose of the plane, were saved when the ship, failing to clear the ground after scooting a mile along the runway, fell into a deep gulley. They were thrown out and suffered only a few minor abrasions.

Clavier and Islamoff, however, were trapped in the burning plane.

The dapper French captain, hero of countless exploits in the world war, leaped into the plane shortly after six o'clock.

Heavy Load of Gasoline.

He went down the field in a cloud of dust, followed by spectators in automobiles. The great plane, heavily loaded with more than two thousand gallons of gasoline, disappeared over the brow of a little hill, descending into a twenty-foot gully.

NEW YORK LEADS OFF CAMPAIGN WITH BIG MEET

Gitlow, Dunne Speak in Central Opera House

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 21.—A rousing mass rally in the Central Opera House at which all of its main candidates will speak is to formally open the election campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party of New York on Friday, Sept. 24, 1926.

Candidates to Speak.

Benjamin Gitlow, former vice-presidential candidate, and now the Communist candidate for governor of the state, is announced as the main speaker. William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, who is running for senator from the state against the reactionaries, Wadsworth and Wagner, will speak with Gitlow. In addition, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, candidate for comptroller-general, William W. Weinstone, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, who is running for congress, will speak to the workers on the issues of the campaign as presented by the Communists. Jack Stachel, district organising secretary, will preside.

Considerable interest in the campaign has already been aroused among thousands of workers. The active participation of the Communists in the numerous strikes that have recently taken place in New York has gained for the Communist Party the confidence of many workers. The only other ticket in the field which has any pretensions to a labor character is that of the socialist party, which has refused to join in a common effort to establish a united labor ticket in the coming elections. Thousands of workers who formerly followed the socialist party have turned from it in disgust at its systematic support of conservative reactionaries in the labor movement who have been just as systematically ousted from control of the unions by a militant rank and file. The feebleness of the socialist party this year is not only an indication of its tremendously weakened organization and influence, but is a marked contrast to the spirit and enthusiasm which is being displayed in the conduct of the Communist campaign.

The meeting in the Central Opera House, the scene of many historic gatherings and demonstrations in the past, is being called as a ratification meeting for the entire ticket in the campaign. Harry Winitsky, campaign manager, announces that this will be the first of a series of scores of meetings in halls and on street corners in every section of the city. Preparations have already been made for an intensified election campaign this year and every effort is being made to secure the immediate number of signatures to place the candidates on the ballot and finances to prosecute the campaign.

Numerous influential trade union leaders have joined the campaign committee of the Workers (Communist) Party and will aid actively in the work of the election.

20,000 MORE SIGNATURES ARE NEEDED IN N. Y.

By HARRY M. WINITSKY, Campaign Manager.

The campaign in New York City has started. We are now gathering signatures and have started the open air meetings in the city. The most important task now confronting us is the procuring of sufficient signatures in order that our ticket may be put across. In order that we may appear on the ballot this year in New York we must have at least another 20,000 signatures in New York City. Those 20,000 signatures will put the following candidates on the ballot:

For governor, Ben Gitlow.

For lieutenant-governor, Frank P. Brill.

For comptroller, Juliet Stuart Poynts.

For attorney-general, Arthur S. Leede.

Local Ticket.

6th Assem. Dist., N. Y., Benjamin Litshitz, 1,050 signatures needed.

"I demand and insist upon my rights given me by the members at the above mentioned meeting, that my name absolutely be printed on the ballots for the next Wednesday evening election.

6. For complete reorganization of finances and the separation of the offices of financial secretary from that of business agent, and for the election of an auditing committee of rank and file members.

7. For amalgemation of all the needle trade unions into one organization in the industry, practical steps towards this to be taken by initiating joint organization campaigns together with the International Ladies' Garment Workers, the Cap and Millinery Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and as many unions in the industry as would be willing to go along with such a campaign.

ANTHRACITE BARONS FIGHT U. M. W. OF A

Officials Not Fighting Company Schemes

(Article One.)

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 21. The Hudson Coal company, one of the largest operators in this district, with huge properties both here and in Scranton, employing between 20,000 and 25,000 men, is taking advantage of the weakness of the anthracite agreement and the apathy of the district and national officials of the United Mine Workers of America, to undermine and destroy the union.

This company is following the plan of whipping the miners from the union by means of social gatherings called "suppers" to which the miners are "invited," fed and entertained.

The word "invited" is a liberal one which includes a tour of the mines by the foreman before each affair and the use of intimidation in the form of veiled threats. "If you want to get along with me, you better be at the supper" is one of the commonest expressions by which miners are "invited."

The company has a special meeting the company arranges a supper for the same evening and dinners who object are called into the superintendents' office to explain their attitude.

At these gatherings the union is ridiculed by means of specially prepared songs and stories of the hired entertainers.

One story will illustrate the general run of this propaganda:

"The entertainer relates how some miners were talking about raises in wages. One of them suggests holding a conference. A Polish miner objects and is made to say:

"No conference. All get drunk today and start striking tomorrow."

The obvious inference is that miners strike because they get drunk and not because companies pay low wages or violate agreements.

The efficiency program of the company is put forward at these meetings in various forms. Skilled miners estimate that the result of the company's activities and the lack of struggle against them led by the officials has been to increase production at least one ton per day, not for every MINER employed, but for every MAN employed—laborers and all others.

Figured on the basis of 60 per ton, (a very low estimate) and multiplying this by a minimum of 20,000 employed, it means that the increased production has a market value of $1,200,000.

Of this increased production the miner receives or finds himself with except the suppers given by the company.

An instance of how the company gradually and by use of deception and force is accomplishing the reduction to exert every pound of energy for the profit is seen in the case of rock dirt. Formerly these cars were two gallon pails. Now they are four gallon pails, the workers load double the amount of rock for the same pay.

When the third pail was added the company informed the workers that this was for the purpose of preventing the topping falling onto the roadbed—that it would keep the tracks clean. Then the foremen insisted that the three-pail car be topped the same as the two-pail car had been, and finally the fourth pail was added and these, too, must be topped to prevent the topping falling onto the roadbed—that is the term for the rock or coal which is piled up above the side of the car.)

Speeding up goes hand in hand with the system of the company to weaken the union and so far the district and national officials have paid no attention to a company policy which means death to the United Mine Workers of America in the anthracite unless checked.

OUT ONE UNION MINE LEFT IN SOUTHERN OHIO

Open Shoppers Crush Sub-District 2

By HARVEY O'CONNOR, Federated Press.

POMEROY, Ohio, Sept. 21.— Three years ago 4,000 union miners were mining, loading and shipping coal from Pomeroy Bend and other districts in extreme southern Ohio. Today but 200 union men are working in the sole union mine left in the territory designated as subdistrict 2 of the Ohio Mine Workers.

Breaks Union.

The New Pittsburgh Coal company, notorious thruout western Pennsylvania and West Virginia as a savage foe of unionism, resorting to state police, injunctions, armed guards and violence to operate scab mines, has succeeded in breaking the back of the miners' organization in southern Ohio. This company also has large properties in the Hocking and Ohio valleys of this state, and is bidding its time to reopen these properties under the 1917 scale.

Fake Co-Operative.

Another outfit, the Maynard Coal company, is operating under a fake "co-operative" plan, forcing their workers to accept paper stock in part payment for their wages. Having cleaned the stums of the big cities and the hinterland of Kentucky by misguided workers, these two big companies, together with the Salter & Lease Coal company, are heading the nonunion parade in Ohio.

Two Tons Per Day.

None of them are making money, for the inexperienced men are incompetent and inefficient. An average production of two tons a day for each employee, compared with a skilled miner's 8, has forced the Pittsburgh company to sweep out management and introduce the latest schemes for speeding up production, but to little effect. Several of its mines have had to close because of uneconomical production.

Pay Dearly For Illusion.

The Maynard properties, knocked down to receivers for $50,000, are being raised to the duped workers at a handsome profit. One mine was sold for $50,000 alone, another for $30,000, while the receivers retain full rights in a third pit. The men are paying on 31,000 shares, but by the time their meager stock purchases allow them to take possession, they will find only cavities holes in the ground, according to union officials.

Cheated on Sales.

These "co-operative" miners have also been caught in another trap. The receivers stipulated that they were to sell the coal at a profit to themselves. Knowing the miners are helpless, they have contracted to retail the entire product at $1.30 a ton, when $2 and up is the price for similar coal from neighboring union districts. Working under this fake co-operative plan, the miners have to keep on producing to fulfill the contract, even tho their own wages will be depressed to $4 a day.

Wage-But Put Over.

The Pittsburgh company has another "racket" equally effective. It demands that loaders tose 18 tons of coal for a day's wage of $5. But only the strongest and hardiest miner can load so much in a day, so the task is carried over to the next day. When the miner has forced his 18 tons, he gets his $5 and not before. Thirty-six thousand pounds of coal for $5 means that he must lift 72 pounds to earn one cent.

Merchants Get Deserved Lesson.

Pomeroy merchents, who clamored loudest for union miners to break away from the union and work for the 1917 scale, now rue the day. The Pittsburgh runs its own company stores, forces miners to patronize them and has nearly ruined the city merchants who profited handsomely from high wages and independent patronage of union days. Even truck gardenars near the city, who eked out a fair living in former times by selling to city grocers, are now forced to deal with the company's big commissary department at prices which level them with the exploited miner.

Want Union Action.

Sixteen hundred union miners are sticking it out in Pomeroy, some getting work in other industries and others struggling on the small pittance from the union. They yearn for the day when the United Mine Workers of America will really fight Pittsburgh Coal in Pennsylvania and West Virginia and force a return to unionism in the Bend.

Killed by Tractor.

AURORA, Ill., Sept. 21.—Arthur Shoger, 34, prominent Plainfield, Ill., farmer and plowman who competed in the annual Wheatland plowmaa match classic last Saturday, was caught under his own tractor plow, dragged some distance and so badly cut he places that he died early today, while at work on his farm near Plainfield. Shoger was unmarried.

All Of These Are SUPPOSED To Be Progressive

These senators compose what is known as the "insurgent Republican Bloc" in the senate. They will hold the balance of pewer next session. The workers and farmers, however, will 'net profit from this fact.

U. S. Delegates Amaze British

cause of this disorganization and because of the five year trade crisis thru which Britain has been passing. The government proposes to let the mine owners and the workers fight the issue out by themselves.

This policy cannot he tolerated. The government believes in the mines for the mine-owners: the Trade Union Congress demands the mines for the nation.

An "Understanding" To Dodge.

Altho there is an understanding that there shall be no discussion of the general strike at this conference because of the mine dispute, President Pugh devoted a large part of his address to this, "the most significant development in our history since congress was formed in 1865." The general strike was "an inspiring and convincing manifestation of loyalty, solidarity and determination."

On its face, the general strike was a gesture of sympathy for the miners. Basically, it was an expression of "the growing discontent of the workers with the whole structure and policy of the industrial system, and their determination to resist the traditional idea, that bad trade can be made good, economic progress and vitality attained and industry placed in a healthy condition by the mere expedient of degrading the standard of life of the working people."

A General Attack On Unions.

The ruling class is trying to bolster up its position by a general attack on the trade unions. They do not seem to realize that the unions have been among the most constructive forces in British life. They have pursued their historic task of raising the standard of the working class.

"There are judges and lawyers who still think they can spin their cobwebs of legal restrictions upon the unions. There are employers who still seek to maintain an autocracy in industry and believe they can stamp out trade unionism. All this is a dangerous mistake. The trade unions . . . mark the rise of the working people to power and responsibility, and no attack upon them can succeed except at the risk of a social convulsion which may endanger the structure of the existing state."

Leaders Reveal Defeatism.

The unions, said Pugh have nothing to apologize for. They "do not meet in this congress in any mood of penitence, nor with any consciousness of defeat."

But there was defeat in his voice when he uttered these words, and the leaders are plainly worried. They face a black future of economic hardship and owning class assault.

No Guts For Struggle.

Nothing in the speech showed an understanding of the economic and social issues involved in the present struggle. President Pugh did not even stress the struggle of the miners, nor suggest any necessity for drastic action to help them in their desperate plight. He spoke hopefully of world labor unity, and discussed labor education, but his heart was in none of it.

Scarborough Spirit Faded.

The affiliated membership of the congress is larger by 14,000 than it was last year, but the spark of revolutionary fervor that shone at Scarborough burnt itself out in the general strike and the leaders who were prominent then, with the exception of Harry Pollett, who is still in prison, are glum and silent. Congress opened under a cloud that still hangs heavy over its sessions.

U. T. W. URGES SUPPORT OF PASSAIC STRIKE

Asks A. F. of L. Unions to Issue Appeal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 21. — A resolution calling on all organized labor to assist the Passaic textile strike, was passed by the convention of the United Textile Workers of America sitting in the Great Northern Hotel, 110 West 57th street.

The resolution requested all international unions of the American Federation of Labor to circularize their affiliations.

"The textile workers," the resolution read, "must be assured of food until the strike ends. Organized labor must not allow a curtailment of relief lest it weaken the strike and result in a settlement not advantageous as would he if the strikers, assured df the full support of organized labor, continue their struggle with linen unbroken."

Gustav Desk, chairman of the strike committee of Passaic Local 1603, U. T. W., in which the Passaic textile strikers are now organized, urged the delegation to back the new local to the limit of their ability.

"Any impartial investigation," Mr. Desk added, "would prove that it was the mill owners and their agents who used violence against us. We were deprived of every constitutional guarantee: we were denied the right of free speech, free assemblage and free press. All civil liberties vouchsafed under the constitutions of the state of New Jersey and the United States were denied us. We have been brutally assaulted and we have had to have recourse to the law in order to compel Sheriff Nimmo of Bergen county to obey the law."

Miss Charlotte Convey, the injured student, was cut on the shoulder by flying glass.

Milwaukee Laborer's Union Assesses Its Members for Strikers

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 21.—The Hod Carriers' and Common Laborers' Union No. 113 of Milwaukee, at their last meeting voted unanimously an assessment of 50 cents per member to help the British miners. This is the first Milwaukee labor organization to assess its members for this purpose. It is estimated that it will bring a total of $650.00 for relief.

CANTON ORDERS FOREIGN SHIPS OUT OF HANKOW

Inspires All China as Foes Collapse

SHANGHAI, Sept. 21.—Daily the Chinese national revolution against imperialism advances with giant strides, the moral effect of the military victories in the Hankow region echoes thruout China and causes greater collapse among the native militarists and a reaction toward moderation by the imperialist powers who have subsidized these reactionary leaders.

To Stop Gun Running.

Evidently to stop the gun running to reactionary forces by the foreign warships, General Chiang Kai-shih, commander of the Cantonese armies, has ordered all foreign warships to withdraw from the Yangtze river in the vicinity of Hankow.

All foreign consuls at once answered that the "treaty rights," which were forced upon China when she was weak and helpless, must be fulfilled. Hankow is 600 miles from the sea and no nation which has force to back its demands would permit hostile meddling anch as the foreign powers carry on far within China's borders under these "treaties."

British Back Down.

Hostile demonstrations against foreign warships is being shown by Chinese all along the upper Yangtze. Standard Oil Company boats are evacuating Americans from the region and the British have toned down their previous belligerent attitude and plans for a punitive expedition to retaliate for the Wanhsien affair have been abandoned.

The Cantonese are bombing Wuchang by airplanes and besieging it with infantry and its immediate fall is expected. Reports that the Cantonese will not permit Americans and other foreigners in the city to leave are denied here. They are not known to be in especial peril now or danger, except as they are remaining in a zone of battle and subject to consequent risk.

May Open Way to Shanghai.

The Cantonese are engaged with the troops of Sun Chuan-fang at Wusieh, west of the important city of Kiukiang, which if captured will likely cause a collapse of Sun's armies and open the way to Shanghai for the Cantonese.

Altho Sun's forces have crossed the Hupeh-Hunan border and threaten the Cantonese at Changsha, the swift change in sentiment to favor the Cantonese is tending to make Sun's hostile position untenable. In Shanghai the anti-Sun sentiment is powerful and growing rapidly.

Peking Government Quits.

A sign of collapse of reactionary opposition to the national revolution is seen in the resignation of the Peking cabinet, whose power has been a myth and which is wholly ignored by Chinese and only exists for foreign imperialist diplomacy.

Chang Tso-lin is expected to form a new cabinet, but the fact that the old one is resigning shows that the Kuomintchun or "people's army" northwest of Peking may soon drive Chang back to Manchuria and unite with the Cantonese in Shansi and Honan provinces.

A statement just issued by the central committee of the Kuomintang declares that the party is not "Bolshevik" and does not aim at a Communist regime, but to free the country from oppressive militarists and foreign imperialism and unite it under a strong central government, as was the program of Dr. Sun Yet Sen.

To Move Capital to Hankow.

It also declares for Sun Yat Sen's idea of moving the capital from Canton to Hankow. In regard to foreign policy, it declares it is friendly to all powers, but will firmly insist on the abolition of the unequal treaties which were forced upon China. It hopes this can be accomplished peacefully, but it will be accomplished.

Austrian Unemployed Help Themselves by Seizing Vacant Land

VIENNA, Austria, Sept. 21.—Austria has a "back to the land" movement by the unemployed, led by Franz Welkert, acting in the capacity of "General" Coxey of American fame. Some of the 150,000 Austrian unemployed have simply taken possession of the former imperial hunting forest near Orth in lower Austria, and are building log cabins on it in frontier style, preparatory to claiming the land for agriculture.

The present owners, an association of war invalids, also got it by the same means following the revolution after the war, but they vacated it and it is now under Vienna administration thru a holding company.

The unemployed claim that there are 1,000,000 acres of uncultivated land suitable for colonization and they demand that the jobless be given part of it. "We couldn't wait forever for the government to allot the land, so we took the estate, where the soil is the best," Welkert explains. A society has been formed called the "Colonise at Home Society."

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 21.—"Enormous property damage" was done in Pensacola by the tropical hurricane, it was reported here late today at the office of the superintendent of the L. & N. railroad.

Damage to wharves and docks was heavy.

No mention was made of loss of life. The report was brought out of Pensacola by a railroad official in an automobile and relayed here thru the dispatcher at Montgomery.

FORMER D. OF J. MAN TESTFIES AT BRIBE TRIAL

Daugherty and Miller Changed the Rules

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—It was the policy of the U. S. Attorney General's office in 1921 to disallow such claims as the one for $7,000,000 granted later to the Societa Suisse unless supported by "written evidence," Lucian H. Boggs, lawyer, of Jacksonville, Fla., formerly special assistant to the attorney general, testified at the Daugherty-Miller trial in federal court today.

Harry M. Daugherty, formerly attorney general, and Thomas W. Miller, dormerly alien property custodian are charged with conspiracy and negligence in office in connection with the return to foreign interests of the Societa Suisse assets which had been seized as alien property during the war.

Previous testimony had tended to show that the legalizing of the claim was based on an "oral transfer" made to the Societa Suisse by the German owners of the seized property of the American Metals company.

Boggs was a surprise witness. He returned from Europe yesterday and was immediately subpoenaed by the government.

AIMEE WANTS CASH TO AID WAR ON DEVIL

Deathbed Scene Shifts to Appeal for Money

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21.—The collection of a huge fund to assist Aimee Semple McPherson, noted woman evangelist, in her fight to clear herself and mother of conspiracy charges in connection with the alleged kidnaping of Mrs. McPherson, was under way here today.

Apparently entirely recovered from her "illness" of the past few days, Mrs. McPherson occupied the pulpit at Angelus Temple yesterday and asked members of her congregation to donate money to aid her.

"The county will spend every cent that can be raised," she said, "to prove this case. Those who want to see truth prevail must come to our defense."

Mrs. McPherson told the congregation that she was confident that at least 100 persons would give $1,000 each for the fund which she termed a "fight-the-devil" fund.

Mrs. McPherson's mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, is already under arrest, as is Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Setlaf, as the outgrowth of the sensational kidnapping case. The latter charges that Mrs. McPherson dickered with her to produce a "Miss X" to be named as the companion of Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio operator at the Angelus Temple, at the cottage at Carmel.

Only the illness of Mrs. McPherson has prevented her arrest on a similar conspiracy charge. She became deathly ill from a pimple on her nose when she heard arrest was coming. She has posted a bond of $2,500, however, for appearance in court on Sept. 27.

A nation-wide search is now in progress for Ormiston, who is reported to be in the vicinity of Los Angeles, altho his presence there is but a matter of conjecture.

Two other persons are also being sought by officers. One of them is the person who was to have been the "Miss X," and the other is "John Doe" Martin, said to have been engaged in engineering details of the alleged conspiracy.

MILITANT TRADE UNIONISM

NEVER was the militant trade union movement so greatly in need of a fighting daily newspaper to champion its struggles.

The burning flame of a new fighting spirit of the miners, fur workers, textile workers, needle trades and other bodies of organized labor is kindling a new spirit thruout the labor movement.

The club of the government in the Watson-Parker Bill is awakening the men on the railroads.

In this period, militant trade unionism needs a daily newspaper to record its struggles, and TO FIGHT!

The DAILY WORKER needs funds to become stronger and bigger and a greater source of power for the militant trade union movement.

SPANISH KING AND DICTATOR IN OPEN CLASH

Alfonso May Abdicate or Force Rivera Out

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID, Sept. 21.—A full cabinet meeting with King Alfonso at San Sebastian is in session today with the gravest possibilities in prospect. These include, an open break between the king and the dictator, Prime de Rivera. This may result in forcing de Rivera out or the abdication of the king.

May Change Form of Government.

Even the conservative papers are warning of a governmental crisis, one stating: "We are in a political moment of transcendental importance, one in which nothing less than a new organization of the basis of state power is seen."

The hostility between de Rivera and Alfonso has long been hidden beneath the surface, but the king can see in a competitor in de Rivera that may threaten his own monarchial power, and for this reason has secretly aided the army officers in their plans for revolt against the dictator.

Two Demands of Rivera.

De Rivera is going to the council to demand the king sign two decrees. One for a fake parliament of mere consultive nature, on the strength of the recent "plebiscite" vote, and the other a decree calling for complete reorganization of the army in such a way as to eliminate de Rivera's enemies among the powerful but unofficial officers' groups.

TWO AMERICAS TO HAVE REPS AT BRUSSELS

Delegates Attend Anti-Imperialist Conference

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Besides an official delegate of the Mexican government as promised by President Plutarco Calles, the Brussels conference called by the League Against Colonial Suppression for the middle of November, the two American continents will have representatives from Cuba, Porto Rico, Argentina, Chile, Venezuela, Central American countries and labor and anti-imperialist organizations in the United States.

Address U. S. League.

A communication has been addressed by the All-America Anti-Imperialist League (United States Section), the organization in the United States co-operating with the Berlin International Committee, to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the National Negro Improvement Association, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and other Negro organizations calling on them to send delegates to Brussels.

Growing Left.

"It has been our opinion," says the letter of the league of above organizations, "that a getting together in conference of oppressed races and nationalities on a world-wide scale must raise the status of all and forge a basis of mutual co-operation in what is fundamentally a common struggle. As an anti-imperialist organization we maintain that the point of view that the evils of imperialism are manifested not only in far-off lands such as Haiti, Africa, etc., but also by oppressed racial groups in the home country of imperialism."

The suit had been filed in common pleas court of Monroe county here, June 26, last. Child is a famous booster of fascism.

GOVERNMENT OF SPAIN UTTERLY BROKE; MAY FALL

Has No Funds and Owes an Enormous Debt

(By a Spanish Worker.)

MADRID (By Mail).—The critical situation of the treasury is at present the subject of gravest concern to the Spanish government. In spite of having taken no part in the world war, the treasury is in such a crisis that it may well cause the fall of the present government, if not cause even graver consequences, should a remedy, which is difficult, be not immediately found.

The total Spanish debt is 17,109,043,754 pesetas (a peseta at par is worth about 15 cents). Of this the state has consolidated 13,847,945,854 pesetas, and the remainder, some 4,639,499,900 pesetas, is issued in treasury bonds issued during the directorate (Primo de Rivera's dictatorship).

These bonds reach maturity on the following dates: 1098 millions on February 4, 1927; 700 millions in April, 1928; 1,878 millions on November 1, 1928; 1,283 millions January 1, 1929, and 800 millions on July 5, 1930.

Spain acquired this debt in her Moroccan war, since in this undertaking Spain spent around 900 millions each year, approximately the same quantity which her deficit reaches. The expenditure last year in the Moroccan war was 887,847,647 pesetas.

The Spanish budget (which has not been revised since the beginning of the directorate), is 2,672,428,280 pesetas, of which 900 millions have to be paid in interest and 900 millions set aside for the Moroccan war, as I stated above. Thus only 1,180 millions remain, on of which one-half goes to the army and navy, leaving only 600 millions for public works and education. This will give some idea of the backward state of these two last departments.

Robbed the Budget for War.

We must also take into consideration that perhaps the directorate has not given to the public this insignificant amount in public works and education, because one of the first acts of the dictatorship established on September 13, 1923, was to suspend the law governing the keeping of public accounts, which prohibited transferring credits from one section of the budget to another.

From this it follows that the expenditures in the army, navy and for Moroccan war may be even greater then above indicated, and to the detriment of the budget for public works and education.

Government Flat Broke.

At the present moment the government's current account in the "Banco de Espana" is zero, so to meet its payments the government will not in any way be able to avoid making use of the right it has to borrow up to the limit of 350 millions of pesetas from the Banco de Espana, without interest.

The situation is absolutely unprecedented in Spain since the Restoration.

Commonwealth School Shows Good Progress

MENA, Ark., Sept. 21.—(FP)—The erection of a cottage for a faculty member brings the number of buildings on the Commonwealth College campus to 16. The school provides education for workers on a self-supporting basis. Its work has attracted the hostile attention of the Arkansas American legion.

Tammany Hall and the Trade Unions

By ROBERT DUNN.

THE need for a labor party to unite the workers must be apparent to anyone who has followed the workings of the Tammany machine in New York City and its relation to the leadership of certain labor unions. The object of this article is merely to sketch some of the incidents in this relationship. The reader can judge for himself what the effects of it must be upon the trade union leaders and upon the general problem of trade union political unity.

To barter the "labor vote" for political preference has been one of the favorite tricks of some of the trade union leadership almost since the days when unions were first organized in this state. The labor leaders have always taken part in politics of the most partisan character, the, of course, professing publicly that they were interested in the game only as "non-partisans."

AND the labor leaders have for decades been more or less strenuously opposed by the socialists and socialist-laborites, who have claimed that the trading of votes for personal jobs was not the way to get labor ahead in the political field.

One of the most militant and articulate exposers of the labor leader in this role was Daniel De Leon, who declared in session and out of season that the trade union leadership was betraying the workers at every election. In the national, state and local councils of labor the socialists carried on the same constant attack upon the "fat boys" who were feathering their nests by trading the labor vote for business and political jobs.

RUN down the lists of the important officers of the New York State Federation of Labor, for example, and you find a goodly number of them who found their way into happy political positions thru these methods. Even before the days of the State Federation, when the state body was known as the Workingmen's Assembly, we find the first president, Jim Connolly of the Practical Painters' Union, ending up as e state factory inspector.

He was followed by W. N. Thayer of the Typographical Union, who was later president of the common council of Troy and the warden of Dannemora Prison. The next president, Tom Dowling, a blacksmith's official, was rewarded by the position of state commissioner of labor statistics. After him came Bill O'Brien of the cravin cutters, who was later the sheriff of New York county.

THEN, with the formation of the State Federation of Labor, we find Pat Lavery, a typographical man, the first president, who later appointed to the state civil service commission. Martin Murphy of the molders, followed Lavery. He, in turn, became a civil service commissioner in Buffalo and then went into business.

The next executive was John Pallen of the pattern makers, who became commissioner of labor statistics of New York, while the next in line, W. O. Jones, graduated into the job of building inspector at Utica. Finally we come to Jim Holland, the present incumbent, who has held several appointive tho apparently not so lucrative offices from the state while still in labor office. He is now on the board of standards and appeals.

THE press on February 4 announced Holland's appointment by Mayor Walker as a "lay member" of this board at a salary of $7,500. The New York Times says: "He formerly held the same position at e per diem rate of $10 for each session . . . but was dropped by Mayor Hylan after he came out in favor of Walker for mayor in the last campaign."

If Mr. Holland retains his $5,000 position as head of the New York State Federation of Labor the two jobs will together net him a tidy income from salaries alone of $12,500. The average factory worker in the state, it may be well to remember, earns annually, if employed full time, approximately $1,550, or one-tenth of this amount.

THE same evolution of labor leaders it could be followed thru all the other offices of state importance. Among the secretaries and treasurers, vice-presidents and legislative agents who later held public offices were Alexander Troup, later e collector of federal customs under President Cleveland; Richard Curran, now e member of the state industrial board; Edward Bates, later deputy secretary of state; John Williams, later e state labor commissioner; Patrick Doyle, later with the state railroad commission; Jim Lynch, now head of the International Typographical Union and once head of the state industrial commission; Jim Hooley, appointed as state factory inspector; Jim McManus, a mediator in the state department of labor; Tom Williams, later a state compensation law commissioner in the Albany district; John Bogert, license commissioner of Greater New York, and Herman Robinson, also a license commissioner, following Bogart.

THE above list is only e hint of the graduations which have taken place, of labor officials stepping out into substantial state and city offices. As John O'Hanlon, the present secretary of the State Federation of Labor, says:

"The long list of vice-presidents and associate officers, accumulated during the past sixty years, contain many of the most notable names in trade union annals and of many now occupying prominent places in business, professional and governmental circles" (emphasis ours).

The above are but a few examples out of the historical records of this state.

TO come down to more recent days, a look at the current shakings of the plum tree will convince the most skeptical that the labor officials have not been slighted in return for their services in the field of "non-partisan politics." Take first the state department of labor, where labor cases would most naturally be found. Some 35 are now on the roll and six of these belong to the class exempt from the civil service examinations.

These six are Mr. Cuneen, referred to above; Mr. Gernon, Mr. Deering, M. Gompers and M. Jackson. Mr. Donahue, who is a director of the bureau of workmen's compensation, probably achieved office because as an official of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers he had organized and acted as chairman of the "Railroad Men's Non-Partisan League of Greater New York," supporting Governor Smith. The other five appointees were apparently deserving democrats.

THERE we must not forget some of the present day luminaries in the local and state labor movement, mentioning first Mr. Peter J. Brady, a former official of the photo-engravers and the Allied Printing Trades Council. He was for many years the supervisor of the City Record, the daily official publication of the City of New York, receiving $7,500 accompanying this office is $6,500. Mr. Brady within the last year turned over this office to a friend and now devotes his time to banking, being the president of the Federation Bank of New York.

Mr. Stephen Kelley, former president of the Allied Printing Trades Council, was very glad to pick up Mr. Brady's job with the City Record. It is understood that in addition to the $6,500 the job carries with it a small amount of patronage.

THEN we have Mr. John Sullivan, president of the New York Trades and Labor Council, e former official of the Brewery Workers' Union. Since 1921 Mr. Sullivan has held a $4,000 position as director of the Industrial Aid Bureau of the city. Mr. James F. Costello, of the executive council of the Central Trades and Labor Council, is assistant director of the same bureau, receiving $3,000 per annum in addition to his income from the Metal Polishers' and Buffers' Union.

Other labor officials who now hold honorary, if $10-a-session positions in the city or state government are such well-known figures as Hugh Frayne, Jerome B. Keating, John Mundwiler, John K. Halsted and several others. Alderman Kenuelly, pal of Brindell and a power in Tammeny circles, is still an official of the Steamfitters' Union.

AFTER considering this list, one cannot be astonished at the eleventh-hour developments in the presidential campaign of 1924 when the executive council of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater York City swung from LaFollette to Davis, accompanied by the officials of the Allied Printing Trades Council of New York and the State Federation of Labor itself in the person of Jim Holland. The Tammeny Tiger had only to swish its tail and these gentlemen rushed away from their former pledges and delivered in e body to the Tammeny candidate.

One must remember also that the "Al Smith socialists" in the needle trades deserted their candidate, Dr. Thomas, and lined up with Al. Just what the considerations were is not known to this writer. Dr. Thomas spoke it was "rum, race and religion" that provided the issues on which Al could amble away with the socialist vote. Whatever there may be in this, one cannot overlook the close political relations of the needle trades leaders and certain democratic politicians who had performed substantial favors for the trade union bureaucrats in their struggles against the left wing and the Communists.

OF course the labor leaders have been systematically "sold" to Smith for a good many terms. Al's platforms have reeked with civic righteousness and social reform. On the vital issues, however, and in the critical moments he has not delivered.

Take, for example, two of the hardy perennials among the resolutions passed yearly by the New York State Federation of Labor—child labor and the injunction. Al was, of course, pledged to smite them both. But the first he evaded when he saw that the catholic church was anti-labor. So he forgot his pledge, knowing that labor, as usual, would forget his forgetting when it came time for another election.

THEN the injunction evil. Labor had always come out strongly against it. But the state democratic platform in 1924 slid over the issue and a few months later a labor-supported justice, Churchill, was handing out injunctions against labor on behalf of the International Tailoring Company.

These are but typical examples of "labor's reward" in the way of protective legislation for dancing to the tune of the Tammany gangsters. But the labor leaders should worry. They got something more tangible and personal than legislation. So they go on endorsing capitalist party candidates [illegible]

National Defense to Gain by 600 Planes for Commercial Use

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. — A prediction that 600 commercial airplanes will be in service within six months was made by Secretary of Commerce Hoover today. The planes to produce this equipment, will be a valuable addition to America's national defense, he said.

SHANGHAI UNION LABOR PROTESTS AGAINST BOSSES

Strike Against Long Hours and Low Wages

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 21.—In a manifesto to the public the Shanghai General Labor Union declares that a workman cannot maintain his family on $12 a month, which is the average wage in the factories. Working hours are between 12 and 16 a day and no raises or stoppage for dinner is permitted. There is no day of rest. Sanitary accommodations are not provided.

Persecution Added.

"It is well known," says the statement, "that the cost of living in Shanghai is the highest in China. Whenever we requested a raise in wages or betterment in treatment our demands have been flatly rejected by the factory owners. They dismiss our representatives and ask the police to arrest the 'ringleaders' of the workers. Our patience has reached a limit. That is the reason there are many strikes."

180,000 Strike.

Both European, Japanese and Chinese factory owners have resisted these demands of the workers so stubbornly that during July there were 100 strikes, involving some 160,000 workers. They were accused of radical tendencies, but this they denied, saying that all they were asking was a chance to feed their families and maintain health while at work.

COOLIDGE IN NEW ATTACK UPON MEXICO

Starts New Offensive for Oil Companies

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Bullying of the Calles government in Mexico on behalf of American oil companies that are balking payment of taxes in Mexico has been resumed tu Washington, under the slight pretext of the killing of an American citizen in Mexico by bandits.

Utterly disconnected as the oil dispute and the bandit crime are, the Coolidge administration has seized the occasion of the murder of Rosenthal to suggest that it will vigorously uphold the right of American oil men to 'enjoy profits that the Mexican constitution and laws do not permit them to take from the subsoil of that country.

Resume Oil Attack.

Armed intervention in Mexico by the United States is not within the possibilities of the situation, but Secretary Kellogg and Ambassador Sheffield have launched upon a new cycle of note-sending and scowling at the Mexican government below the Rio Grande. This program has been interrupted by the struggle in Mexico between church and state.

That contest appears to be virtually over as a result of the rallying of the Mexican nation to the side of the government. Now Kellogg is about to resume that Mexico recognize the title of the oil companies to the oil deposits to which they secured claims in violation of the Mexican constitution.

COLONEL FORBES GETS TURNED DOWN ON PLEA FOR PAROLE FROM PEN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LEAVENWORTH, Kans., Sept. 21.—Col. Charles R. Forbes, former director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, an inmate of the federal prison here since March, 1926, was refused a parole at the session of the parole board which came to a close today. It was learned today.

Forbes was one of 497 inmates before the September meeting of the board. He is serving a two-year sentence in connection with defrauding the government in the construction of hospitals for disabled soldiers.

MOROS OF JOLO VOTE TO FREE ISLES FROM U.

Also Condemn the Bacon Bill

(Special to The Daily Worker)

JOLO, P. I., Sept. 21.—On motion of Councilor Mujut and seconded by Councilor Maharan, both Moros, the municipal council recently passed a resolution protesting against the Bacon bill. The resolution demands the immediate granting of independence to the Philippines and lands limiting holdings to 1,024 acres.

Firestone's Plans.

Firestone has declared that he is willing to undertake the colonization of 500,000 acres if the Philippine land laws are abrogated. The Bacon bill is an indirect attempt to nullify these land laws. The Jolo resolution is the official expression of the Moros in the island on the question of the Bacon bill and also expressed the earnest wish for independence.

Jolo Isolated.

Jolo Island is in the territory supposed to be included in the Bacon bill, which provides for segregating the Philippine lands of Mindanao, Palawan and the Sulu group so that American land speculators may override the Filipino people and lawfully acquire vast tracts of land laws limiting holdings to 1,024 acres.

Firestone's Plans.

Firestone has declared that he is willing to undertake the colonization of 500,000 acres if the Philippine land laws are abrogated. The Bacon bill is an indirect attempt to nullify these land laws. The Jolo resolution is the official expression of the Moros in the island on the question of the Bacon bill and also expressed the earnest wish for independence.

Recall Slaughter of Moros by General

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 21.—William Philip Simms, Daily News foreign editor, in an article entitled "Why the Lincoln bill, points out that the Moros suffered more under United States rule than any time in their history.

He points out that the Moros were literally slaughtered under the military dictatorships of Generals Wood, Bliss and Pershing, in the years 1903 to 1913.

General Pershing's reputation dates to the World War was won chiefly fighting the Moros, and it was not until 1913, on the little mountain of Bagsak in the Sulus, that he finally broke the back of their resistance."

Socialist Party Fights Unity of Action of Workers

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, Exec. Sec'y, Workers (Communist) Party.

THE National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party has sounded a note of alarm to the locals and members of that organization and made what the St. Louis "Labor" terms "an important request" to the locals of the party.

This "important request" is nothing less than a seven point warning to the locals of the Socialist Party not to permit themselves to become part of united action of the workers in their present day struggles.

THE locals of the Socialist Party, according to the request of the National Executive Committee should not enter the fight for the protection of the foreign-born workers by participating in the organization of councils for the protection of the foreign-born. They must not join in a united fight against discrimination from which the Negroes suffer. They must remain away from the united movement for the release of political prisoners nor should they aid workers in a strike.

The Reason For This Warning.

THE reason for this warning of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party is that the Communists are often the leaders and the initiators of united front movements to fight in the workers' interests. For the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party, it is a crime for the Socialists to join with trade union organizations, workers' fraternal organizations and Communists in a united front struggle to prevent the forced-born workers from being exterminated, photographed and fingerprinted or to fight against racial discrimination from which the Negro suffers or to take action to help workers who are fighting the bosses for higher wages and better working conditions thru a strike.

THIS warning has however, a deeper significance than the mere fear on the part of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party that the members or units of that organization may really participate in the struggles of the workers. Many local organizations of the Socialist Party have ignored the policy of the National Executive Committee of keeping the workers from uniting to fight their immediate battles against the capitalist exploiters. There are, in the Socialist Party, many sincere workers who still believe that the Socialist Party is an organization fighting in the workers' interests. Branches of the Socialist Party in which such workers predominate have, in spite of all the past warnings, and denunciations by the leaders of the Socialist Party, joined in united front action in the interests of the workers even the these actions were initiated and led by Communists. These working class members and units of the Socialist Party dominated by such members do not fear to be associated with Communists in a common struggle to aid striking workers or to protect foreign-born workers against exception laws which would register, fingerprint and photograph them like criminals.

SOCIALIST locals have joined with trade union representatives, with representatives of the fraternal organizations of foreign-born workers and with the Communists in forming Councils for the Protection of the Foreign-Born Workers. It has been thru the mass pressure of these councils that the enactment of these exception laws by congress has been prevented. Now the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party warns its locals to keep out of such a struggle to protect the foreign-born workers.

THE same has been true in relation to the great struggle of the striking textile workers of Passaic. Many socialist locals could not be prevented from joining in the united front movement to support the Passaic workers in their heroic strike. The socialist locals have joined with trade unionists, Communists, workers' fraternal organizations in forming relief committees for the Passaic strikers. The National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party tells the socialist locals to get out of these relief committees and let the Passaic workers fight their own battles.

SOCIALIST locals have been found themselves in united front political conferences formed for the purpose of promoting independent political action and participated in by trade union representatives, fraternal organization representatives and Communists, in addition to the socialists. The National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party is opposed to such a movement to break the workers away from the republican and democratic parties and to organize them for an independent political struggle thru the formation of a labor party. It warns its locals to keep out of such organizations for united action on the political field.

THE National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party is even against the united front movement to win complete political, educational, industrial, and social equality for the Negroes of this country. The socialist locals must not participate in united action to fight against racial discrimination against the Negro.

Will The Socialist Locals Abandon

THE instructions of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party in its locals, please before these locals made up of workers who wish to participate in the workers' struggles in this country, the question whether they shall abandon the class struggle or whether they shall abandon the Socialist Party.

There could be no greater confession of bankruptcy so far as fighting for the workers' interests in this country is concerned, than this seven point statement constituting "an important request" by the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party.

THE National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party endeavored to confuse the view placed before the socialist locals by reference to financial assistance of these organizations by the Communists. But no workers will be deceived by this. The instructions to the socialist locals actually mean that these locals must keep out of every movement of the American workers which represents a fight on the basis of the class struggle, because every such struggle in this country has been either initiated, or is being led or supported by the Communists.

The issue before the socialist locals is whether they will participate in such united action by the workers against their capitalist exploiters or give up the idea of the class struggle.

THE National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party will fool no one by its refusal to join Communist leadership of such united front movements. Where the Communists have become the leaders of the united front movement of the workers, it has been because they have won the confidence and support of the workers thru their services in the common struggle. If they have initiated united front action thru which the workers have been able to make a better fight against the capitalist bosses, that is to their credit. The fact that this is so, and that the Communist program today is a program thru which the workers can achieve results and relieve themselves from some of the oppression and exploitation from which they suffer and against which they are struggling at the present time.

What Does Debs Say?

THERE is another phase of this statement of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party which deserves attention. Eugene V. Debs is the chairman of the National Executive Committee. It is not likely that he participated or approved of the statement of the Socialist Party. He is reported ill at his home in Terre Haute, Ind.

But the workers of this country will want to know the opinion of Eugene V. Debs of this statement of the National Executive Committee of which he is the chairman.

THE workers have heard Debs make eloquent appeals for united action against the capitalist exploiters. For more than twenty-five years, he has been an advocate of unity of the working class in their struggle against the capitalists.

Will Eugene V. Debs approve of the instructions of his National Executive Committee to refuse to join in united action for the protection of the foreign-born workers, for the fight against discrimination against the Negroes, for the fight to release political prisoners and in support of the strikes of the workers?

THE socialist locals which, in spite of the reactionary policies of the National Executive Committee of their party, have joined in the workers' struggles will want to know where Debs stands on these questions. The workers generally who honor Debs for his years of struggle in the workers' cause in spite of his continued adherence to the Socialist Party, will want to know his stand on the effort of the National Executive Committee of his party to divide the workers in place of uniting them.

EUGENE V. DEBS should not permit such a stain to be placed upon his record as will be placed there if he permits the action of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party, of which he is chairman, to go unchallenged.

The self-respecting workers in the locals of the Socialist Party, if they are sincere in their desire to fight the workers' struggles, will repudiate this action of the National Executive Committee to divide the workers in place of endeavoring to unite them for the class struggle.

POLICE JUDGES PROTECT CHILD LABOR LAW VIOLATIONS IN MD.

BALTIMORE, Md.—Maryland employers continue to violate the child labor law despite the alleged rigid enforcement policy adopted in 1924. The annual report of T. Knox Insley, Commissioner of Labor and Statistics states almost as much:

Under the Maryland law, the responsibility for violations of the law rests with the employer. There were 468 violations during the year.

This first Maryland child labor law was passed in 1912, with provisions for inspectors under the State Child Labor Bureau to enforce it.

Many inspectors, Commissioner Insley points out, received appointments to the Bureau as rewards for political services. These inspectors he declares, has little knowledge of the child labor law and little inclination to enforce it. For a number of years after the first child labor law was passed, child labor inspectors were unknown in many counties.

The police judges of Baltimore, whose children of course never become the child slaves of the Maryland canneries, protected the child labor exploiters in their notorious work.

British Youth to Send Delegation to Soviet Union

LONDON, England, Sept. 4.— (By Mail.)—Comrade Tristram, N. Leeds I. L. P. Guild of Youth, presided over a very keen and representative conference at the Morris Hall on Saturday afternoon in Leeds.

Young miners, textile workers, garment workers, engineers were prominent among the delegates and all spoke heartily in favor of sending a British young workers' delegation to look over the situation in the Soviet Union, at the earliest possible moment.

The secretary of the Leeds Central Campaign Committee, reported on the activities since the last congress. Finance was coming in well, but more was wanted and many organisations had written requiring further particulars.

A suggestion was made from the floor of the conference that later on the Russian young workers should be invited to send a delegation to England to see the conditions of the young workers in capitalist Britain. The suggestion found great favor.

17 Year Mucker Killed in Tunnel Explosion

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 21. Eight muckers lost their lives in an explosion that occurred at 5:36 a. m. September 15, in the new intake tunnel to the Kansas City water works that is being constructed under the Missouri River. One of the muckers was a husky lad of 17 whose life was sacrificed due to carelessness on the part of the construction company.

The "graveyard shift" as the night shift is called, works in a tunnel 150 feet below the Missouri River from 11 p. m. to 7 a. m. At 12:30 the blast broke down and the fan stopped. The foreman ordered the men out but at 4:30 he ordered and accompanied them back in the shaft to continue work. At 5:36 the explosion occurred that cost the lives of seven muckers; the 17-year-old lad, the foreman and six others. One was a worker who came to the city for vacation and needed a little extra money and decided to work a few weeks as a mucker.

The explosion threw two machines weighing 4000 pounds over 30 feet and debris was thrown over a thousand feet. The shaft was in no condition for work when the men went back. No air was in the shaft and gas had filled the space. The company says it is a mystery as to what caused the explosion.

The mother of W. F. Baily, the youth that was killed, had asked the construction company several days before to discharge her boy as he was too young to do this kind of work. The company took no steps to comply with the request of the mother and the youth was too glad to make "good money" that is paid for this dangerous work.

ZIMMERMAN SAYS EMPLOYERS RULE STATE ASSEMBLY

By CHAS. S. ZIMMERMAN.
Candidate for 6th Assembly, Bronx, and Vice-Chairman, General Strike Committee, N. Y. Garment Workers.

The issuance of the injunction against the International Ladies' Garment Workers brings forward again the need for independent working-class political action. Injunctions are being employed by the bosses on an ever-increasing scale. The right to strike and picket is a life and death necessity for the maintenance of union organization.

The purpose of injunctions is to deal a death blow to the right to strike and picket. Workers must exert their maximum effort in order to defeat the use of such methods intended to establish the open shop in industry.

Present Assembly Anti-Labor.

The New York state assembly has in the last year engaged in an orgy of reactionary legislation. It has turned down the very simple demands for labor legislation prescribed by the New York State Federation of Labor.

It has defeated bills aimed at relieving the exploitation of women and children. On the other hand, reactionary measures in the interests of the manufacturers and trusts of New York state have been favored by the legislature.

Employers Seek More Power.

The proposals for the reorganization of the government, the heralded as a plan for simplification of the government, means that more injunctions and greater police power are put in the hands of employers interested in destroying unions and reducing the living standards of the workers.

The workers in this election must demonstrate their readiness to support proposals aimed at uniting their power, of bringing nearer the day when a labor party based upon the strength of organized labor can be established.

Support the Workers' Party.

They must support the campaign conducted by the Workers' Party, for improving the standards of life of the workers against militarism and war, against injunctions and measures to stifle the voice of labor, for the recognition of the Soviet Union, for social equality for the Negro and for all measures that will build up the power of the working class.

TOM MANN, VETERAN LEADER OF BRITISH LABOR, SPEAKS TO THE NATIONAL MINORITY CONFERENCE

The National Minority Movement, or revolutionary left wing of British trade unionism, recently held its third annual conference at Battersea Town Hall in London. The DAILY WORKER gives below the address of Tom Mann, chairman of the N. M. M., veteran labor leader of Great Britain, as an interesting and graphic picture of the scope and purposes of the British left wing.—Editor's Note.

Rank and File All Right.

THE general strike did not fail because of any weakness or lack of courage, or unreadiness to act on the part of the rank and file. It failed because those upon whom responsibility fell at the time had no belief in the general strike; very few indeed of the members of the General Council have any real understanding of what is involved in the general strike, and those who claim to have a knowledge of it have spoken and written against it.

These these persons temporarily supported the strike in order to make it a failure, holding themselves in readiness to frustrate and destroy its chances of success. They failed in and resort to the policy of class collaboration to the serious detriment of the position of the workers.

The leaders of the future must rest with those who—

1. Understand the real nature of the class struggle and are ever ready to take militant action to travel towards the workers' control of industry.

2. Have a well-thought-out policy to meet the varying conditions on a national and international scale.

We declare that the National Minority Movement has acted as a nucleus of such leadership and that the principles we have popularized and the policy we pursue are destined to revolutionize the movement.

Capitalist Dictatorship.

IT is necessary to make reference to the role played by the government during the period under review. Probably never in our history have we had such a clear demonstration of the truth of the statement of Karl Marx that under capitalism the government is the "executive committee of the capitalist class." The government, by its daily behavior, has shown unmistakably that it is ready to use all the powers of the state, not in the interests of the people, but exclusively in the interests of the employing class.

The government has been utterly regardless of the millions of workers and has fastened only to the voices of its financial overlords, the Federation of British Industries and the Mining Association of Great Britain.

By means of the emergency power act it wipes out the constitution and carries on a ruthless and unjustifiable crusade against those who do not kow-tow to its dictatorship. Never in our history has this country been under such a reckless capitalist dictatorship as now.

State Employees to Be Bulldozed.

IT is just over a hundred years since our fathers were forced by right to organize. This carried with it the right to link up with fellow workers; now at this time of day the government is beginning a new attack to prohibit sympathetic strikes, and demanding the disaffiliation of civil servants from the Trades Union Congress and the labor party.

The government is not against all trade unionism, it is only against that trade unionism which is strong enough and directed by those who are capable enough to achieve something of value to the workers.

The attack on the civil service trade unions is very significant. In the general strike, railway clerical workers were out with manual workers. This is essential for complete success. Solidarity with those who wield the pen and all others who work for the object we aim at. If we examine the position to understand what the government is after it presents itself in three ways:

1. An attempt to make unity between clerical and manual workers impossible.

2. An attempt to clear out of government service all other than reactionaries, thereby making the workers in the state departments 100 per cent safe for capitalism.

3. Attempt to entrench reactionary elements in government service in order to enable capitalists to sabotage a labor government.

The attack on the civil service is made under the cry, "the civil service is a neutral body, it must be free from politics." This is similar to the parrot cry of "the army is a neutral body, it must be free from politics." This shows how inextricably mixed are industrial with political questions.

We have in this present government several of the most bitter and intolerant reactionaries this country has ever produced; in this list I place Lord Birkenhead and Winston Church. ill. These members of the present government are the most unscrupulous villifiers of the workers that have ever filled public position. They are continually concocting schemes to tie up the workers, and they often succeed in getting the backing of their colleagues. With effective organization and courageous leadership we shall be easily able to deal effectively with these and all their kind.

The entire movement is subscribing to the slogan "the community first." That is merely for public consumption, what they really stand for is "our own class." I. e., the rubber class, the exploiting class, which class is not more than 1 per cent of the community, but which always battens on the community.

We of the worker class, the entire producing class, the creators of the wealth of the country, must now see to it that there shall be no more wasting of time and energy and the lives of the people. We must demand and insist on loyalty to our class by those who wish to speak in our name.

The Miners' Fight.

THE miners' lock-out is still on. The whole working class is suffering. Baldwin's assertion that only the miners are being attacked is utterly untrue, the policy pursued fits exactly with the statement of Baldwin when he said: "All wages must come down."

The coming Trades Union Congress should decide to call for a levy on all the unions to help the miners and centre with the executive of the unions as to the best means of applying it. It is still possible for the workers of this country to do something much more substantial to help the miners financially. A resolution passed at congress authorising the General Council to act in conjunction with the union executives could get going quickly.

It's War We Are In.

WE are fully conscious of the difficulties in getting in good results with conditions as they are, yet it is the case that if the miners should lose, then the general rank and file will lose many times more than the cost now of helping the miners to win.

Even now there is time to apply an effective embargo on all coal, the will to act would make this possible in one day, and it should be done. And I solemnly declare that we who realize that it's war we are in should have no scruples in calling out the safety men from the mines, or carefully take scrupulous care of the property of the enemy that is fighting you to the death is a queer way of fighting that enemy.

International Unity.

INTERNATIONAL unity proved to be more than talk in the case of Russia, who set the example to the world by her prompt and substantial monetary help to the British miners. Had we but had world-wide relations of such a character we should have won long ago. If the unions of the continent associated with Amsterdam had done half as much as Russia has done the situation financially would have been more controllable.

We must again deal with International Trade Union unity. It is really of the greatest importance that we shall be able to act on a world scale. Governments are deliberately fomenting strife calculated to again precipitate a world war. We must not be dumb whilst this goes on; therefore, this will be on the agenda and will, I am sure, have most careful consideration. The Anglo-Russian relations have been strained, but are comeoting again, and to this we must also give full consideration.

We are meeting a week in front of the Trades Union Congress, and it is announced that the General Council does not intend to have the question of more power to the General Council discussed at congress, because this will bring up the whole subject of the general strike. The movement cannot wait another year before the matter shall be dealth with, the whole thing is exceedingly urgent to those who sense the situation aright.

In any case we must (as far as time admits) deal with these fateful questions, every phase of the labor problem comes within our purview. The delegates present at this minority conference have already done much; after our consultations here we shall go to our respective districts, not to forget what we mot for, but to carry on our work with redoubled energy, in the fullest confidence that we are engaged in fighting the most successful battles of our class, for the overthrow of capitalism and establishing the workers in full control of all industry.

Success to the workers of all countries!

Success to the speedy overthrow of capitalism and the full realization of socialism.

FOR A UNITED LABOR TICKET

ARTICLE VII.

WHY A LOCAL LABOR PARTY?

By Bertram D. Wolfe.

THE Workers Party stands committed to the use of all the energies for the building of an American Labor Party on a national scale. Nevertheless, the insurrections of the Central Executive Committee to the districts in the 1926 campaign declared: "There will be three forms in which the party will go into the elections: 1. Thru existing farmer and labor parties. 2. Thru pledged united front labor tickets on the ballot. 3. By placing Workers (Communist) Party tickets on the ballot."

The question naturally arises: Why this flexibility of tactics? Why this variety of forms?

AMERICAN political conditions, unlike those of England, are such that a national labor party tends to come into being by the foundation of various local and state labor parties, gradually converging towards a national labor party and finally crystallising when the national sentiment for their unification and for the creation of a single labor party on a national scale is powerful enough.

Gone in Va., Insane in N. Y.

Economically the United States is a single unit, but because of the federal form of government the states have widely divergent laws and distinct administrations. Thus, in extreme cases, men have been known to be divorced by the laws of one state and yet, marrying again, bigamists by the laws of another. There have even been cases, as the Chalcus case, where a man was insane in New York and sane in Virginia.

WHEN the interests of big business require it, "state rights" are promptly forgotten and by all sorts of legal fictions, a unified national law in a given field is put across. Conversely, when capital wishes to block a national law, the theory of state rights is seized upon and the law is nullified and declared unconstitutional as an interference with state sovereignty. In this manner, every effective child labor law thus far put on the statute books has been set aside.

The constitution of the United States prohibits the passage of laws limiting or abridging freedom of speech, press or assemblage, or limiting the right of every citizen to bear arms. But the constitution has been so interpreted that state may freely adopt criminal syndicalist laws, laws forbidding the carrying of arms, laws forbidding mass picketing and other laws of a reactionary stripe.

Nevertheless, when the war broke out, a national "espionage" act was effectively used on a national scale along with the numerous criminal syndicalist and criminal anarchy acts of the various states.

Brakes on Progress.

THE courts of the United States have been one of the chief instruments for blocking legislation which expresses the needs of the working class. They have always appealed to precedents established in a period when there was no working class and no modern industry. Thus Professor Commons, who can scarcely be accused of radicalism declares:

"The courts blocking the way of a new agressive class with precedents created to protect a dominant class, have had, in this country, a high reputation for unknown evil. By retaining laws which labor in its political struggles has been able to secure, the courts, joined to divergent state policies, have excluded or delayed labor from legislative acts." (History of Labor in the United States, Vol. I. P. 9.)

LABOR protection measures, child labor laws, regulations of the length of the work day, minimum wage measures, social insurance, etc., have been construed by the capitalistic courts as state matters and not national ones, therefore the labor movement has had to fight in each state separately for the passage of such laws and consequently, labor political activities tend to be of a local nature.

It is only when such laws are finally passed in a given state that the state supreme court steps in and declares them unconstitutional, and, as a last resort, if the bosses lose, they appeal to the national supreme court which deals the final death blow to the measure in question.

The Central Labor Union.

AGAIN, the natural basis for political activity tends to be the local Central Labor Council in municipal matters and the State Federation of Labor in state matters. These bodies are much closer to the rank and file (particularly the former of them) than is the executive council and the national convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Consequently, it is in the Central Labor Council that the demands of labor for independent political action first makes itself felt and most strongly so.

NOT only is the character of the labor movement greatly diversified according to the state (the question of whether there are large industrial kinds of industry are determining factors) but the same is also true of the farmer movements which are more or less linked up with the labor party movement.

Agriculture differs greatly from state to state. In one part of the country there is one type of crop and in another part an entirely different type; in some regions there is large scale farming and in other regions, the small farm prevails.

Sometimes one crop may be very bad and the cotton areas in deep depression with resulting failures, foreclosures and expulsion from the land, while the corn belt may be having bumper crops and bumper prices, or vice versa. Yet the farmer is most militant in periods in which the banker and warrer are foreclosing on him and it is then that he thinks most of entering into political activity.

Local Governments as Strikebreakers.

THIS question of a labor party is the use of the courts, police and other governmental agencies as strikebreaker. Yet, except in the basic industries in big national strikes such as railroad and coal strikes or the big steel strike, it is the local or state courts and the local police or the state constabulary and the local and state governmental agencies generally that do the strike-breaking. Consequently, again the first natural step of labor towards independent political action is aimed at the local government which is used against him and makes a demand that a workers' govrdment be set up in the city and state.

Thus, because of the great extent of territory of the United States (it is as if all the countries of Europe were fused into one), because of the diversified industries, because of the division into states containing industrial centers, because of the diversified nature of the industry, because of divergent laws in each state and the state and local courts with their injunctions, and because it is generally the local police and the local government rather than the United States army and the national government that have been used against strikes, the strength of the sentiment for state rights and the innumerably separate state legislatures, and finally because the government of the United States has not become a centralized government and still is not nearly so centralized as are the governments of the European countries—for all these reasons and for the reason also that local labor councils are most responsive to the needs and desires of the rank and file, that the natural mode of formation of a labor party in America is thru the formation of various local labor and farmer-labor parties, at least in the state most favorably disposed, as a preliminary to the formation of a national labor party.

THERE are times, however, such as the period 1920-1923, when the impetus for a national labor party is very much stronger. This was due, in the period mentioned, to the open use of the national government as a strike-breaker in the case of the railroad, coal and steel strikes and therefore such national unions as the railroad brotherhoods made a nation-wide drive for a labor party.

The Task Before Us.

This year, however, it is obvious that no national labor party will be formed and therefore it is up to the various districts according to local conditions, to make the biggest possible steps forward toward the formation of local labor parties and the creation of a sentiment for a national party.

THERE are some states in which farmer-labor parties already exist and the problem of the Communist is to organize and capture them. There are others in which a labor party can be created and still others in which a united labor ticket, as a first step toward a labor party, can be set up. New York falls into this category and every effort must be made to set up a genuine united labor ticket in the New York campaign.

If the various units of the party all over the country create the proper preconditions from below, we can trust the government to create the proper conditions from above so that in 1928 which is a national presidential campaign, a national labor party may be formed.

That made Dad rather warm, because he had been reading this news for three or four months and believing every word of it. He wanted to know if Paul didn't believe there had been a killing of the rich classes in Russia. Paul said he didn't doubt there had been some, because he had read about the French revolution. What you had to remember was the way the Russian people had been treated by their ruling classes and the kind of government they were used to; you had to judge their revolution by their standards and not by ours. Paul smiled and added that it was a mistake for an American employer who had tried to give his men a square deal, to identify himself with those masters in Russia who had beaten their men with knouts and turned them over to the Cossacks if they attempted any protest.

That pacified Dad a little, but he said the way it seemed to him, these Bolsheviks were just so many German agents. He told about the train that had carried Lenin—Dad called him Leonyne—through Germany. But Paul asked whether he had watched the news that had come from the peace negotiations; the Germans had apparently been as much afraid of the Russians as we were. These Bolsheviks were fighting the ruling classes of both sides, and the Germans might find the peace they had made more dangerous to them than the fighting; the revolutionary propaganda might spread in their armies and even to the Western Front.

There was no use expecting Dad to see anything so complicated as that. The declared that if the Russians had really wanted to help the cause of peace and justice they should have stood by the allies until the Kaiser was put out of business. Then Paul asked whether Mr. Ross had read the secret treaties of the allies, and Dad was obliged to confess that he had never even heard of them. Paul explained how the Soviets, after demanding that the allies should make known their war aims and having no attention paid to the request, had revealed to the world all the secret agreements which the allies had made with the Tsar, for dividing up the territories they meant to take from the Germans and Austrians and Turks. Paul declared that the text of these treaties, the most important news of the day, had been suppressed by the American newspapers. If we were going into this war blindfolded, to help Great Britain and France and Italy and Japan in their imperialist aims, then our people were being deceived and some day they would have a bitter awakening.

Dad's answer to that was simple: Paul might rest assured, those secret treaties would turn out to be Bolshevik forgeries. Had not our government already given out a lot of documents it had obtained in Russia, proving the Bolshevik leaders to be German agents? Those were the true documents, and Paul would find it out some day, and be ashamed of having doubted our allies. How could he suppose that President Wilson would let us be bamboozled?

Bunny sat, taking in every word of this discussion. It was puzzling, and hard to be sure about, but it seemed to him that Dad was right, what could a good American do, in war-time like this, but trust his government? Bunny was a little shocked to hear a man wearing the uniform of the army sit there and express doubts about his superiors, and he considered it his duty to get Paul off by himself and tell him some of the things the four minute men had said in school and try to inspire him with a more intense patriotism. But Paul only laughed and patted Bunny on the back, saying that they got any quantity of propaganda here in the training camp.

II

One evening they all went to hear Eli; in a great tent such as would hold a three-ring circus, with thousands of cars parked in the fields about and sawdust strewn in the aisles and hundreds of wooden benches crowded with soldier boys and ranchers and their wives and children. There was a platform with room for a gelist, wearing a white robe with a golden star on his bosom, for all the world like some Persian magus; and there was a "silver band," with trumpets and bass-tubes gleaming so that they put your eyes out. When those big blarers started a hymn of glory, and the audience started to rock and shout, "Praise the Lord!" the top of that tent would bulge out!

Eli preached against the Hun, telling how the Holy Spirit had revealed to him that the enemy was to be routed before the year was by and promising eternal salvation to all who died in this cause of the Lord—provided, of course, that they had not rejected their chance to be saved by Eli. In the middle of the stage was a tank constructed, with steps descending into it and the converts sitting in rows on the platform, garbed in white nighties; when that stage of the ceremonies arrived, Eli descended into the water himself, and grabbed his victims one by one by the backs of their necks and in the name of the Father and the Son of the Holy Ghost, he swung them forward, soused into the water. Thereby their sins were washed from the very last hair of their heads and if from the holy water then contracted any of those diseases which are the penalty of sins, even among military crusaders—well, all they had to do was to come back again and have themselves "healed" by the prophet of the Third Revelation.

Next day the family drove home and how much they had to gossip about on the way and for weeks thereafter! Bunny was looking forward to living this camp-life the coming summer—looking forward to it during the time he was getting in school and also because of Dad's influence, he was to be in an officer's training camp. He was full of consecration and working harder than ever at his duties.

Late in March began that long-dreaded onslaught on the western front; one of those battles to which the world had grown accustomed, extending over a hundred miles of front and lasting all day and all night for several days and weeks. Such a battle was not named from a town or a city, but from a province; this was the battle of Picardy. The German rush broke through the British line and drove them back in rout for thirty or forty miles and captured a hundred thousand men and it seemed that Dad's worst forebodings were to be realized.

But neither the Germans nor the allies knew that in an obscure village amid the fruit orchards of California a mighty prophet was exercising his magic on their behalf. It chanced that Eli Watkins read a news item from the front, declaring that the only thing which could save the British armies was rain; and forthwith he assembled his hosts of prayer, and all night long they rocked upon their knees and wrung their hands unto the Lord, invoking storms in Picardy; and the Lord heard them, and the floodgates of heaven were opened and the rain descended and the feet of the Huns were stuck fast, yea, and their chariot wheels also and their might men at arms were downed in mud; but on the side where the hosts of the Lord were battling there fell no rain, but the ground was clean and reinforcements came up and the British line was saved and back amid the California orchards the hosannas of the faithful shook the blossoms off the prune-trees.

The Injunction Against the New York Garment Workers

The sweeping injunction issued against the striking New York garment workers is a challenge to the whole labor movement. It should be met by determined resistance to destroy this method of strike-breaking by the capitalists and their henchmen in judicial positions.

Theoretically, the workers of this country are supposed to enjoy the right of freedom of speech, press and assembly and the right to organize to advance their common welfare. When it comes to a test of these rights, however, the capitalists find the means of denying them and putting the workers into jail if they tried to exercise them.

The Dangherty injunction against the striking railroad shopmen in 1922 set the example for sweeping orders to the workers not to do anything which would compel the railroad owners to grant them better wages and working conditions. It ordered them, on the penalty of going to jail if they did not obey the order, not to meet, to issue any papers, to use their funds, to picket and persuade strikebreakers not to take their places, and prohibited everything that the strikers theoretically had a right to do and which they, ought to do if they were to continue this fight against the bosses.

Under the injunction process, one man, usually a particularly willing tool of the bosses, issues an order which supercedes the constitution of the United States and the legislative acts of both the state and federal government. Ukases of the csarist regime were not more powerful than the injunctions are today in the United States. There are a number of thousands of little czars holding positions as judges, who at any moment, can come to the aid of the bosses by issuing injunctions intended to destroy the workers' power in their fight for better wages and working conditions.

The injunction against the striking New York garment workers is one of the sweeping ukases of the new czars of the capitalist system. The issuance of such an injunction, after the attempt of Governor Smith to force the workers to submit their demands to arbitration, shows a co-ordinated use of the state power against the workers in the New York strike. The garment workers stood firm against Governor Smith's attempt to make them submit their case to arbitration. His next move was to endeavor to rob the workers of any power to put up a further fight for their demands. The method adopted was the sweeping injunction which has been issued.

There is but one answer which can be made to the arbitrary power which the capitalists have invested in order to keep down the workers. That is to ignore the injunction and continue the struggle. The mass power of the workers must be mobilized against this weapon of the capitalists. The 40,000 striking garment workers should, as one man, refuse to submit to the injunction issued against them. They should go on with their fight, carry on their picketing, do all the things that the injunction says they shall not do.

The entire organized labor movement of New York City must be rallied to their support in this defiance against the bosses' injunction.

Such a mass defiance of the injunction in the New York garment workers' strike will kill the injunction. A similar nation-wide fight by the organized labor movement against the injunctions wherever they are used, would soon free the workers from the effects of this weapon of the capitalists.

There is another lesson to be learned from the use of the injunction. In the New York strike and elsewhere. To get an injunction, the capitalist bosses must have their men on the bench. To get a governor to endeavor to enforce arbitration against the workers, they must have their men in the gubernatorial offices. They elect their judges and their governors thru the republican and democratic parties. The workers who vote for these parties' candidates are voting for injunctions against them and for the use of the governmental powers generally against their interests.

As long as the workers vote for the bosses' candidates, they are voting the power into the hands of the capitalist bosses who beat them into submission when they go ont on strike on the picket line to fight for their needs.

The fight against the injunctions has two fronts. The first one of these is the direct mass violation of the capitalist injunctions, the second, the fight to take the governmental power ont of the hands of the capitalist bosses.

The New York garment workers and the workers everywhere who feel the mailed fist of the capitalists in the form of injunctions must join in the fight on both these fronts to break this weapon of the capitalists.

The Reward of Scabbery

Officials of the Amoskeag Mills in Manchester, New Hampshire, have announced their intention to chop off the economic heads of one hundred overseers and second hands and to slash the salaries of two hundred more.

This is base ingratitude. Those boys took an active part in the 1922 strike, as strikebreakers. When the strikers were forced to return to work and stand in line waiting for a job, those overseers were detailed to look over the waiting line and pick ont the active strikers for punishment. Those workers who were marked by those slimy stoolpigeons were blacklisted in every New Hampshire mill.

The Labor News of Worcester, Massachnsetts, comments acidly on the predicament in which those petty bosses now find themselves in. The following excerpt is well worth reproduction:

"These bosses are now reaping a bitter reward for their loyalty to the corporation.

"The Amoskeag made millions in war profits; it flew flags from the staffs erected on its mills. Many of its employes entered the service, went over and never came back.

"Parker Straw of the Amoskeag corporation also entered the service. But he went in as a "dollar-a-year man." He also went over, but he came back home none the worse for his trip.

"While the boys were smelling poison gas that made human wrecks and sorrowing homes, Mr. Straw was smelling war orders that piled up a surplus of thirty million dollars."

The wages of treachery is more of the same thing.

A "Socialist" United Front Maneuver

By WILLIAM W. WEINSTONE.

THE Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America, which just held its first annual (?) and monumental convention in New York City, was formed as a united front of labor, socialist and Communist organizations. In the three years of its existence it has conducted an intense agitation against fascism in this country.

Formed at a time when fascism reached its head in Italy, the Anti-Fascisti Alliance of North America first limited its activities to the periodical issuance of manifestos against the violence of fascism, but it grew and dug deep roots into the masses when the Communnists and militant left wingers assumed an active and guiding role in the alliance. As a result of the latters' activities, the alliance took on flesh and blood and established a sound core of active members in its branches formed all over the country, thru the Political Refugees Leagues and militants within the Italian labor unions. The demonstrations of thousands of workers and the huge and numerous mass meetings held all over the country demonstrated that the proletarian united front and working class organizations are the weapons for fighting and defeating fascism, in the face of which the agents of Mussolini in this country hardly could raise its voice.

Enter the Liberal Pressure.

THE socialists, under the pressure of the masses, entered this united front with the Communists and other labor organizations in spite of their professed opposition to united front activities with the Communists. They did not dare to remain outside this united front and in the beginning were content with the organization as long as it bore a liberal aspect and confined its chief activities to denunciations of "suppression of democracy, liberty" and other phrases dear to the hearts of the petty bourgeois socialists of America.

The movement in America—partially in reaction to the growth of proletarian opposition to fascism in Italy and also as a result of the fact that the united front took root and developed an active rank and file proletarian membership—took on more of a working class character and showed that it meant real business in fighting fascism on all fronts and that it was not a mere gathering of labor bureaucrats, but a real fighting organization, the socialist party lost heart with the united front and began to look with disfavor at the organization.

IN place of drawing in their membership, becoming active and going along with the policy of the alliance of fighting fascism, not only in Italy, but in America, expressed in deportations of political refugees, the socialist leaders (who follow the course of expelling militants and pursuing class collaborationist tactics resulting in weakened unions) decided to "free" themselves from this united front, to execute a "maneuver" and destroy from the alliance under their domination or splitting it. Only several weeks ago, on the eve of the national convention, the Italian socialists of New York made a decision by the N. C. of the socialist party. The handful of socialist leaders therefore held a conference and announced to the world that "since the alliance has been dominated by the Communists who favor dictatorship, violence, etc., they no longer could be part of this organization."

But hardly had they concocted the scheme and made the first announcement than the socialists found that they could not go along with this attempt. Their scheme ended in a complete and miserable debacle. The very leaders who were part of the plan failed the representatives of the Italian section of the socialist party. Such red baiters as Nisio, who hate the Communists even more than they do the bourgeoisie (with whom they consider class collaboration policies) were shrowder than the socialist leaders and found it more expedient to remain in the united front and participate in the convention. The socialist party, however, having already declared its policy in splitting the alliance, was compelled to go thru with its gesture and create an abortive dual alliance called the Anti-Fascisti League of North America with a program not differing from, but actually a dictatorship, in Soviet Russia, etc., etc., ad nauseam. On the eve of the convention the socialists found that their "maneuver" in the united front" was only a matter for jest and banter among the Italian workers. In place of splitting the alliance, they had only completely isolated themselves.

ONCE having started on this path, however, they had to make good in appearances and so they bravely announced that they would not participate in the first national convention of the alliance. Not only that, but they brought reinforcements to the front and further announced to the whole world that the United Italian Trades (which had never been an active participant in the alliance) likewise would not participate in the convention. But they could get no further.

250 Delegates Come.

IN the national convention held September 6, 7 and 8, 360 delegates from all parts of the country representing over 100,000 Italian workers, came to the convention. In addition to other unions, there were represented as delegates, Antonini, Nisio and company, loyal some of class collaboration. They had the choice between the convention or otherwise have a fight on their hands with the membership. But on bare-footed was the attempt to split the alliance, thus crew many of the honest members of the socialist party had to repudiate the little game of the socialists. Socialist delegates from Hoboken, Washington and New York showed no sympathy with their socialist leaders and participated in the convention. The grand finale of the socialist party attitude in withdrawing from the alliance and declaring that the Communists were not good friends of labor, came when Modica, a leader of the socialists in America, spoke in the convention as a political refugee and apologised for the action of the socialist party, whom he had to follow as a disciplined member.

Militant Spirit in Convention.

THE national convention was a splendid demonstration of unity and resoluteness of the Italian workers' organisations against the common enemy of the working class—fascism. The convention was dominated by a militant spirit and by the leadership of the Communists and the left wing. The convention accepted unanimously and even the socialist hirenonaries daring to oppose resolutions denouncing fascism as a phase of the whole imperialist development of the world instead of as a mere post-war phenomenon, as the socialists and liberals erroneously characterised it hitherto. It called for joint campaigns of anti-fascist working-class reups among the Hungarians, Spanish and Italian workers. It condemned the action of the United States government in deporting political refugees and calling for the freedom of political prisoners in America. It endorsed the movement for protection of the foreign-born workers and went on record for affiliation, with a rising vote, with the International Labor Defense, the shield of labor defense in this country. The convention took steps for making the alliance even more effective and more extensive, including women's sections and children's circles, and thus paved the way for greater success in anti-fascisti work in the United States. It greeted the striking miners in England, clothing workers in New York, textile workers in Passaic.

Socialists Try to Return.

REALIZING that their "maneuver" had only isolated them, many socialists tried to get their leaders to change their decision, return to the convention and to present their return as a victory over the Communists. They tried to secure a specific invitation requesting them to come back into the alliance and in response to the convention found that the convention understood too well their game of trying to split the alliance. The convention only repeated emphatically that it was willing to work for the unity of the movement and for an energetic campaign against fascism would be welcome, leaving it to the socialists to choose this course or commit suicide.

The socialist speakers at the convention, in spite of their bitter hatred of the militant labor movement, very carefully avoided attacking Soviet Russia and Communism, in spite of the propaganda campaign of the little abortive and duel socialist league, Free Free. Green, upon good advice of his socialist friends, dared not attack Soviet Russia or Communism in his address to the convention.

Reformist Program.

THE role of the socialists and labor bureaucrats, as a result of their abortive attempt to split the convention, was one of abject submission to the militant resolutions and leadership of the convention and a complete surrender of their program of attack, slander and vilification—a policy which could have meant only further hostility of working class elements and of progressives within the convention to the socialists. Nothing was left, therefore, for the socialists but to try to cover up their debacle by misrepresenting the convention in their account in the New Leader and Forward —which only fool no one who has witnessed the convention of the alliance. Their announcement that they are continuing with their own little league they do not themselves take seriously.

THIS is the story of a socialist maneuver in a united front. It is particularly enlightening in view of the tendency of accusation of the socialists that Communists enter a united front as a maneuver." This united front of tens of thousands of workers who are the friends and who the enemies of the united front, who enter to build the unity of the workers and who really maneuver the united front at the expense of the unity and power of the working class. In place of dividing the ranks of the alliance, the socialists have only divided themselves. In place of capturing the movement with this maneuver, they have only isolated themselves. In place of showing themselves to be serious leaders of the workers, they have demonstrated themselves as pitifully miserable politicians.

Source of Inspiration.

THE convention (despite two concessions to petty bourgeois liberalism) will be a source of inspiration and courage to the militant workers of Italy in their hard fight against fascism and an aid to a bigger and better struggle against fascism and imperialism in the United States.

By N. BUCHARIN.

Our Growth is Acknowledged Abroad.

THE shifting of proportionate forces within our country, thus resultant on our economics growth, and on the increasing preponderance of the socialist section of our economics in our collective economics, has invariably led to a regrouping of forces in the international arena. Our growth is admitted by our enemies. The fact of our growth forces them in itself to trade with us, to negotiate with us, etc., and yet at the same time to attempt to paralyze our growth. I need only remind you of the various propositions made by the French government and the English bourgeoisie for the financial and economic blockade against our union.

WITH regard to our semi-friends, the broad masses of social democratic workers, it is clear to everyone today that the fact of our growth and the strengthening of the socialist element is making its way into socialist heads, even thru the fog of bourgeois mendacity. We see this in the increasing frequency of visits from workers' delegations. A Communist comrade accompanying a German delegation told me yesterday that anyone who still maintained, in Germany, that our steel industry is no socialist industry, that the number of our workers is lessening, and that everything is going backward in the union, would forfeit all confidence, even among the social democrats, who would recognize this repetition of the lies of the bourgeois press and of the most reactionary leaders of social democracy.

We Develop More Rapidly Than Our Opponents.

THE above is a brief sketch of the economic and political situation of our country. It is clear from this that the strength of the enemy is growing, both in the sphere of politics and of economics. It is clear that we must face the political dangers confronting us. It is clear that we must face the danger threatening us from the rich farmers, the N. E. P. men, the bourgeois intelligentsia so often combining with these, etc. We must never forget these for a moment. We must realize that these dangers are growing. This is true. We should be very bad politicians of, we did not cast a glance at this aspect.

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause —of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is either cessation of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well as the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Bucharin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

But when we draw the general balance, when we observe the right proportions of light and shade, of our growth and the growth of our opponents, of our achievements and our faults, then we can fall ourselves in plain truth here, and this truth is: in general we are growing more rapidly than our opponents, in general there is no devastating thunderclap hanging over our heads, in general we are on the right road.

THE PARTY AND THE OPPOSITION BLOCK.

II.

The Ideological Differences Between The Party and the Opposition.

AFTER this brief sketch of our present position, we pass on to the questions raised in part in the C. C. plenum by the comrades of the opposition, in part outside of the plenum in connection with the work of the plenum, or appearing in the utterance of other oppositional writers, journalists, theoreticians, and political economists. I shall classify remarks on the questions in accordance with the main problems confronting our party at the present time, from the correct estimation of which our policy, our political standpoint, and the conclusions which we as leaders of the policy of the party must draw for the immediate future from the present situation, depend at the present time.

Economic Policy in Its Relations to The Industrialization of the Country.

I SHALL first deal with the problem which I should like to name the problem of economic policy in its connection to industrialization. I shall endeavor, tho briefly, to dissect those theses of the oppositional comrades which express totality the system of the views of the opposition and their economic platform, and to compare these with the standpoint of the whole party.

The first thesis advanced by the opposition is the assertion that our industry is retrogressing, and that the disproportion between agriculture and city industry is increasing, to the detriment of city industry. I settled with this thesis to a great extent in my introductory remarks. It is characteristic of an opposition to paint the situation in exaggeratedly dark colors, but there should be limits to this process. However, the comrades of the opposition maintain that our industry is falling behind agriculture, that it is not developing so rapidly as agriculture, and that the policy pursued by our party and the policy of the majority of the C. C. are to blame for this.

AS early as 1923, during the discussion on the price policy, our central committee was accused of so acting that industry remained backward as compared with agriculture, and in particular, it was accused of a price policy detracting from the necessary growth of our industry. But you will remember, comrades, that facts have confuted these accusations. During the first economic year following the discussion of 1923, our industry made a spring forward of 60 per cent. In the following year there was another advance of 60 per cent. Our industry developed with amazing rapidity. This thesis of retrogression in industry is based in the first place on incorrect figures. At the beginning of this report I put the question in a positive form, and you have seen that the total balance is undoubtedly in favor of the growth of industry as compared with agriculture.

tort. Nevertheless, we insist on penetrating the progressive, if for no other reason than the very sound one, that we cannot help ourselves. The progressives we have in mind are not those trade union militants who have their hats in the ring every day in the year and who lick their chops every time they conjure up a vision of a capitalist hanging by the toe nails over an illuminated heap of goose grease. The progressives we are shipping at are the lads who denounce Frank Farrington but worship John H. Walker, Farrington's friend and supporter.

WHEN Communists issue a call for a united front campaign for some particular reason or other, liberals of many shades, get suspicious. They believe that the Communists have some ulterior motive. They have. The object is to turn our program loose on those workers who are under the influence of the reformists. And, when the reformists respond to the united front appeal, their object is to give the Communists a similar treat. This should be a good way of testing the relative merits of Communism and reformism. But only in very rare cases do the reformists grab the opportunity to try their wares on the workers.

THE progressive is between two chorus. He is no rose but he pretends to see things thru the rose-colored glasses of gradualness. He gets stung by the revolutionary elements and by the reactionaries. There are times when a progressive is liable to be mistaken for a revolutionist but when a crisis comes, he trots meekly into the reactionary camp, hangs up his hat and calls it his home. Read Leon Trotsky's article on the British strike in number 22 of the Communist International.

* * *

OCCASIONALLY we get criticised for dealing harshly with progressives. But what we are concerned with is not a label but deeds. Everybody who appears before the masses in the role of a leader, must be ready to find his views subjected to a decissing process. Revolutionists cannot afford to stand on etiquette. Telling the truth is still the main order of business. Progressives must go forward or be consigned to base their action.

Ernst Haeckel on "Last Words on Evolution"

What is this plasm? What is this mysterious "living substance" that we find everywhere as the material foundation of the "wonders of life?" Plasm, or protoplasm, is, as Huxley rightly said thirty years ago, "the physical basis of organic life;" to speak more precisely, it is a chemical compound of carbon that alone accomplishes the various processes of life. In its simplest form the living cell is merely a soft globule of plasm, containing a firmer nucleus. The inner nuclear matter (called caryoplasm) differs somewhat in chemical composition from the outer cellular matter (or cytoplasm); but both substances are composed of carbon, oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen, and sulphur; both belong to the remarkable group of the albuminates, the nitrogeneous carbonates that are distinguished for the extraordinary size of their molecules and the unstable arrangement of their atoms (sometimes more than a thousand) that compose them.

There are, however, still simpler organisms in which the nucleus and the body of the cell are not yet been differentiated. These are the monera, the whole living body of which is merely a homogeneous particle of plasm (thus chromacea and bacteria). The well-known bacteria which now play so important a part as the causes of most dangerous infectious diseases, and the agents of putrefaction, fermentation, etc., show very clearly that organic life is only a chemical and physical process, and not the outcome of a mysterious "vital force."

We see this still more clearly in our radiolaria, and at the same time they show as unmistakably that even psychic activity is such a physicochemical process. The different functions of their cell-soul, the sense-perception of stimuli, the movement of their plasm, their nutrition, growth and reproduction, are determined by the particular chemical composition of each of the 4,000 species; and they have all descended, in virtue of adaptation and heredity, from the common stem-form of the naked, round parent-radiolarian (Actissa).

We may instance, as a peculiarly interesting fact in the psychic life of the unicellular radiolaria, the extraordinary power of memory in them. The relative constancy with which the 4,000 species maintain the orderly and often very complex forms of their protective flinty structure from generation to generation can only be explained by admitting in the builders, the invisible plasm-molecules of the pseudopodia, a fine "plastic sense of distance," and a tenacious recollection of the architectural power of their fathers. The fine, formless plasm-threads are always building afresh the same delicate flinty shells with an artistic trellis-work, and with protective spines and guard-supports always at the same points of their surface. The physiologist, Ewald Hering (of Leipsic), had spoken in 1870 of memory as "a general function of organized matter." I myself had tried to explain the molecular features of heredity by the memory of the plasm-molecules, in my essay on "The Perigenesis of the Plastidules" (1875). Recently one of the ablest of my pupils, Professor Richard Semon (of Munich, 1904), made a profound study of "Mneme as the principle of constancy in the changes of organic phenomena," and reduced the mechanical process of reproduction to a purely physiological function.

From the cell-soul and its memory in the radiolaria and other unicellular protists, we pass directly to the similar psychic function in the ovum, the unicellular starting-point of the individual life from which the complex multicellular frame of all the higher tissue-forming animals and plants, is developed. Even the human organism is at first a simple nucleated globule of plasm, about 1-125 inch in diameter, barely visible to the naked eye as a tiny point. This sea-cell (cytula) is formed at the moment when the ovum is fertilised, or mingled with the small male spermatozoon. The ovum transmits to the child by heredity the personal traits of the mother, the sperm-cell those of the father; and this hereditary transmission extends to the finest characteristics of the soul as well as of the body. The modern research as to heredity, which occupies so much space now in biological literature, but was only started by Darwin in 1859, is directed immediately to the visible material processes of impregnation.

ARTHUR BRISBANE stopped boosting Florida real estate to give the hurricane time to pass by. But no investor in real estate should get excited, says Arthur, who has invested a considerable sum of money in Florida. The Arthur regrets the loss of life, but consoles himself with the thought that millions were killed in the world war and the survivors forgot about it mighty quick. Now for the greatest airplane fleet in the world and Brisbane will be happy. Murder by airplanes is more scientific than murder by heavy artillery.

CHESTER WRIGHT sees another wave of Soviet Russia propaganda coming. Who is Chester Wright? Chester was once upon a time a socialist and now he is not even that. He edited the defunct New York Call for a time and later on went on Sam Gompers' payroll. After Sam went to his reward—to the worms—Chester got the bright idea that he would like to be an oil magnate. Chester is oily enough, but the suckers would not buy his stock. He made the mistake of canvassing the labor fakers, and they know each other.

SO Chester dropped his fake oil stock and hiked to Washington. William Green, being a fezy Baptist, took Wright in and gave him a job attacking radicals and hurling his poisoned arrows at the Soviet Union. Perhaps Chester had some oil in his system when he penned the following, or perhaps it was something else. Here it is: "... It is new recognition or ruin and the gamblers of Moscow, circling madly in the same bloody trail trod by Lenin and kept frashly worked by the smoking, bludgeoning, murdering cooks, are planning to bend every effort to win on the throw of the dice."

A FLEVER liar will not over-exaggerate. He will not water his stock excessively. The main consideration of a propagandist is to get the public to believe what he serves up, and, of course, to reach as wide a circle as possible. People blinded by prejudice allow their emotions to convince their judgment. This is why Wright's diatribe against Russia can be turned into a boomerang. Let any living worker read the above excerpt and what will he think? He will say: "Chester has to nurse." Wright hates the Soviet leaders as any traitor will hate those who remain true to principle he deserted.

THE reactionary officials of the American Federation of Labor and their hired scribblers have reason to hate the revolutionary workers. The leaders are making out pretty well just now. They are sharers in capitalist prosperity. Salaries of $150 a week are not to be sneered at. And there is a general scramble for the financial paws of the fakers are not as free from taint as the morals of Caesar's wife. Recognition of the Soviet Union is desired by groups of American capitalists for purely business reasons. But recognition will also help the Soviet Union and thus hasten the day of labor's victory.

ONE of the most disgraceful incidents in the annals of the American labor movement is the speech delivered by Thomas Mac Mahon, president of the United Textile Workers' Union, at the mass demonstration in Passaic to celebrate the entrance of several thousand scabs into the American Federation of Labor. MacMahon had no word of criticism for the employers. He spent most of his time denouncing the strikers. Several thousand members have been added to the U. M. W. of A. without any effort on MacMahon's part. Judging by his talk, they have a worse enemy in MacMahon than in the police that smashed their heads during the strike.

BECAUSE of his extravagance Count Franz Esterhazy, Jr., of Hungary has been turned over the custody of his wife. The count had a $6,000-acre estate which he mismanaged, in addition to many other money-pending devices, the count had 3,000 suits of clothes. The count was unlucky that the workers' revolution did not ancreed in Hungary. In that case he would not have to look after 3,000 suits of clothes, and not having any property, it is quite likely that the countess would not volunteer to treat him as a prisoner of war.

MANY reasonable intelligent people who read the short pages of the capitalist press are worked up to a high pitch of excitement over the Kellogg-Dawes quarrel. How much of it is real and how much is bunk, but Ted Rickard, the boxing promoter, is not doing any worrying. The people are swallowing his publicity, and that is what he wants.

CANTON MAY GET BRITISH RECOGNITION

Boycott Ruins Trade; Cabinet Divided

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The British cabinet is seriously debating a reversal of British policy in China which will provide for recognition of the Canton government and a practical ignoring of the fiction of a government at Peking. The plan is to recognize as a de facto government any real independent power in the various provinces, but since Canton is the strongest, it implies a practical recognition of Canton and repudiation of Peking.

Die-Hards Oppose.

By this means it is hoped to make some sort of compromise with the rising nationalist revolutionary government of Canton. This is, of course, bitterly opposed by the die-hard imperialist elements both in the London cabinet and those ruling in the British settlements in China, particularly Hongkong.

Hongkong has suffered, and British trade has suffered enormous losses by the boycott laid against Hongkong by the Cantonese. The Canton government now offers to withdraw the boycott in return for certain extra taxes to be given to the Canton authority.

Hongkong Wants Intervention.

The die-hard element at Hongkong is bitterly opposed to any agreement with Canton and really wants armed intervention on a big scale to crush Canton in the old fashion. But all China is in revolt and the London diplomats are afraid that if the boycott is continued worse results will ensue than by reaching an agreement with Canton on customs taxes.

The British director of Chinese customs tariffs, Mr. Agley, is also opposing any yielding to Canton, even on the part of duties. After subtracting most of the duty income for foreign loans forced upon China, the customs director has given the rest to Peking.

Strawn Admits Defeat.

OKIO, Sept. 22. — Silas Strawn, American delegate to the judiciary commission of foreign powers that attempted to "settle" China has arrived at Tokio plainly showing disappointment with the result of the commission's efforts.

Instead of the imperialists making concessions to China's demand for the abolition of the extra-territorial rights of foreign powers, the Chinese national revolution is rapidly consolidating its forces to abolish those unequal treaty rights by force. The powers were dealing with the Peking government, which has turned out to be a myth, powerless to control China.

As to the customs conference, Strawn admits it is "up in the air, the Chinese having run out on us."

150,000 OF WU PEI-FU'S ARMY REVOLT

Imperialist Agent Is in Serious Situation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 22. — Two of Marshal Wu Pei-fu's supporters, generals Tien Wei Chin and Chin Yu Nao, have revolted, according to word received here today from Hankow. The revolt was said to have been precipitated by the execution of General Tien Wei Chin's chief brigadier general. More than 150,000 troops are involved in the revolt, it is reported.

General Sun Chuan Fang, with 30,000 troops, arrived at Kinkiang today and will probably move into the battle area shortly.

Reports reaching here today from Wu Chang states that F. E. Shepherd and wife, two of the 21 Americans facing starvation in that besieged city, had left the city which is besieged by the Cantonese. Canton airplanes are dropping propaganda to win troops in the city offering them inducements to revolt.

BRITISH MINE UNION REFUSES TO SURRENDER

King Continues State of Emergency

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 22.—King George the Fifth this afternoon issued a royal proclamation antanding the "state of emergency" or practical martial law, for another month. The government has had emergency powers since May 1, the beginning of the coal strike. Figures show that the loss to British industry has been nearly $2,500,000 since the strike began.

Miners Refuse to Surrender.

The latest efforts of Premier Baldwin to force the miners to accept surrender to district agreements and compulsory arbitration has called in a note to the premier, the miners' bitmate strongly that Baldwin is plainly on the side of the mine owners. He actually is a mine owner himself.

Baldwin proposed first that the miners go back to work before any settlement; second, that district settlements be made without regard to opposition of the union to longer hours and a pay reduction; third, that the union accepts, in lieu of its own judgment, the decree of an arbitration court to be elected by the Tory parliament to decide on any appeal from the district settlements.

A Flat Rejection.

The miners' reply is a flat rejection of the schems on the ground that it completely abolishes the national interests of the miners and the powers of the national union. It points out that the union has done its full part in trying to reach a settlement, but that the government had refused to live up to its promises made to them by Winston Churchill.

This has produced a crisis in the cabinet, Churchill declaring that Baldwin has turned him down and intimating that he may resign.

New Conference Called.

Following receipt of the note a meeting of several cabinet members, together with the miners' leaders was called by Baldwin. Important developments are expected from this conference.

It is clear that if the miners can hold ont some time longer, the capitalists of Great Britain will have reached an inner crisis that may lead to victory of their demands, or at least concessions to them now bitterly opposed by the government and the owners.

Fourner Prosecutor's Son Charged with Bank Failure Fraud

CARBONDALE, Ills., Sept. 22. — About $18,000 may be involved in the confidence game charges made against Clarence Rose, son of the late Secretary of State, James A. Rose, state's Attorney Searing charged here today. Young Rose gave bond in answer to the charges which grew ont of the failure of the First State Bank of Makanda, a few months ago.

Two worthless checks amounting to $6,500 are the basis for the charges, Searing declared.

Soviet Labor to Give $2,500,000 Monthly to Aid British Strikers

MOSCOW, Sept. 2 (By Mail).—According to the Central Council of Soviet Labor Unions, the 1 per cent levy which is being introduced in all the labor unions of the U. S. S. R. will produce approximately 5,000,000 or $2,500,000 a month for the British miners.

DAUGHERTY WILL SOON BE HOGTIED, SAYS PROSECUTOR

Received Share of Bribe for Allowing Claim

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Announcement was made by the government today at the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy trial that the $391,000 in Liberty bonds, the so-called "dirty" which Richard Merton, German financier, alleged he paid to have the $7,000,000 assets of the American Metals company returned to their foreign owners "will be traced within the next few days to the possession of the defendants."

Introduced to King.

Merton had testified he met the late John T. King, Connecticut politician, who introduced him to Jesse Smith, close friend of Daugherty, and that later he was placed in touch with Miller. He testified they gave King a "retainer" of $50,000 and also the $391,000 in Liberty bonds.

The government's announcement was made by Kenneth Simpson, assistant district attorney, while Samuel Rosshland, employed by Goldman, Sachs and company, brokers, of New York, was on the stand testifying regarding the bonds.

FASCIST ATTACK ON U. S. CONSUL IS CONFIRMED

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 22.—The state department announced that it was in possession of confirmation of the reported attack made on Earl Brennan, United States consul at Rome.

The American charge d'affaires at Rome, Warren D. Robbins, did not wish to embarrass the Italian government by cabling to Washington about the assault. This decision of Mr. Robbins is believed to indicate the benevolent attitude which is adopted toward the black shirt dictatorship by the American government.

Friendly to Mussolini.

Antifascist elements here call attention to the fuse which is generally made by the state department when an American citizen meets with violence in a foreign country. When a retired capitalist was killed by bandits in Mexico the state department was quick to lodge a protest. Yet nothing has been done officially about the attack on Brennan by Mussolini's black shirt troops.

It is possible that anti-fascist Italians in the United States may bring this angle of the matter to the attention of Secretary of State Kellogg.

WISCONSIN IS STILL IN GRIP OF LA FOLLETTE

Ekern Supporters Carry Convention

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 22.—Wisconsin had additional fuel for its political furnace today as alignments, set up in the recent primary election, broke away in the face of the sweeping victory of the old-time LaFollette regime in yesterday's state republican convention.

Ekern Strong.

It was a matter of record today that the LaFollette forces, who supported Herman L. Ekern, defeated gubernatorial candidate, in the recent primaries, won every point in the convention. They elected Henry A. Huber, lieutenant-governor, chairman by a majority of one vote, had their platform adopted by a vote of 50 to 39, and succeeded in making John B. Chase party chairman by a margin of 23 votes.

The LaFollette platform, which vigorously condemns the present administration as "the most reactionary in history, unfriendly to agriculture and labor, and violator of the mandate of the American people, by dragging us into the world court," was adopted in the face of protests of Senator Harry Daggett, Milwaukee, that it crucified Fred L. Zimmerman, the party's gubernatorial candidate.

MIGHTY FORD MILLIONS STUNG TO FURY BY DISTRIBUTION OF THE FORD WORKER, SHOP PAPER

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 22.—Communist activity among the automobile workers on the one hand, and the mighty Ford millions fighting to protect its own interests, clashed again here today, resulting in the arrest of two distributors of The Ford Worker, a shop paper, five issues of which have stung the great Ford cropporation to fury.

Those arrested were Sarah Victor, the Detroit agent of The DAILY WORKER, and Eleanor Massey. After being held for some time, they were released.

The arrests were made by the Ford "police" on the ground that The Ford Worker was being sold on Ford property.

Previous arrests at the same place by the local police had resulted in the chief of police admitting to Sarah Victor that she had a perfect right to sell The Ford Worker, that there was no law against it. An investigation will be made immediately to discover whether the latest arrests actually took place on Ford property.

Workers cheered the two Communist women as they were being taken away.

"I'll be back tomorrow," Sarah Victor called to the workers.

So threatening was the attitude of the automobile workers that the Ford detectives also shouted back, "She'll be back tomorrow."

The next issue, for October, of The Ford Worker will reach an edition of 20,000. It is sold at one cent per copy. Similar shop papers are also being issued at the Packard, Dodge and Fisher Body plants.

Canadian Elections Worry British Crown

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The imperial conference, due to open on October 6, may be postponed to get around the awkward situation for the British crown resulting from the liberal victory in the Canadian elections.

Fear is felt from the attitude of MacKenzie King, the new liberal premier, who has called London in response to an inquiry:

"So long as the Meighen ministry remains in office I prefer to give no statement whatever on the imperial conference or other current political matters."

If King refuses to attend the conference it will injure it seriously. On the other hand if he does attend and make a bloc with James Herstog of South Africa and Gerald Fitzgerald of the Free State, the imperial bonds may be weakened instead of strengthened.

Greek Mutineers on Trial Call 300 to Testify for Defense

ATHENS, Sept. 22.—The "republican guards," headed by Colonels Zeras and Dertilis, formed by former Dictator Pangalos to insure his safety, are on trial for mutiny by the government of Kondylis.

They refused to disband after, the overthrow of Pangalos and on September 9 tried to enter the city of Athens and seize control. After a short fight they were forced to surrender.

When the trial began the charges were read, but adjournment was taken directly thereafter. The mutineers have called 300 witnesses to testify in their defense.

POLICE AND COURTS WAR ON STRIKERS

N. Y. Garment Workers in Brave Struggle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 22.— At the customary mass picketing demonstration held every Monday in the garment zone, 200 pickets, including many strike leaders, were arrested for "obstruction of traffic." Vice-President Joseph Barucheweitz, leader Stenzer, S. Walas and others received workhouse sentences of a day apiece.

The supposed "neutrality" promised by the police commissioner many weeks ago seems to have vanished in the class struggle, wherein the police are playing their historic role. The same is true of the courts, and the injunction against the garment workers is rousing all New York unions.

The joint board of Cloak, Suit, Skirt & Dress Unions made public the following resolution received from the Cloth, Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers in support of the fight upon the injunction:

Resolution adopted by the general executive board of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' international Union on September 18, 1926:

"Whereas 40,000 cloak makers in the city of New York are engaged in a great struggle to protect their livelihood and existence and

"Whereas an attempt is now made, without the slightest justification, to use the ignoble method of injunction to disrupt and crush the ranks of the strikers, therefore be it

Death Toll Is Heaviest Among Negroes

(Pictures on page 3)

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOOREHAVEN, Fla., Sept. 22. — This was a city of the dead today, deserted by all but a few desolate souls stranded in high buildings.

Many of those who have left have on relief trains said they never wished to see the scene where their loved ones mat death, and it may be this barren town will never be inhabited again.

Words can scarcely describe the grussomsness, the sorrow and needs of this former little thriving city of 7,400 which now has but 800 of its former population accounted for. Hotels, churches and private homes in Sebring and vicinity are housing these 800 homeless mothers, fathers and children, many the last of large families. A conservative estimate of the dead is 65.

In water to their knees, undertakers are preparing the bodies of the dead on floating boxes on counters of former stores projecting out of the water and on hastily prepared tables. The water here was up to nine feet when the dikes of the Okeechobee broke but now is approximately two feet deep.

Upon the arrival of the first relief train in Sebring, relief workers did all that was possible to rescue the living.

Water Waist Deep.

Food and dry clothing and blankets were carried to the last of the railroad tracks and than the few boats there were filled with provisions, fresh water and medicine to slowly be pushed or dragged to the scene of devastation. Water was even then above the waistline and hiking miles in the water with arms full of provisions not knowing where there might be deep washouts in the former roadbed, the relief workers pushed on.

REVIVAL SIGNS EVIDENT IN K. C. LABOR MOVEMENT

Editor's Note.—The story below is the first of a series of reports on conditions among the workers and farmers of the western United States to be sent in by Bertram D. Wolfe, who is touring the country for the electoral campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party. Comrade Wolfe is an experienced newspaper correspondent and will report for The DAILY WORKER on the condition of the labor movement in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland and other western towns.

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (By Mail).— There are definite signs of revival in the Kansas City labor movement after having reached its lowest ebb during the past year. The breakdown of the steel and packinghouse organizing campaigns in 1919-20, the defeats of the railroad shop crafts in 1922 and various local defeats left Kansas City pretty much a non-union town except for some of the building trades and various miscellaneous trades.

In the basic trades—the big railroad center of Kansas City and the packing industry—conditions held sway and company unions terrorized the workers. Nevertheless, the Workers' Party has succeeded in forming a nucleus in the railroad shops and needle in the Armour and Swift plants, which nuclei elude the vigilance of the company detectives. In the organized labor movement also there are signs of a fresh breeze beginning to blow. Various progressives and left-wingers are beginning to lead a fight for a more militant policy and an unofficial rank and file committee has been formed to aid the official organizing committee of the Central Labor Council in an organization drive to organize the unorganized trades and regain the ten thousand members held by the Kansas City labor movement.

Discontent runs high among the farmers too, and democratic and republican politicians mouth radical phrases in an effort to hold on to them. But Senator Williams, who is running for re-election, will have a hard time convincing the farmers how that he will do any better next time than he did during his short term on appointee to fill a vacancy. The farmers are laughing at his claim that he supported the McNary-Haugen bill, because the congressional record reveals that he denounced it as "unscientific, unsound, and paternalistic."

...ED CONSUL REPLIES TO U. S. PAPAL ATTACKS

Rebel Priest Banned by Church and Executed

M. G. Prieto, acting-consul general in New York City forwarded, The DAILY WORKER a reply to the attacks of the American catholic bishops and priests against the Calles government.

The papal representatives in the United States claim that the catholic hierarchy in Mexico are the real champions of liberty and that the Mexican government is a tyranny. Despite the illegality of the resistance put up by the clergy to the laws passed by the revolutionary government, constitutional force was not used against them by the government. Only when they resorted to armament then were decisive steps taken to prevent them from causing mass bloodshed.

Supporters of Reaction.

Senor Prieto charges the Mexican hierarchy with being supporters of reaction. Those facts are well known to every well-informed person in the United States and do not require elucidation. The following historical sketch on the activities of the hierarchy in Mexico, by Senor Prieta are taken from his letter to The DAILY WORKER:

As to the record of the Mexican Bishops on civil liberty, the following incontrovertible facts are submitted:

Rebel Priest Excommunicated.

On the 16th of September, 1810, a humble Catholic priest raised the banner of revolt against the Spanish tyrants. His name was Father Hidalgo. For this offense he was excommunicated by the Catholic bishops, and suffered a most cruel death at the hands of the Spanish rulers. Another Catholic priest, Father Morelos, who took his place, was in turn excommunicated and killed.

When the Spanish power fell, the Catholic bishops of Mexico backed the usurper, Iturbide, who proclaimed himself emperor and continued the special privileges of the church. For the next forty years the Mexican church hierarchy, as a matter of absolute record, supported every reactionary government and attacked every liberal one.

Intrigued With France.

When, in spite of all they could do, it seemed that the liberal elements in Mexico were to triumph under Juarez, the archbishop of Mexico went to Europe, intrigued with Napoleon Bonaparte III, brought a French army to Mexican soil, and placed Maximilian, Archduke of Austria, on the throne of Mexico as emperor, backed by the bayonets of an alien army. For years the soil of Mexico was drenched with the blood of its people by this French army, whose presence there would have been impossible without the influence of the Catholic hierarchy.

On Side of Land Owners.

Always their record has been one of opposition to all enlightenment that the statesmen of Mexico struggled to bring to its people. Always has the Catholic hierarchy been arrayed on the side of the huge land owners, who kept the peons in a state of virtual slavery. Every liberal principle has been anathema to them. The enlightened social legislation which the Obregon and Calles administrations have sought to put into operation has found in the Mexican hierarchy the most bitter of opponents. Being themselves seekers of special privileges for the church, they have championed the special privilliges of the great land owners, the financial interests, and what large industrialists there are in Mexico.

Organized a Boycott.

How little care they have for the physical interests of a people impoverished by ten long years of revolutionary struggle is shown by their deliberate hacking of what they term a "boycott." The announced intention of this plan was to create financial and industrial chaos in Mexico. They hoped thus to compel the government to continue the special privileges which the hierarchy has never ceased to struggle for.

American Professor an Optimist; States Germany Can Pay All

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—"The stabilization of the French currency," says Prof. David Friday, American economic expert, "is clearer solution today than ever before because the world has become convinced that Germany will meet the reparations payments."

The professor says the collapse of the franc is Europe's "chief financial problem" and that Germany's aid is increasing by increasing the reparations payments, part of which goes to France.

The "expert" gives a rosy view of the expectation of German fulfillment of all future reparation payments, a view not shared by the Germans themselves, on the basis of what he says has been accomplished up to date.

SEN. OWEN, WILSON'S COUNSELOR, TELLS HOW YANKS WERE TRICKED INTO WAR BY COSTLY PROPAGANDA

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

That the world war was not fought for democracy and that the United States went into the war interested by false propaganda which cost tens of millions of dollars is admitted by a member of the inner circle of Woodrow Wilson's war administration. In answer to Newton D. Baker's proposal to cancel the allied debts former Sen. R. L. Owen lifts the lid to reveal how the American people were fooled into fighting the battle of European imperialists.

Ought to Know.

Owen is described by the Wall Street Journal as a leading counselor in government circles before and after the outbreak of the European war and influential in many steps that marked Wilson's administration. Among other things, he helped drive up the federal reserve act, which more than any other measure made possible the financing of the war.

Owen contends that the agitation to cancel the allied debt rests on a misconception of the causes of the war. He maintains that the American public is still influenced by propaganda that keeps alive wartime conceptions and suppresses knowledge of the facts. He says:

German Peril Wee Bunk.

"The whole question of the cancellation of the war debts is based on the theory that the late war was as much our affair as it was Europe's, that we were fighting for democracy against German autocracy, and that we were obliged to take up arms against Germany as she aimed at world domination, which would ultimately have hit the United States. This is not the true situation, as any one realizes who has investigated the facts, read the post-war literature and studied the official documents and state papers that have since come to light."

Imperialists on Both Sides.

Owen cites French as well as English and American authorities to show that the conflict originated in large measure in an alliance of Russia and France to control the continent of Europe and that German militarism was an effect and not a cause of the situation.

"It was," he says, "this European intrigue which all the people of Europe were victims of but for which we had no moral responsibility. Yet under the slogan of making the world safe for democracy we were actually drawn into fighting for a cause which was originally Russia's and France's.

Merely "Good War Propaganda."

Owen holds it misleading to attribute to Germany the entire blame for the world war, saying: "That was good propaganda during the war which the allies made the most of and we did, too, which we thought as a war measure. We spent $3,000,000 on that kind of propaganda and have no doubt England and France spent as much, if not $50,000 between them on that score here."

The Cost of a Lie.

Thus by the admission of an inside it took over $50,000,000 of false propaganda to lead the American people into a war which cost them the lives of 77,000 young men, the wounding of over 200,000 more, and approximately $40,000,000,000 in money. Men and women who suggested as much in 1917 were lynched and jailed, also as the fruit of the $50,000,000 Anglo-French propaganda.

Another Expose Needed.

There remains but one more step in the disillusionment of the American people as to the high ideals for which the United States took part in the war. The economic interest of American capital in making the world safe for its enormous profits must be exposed by some insider. Sooner or later some person who during the war was close to the international bankers centering around the House of Morgan will accidentally lift the lid and the secret will be out. Here's hoping it happens before a new flood of well-financed propaganda leads the people into supporting some new war, possibly in Asia, in behalf of America's imperialist bankers.

PANI FORCED OUT AS MEXICO FINANCE HEAD

Suspected of Being Tool of Church

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 22.—Alberto Pani, finance minister in the Calles government resigned after a reported disagreement with Senor Morones, minister of labor.

President Calles has announced his intention of cleaning out the finance ministry. It appears that two prominent functionaries in the department are suspected of carrying out the instructions of the Mexican hierarchy, whose aim is to bring about chaos in Mexico industrially and financially.

Morones is one of the strongest supporters of the present administration and is considered a likely candidate for the presidency two years from now.

Unreliable War Tales.

NOGALES, Arizona, Sept. 22.—Reports from catholic sources of a Yaqui victory over Mexican troops are discounted here. This place is chick with agents of De La Huerta and the Mexican hierarchy and they are adept at concocting stories about Mexico that are not so. There is no doubt that De La Huerta agents are busy provoking rebellion among the superstitious Indians, but the government is sufficiently strong to crush the present revolt.

The Million Dollar Fund.

There are rumors floating around here that emissaries from the Knights of Columbus are hovering around the border at certain points where arms can be smuggled across. Supporters of De La Huerta openly boast that the $1,000,000 fund now being raised by the Knights for their anti-Mexican campaign will be used to purchase arms for the Yaqui Indians.

Mexicon Request to U. S.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 22.—A request from the Mexican government for permission to transport Mexican troops across United States territory to the southern part of Texas to combat Yaqui Indians was received here. It could not be learned at the state department whether the request would be complied with.

Americans in Mexico Kick at Capture of Banking by British

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 22.—American business men in Mexico are more than irritated at the elimination of American banks thru incorporation with Canadian and British interests that leaves the complete control of foreign banking in Mexico in the hands of the British with the exception of one German bank.

Americans complain that in spite of Secretary Hoover's drive to capture Latin-American trade for the United States such trade is bound to be lost to the British, who, by financial control, have access to all the secrets of American trade.

When Americans apply for loans to enlarge their business or develop new lines they are compelled to give British bankers full information concerning the projects, which gives the British an advantage in getting into competition and taking the trade away from the Americans.

As a result American trade is predicted to decline and the British to profit. These complaints say that American financial interests that seek for an outlet for capital are neglecting the opportunity and giving it to the British.

The heroic struggle of 16,000 striking textile workers of Passaic and vicinity for a union and a living wage has gripped the hearts of the workingclass as has no other event in recent labor history.

Fitzpatrick Century Autocracy.

Now that the thrilling motion picture, "The Passaic Strike," has been completed, workers thruout the country will shortly have the privilege of seeing with their own eyes the stirring incidents of the struggle of the Passaic textile strikers in their courageous fight against fifteenth century autocracy in industry and the insidious company union with which the mill autocrats have attempted to fool their workers.

In addition to the strike scenes, there is a prologue acted by some of the strikers themselves, showing the home life of a typical mill family as it carries on the struggle for a precarious existence on starvation wages, with the mother and children forced to work in the mills to make even that existence possible. This picture brings home more forcefully than a thousand speeches the sheer necessity of a united front of the workers with which to meet the united front of the bosses.

Too Few Films.

There are too few labor films of any kind and not another that depicts the struggles of the workers during a strike. The motion picture, "The Passaic Strike" should receive the whole-hearted support in routing and dating of every intelligent worker, both because of its educational value and its help to Passaic strike relief.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 22.—Aimee McPherson recovered sufficiently from the effects of the deadly pimple on her nose to address her following tonight. Some estimate the benefit of her $100,000 "fight the devil fund."

Devil Has Good Laugh.

Those who make fighting the devil a life's work, on account of altruism, are not given to skepticism, so they did not question Aimee's virtue, but dug down. In all probability the money-raising campaign will be a success and no matter what happens to Aimee, whether she goes to jail or to a maternity ward—she is guaranteed the devotion of a few thousand feeble-minded people who look on her as a victim of the devil's intrigues.

The Yokels Are Layal.

Otherwise the wheels of justice are jockeying with the wheels of local politics and things are happening to Aimee. Outside of the plentiful supply of yokels that Los Angeles abounds in, the general run of people are now convinced that as a "disciple of the lord Aimee was just as good as the rest of them.

Her radio expert has not yet definitely cleared himself to the prosecution. Mr. Ormiston is angling for immunity, and it is believed if he is guaranteed a loose leg he will take the witness stand and tell a story that will make "Hot Dog" look frigid.

British Worried Over Franco-German Scheme; Warn U. S. About Debt

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The new alliance between Germany and France, whereby Germany offers financial aid to France and Belgium in return for evacuation of the Rhineland, is disturbing British imperialist circles not a little. The British are keeping their own interests are at stake, and still more wisely try to get United States on their side.

Lauds to Debt Review.

"The United States should know," says a prominent diplomat, "that the final German-French settlement is impossible without the help, because Germany is expected to give financial compensation for political concessions. This will inevitably take the form of stabilization of the franc on one hand and advance installments of Dawes payments on the other. This cannot be done without the aid of Wall Street and the American treasury.

"This will bring to a head again the question of the revision of the Dawes plan and, co-jointly, of the inter-allied debts."

Whether or not the Wall Street interests are already behind the France-German deal to check Great Britain's influence on the continent was not discussed by the English spokesman.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—A huge street meeting was held here Monday at the corner of Fifth avenue and 59th street to raise funds for milk for the undernourished children of the Passaic textile strikers. Women conducted the meeting under the auspices of the United Working Class Housewives, Councils 1 and 2. The speakers included Anna Smith of Council No. 1, Elsabeth Gurley Flynn, Frances Bride, a striker; Julia Stuart Poyntz and Mrs. Kate Gitlow. Leona Smith acted as chairman of the meeting. # Workers Must Become As Class Conscious As their Capitalist Oppressors

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TRAVELING from one city to another, buying and looking over the different local capitalist newspapers from day to day, one is increasingly struck with the subserviency of the bought press to great business.

Thus I secured a copy of The Cleveland News coming down on the train from Buffalo. It had a special supplement heralding "Cleveland's Achievement Celebration," especially sponsored by this publication in celebration of the fact that it is moving into its new home, where it will continue to do its "Famous Check" business on an increased scale under the same patronage.

From beginning to end the special supplement of The Cleveland News was a glorification of the city's great banks and other financial institutions. Other special editions were announced for the week.

Cleveland, Ohio, grows out of the steel mills, the coal mines and the other great industries of this district. It is the workers of labor.

To read The News, prostrate before the great industrial and financial capitalists, one would think that this city had been erected by some greedy 20th century Midas, sitting alone in the back room of his colossal bank, piling endless stacks of gold coins, and upon the other.

Similarly the Hearst paper, at Rochester, New York, was publishing a long series of double-column bold faced editorials, lauding the local "captains of industry." This sycophant sheet, like all Hearst newspapers, was on its belly before the local capitalists, claiming in superlative language that they were responsible for the city's growth. Here was the usual pandering to the self-acclaimed "initiative" of the present ruling class.

Then the New York Times appears, with a special supplement to celebrate its 75th anniversary. It, too, must narrate the heebinjees of the National City Bank, the House of Morgan and other agencies of high finance, allowing the great prowess of its huge bouquets of roses on themselves in spread eagle advertisemanis, at the same time joining in the chorus with special articles and anamorous illustrations.

New York City is a great human beehive. Cleveland and Rochester are only less so. Millions are here daily subject to the knock of toil. The New York Times, The Cleveland News and the Rochester, N. Y., Hearst sheet, do not see the millions. They see only the rich capitalists, or, to be more correct, the multi-millionaires.

This is not even a back-scratching affair. The capitalists kept press scratches the tender skin covering the puffed flesh of its capitalist everlord, where he cannot reach himself, in order to receive a similar service in return. Not at all. The press is a complete lackey, doing every bidding of the master class, in turn receiving such financial crumbs as the master class chooses to throw its way. Of course, this is usually sufficient to keep it alive, and a little more, if its record for subserviency is complete, shows a wee bit of sympathy for the working class.

Yet it is this foul press that labor supports. What have the workers of Cleveland to say when they read in The News the article, "How Cleveland's Financial Leaders Have Made This City Known the World Over"? To be sure this sheet offers its readers more than half a dozen special writers to tell the story of the Tussey-Dempsey prizefight at Philadelphia, Thursday night, the greatest drawing card of the capitalist celebration of the 150th anniversary of the revolutionary war of 1776.

What have the workers of the steel mills, the coal mines and the railroads of Ohio to say when The News declares, "Financial Giants Old and New, Make Cleveland Wonder City"? As if the men who go down into the mines, toil before the steel furnaces, and run the trains do not matter. The Van Sweringen Brothers, who are a couple of Cleveland's treasured pets because of the financial gymnastics that they are executing in an effort to consolidate transportation in order to reap greater profits, never to lift the wages or better the conditions of the workers who have built and who now operate the railroads.

Only the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers breaks from the Cleveland News. Not because of the struggles of the railroad engineers to build an organization of their class and to aid all railroad workers, but because the officials of the engineers' brotherhood have gone into the banking business themselves in Cleveland and elsewhere and become respectable in the eyes of the enemy capitalist class.

In one other respect, however, the workers do get a little attention. It is shown that the Morris Plan Bank in Cleveland has enjoyed "phenomenal growth." The Morris Plan Bank is a money-lending concern. It loans money, mostly to workers, at high rates of interest. The success of these money lenders in Cleveland would indicate that the workers are not so well off. The Cleveland bank started in 1916 with 3,100 loans aggregating $585,511. The last fiscal year saw 16,616 loans, amounting to $5,706,000. This is an average of less than $350 constituting the small sums that the penniless worker needs to fight off the wolf of poverty. The capitalist Cleveland News glories in the fact that its financial "geniuses" are able to show "phenomenal growth" even in this Shylock business.

Thus the capitalist class, however, reveals that it is 100 per cent conscious of its own interests. This class consciousness of the present ruling class is ably reflected in its press.

The workers must develop a class consciousness that approximately 100 per cent for the class interests of labor as this loyalty of the capitalists to their class interests. That class consciousness must also develop the realization that labor needs its own press to reflect its interests and to carry on its struggles. Against the capitalist class the working class. Against the capitalist press the press of the workers, workers who are becoming increasingly conscious of their own struggles and of their own destiny.

animously and vigorously protest against this crying abuse of the judicial power which aligns the courts with the employers against the workers and which converts the courts into a club in the hands of the employers to crush and oppress labor and which puts into disrepute our entire judicial system; and he it further

"Resolved that we herewith pledge our wholehearted support and co-operation to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the striking Cloak Makers in this great struggle for right and justice."

The union also made public an offer from Louis J. Budenz, editor of the Labor Age, to form a citizens' committee to go out on the picket line. The offer, it was stated, will be accepted.

Magistrate Thomas F. McAndrew, who sentenced the arrested pickets in Jefferson Market court, gave the trade unionists a warning that further offense would be punished by imprisonment of from 30 days to six months. He cited the definition of picketing written by Chief Justice Taft of the U. S. supreme court and called attention to the injunction issued against the strikers last week by the state supreme court justice Charles L. Guy.

The industrial council has taken notice of the left wing leadership of the strike by an attempted answer to Benjamin Gitlow's scathing attack on the courts as an injunction accessory to the employers' attempt to break the strike.

Conference Committee Balks at 5th Item

GENEVA, Sept. 22.—The last part of the fifth reservation proposed by the United States as a condition of its entry into the world court, was recommended for rejection by the juridical committee of the world court conference here.

The reservation which is objected to provides that the world court shall not take up matters affecting United States interests without the consent of the United States.

A Restriction.

The juridical committee maintains that this reservation might restrict the activities of the league and nations and should be made the subject of a more complete understanding with the United States.

The committee reported in favor of the acceptance of the first four reservations and the first part of the fifth.

LABOR BAITING JUDGE DEFEATED IN CALIFORNIA

Injunction Czar, Judge Busick, Retired

SACRAMENTO—(By Mail) — The workers of this county are not only rejoicing over the defeat of the labor-baiting governor, Friend Richardson, and his playmate, Frank Merriman, candidate for lieutenant-governor. They have retired Judge Charles O. Busick, the superior judge famous all over America for having sent to San Quentin more than a score of I. W. W., issued the notorious "Busick Injunction" and again and again exhibited the bitterest animus toward radicals. "Busick was defeated last Tuesday by Asst. Dist. Atty. Romeo Hughes, and along with Busick the workers fired Dist. Atty. J. J. Hepperson, Busick's companion in arms.

Busick's Activities.

Busick was called "the prosecuting judge." He had been charged with having a complex on "reds" amounting to a mania, and dimming his judicial sense so that again and again the higher courts reversed his decisions.

In 1921 two "wobblies" were being tried in Busick's court under the California criminal syndicalism law, accused of no crime other than membership in the I. W. W., the defendants called into court 15 of their fellows to testify as to their membership. Only by one as these left the witness stand, they were arrested and charged with a felony under the "C. S." law. They were tried in two batches of 10 and five each in Busick's court, and were all convicted and sent to state's prison. Three of them were convicted on identical testimony which had freed them in Los Angeles county. During the trial, Busick held that a general strike might be held in violation of the "C. S." law.

Issues Injunction.

In 1923 Busick issued the injunction which declared in contempt of court all members of the I. W. W. (some 50,000 at the time). This would have denied a jury trial to those arrested for holding an I. W. W. card. Only one man was arrested under this injunction, and sentenced to serve in the local county jail by a police judge.

In 1925 Tom Connors, secretary of the California Workers' Defense committee, issued a number of pamphlets concerning the abuses of a Sacramento man who later was impeached as a vaudeviean. Connors was arrested for attempting to tamper with a jury.

His Own Witness.

During his trial in Busick's court, Judge Busick had himself sworn by the clerk as a witness, and in his own court, with no other judge sitting, he testified against Connors. Connors was convicted under the strange charge and is actually serving time in San Quentin today. A young man, his hair turned white from his experiences.

League of Nations to Try to Enslave Labor Under Mandate Powers

GENEVA, Sept. 22.—The methods of imperialism rule the league of nations is exposed graphically in the proposal introduced as an amendment to the mandate statutes which would provide for forced labor.

Its only opponent so far has been Sir Joseph Cook of Australia, who said that if labor was conscripted for "public" use by the power holding the mandate, means would soon be found to extend compulsory labor to private commercial enterprises.

Australia, he said, had the most back ward native state of New Guinea, but found that under kindness and encouragement by the department of agriculture had done more to advance the natives than any other method. The natives were given assurance of fair earnings, they had applied themselves to work and vary successfully. If the mandate commission had adopted the principle of forced labor, amounting to slavery, its statutes should be revised from start to finish.

TOKIO, Sept. 22.—The chief of Tokio's police has denounced the story regarding a mysterious stranger who was supposed to have pulled off a fancy knife throwing stunt at the British embassy during a luncheon reception of the Swedish crown prince.

BRAND GERMAN STORY FALSE

Petroleum Syndicate's Figures Decisive

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Aug. 24 — (By Mail) — The central committee of the Miners' Union of the Soviet Union has published the following declaration in answer to a report of the "Hamburger Echo" according to which the Soviet Union is concluding large contracts for the sale of petroleum to Great Britain and that A. J. Cook has protested on this account to the Anglo-Russian miners' committee.

The declaration points out that the report of the social-democratic organ concerned is a fabrication and quotes the following statistics provided by the Petroleum Syndicate concerning the export of petroleum to Great Britain:

From January to April the following quantities were exported: :

|---|---|
| Masut | 7,587 tons |
| Raw petroleum | " |
| Benzine | 31,037 " |
| Petroleum | 38,077 " |
| Grease oil | 7,645 " |
| From April to July: | |
| Masut | " |
| Raw petroleum | " |
| Benzine | 46,585 " |
| Petroleum | 14,779 " |
| Grease oil | 3,713 " |
| In July: | |
| Masut | " |
| Raw petroleum | " |
| Benzin | 11,621 " |
| Petroleum | 26,011 " |
| Greasa oil | " |

The petroleum syndicate has concluded no further contracts with Great Britain concerning the supply of masut and petroleum. It has conducted no such negotiations either previously or now. As can be seen from the statistics, masut was only exported to England in the first quarter of the present year. During the whole strike period no single ton of masut or raw petroleum was exported to Great Britain, only such oils as could not replace coal were exported.

This is the real proof about the first part of the shameless fabrication of the German opportunists. These facts, however, disposed of the second part concerning the alleged protest of Cook. It is perfectly clear that if the Soviet Union has exported nothing which could replace coal, then any protest by Cook is rendered unnecessary. In point of fect such an affair was never mentioned at the Anglo-Russian miners' committee. The second contention is therefore just as much a fabrication as the first.

It is perfectly clear to every honest worker that the aim of these calumnies is to break the bonds which join the miners of Great Britain to the workers of the Soviet Union. Another aim of these calumnies is to excuse the treacherous attitude of the German trade union leaders with regard to the assistance for the British miners. Germany is exporting continuously increasing amounts of coal to Great Britain with the full support of the trade union leaders.

The German workers, above all the workers of Hemburg, have protested orally and again; they have demanded an immediate cessation of the export of coal and the strengthening of the measures of solidarity. Thru this broad masses of the German workers prove that they condemn the strike-breaking attitude of their leaders.

The latter invent various fairy tales concerning the export of commodities from the Soviet Union in order to excuse their own treachery. The German trade union leaders are acting according to the principle: Throw mud and some will surely stick. Anything else was not expected of them.

U. S. FRATERNAL DELEGATES DON'T SHINE AT T. U. C.

Farrington Dares Not Appear

By BILL ROSS, Federated Press.

BOURNEMOUTH, Eng. — (FP)— Not all was for the best with the fraternal delegates to the British Trades Union congress. The misfortunes of the American and Russian delegates disappointed the British labor men.

Just as the congress convened the newspapers came out with the information that Frank Farrington, one of the American delegates was discovered to be in the pay of coalowners. Although he was in London, only a few miles from Bournemouth, he dared not appear at the convention.

W. L. Hutcheson of the carpenters, the other American union, made a very brief stay in the convention city. Although a special session was assigned for his message, he asked permission to speak soon after his arrival, spending little time at the sessions or fraternizing with the delegates. His 6-minute talk gave no account of the labor movement in America and showed no interest in the problems of the movement in Britain.

While members of the general council would not make adverse comment on Hutcheson's attitude, their regret at the fiasco of the American fraternal delegation was evident. British labor is much interested in America. Since the beginning of the miners' lockout and the aid sent from all over the world, it has felt closer to the international labor movement than ever before.

While the British labor men might have felt that American labor shows too little interest in the British movement, some of them thought that Russian labor leaders show too much. When Tomsky and other Russian fraternal delegates were refused admission to Britain by his majesty's government, they cabled their message to the congress. In it they attacked the conduct of the general strike as a betrayal by the leaders. The message was printed by the general council and circulated among the delegates. A reply was also added stating that "the general council has no intention of replying to this ill-instructed and presumptuous criticism."

J. W. Brown spoke for the Intl. (Amsterdam) Federation of Trade Unions. "Trade union problems are international in their scope and can be solved only thru international action," he said. "Even if national unions were 100 per cent organized it would not be enough to withstand the attack of international capital."

Frank McKenna, delegate from the Canadian Trades and Labor congress, told the congress that Canadian workers admired British labor's general strike and the resistance to the lockout. Lala Lajpat Rai the first delegate to be sent by the All-India Trades Union congress, appealed for a united front of labor throughout the British empire against the autocracy with difficulty towards the stricken city.

Bodies of the drowned could be seen at high places where they had been swept by the water of the broken dikes. Chickens cackled from floating boards and housetops where they had flown to safety. Water hyacinths covered many bodies and large metal oil tanks were eight and ten miles from their original position. Where a little stretch of road stuck out of the water, hundreds of rabbits and other small animals were lying drowned where they had scampered to what they thought a safe place.

Houses were like kindling wood in most places, piled up with corn stalks, straw and dead animals.

Trip a Nightmare.

Natives who had not slept for three days searched up and down what had been streets for their loved ones in boats with motor "kickers." We hiked 18 miles and waded in water to our waists for six miles in going to the scene and returning. The trip was as a living nightmare, indescribable because of the horror.

More than a hundred coffins are in Sebring's temporary morgue, established where most of the refugees are housed. Last night when the trainload of dead bodies were brought in to their temporary resting place, tired men, women and children stood in a pouring rain to watch the grim work of unloading white-covered bodies, women went into hysterics while some looked on—dazed as though in the midst of a terrible dream.

Disease Menaces.

There is great danger of disease as the sun shines and the water is giving up the dead that are not pinned beneath wreckage. A report that snakes and alligators were in the water was heard when we returned one time to the telegraph station, some 30 miles from the scene of the disaster, but these are unfounded as we made a thorough investigation of every condition in the former town.

The half-naked babies and the women and older children, many in overalls, were taken from Arcadia and placed in boats where they were fed and taken to the train for transportation to Sebring. Some of the most heroic work of life-saving in the flooded city was done by young boys. One young red-headed boy, of 12 or 13, saved his mother and two sisters none of whom could swim.

Negroes Suffer Most.

How many that were drowned in Lake Okechobee itself is unknown although 50 or 60 small fishing craft are known to have been on the lake at the time the storm broke.

No one will ever know the exact number of dead nor who is beneath the mass of ruins of the former city. The Negro section of Moorehaven was practically wiped out as it was in the lowest sections and it is estimated that three-fourths of them are dead. Negroes carried their burdens in the relief work in an admirable way and faced the situation in a heroic manner.

Greatest need is felt for funds to send homeless babies, women and older children to homes of relatives in the North. Little money is on hand for this purpose as the town is poverty-stricken. Sebring, Wauchula, Avon Park, and other nearby cities sent rescue parties, money and food. Relief trains were dispatched over the Atlantic Coast line railway from Tampa, Sanford, Orlando, Winter Haven, Heinse City, Avon Park and other large west coast and central cities.

Desolation.

Sebring has the appearance of a city in the rear of firing lines at the front with its many refugees suffering from over-exposure, cuts and bruises and sorrow for their lost families.

Many tales of entire families being wiped out, of mothers and husbands being swept away from one another and of heroic incidents of rescue of each other at the risk of their own lives, are told.

Water is slowly receding and greater relief can be given the stricken families in a few days if the water does not rise again from the

SCOTT NEARING THUMBNAILS T. U. MEET NOTABLES

Mine Leaders Are Most Serious

By SCOTT NEARING, Fed. Press.

BOURNEMOUTH, Eng. — (FP) — British Trades Union congresses, like American baseball games, begin on time. Exactly at noon, Sept. 6, the 55th session was opened by Arthur Pugh, who piloted the general council through the general strike. Standing behind his shell-rim glasses, his gray mustache bristling, he read in a measured tone, like an auditor reporting on the financial status of a great business. His speech was colorless, like his face. When he had finished it was easy for an observer to picture the scene, on May 12, when the prime minister said: "Mr. Pugh, have you a statement to make?" and Mr. Pugh said: "Yes, sir," and then called off the strike as he was told.

MacDonald sat on Pugh's right. As he entered the hall he was warmly greeted. His hands are still big and strong, but his hair is very gray; his face is lined, and his back slopes a bit. He is not bent like Bob Smillie, though, who sat a little beyond him on the platform.

John Bromley, of the general council, who recently slapped the miners hard in his Locomotive Engineers Journal, appears as debonnair and comfortable as ever. He sits on the platform, smoking his pipe, answering questions and steering his colleagues past uncomfortable issues.

Beside Bromley is Ben Turner, pipe alight and square cut whiskers wagging as he talks and laughs. On the opposite side of the chairman is Margaret Bondfield, smiling and conciliatory.

Bevin says little. He was the "general" of the general strike, and those who were the most prominent in it have the least to say about it.

A. A. Purcell has left for Mexico. J. H. Thomas was in Canada. At the Scarboro congress in 1925 he sat grimly through one defeat after another. This year his policy has triumphed, and he can afford to absent himself.

Among the delegates are many young faces and some new ones. A. J. Cramp is as suave as ever. Ellen Wilkinson rises in protest against some particularly flagrant portion of the general council's report and is promptly steamrollered by the chairman. Herbert Smith, president of the miners, looks tired and unhappy. A. J. Cook, his face stern and set, buries himself with the work of his delegation.

STUDENTS STAGE PROTEST AGAINST HIGH SCHOOL CUT

Demand Reinstatement of Special Courses

A student protest meeting in Senn High School Wednesday met for the purpose of launching a vigorous protest against a new economy campaign started recently by the school board in which special courses, chief among them dramatics, were curtailed. The Senn students were supported by a delegation from Lindblom High and members of the Parent-Teachers' Association.

The meeting was opened by James Woodward, a student, who read the curtailment order issued by school superintendent "Czar" McAndrews, which was vigorously hissed by the assembled students. Young Woodward said that the stage material being removed under the order was partly paid for out of the proceeds of student theatrical presentations.

Parents Support Them.

A delegate from the Parent-Teachers' Association told the students they had the backing of that body in their protests against the removal of special courses that lend the only color to student life in the high schools.

Principals of the high schools say there was no consultation from school headquarters about the change. The first they knew of it was the general order issued by McAndrew. The few members of the school board that could be reached either said they knew nothing about it or supported McAndrew on "economy" grounds.

Teachers Re-open Fight.

While the students were waging their fight against the school bureaucracy, the teachers met yesterday in council and decided to make another effort to prevail on McAndrew to allow the councils of teachers to meet during school hours as they had done for thirty-four years until, in 1924 McAndrew issued an order stopping them.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 22.—Political circles are assured that when MacKenzie King, the newly elected liberal premier will take powers one of his main objects is to attend the imperial conference in London and together with Gerald Fitzgerald of the Irish Free State and Premier Hertzog of South Africa, try to curb the powers of British governor generals sent out to the dominions by the british crown.

MacKenzie King is particularly strong against the present governor general in Canada, Lord Byng, who refused to dissolve the Canadian parliament under Kings cabinet, forcing him to resign and giving the election machinery to the conservative leader, Arthur Meighen, when Meighen's cabinet was repudiated by parliament.

Government Crisis in Japan; Students' Turn to Communism Alarms

TOKIO, Sept. 22— A government crisis of an acute nature has arisen in the form of attacks by reactionary elements on the cabinet for being "disloyal and disrespectful" to the throne. Fascist things have entered cabinet members' homes intent on violence. Police are guarding the ministers.

Even more concern is felt at the spread of "dangerous thoughts" among the universities, the students having taken to the study of Communism. The liberal press blames the repressive measures taken by the government against liberal ideas of the students for their turning to Communism.

LABOR RESPONDS TO CAMPAIGN OF PARTY IN DETROIT

Throng Hears Engdahl, Reynolds and Baker

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 22. — Following a day of interesting developments, during which two party members were arrested for selling "The Ford Worker," a shop paper issued at the Ford plant, while Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, was given a very friendly reception by the workers while speaking at a noon hour before the Packard plant, with Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit Central Labor, being severely trounced by the machine in the state labor or republican convention, the Workers (Communist) Party held its most successful campaign meeting thus far in the evening at Finnish Hall.

Workers interested in Campaign.

The large gathering of workers present in their response to the addresses delivered by Engdahl, by William Reynolds, candidate for governor, and by R. Baker, the party's district organizer, showed their great interest in the Workers Party campaign.

"The democratic party was the party of the southern slave-holding aristocracy," Engdahl pointed out. "The republican party is the party of the capitalist ruling class of today, that crushed the rule of the southern slaveholders in the bitterly fought civil war. So the Workers Party develops today in response to the needs of the American working class. It will triumph in its time."

Reynolds Shows Progress of Struggle.

Reynolds reviewed the struggle for independent political action of the 13th district and one of the party's spokesmen in the Detroit Central Labor Union, was unable to be present due to illness.

Ambitious plans are being made for the remainder of the campaign. Meetings will be held, special editions of The DAILY WORKER will be ordered and other literature distributed on a large scale.

REPS BUCKLING DOWN TO FIGHT

Denounce Each Other as Bankrupt: We Agree

By SYDNEY BLOOMFIELD.

BOSTON, Mass. (By Mail).—With the state primaries over, the parties of tweedle-dum and tweedle-dee, the republicans and democrats, have now buckled down to action with "clear the decks" as their battle cry. But if they actually mean to clear their decks they have an awful dirty job. For both Mr. David I. Walsh, president of one bank and vice-president of another and corporation lawyer for the B. & M. Railroad, who is the democratic candidate for senator, and Mr. William M. Butler, millionaire public utilities and textile mill owner and Calvin Coolidge's wire puller, the republican candidate for the same office, have pretty shady records, even if one were to allow for the single fact that they are both candidates of finance and industrial capitalism.

Because the fate of Calvin Coolidge lies in the outcome of Massachusetts' choice for United States senator, the campaign in behalf of Butler and the whole republican state ticket is proceeding in a most vigorous and expensive manner. A tremendous campaign is being waged by the republicans, even to the extent of attempts at sacrificing such yankee republican office seekers as Alexander Lincoln and Arthur K. Reading in favor of one of foreign descent, Elijah Adlow, who, the Boston Transcript says, "would make certain on Beacon Hill the sort of co-operation among the executive, legislative and judicial branches that is part and parcel of good government." Adlow was republican candidate for attorney-general in the three-cornered republican primary fight, but lost out in the race.

Hunt Foreign Vote.

The republican state committee has, in an open official statement to the press, implored its adherents to vote for Adlow, as against Lincoln and Reading, all three being republicans; not because the machine was opposed to either of the three candidates in the primaries, but because Adlow was a concession to the foreign voting element which is steadily increasing in this state and which the democrats usually capture.

The democrats realise the importance of electing Walsh, who opposes Butler. They realize that with Butler eliminated Coolidge may be eliminated as a presidential candidate, which, in turn, will enhance the chances of a national democratic administration being elected. The contest in this state has been "pepped" up somewhat with the appearance of a book of "facts" issued as a campaign book by the national committee of the democratic party and bears the signatures of Senator Peter Goelet Gerry of Rhode Island and William A. Oldfield of Arkansas, chairmen, respectively, of the senate and house congressional campaign committees. This book is intended to furnish ammunition for the speakers of the democratic party during the next few weeks.

Cal Bankrupt, Say Democrats.

The book pays its respects to Coolidge and his administration by saying that alike in its foreign and domestic policies, the republican administration, more especially since Coolidge went into the White House, has been morally and intellectually bankrupt. It also takes a crack at the administration's subservicncy to big business, saying:

"The record reveals the administration of government by that party during the last six years as one which has been consistently subservient to big business, even to the point of packing the trade commission in its interest, which has continually increased expenditures on normal governmental activities, which has failed utterly to deal with such a problem of vital national import as that of farm relief, which has depressed agriculture, the textile industry, the small banker and the small merchant, and which has pushed the United States of that world-wide respect we enjoyed during the last democratic administration."

Aimee and Prosecutor Prepare for Hearings on Kidnapping Stunt

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 22.—District Attorney Asa Keyes, today was assembling evidence in anticipation of the preliminary hearing of Aimee Semple McPherson, noted woman evangelist, who is charged with conspiracy, in connection with her alleged kidnapping last spring.

Several witnesses were questioned by Keyes yesterday and at least one affidavit secured. The affidavit was made by A. A. Meloch, father of Harry R. Meloch, a private detective, sought as the mysterious "Mr. Martin," whose name has been linked in the alleged conspiracy plot.

Mrs. McPherson, according to present plans, will do little preaching during the week preceding her hearing, altho she will appear before her followers daily. Sunday, it is expected, she will take the pulpit to deliver a scorching pre-hearing sermon.

Weinstone Speaks in Pittsburgh Sept. 28

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

CAPITALISTS WON'T LIMIT CHILD EXPLOITATION

In the house of commons in England Lord Astor raised the point about the exploitation of child labor. The lord pointed out that in England exploitation of children from 14-18 years of age is not protected by any laws.

A series of investigations showed that little girls work 55 hours a week, and boys 10 hours a day. After discussion on this question, as the paper reports, the proposal brought in by Lord Astor was taken off the agenda because the majority of the house was against it.

This incident is very characteristic not only for England but also for all other capitalist countries of the old and new continents. It is clear that it is not in the interests of the bourgeoisie to limit the exploitation of child labor which is a very good source of profits because of the low price by which it is purchased.

With the growth of industry child labor is utilized to a much greater extent. And the government of any country would not dare to issue any such law that protects child labor in any way, because this will hurt the interests of the bourgeoisie. In United States of America, for instance, in spite of the insistent demands of various labor organization about passing a law for limitation of child labor the government prefers not to bind the capitalists with any obligations of such kind.

In Germany the law permits children to work with approval of their parents from seven years on. The Gormen parliament could not think of anything more repulsive than such a remark.

The enforcing "rationalisation" of industry at the present time in Germany leads in the first place to an increase in the army of the unemployed. If we add to this the terrible impoverishment of the population it will become clear why the parents are forced to send their children to the labor market.—From Komsomolskeya Pravda.

Ensnare Children to Scab in Cloak Strike

By ANNA LYONS.

NEW YORK CITY.—How desperate the bosses are during the Cloak Makers' strike, can be noted from many instances. One of the instances I will cite here:

A few days ago, a scab shop was taken down by the strikers. Amongst the ten scabs that were brot into the office, there were two girls, 13 and 14 year of age. Upon questioning them, I found that the employer approached one of the girls, 12 years old, and asked her to come and work for him. He did not bother about her age, ability, etc. What she did not know about the art of sewing on buttons, he thought she will learn in time. He offered her the magnificent sum of $8 per week, and in return she was to slave from 8 a. m. till 6 p. m. daily. The girl agreed, and within a few days, she brought up her girl friend too, age 14. Both girls, not knowing evidently the differences between peaceful time and strike time, not knowing what the word union or scab means, were quite satisfied, until some of our strikers gave the workers of the shop a friendly call. The boss, evidently knew what was coming, when he saw the strikers, and he opened the window for the girls to escape. But the girls were too innocent and so were taken to the office of the Cloak Makers' union to report.

The writer, upon questioning the girls and speaking to them, found that they were both working because their parents were not making enuf to support the family. They did not have any permits, not knowing whether it was necessary, since they intended to go back to school, as soon as they could make "some money." When the nature of the strike was explained to them, and also what scabbing means, they promised not to go back to work.

This is only one of the instances. Hundreds, nay thousands of Young workers are found daily scabbing in one strike or another—the reason for it, of course, is because they are not organized. They are not within the ranks of the Young Workers' League

NEVER was the militant trade union movement so greatly in need of a fighting daily newspaper to champion its struggles.

The burning flame of a new fighting spirit of the miners, fur workers, textile workers, needle trades and other bodies of organized labor is kindling a new spirit thruout the labor movement.

The club of the government in the Watson-Parker Bill is awakening the men on the railroads.

In this period, militant trade unionism needs a daily newspaper to record its struggles, and TO FIGHT!

OPEN-SHOP FIRM BLAMES TUNNEL DISASTER DEAD

City Committee Seeks to Aid Company

By JOHN MIHELIC.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 23.—The investigation of the Kansas City Waterworks tunnel disaster, which took the lives of eight workmen, that is being conducted by a special committee appointed by Judge H. F. McElroy, city manager, shows plainly that not only was the Smith Brothers, Inc., the firm doing the job, at fault but they are now brazenly seeking to place the blame on the eight dead men who lost their lives.

Place Blame on Dead Men.

By placing the blame on the dead men, the company seeks to escape prosecution for criminal neglect and avoid paying any money to the wives and orphans left destitute.

Byron Taylor, gang foreman and father of three children, who lost his life, is being singled out for special blame.

On being questioned by Mr. Murray, director of public works, Charles S. Foreman, general superintendent, said that he thought the dead men were at fault as after the fan was repaired, they should have waited long enough before going into the tunnel, for the air to clear. He said that he did not know who ordered them in, but it was his opinion it was Taylor.

Nothing is said about the slave driving methods that always are used on foremen by companies of this kind. Further investigation brought out the fact that the gas had given trouble before. This was the third explosion and the air line was inadequate.

Mr. Murray then asked the following question which created quite a sensation:

Ask Sensational Question.

"You say that there were three explosions. One at 1,700 feet.—One at 2,000 feet. And the last one at 2,800 feet. Isn't it true that you have found the gas problem more difficult the farther the tunnel got under the river?"

Bar Newspaper Men.

Before answering, Mr. Foreman asked that newspaper men be excluded from the room. He said, "The way things have turned out the publication of this testimony will furnish lawyers with material for a few suits."

Newspaper men were then excluded.

When the meeting ended, Mr. Murray refused to give out Foreman's answer.

Coroner's Investigation.

Chief Deputy Coroner Dr. C. S. Nelson was refused admittance to the tunnel by the Smith company, unless he furnished $5,000 indemnity bond and signed an agreement exempting the company from all liability. George C. Grant, a local trade unionist, and chief engineer of the Warneke Bakery was selected to represent the coroner's office in an investigation of the cause of the explosion. Dr. H. E. Moss, coroner of Jackson county, Mo., said the selection had been made on the recommendation of Charles B. Nelson, secretary of the Central Trades Council which had been asked to recommend a competent and impartial engineer.

Mr. Grant's experience is said to be very extensive in tunnel work.

SHOPMEN DISCOVER WHAT RAISE UNDER B. & O. PLAN REALLY IS; LESS DINNER AND LOWER WAGE

Rejection by Baltimore & Ohio shopmen of a wage cut disguised as an increase turns the spotlight on a Wall Street Journal analysis of the profits of this road. The B. & O. is considered the leader in the labor-cooperating-with-capital movement. Quoting figures showing that the railroad made $8,095,000 more profit in the first 6 months of 1926 than in the same half of 1925, the journal predicts that this carrier's net income for the entire year will exceed $50,000,000 for the first time in its history.

The journal's figures show that the 1926 profit for B. & O. common stockholders will run at least 100% larger than in 1912 and 90% ahead of the average profits of the 10 years 1906-15; it will mean about $14 a share, more than 2 times the present dividend rate. Financial circles are speculating on big probable increases in B. & O. dividends.

The following table shows B. & O. net yearly income since 1916 and the profit to common stockholders after interest payments, etc., since 1913. Net income was not reported on a comparable basis prior to 1916. In the years 1918-20 the government rental and guarantee brought profits up to about the average of 1914-16.

| B. & O. Profits | Net oper. income | Profit for common |
|---|---|---|
| 1926..... | $50,100,000 | $26,700,000 |
| 1925..... | 43,034,057 | 20,795,508 |
| 1924..... | 38,084,323 | 16,219,685 |
| 1923..... | 42,133,129 | 22,422,036 |
| 1922..... | 23,735,005 | 4,375,373 |
| 1921..... | 21,841,696 | 6,335,893 |
| 1920..... | 28,424,295 | 7,245,480 |
| 1919..... | 27,045,296 | 8,580,022 |
| 1918..... | 27,663,294 | 5,042,105 |
| 1917..... | 27,491,027 | 8,692,230 |
| 1916..... | 27,491,027 | 13,184,390 |
| 1915..... | ..... | 10,723,245 |
| 1914..... | ..... | 9,200,567 |
| 1913..... | ..... | 13,334,350 |

Same Wage, More Work.

More work per employee is one big reason for this year's B. & O. profits. In the first 6 months of the year operating expenses absorbed only 74.8% of the road's gross receipts as against 72.1% in 1925. Transportation costs fell from 37.5% to 35.7% of gross revenue. Maintenance expenses dropped from 26.2% to 25%. Since 1923 the proportion of revenue going to operating expenses has declined from 82.16% to 76.2% and is expected to go below 75% this year. All this means a steadily increasing share of the railroad dollar for stockholders. Yet the B. & O. is still stalling on wage increases and conditions which have been granted to shopmen on many other roads.

The company's answer to the request of the shopcraft unions for an increase in wages and for restoration of time and a half pay for overtime on Sundays and holidays proved to be a anger-coated attempt to reduce total wages still further. Vice-president Galloway, in charge of operation and management, proposed an increase of 2c an hour with time and a half Sundays and holidays on condition that the men give up 5 minutes of their regular 20-minute lunch period and agree to check in and out of the shop on their own time. Pay for an extra hour a week for checking in and out has been an established union condition on the railroads for years.

When the unions found that taken altogether the proposals would cut wages by thousands of dollars instead of raising them, the men rejected the offer by an almost unanimous vote. Galloway then withdrew the offer of the 2c an hour increase.

Resolution Adopted at the Second Annual Conference of International Labor Defense

Resolution on Organization.

THE foremost task confronting International Labor Defense is the organization into a compact membership body of the tens of thousands of workers who are sympathetic to its aims.

The main energy of the first year of the existence of the I. L. D. was necessarily directed to practical defense tasks and the popularization of the decisions of the first conference. This task has been well done. The pledges of the first conference have been written into deeds. The idea of unity for non-partisan labor defense has gained wide support. The I. L. D. has endeared itself to the class conscious workers and has firmly established its place as a part of the labor movement. A solid foundation has been laid for the organization.

The task now before us is to build upon this foundation. The sentiment for labor defense and for the I. L. D. must be organized. The workers sympathetic to the aims of the I. L. D. must be welded together into a compact, dues-paying functioning organization. This is the slogan which must guide our work during the next year.

THE old practice of conducting defense work by loosely-organized committees, hastily constructed only during periods of extreme emergency, must be replaced by a permanently functioning membership organization carrying out a continuous activity and drawing ever-wider circles into its ranks.

The building of such a membership defense organization, which has already been started by the I. L. D., has a great significance for the labor movement as a whole, as well as for the immediate victims of class persecution. In the first place a permanent functioning membership organization for labor defense, as has been demonstrated already during the past year, constitutes a powerful ever-ready machine for propaganda and agitation which completely deprives the existing class of the possibility of railroading militant workers without serious protest. The I. L. D., by extending its organization, is becoming more and more an effective fighting instrument, able to contest every attempt to victimize workers and discouraging many persecutions which would be carried out if there were no organized movement publicly to expose them and fight against them.

THE I. L. D., drawing thousands of members into its ranks and into its manifold activities all of which are directly related to the class struggle, becomes a school of solidarity and class consciousness in which many workers gain their first lessons in the labor movement and take their first steps into actual participation in the class struggle. New forces of energy and enthusiasm are thereby continually directed into the main stream of the labor movement and the class struggle.

The I. L. D. will grow in importance and significance as the conflict between the workers and their exploiters grows more acute. Its power and effectiveness as an auxiliary to the labor movement will then be a hundred-fold greater if the work of organization has been carried on uninterruptedly, from month to month and year to year, and a mass membership has been schooled in its principles and trained in its work.

THE conference believes the time is now opportune to launch an organization campaign on a nation-wide scale. All members of the I. L. D. are called upon to concentrate the main energy on this work of organization during the coming months, immediately after the conference the national executive committee shall draw up a comprehensive plan for the campaign and drive it forward with speed and energy to a successful conclusion.

First and foremost, the organization campaign must aim at organizing new branches and strengthening the existing branches, since the branch is the individual dues-paying member is the rock-bottom foundation of the I. L. D.

Secondly, the campaign must be carried on to secure the affiliation of all sympathetic organizations as collective members contributing a stipulated regular monthly or yearly amount to the support of the organization.

HAND in hand with this campaign, there must be carried on a campaign to bring these affiliated organizations into the main stream of the defense work. Every effort should be made to have the unions and other affiliated organizations send delegates to the local I. L. D. and participate actively in the work. Wherever possible, reports should be made directly to the unions and other bodies affiliated. Ways and means should be devised by the I. L. D. locals to see to it that the individual members of affiliated bodies take direct part in the work.

In view of the fact that in the first year of its existence, in spite of the numerous difficulties, the I. L. D. succeeded in organizing 150 local units, with 20,000 dues-paying members, the conference puts forward as a perfectly reasonable and realizable objective, 50,000 members during the next year and an affiliated collective membership of 250,000.

The conference calls upon all units and members of the I. L. D. to rally around the slogan of organization and to press forward to the goal set with the same spirit and energy which has characterized all their work during the past year.

OHIO OPERATORS BEGIN DRIVE ON BELLAIRE UNION

Open Mine to Run on 1917 Scale

By GEO. PAPCUN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BELLAIRE, Ohio, Sept. 23. — The sub-district miners' union headquarters at Bellaire gave out a statement on Sept. 17 which declares that the first effort to break the miners' union in Eastern Ohio is planned by the coal operators at the Lucy mine five miles west of Bellaire.

The office of the company refused either to confirm or deny the charge. Rumors are to the effect that private guards are already guarding the coal company. No confirmation of this was given the company neither did they deny the rumor.

The Valley Camp Co. tried to sign an agreement, but the miners refused unless the company would sign up the three mines at Elm Grove, W. Va., which the company is trying to run on the 1917 scale.

Sheriff's Statement.

When Sheriff Mey Dontree was asked whether private guards were on duty at the Lucy mine, she said she had been so advised and that she was sending down a deputy sheriff to confer with the officers of the mine organization. Also declaring that she had not sworn in any of the private guards as deputies and would refuse to do so. She also said that she would not send down any regular deputies to the Lucy Mine as they could not be spared.

1917 Scale.

The Valley Camp Coal company is trying to run the three coal mines at Elm Grove, W. Va., on the 1917 scale. According to J. J. Snure of the Valley Camp Coal company it will try to run the Lucy Mine and pay the Jacksonville agreement. They will try to import scabs to run the mine at Neffs, Ohio. In this way they tried to divide the miners. All the West Virginia mines belong to the Eastern Ohio subdistrict which has its offices in Bellaire, Ohio.

NEW PASSAIC A. F. OF L. UNION AUTHORIZES RELIEF COMMITTEE TO CONTINUE AID TO STRIKERS

By Federated Press.

Difficulties put in the way of the western office of the General Relief Committee of Textile strikers are disappearing with the publication of the following letter. The letter is on the official stationery of the United Textile Workers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and reads:

LOCAL UNION NO. 1603, PASSAIC AND VICINITY
United Textile Workers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and the International Federation of Textile Workers' Associations.
Sept. 14, 1926.

"To Whom It May Concern:

"This is to certify that the textile strikers of Passaic and vicinity are now members of the United Textile Workers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

"The United Textile Workers of America have requested the general relief committee of textile strikes to continue to function in the relief field. Therefore, co-operation given the general relief committee in the organization of relief conferences, in arranging various affairs for the collection of funds for the relief work, in vitalizing the contributions to the relief by local unions of the A. F. of L. will be earnestly appreciated by the textile strikers and their Local Union 1603 of the United Textile Workers of America.

"Fraternally yours,

(Signed) "Gustav Deak,
"President."

To Show Films.

In Chicago, where the labor officialdom first looked askance at the relief work, the A. F. of L. affiliation has encouraged the committee to arrange for a showing in October of the Passaic strike motion picture film. This is expected to draw a large attendance from trade unionists. The film will also be shown in Milwaukee, Detroit and St. Louis.

In Mid-West Cities.

Local 52, Detroit electrical workers, voted a 50-cent assessment for Passaic relief that netted $800. Over $1,000 was forwarded besides from Detroit in August. A concert is planned there for October. Tag days have been held in Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis to gain more funds for the strikers, now in their eighth month of struggle. Milwaukee held a successful picnic, clearing over $500.

Must Continue Relief.

"The strikers were led to believe," says Relief Organizer Rebecca Grecht, "that the mill owners would deal with an A. F. of L. union, but as soon as they affiliated with the United Textile Workers they were told that the owners would deal only with a company union. So they must keep on fighting until the owners are forced to terms. The organized labor movement is backing them splendidly."

Western relief headquarters are in room 203, Federation building, 166 W. Washington street, Chicago.

U. S. STEEL CO. HIDES NEWS OF WORKER'S DEATH

Police Not Informed for 13 Hours

By SIDNEY BLOOMFIELD.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 23.—In their attempt to keep accident figures low by keeping accidents secret, the American Steel & Wire company, a local subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, kept information of the death of Ernest Laperriere, 25 years old, from the police authorities for over 13 hours.

Killed in Cave-in.

Laperriere was killed by a cave-in while working in a ditch at the South Works, one of the three huge plants of the American Steel and Wire company in this city, dying of internal injuries, multiple abrasions of the body, fractured ribs and a crushed chest, according to the medical examiner who viewed the body at the City hospital morgue.

Police Ignorant.

The police authorities knew nothing of the accident until the body was recovered by fellow workmen. A private inquiry, at which a number of witnesses of the accident were present to tell their stories, was held behind closed doors at the south works. Clinton B. Marshall, district manager for the steel company gave the same story, stating that he did not know why the police were not notified of the accident, and in the same breath declared that he most likely that it was not considered necessary.

Laperriere was working in the ditch with two other men when a water pipe burst, completely flooding the ditch. The two comrades managed to get out, but before he could get out Laperriere was caught by a falling wall of debris, and in a few seconds the entire cut was filled with water and debris.

Frantic Effort.

After chatting off the water a gang of fellow-workers started frantically in the attempt to locate their comrade. The body was found in an upright position at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, but because of the dangerous condition of the ditch, it was impossible to reach it until 11 o'clock at night.

Safety Fraud.

This steel plant holds weekly meetings of its so-called safety committee, but whenever a practical suggestion for the safety of the employes is offered by a member of the committee, the officials of the company turn them down upon one pretext or another.

10-Hour Shifts.

But the officials of the corporation never tire of telling the workers to be careful, while at the same time they push the men by all sorts of schemes, speeding up the men and the machines, working in ten or twelve-hour shifts night and day. Is there any wonder that the plant is producing such huge profits for the United States Steel Corporation which is always keeping information of accidents secret? And is there any wonder that so many accidents occur under the speed-up system?

III

Even amid such agonies and thrills, Bunny, being young, had his personal life. On his way home after drill he ran into Nina Goodrich, one of his class-mates, turning a corner in her car, clad in a bathing-suit with a cape over it. Upon such little things do one's life-destinies depend! She slowed up and called, "Come have a swim with me!" He hopped in and she whisked him down to the beach in two minutes and in five more he had hired a bathing suit and got into it, and the two of them were running a race along the sand.

Nina Goodrich was one of those lavish Junos, of whom California brings to ripeness many thousands every year. Her limbs were strong trunks and her hips were built for carrying a dozen babies, and her bosom for the nourishing of them. She had fair hair and complexion that had not come out of a bottle and her skin was bronzed by hours in the surf, in those fragile one-piece bathing suits the girls were wearing, which revealed considerably more than fifty per cent of their natural charms. Never could a man who took himself a wife in Southern California complain that he did not know what he was getting!

The two swam down the shore, a long way, not troubled by the chill of the water; they ran hand in hand on the beach, and as they went back to the bath-house, Nina said, "Come have supper with me, Bunny; I'm tired of home." So Bunny slipped into his clothes and she drove him back to her home and while she changed he sat in the car and got up his next lesson in nineteenth century English poetry. The poet called attention to a chain of natural phenomena:

The sunlight clasps the earth
And the moonbeams kiss the sea:
What are all these kissings worth,
If thou kiss not me?

They drove to a cafeteria, an invention where California fish and California fruits and California salads are spread out before the eyes in such profusion as to trouble a nineteen year old Juno already struggling to "reduce." There was nothing so safe as celery, said Nina, it took space and time; while she munched, they sat by the window and watched the sun set over the purple ocean and the slow fog steal in from the sea. Then they got into the car and without saying a word she drove out of town and down the coast highway; one of her hands was in Bunny's, and he, searching the caverns of his memory, remembered having heard Eunice mention that Nina had had a desperate affair with Barney Lee, who had enlisted a year ago and was now in France.

They stopped at a lonely place and there was a rug in the car and pretty soon they were sitting by the noisy surf, and Nina was snuggled close to Bunny and whispering, "Do you care for me the least little bit?" And then he answered that he did, she said, "Then why don't you pet me?" And when he began to oblige her, he found his lips held in one of those long slow kisses which are sure fire hits on the silver screen, but which the censors cut to a footage varying according to geography—00 in Japan up to 8,000 in Algeria and the Argentine.

It was evident that this nineteen year old Juno was this to do what he pleased with, there and then, and Bunny's head had begun to swim in the familiar alarming way. He had never got the ache of Eunice out of his soul, and here at last was his deliverance! But he hesitated, because he had sworn to himself that he would not get in for this again. Also from some of the English poets he had begun to hear about a different kind of love. He knew that he didn't really love Nina Goodrich, she was all but a stranger to him; so he hesitated, and his kisses diminished in force, until she whispered, "What's the matter, Bunny?"

He was rattled, but a sudden inspiration came to him. "Nina," he said, "it doesn't seem quite fair."

"Why not?"

"To Barney."

He felt her wince as she lay in his arms. "But Barney is gone, dear."

"I know; but he'll come back."

"Yes, but that's so far off; and I guess he's got a girl in France by now."

"Maybe so, but you can't be sure; and it don't seem quite right that a fellow should go risk his life for his country and somebody else steal his girl away while he's gone."

So Bunny began to talk about the front and what was happening there and how soon the Americans would get in and how he expected to go right after graduation and about Paul and what he thought about Russia, and what Dad thought about Paul; and the young Juno continued to be in his arms, but with a more sisterly affection; until at last the fog began to chill even their young blood and they got up to go and the nineteen year old Juno put her arms about her escort and gave him an especially violent kiss, declaring, "Bunny, you're a queer fellow, but I like you an awful lot!"

The Bogey of Soviet Recognition

Living largely upon their willingness to revile the only government of workers and peasants in the world, the government of the Soviet Union, masquerading as "labor" writers, foisting their penned venom upon credulous trade union editors and peddling it to the fake labor sheets which disgrace and debauch the labor movement, the Chester M. Wright tribe see the loss of their meal ticket—the fight against recognition of the government of the Union of the Socialist Soviet Republics—looming in the offing.

There is no doubt that the effect of the recognition of the Soviet Union upon American labor would be greatly the capitalist statesmen of America. They visualize hordes of "Bolshevik agents" going up and down the land seeking the immediate overthrow of such sacred American institutions as the supreme court, citizens' military training camps, injunction processes, the open shop and its manifold variations including the criminal syndicalism laws. Upon this fear Chester M. Wright and his ilk have played with great profit to themselves.

The Soviet Union has not yet been recognized, but the Workers (Communist) Party of America continues to exist. Worse than that, it continues to grow and increase its influence among the working class. American Bolshevike organized and led the Passaic strike without a single Soviet consul in any city of our fair land.

The fears of Samuel Gompers, who at the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor, after exhausting all other arguments, asked the delegates: "Do you want to recognise the Communist government of Russia and have Foster and Dunne carrying on their boring from within as Soviet consuls with diplomatic immunity?", did not die with him, but were inherited by his proteges.

But the myth of Soviet gold has been refuted by the cold facts of the American class struggle and not even the most credulous capitalist but believes that Communism in America sprouted in American soil and puts forth foliage shaped by American conditions.

American capitalism is discovering that without formal relations with the Soviet Union it operates at a disadvantage in world affairs. The Soviet Union is the greatest power in eastern Europe and Asia today. American capitalism hates the workers' and peasants' government with all its strength, but it has to bow to power.

In addition, if Germany and Great Britain find markets for much of their surplus production in the Soviet Union, asks the American business man, why cannot America do the same and avoid the irksome delays which annoy the hustling Yankee?

Then there have been the almost unanimously favorable reports brought back from Russia by dozens of people in all walks of life—favorable in the sense that they are testimonials to the strength and stability of the only government in Europe which is able to improve constantly the living standards of the masses.

The Wrights may froth at the mouth at the prospect, but the Soviet Union is going to be recognized by the United States solely because it has been able to disprove and withstand in nine years a thousand times more able and more dangerous attacks than those of the scarlet sisterhood of American "labor" journalism.

We American Communists will, of course, be glad if the recognition of the Soviet Union causes a great revival of militancy and a rapid development of class consciousness in the American labor movement, but we do not think it will have any such effect. The pressure of American capitalism on the American working class, the constant evasion and denial of the class struggle by labor officialdom, their more and more open united front with the capitalists, the increased activity of our party with a correct program and the leadership of the Communist International, these are the things which will strengthen the labor movement and drive the present false and cowardly leaders of the trade unions out of the labor movement into the arms of the capitalist class where they belong.

Mass Picketing, Amalgamation and Generous Financial Aid Will Win I. L. G. W. Strike

The response of the New York labor movement to the injunction issued against the striking members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in the form of resolutions expressing sympathy and pledging support has been prompt. The Central Labor Union has placed itself on record as solidly behind the strikers and similar expressions from other unions are pouring in.

The injunction is the answer of Governor Smith to the refusal of the union to submit to arbitration and blasts forever the myth that this Tammany Hall politician is "a friend of labor." From this incident alone the New York labor movement should be able to draw some very valuable conclusions relative to its official policy of rewarding friends and punishing enemies—inside the capitalist parties.

In the meantime something more than sympathetic support is needed. The finances of the union, none too extensive to begin with, have been practically exhausted by the strike. Money must be forthcoming from the whole labor movement.

Then there is the great need for consolidating the strength of the needle trades unions themselves for a common struggle against the bosses. For this something more than the sympathetic bond now existing is necessary.

The crisis created by the injunction and the interest aroused by the sharpening of the struggle should be utilized to put forward concrete organizational proposals for amalgamation of all needle trades unions and begin actual work for building a great and powerful single needle trade union with departments instead of the separate unions now in the field. This move alone would be of tremendous importance in bringing pressure on the bosses.

The striking garment workers should not be left alone to defy the injunction. Every union in New York City and vicinity should send squads of its members to the picket line and let the state and city authorities and the clothing bosses know that New York union outlawing picketing—which means outlawing the strike.

men and women will fill the jails but will not obey the injunction.

The splendid struggle of the striking workers will be won by the energetic use of all three methods—not separate and apart from each other but as part of a unified plan of militant working class action which will give new life, hope and courage to the entire labor movement.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

By N. BUCHARIN.

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is not by a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Bucharin at the function-aries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

THE second thesis advanced by the opposition in the sphere of economic politics, in their relation to the industrialization of the country, is the thesis that we are pursuing a too greatly intensified industrial policy, this to be accomplished in the first place by increasing the prices of our industrial products. Comrade Pyatakov, speaking in the plenum on behalf of the opposition, spoke in favor of a rise in the factory prices of our industrial products, and similar views are stated by our state economic organs; in his opinion this is one of the measures which has to be taken. These comrades are of the opinion that it would lead to a more intensive industrialisation of the country if we were to pursue a policy excluding reductions in prices, and aiming rather at increased prices for the products of our industry, and even at higher wholesale and factory prices.

WE believe this policy to be entirely wrong, and we cannot agree to its pursuance. One reason why we cannot accede to it is the fact that a rise in the prices of our industrial products, consumed as these are for the most part in the towns, would involve a change in real wages, so that such a rise would endanger us both with regard to wages and with regard to the stability of the currency. And we cannot accede to this policy, because it would not only fail to help us to overcome the main evil of our industrial organization, the evil of bureaucracy, the evil of unwieldiness, of enormous costs entailed both in the industries themselves and in the trade apparatus, the evil of irrational organization of work, but it would make it even more difficult for us to rectify another category of our ,ills, those represented by the weakest points of our industry. Were we to accustom our industry and our economic organs to a higher price policy just at this juncture then our economic functionaries would not move a finger towards the improvement of the whole organisation itself, towards the diminution of unproductive tasks, and for rational working arrangements, decreased working expenses, reduction of costs of production, improvement of quality, etc.

EVERY monopoly runs a certain danger of rusting, of resting on its laurels. The private capitalist and the private owner is constantly being spurred onward by competition; if Pater works badly and has great working expenses, whilst Paul manages at less expense, then Paul beats Pater. But if we, who have practically all big industry in our hands, who have a state super-monopoly and own all essentials, do not stimulate the leading staff of our industry to cheapen production, and to produce on more rational lines, then indeed we have arrived at the precapitalist stage for the rusting of our industry on the basis of its monopoly. That which is actuated by competition (which does not exist, or exists in a very slight degree among us) in a capitalist state, we must attain by conscious pressure under the impetus of the needs of the masses: produce better and cheaper, apply better goods, supply cheap goods!

BUT, if our price policy deviates from this principle, then we shall not fulfill Lenin's behest that our industry is to supply the peasant with cheaper goods than capitalism has done; we are more likely to find ourselves in a position in which the workers, and a thousand times more the peasants will say to us: "What has been the object of the whole matter, if your economics lead to higher prices for your industrial products? Your goods are nothing of economics."

WE must prove in actual practice that we understand economics very well indeed, and must thus devote our main attention to a policy of steady reductions in prices, actualised by reducing the costs of production and by creating better order in our state economic machinery. I stated, above, when analysing the question of private economics, that the private capitalist contrives to keep his eye on the quicker circulation, that his working expenses are lower, that he works with greater thrift, etc., and that our apparatus is unwieldy, that its circulation is slower, that its working costs are enormous, etc. This depresses us. If we are not to stand aside before the capitalist, and if we are to make progress ourselves, to improve the quality of our products, to cheapen our goods, to develop the economic alliance with the peasantry, then we must exert our utmost endeavors for the reduction of prices, not for their increase.

THE opposition is of the opinion that its policy of higher prices would insure more rapid growth for industry, but we are of the opinion that this view is entirely wrong, an illusion, a self-deception. The policy of high and rising prices would lead on the contrary to stagnation and rust in our industry. Our industry would rest on its laurels and trust in being able to cover everything out of the state exchequer. It would do nothing for its advancement, for its development, or for the attainment of a position on progressive technical and economic factor in our economics.

THE third thesis which must be analysed in connection with this, or must at least be mentioned, is the thesis of the danger threatening us from private capital. I dealt with this thesis in my introductory remarks. I assumed the most favorable estimates on private capitalist profits to be correct, and am confident of having proved that even these most favorable calculations show no signs of that threatened private capitalist danger which is supposed to be hanging over our heads.

The Socialist Party Furnishes Its "Insurgents"

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

THE disintegration going on inside the Socialist Party and the determination of the Forwards to rule what is left of the party with an iron hand are reflected in the nominations just made public by the New York Socialists for the present electoral campaign.

For some time there has been growing discontent manifested within the ranks of New York Socialists, especially among the younger elements, against the methods used by the Forwards crowd in fighting the Communists, in opposing the united front proposals of the Workers (Communist) Party, in splitting unions and other labor organizations and expelling progressive and left wing elements, in using gangsterism—in short, in all the methods employed by the old socialist leadership to ruin the labor movement that they can no longer rule.

"Forward" Lies.

THE Forward has degenerated very rapidly as its working class leaders diminished and it made an ever greater bid for leaders among New York's petty bourgeoisie, abandoning its active opposition to Zionism, it new plays up Palestine and the Zionist movement in its columns. Its obvious lies against Soviet Russia in which items such headings as "Soviet Air Arrested" or "Mass Uprisings of the Unemployed All Over Russia" at the same time that the capitalist press is admitting the stability, the power and the growth of the workers' rule in the Soviet Union—these obvious lies have amazed these few young elements who have entered into the Socialist Party since the world war and do not know of its betrayal during that period and cannot understand how a supposed workers' paper can lie so viciously and support such anti-proletarian causes. The gangster tactics of Beckerman in the Amalgamated, the attempt at betrayal of the Furriers' strike by Schachtman and the Socialist Party leaders in the Furriers' Union, the long attempt at union wrecking which reached its height in the attempted expulsion of Locals 2, 9 and 22 from the I. L. G. W. U.—all these have aroused indignation and bewilderment in the few honest elements in the Socialist Party.

Even Norman Thomas, the well section of the leadership, each man as Norman Thomas, have been criticising these policies of lying, disruption, expulsion and gangsterism because they are causing a further loss of membership and a further disintegration in the Socialist Party.

All this vague and incoherent opposition, ranging from members of the Young People's Socialist League "who cannot understand" why united fronts are urgently required by the working class should be sabotaged and rejected by the S. P. leadership, to man like Norman Thomas who believe that such tactics as the Forwards' trade union bureaucracy are employing are not the best methods of fighting Communism and the Communists, combine together to form a feeble and faintly critical opposition inside the S. P.

Shows Its Claws.

Now the Forwards crowd is showing its claws. Even such a feeble opposition that limits itself to secret protests and questionings will not be tolerated inside the moribund S. P. Norman Thomas, who for the last few years, has always been made the standard bearer was head of the ticket in each political campaign, this year was "punished" for his refusal to accept unquestioningly the tactics of the Forwards crowd by being relegated to the nomination for the state senate in the 14th senatorial district.

The post of state senator in the state of New York even in the old capitalist parties and in districts where elections are assured, is regarded as the post for "candidate of obscurity." To put Norman Thomas, who has headed the state ticket on a county ticket is equivalent to offering Governor Smith the democratic nomination for state senator from the 14th district.

Why He Was Dumped.

ONE does not have to go very far to find out why Norman Thomas was dumped into that dead district. In the New Leader of Saturday, Sept. 11, in the very next column to the one in which the nominations are announced, we find an article by Norman Thomas in which he again covertly attacks the practices of the Socialist bureaucrats in the needle trades unions. Of course, he does not mention the Socialist leaders but merely talks in the abstract of leaders in general, but any New York needle trades worker knows what he means and his article ends, "For the present I can make your own application of these remarks."

A few lines will suffice to show the character of this little editorial by Norman Thomas:

"THERE is a school of trade union organizers and leaders," writes Norman Thomas, "who think in terms of power, and, if one may judge by their words and deeds, nothing but power. They trust to strong arm methods without even waiting to try persuasion. In their dealings with their own unions and with workers outside their union too often they emulate the ruthlessness of the bosses . . . I could name more than one union which today would be stronger and next weaker if its leaders had not been so 'practical', so quick to appeal to power rather than to the sense of justice. Unions that cannot get an intelligent hearing for their views will never reform politics, and many a union leader who talks about 'democracy' in his fight against Communism, by his own dictatorial methods, does more to help Communism than the Communists. For the present you can make your own application of these remarks."

A Strange Paper.

THE New Leader is a strange paper. In one column Norman Thomas, who apparently gets complete charge of that column in order to "keep him quiet," writes with fairness as fairness is understood by a Socialist tinged with liberalism and pacifism and with considerable admixture of pseudo-proletarian uncompromising forms of struggle which the Communists advocate, and in the rest of the paper every conceivable sort of anti-labor slander is written about these same Communists.

Vicious Attacks.

THUS on the same front page we find an attack upon the Anti-Fascist Alliance, which is all inclusive of the Italian workers—so all inclusive that even Wm. Green found it necessary to address them—stating that the Anti-Fascist Alliance "was largely attended by Communist delegates, representing paper organizations." On the next page is a vicious attack upon all united front organizations including Communists in their leadership. The article reads in part, in case of a strike where Communists obtain the leadership and then appeal for a united front as well as for funds, you are asked not to become a part of the united front or to contribute any funds."

WHAT would have happened if the rank and file of the Socialists had followed such advise in the Passaic strike? Norman Thomas himself formed part of united fronts in connection with the Passaic strike.

A few weeks previous the New Leader went so far in its imitation of the lies and slanders printed by the Jewish Daily Forwards that it even printed a faked speech in which Stalin was supposed to have called Zinoviev an idiot and declared that the Communist International knows nothing about America.

Reflect Disintegration.

THUS the New Leader, like the Socialist ticket that it publishes, are reflections of the further disintegration going on inside the Socialist Party. Both the ticket and the paper still have to find a little corner for Norman Thomas, but formerly Thomas used to have articles in all parts of the paper and formerly he used to head the Socialist Party ticket. Now he is stuck somewhere on the tail of the ticket and limited to his column in the paper.

THE Forwards crowd is determined to run things with an iron hand and it is questionable how long they will permit even the innocent protests of Norman Thomas and how long they will still have a place for him at all in the ballot for him or in their paper. The only reason they tolerate him at all is because they know that his mild protest sets as a break upon the idealistic elements among the Y. P. S. L.'s who are disgusted with the Forwards crowd and its tactics but do not know what to do about it and have not enough initiative to make their own fight and have to look to a man like Norman Thomas for anch leadership as he can give.

A Figleaf.

In short, consciously or unconsciously, he is playing the some too pleasant role of an idealistic figleaf for the some too idealistic practices of the Forwards crowd.

HOLYOKE, MASS., IS BARONY OF WATER POWER COMPANY

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

An extraordinary picture of industrial feudalism in America lies partially hidden in a Wall Street Journal survey of Holyoke, Mass., the world's premier paper city. Low wages, poverty, squalor, all of which characterise this town, are largely explained by tribute regularly drained by a waterpower company that originally owned all the land on which the city is built.

Sask to Hide Real Facts.

The Wall Street Journal tries to make it appear that Holyoke workers receive a saving wage. This "saving wage" averaged around $1,120 a year in 1924, less than the amount set by the (employers') national industrial conference board to give a family life better than a bare subsistance. Nevertheless the Holyoke pay must be a saving wage, for the Journal shows that this city of 63,000 men, women and children based on 54,000 savings bank accounts averaging around $700 per deposit.

Here is slightly hatter than one savings account of $700 for each inhabitant. If fairly distributed this would mean that the average wage-earner's family of five would have savings accounts totaling $3,500.

Wages Below $1,000 Level.

Clearly there's a joker somewhere. Even in the palmiest days of the 1920 wage boom Holyoke wages averaged less than $1,400 a year, and in the depression which followed they fell below $1,000. Here are some figures derived from the Wall Street Journal's tables showing for the years 1919-24 the average wages in three branches of the Holyoke paper industry:

"Yearly Wage in Holyoke Paper Industry.

| | Paper Mills | Writing Paper Manufacture | Other Paper Products |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1924 | $1,170 | $ 963 | $1,078 |
| 1923 | 1,323 | 954 | 1,126 |
| 1922 | 1,025 | 904 | 1,126 |
| 1921 | 854 | 905 | 1,070 |
| 1920 | 1,401 | 1,028 | 1,413 |
| 1919 | 1,115 | 776 | 993 |

Paper making is considered Holyoke's representative industry. Its 23 mills have a daily output of 550 tons. An outstanding concern is the American Writing Co.

Holyoke—Open Shop Paradise.

Holyoke has also one of the largest silk mills in the country, the largest alpaca mill and the greatest power pump works in the world. It has thread, worsted, cotton, plush blanket felt and braid plants. But thru all the industries run the same low wages, the average for all the industries being below that in the paper mills. Holyoke is a typical open-shop New England city.

Power Co. Owns City.

The Holyoke Water Power Co. stands in the background as the feudal lord of Holyoke. The Wall Street Journal says: "The growth of Holyoke industrially follows very closely the growth of the Holyoke Water Power Co., for the reason that the waterpower was consumed and made available for operation of machinery within mills employing its inhabitants. As a matter of fact, the company at one time owned all the property that now comprises the city of Holyoke. The land for the streets was all donated without cost by the company to the community, and in the course of the development of the city the company has given hundreds of thousands of dollars of real estate for streets, schools, parks, playgrounds and church purposes."

Rant! Rant! Rant!

The key to the exploitation of Holyoke workers in this gigantic land proposition. The power company purchased the land for almost nothing and developed on it an industrial city of 63,000 which now owns the company perpetual rent for the use of this land, rent for the workers' homes, rent for the factory space in which they work. This explains why the company can furnish power at less than one-fifteenth of what it would cost if purchased from the electric power stations of the valley.

Ernst Haeckel on "Last Words on Evolution"

The very interesting and important phenomena of impregnation have only been known to us in detail for thirty years. It has been shown conclusively, after a number of delicate investigations, that the individual development of the embro from the stem-cell or fertilised ovum is controlled by the same laws in all cases. The stem-cell divides and subdivides rapidly into a number of simple cells. From these a few simple organs, the germinal layers, are formed and in fact later on the various organs, of which there is no trace in the early embryo, are built up out of these. The biogenetic law teaches us how this development, the original features of the ancestral history are reproduced or recapitulated in the embryonic processes; and these facts in turn can only be explained by the unconscious memory of the plasm, the "mneme of the living substance" in the germ-cells, and especially in their nuclei.

One important result of these modern discoveries was the prominence given to the fact that the personal soul has a beginning of existence, and that we can determine the precise moment in which this takes place; it is when the parent cells, the ovum and spermatozoon, coalesce. Hence, what we call the soul of man or the animal has not pre-existed, but begins its career at the moment of impregnation; it is bound up with the chemical constitution of its plasm, which is the material vehicle of heredity in the nucleus of the maternal ovum and the paternal spermatozoon. One cannot see how a being that thus has a beginning of existence can afterwards prove to be "immortal."

Further, a careful examination of the simplest cells—even of the unicellular infusoria, and of the dawn of the individual soul in the unicellular germ of man and the higher animals, proves at once that psychic action does not necessarily postulate a fully formed nervous system, as was previously believed. There is no such system in many of the lower animals, nor in any of the plants, yet we find psychic activities, especially sensation, irritability, and reflex action everywhere. All living plasm has a psyche life, and in this sense the psyche is a partial function of organic life generally. But the higher psychic functions, particularly the phenomena of consciousness, only appears gradually in the higher animals, in which its consequence of a division of labor among the nerve-cells and nerve system has assumed these functions.

on a roll call, when he saw that it was already defeated, his name coming near the end of the roster in case he permitted to cast an affirmative vote.

His Record.

For the real his record consists of (1) a vote in which $20,000,000 in 1926 taxes from big business to the middle and poorer classes and the farmers (part of Mellon's program), (2) a vote against the investigation of the aluminum trust (some more Mellonism), (3) in favor of the Italian debt settlement, (4) for the repeal of the inheritance tax, (5) against publicity on income tax returns—so the whole program of Mellon and his business.

Bread Trust Control.

Kansas City is a grain center, but bread in the town costs 10c a pound loaf, whereas bread made of American wheat shipped by rail and host from Kansas City to London sells in England for 4½ cents a pound. It doesn't cheer the farmers any to know that in 1911 the Genera Baking Company got control of the McKinney Bread Company of Missouri and in 1925, of the Smith-Great Western and the Campbell Baking Companies of Kansas City, thus putting the city and state under the control of the $400,000,000 bread trust.

Eight Lives Lost.

An intense wave of bitterness is sweeping over the workers of Kansas City owing to the loss of eight lives in a water works tunnel under construction, due to a gas explosion. The hearings, which the authorities are trying in vain to keep secret, reveal that the company in its profit greed was guilty of criminal negligence in ordering the workers into the tunnels shortly after an exhaust fan had broken and when the safety lamps showed the presence of a dangerous quantity of explosive gas.

A foreman testified at yesterday's hearing that a similar accident had been prevented a few weeks earlier by a strike of the men who refused to go down while the danger existed. He had then ordered "hot to engage any experienced miners because they are apt to be labor agitators." The result of eliminating the "agitators" is the death of the eight victims last week.

Labor Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE conservative party of Canada received a severe drubbing in the recent general elections. The liberals will be able to form a government with the aid of other scattered elements. The defeat of the tories is a severe blow to British imperialism, even tho the liberals are certain to protect the interests of capitalism and will do nothing in behalf of the workers, except what they are forced to do. Nevertheless, every nail that is put in the coffin of British imperialism is to be rejoiced over.

THE Canadian Labor Party only succeeded in returning three candidates. Two of those were elected in Manitoba and one in Alberta. Not a single labor candidate was elected from Nova Scotia where several thousand coal miners are living in a state of peonage under the British Empire Coal company. If one is inclined to grow despondent over the poor showing made by Canadian labor, it should not be forgotten, that American labor has not even one representative in congress unless we regard Victor Berger in that light.

IT is said that King Alfonso of Spain and Primo de Rivera are not pulling together. Alfonso, who is a master of torpsichore, is doing some clever political dancing around his dictator. Journalists who have no desire to exchange comfortable hotel beds for cells send glowing accounts to their papers in the United States about the strength displayed by Primo in downing all opposition and how calmly he is taking the excitement.

THERE is a committee here in Chicago, the name of which I forget, that makes life miserable for state's attorney, Crowe, and Sheriff Hoffman, by periodical reports on vice conditions in Cook county. It appears that the members of this committee spend their time, between reports visiting road houses and palaces of sin, as they are called. When they have seen their fill, a report appears and Hoffman and Crowe threaten to have all those wicked places closed up and their inmates scattered. After a few days all is quiet again.

IT is a well known phenomena that some voters refrain from casting their ballots for candidates who are known to be on good terms with those underworld elements that live by the traffic in women. Every vote counts in a closely contested election, even with the best counters in the world on the job. So the Crowe wing of the republican party can extract consolation, and perhaps some virtuous satisfaction out of a report of a "committee of fifteen" which made an investigation and discovered that vice was on the run in the county. Where it was running they did not say but they mentioned Crowe favorably. Committees do not live on air you know.

THE Chicago Tribune carried an editorial in its issue of September 22, in support of assistant state's attorney Savage's candidacy for the county judgeship. The tricks resorted to by the democrats, whose candidate is Judge Jarecki, are beneath contempt says the Trib. "The democrats accuse, Savage of profiting by stolen votes. Votes were stolen for Savage but votes were stolen for Jarecki. Professional vote stealers were working for both. What of it? asks the virtuous Trib indignantly.

AND the Methodist Daily News is of the opinion that the votes stolen for Jarecki do not cast any reflection on the judge. This is mysterious but Methodists are supposed to be in close touch with the author of all mystery. Which set of ballot box thieves are you going to elect? This question is asked of republican and democrat voters who have inherited their parties from antiquity.

ANOTHER mystery has been punctured, Bruce Barton has discovered the real Calvin Coolidge. This is not surprising as Bruce is a past master in the art of revelation. Jesus who was more or less of a mystery to most people, was transformed into a perfectly good fellah by Mr. Barton in a book entitled: "The Man Nobody Knows." What can he transform Coolidge into? A faca lifter I think would be liable to have better luck with Cal than a historian.

BRITAIN SENDS MORE WARSHIPS AGAINST CHINA

Canton Armies Winning on All Fronts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 23.—Simultaneously with reports of new important victories for the Cantonese armies, a London dispatch says that the third British destroyer flotilla of seven ships hitherto attached to the British Mediterranean fleet, is on its way to China "to protect British interests."

Some understand the recent days' development of British policy as indicating that England may recognize the Canton government but only to make demands upon it and threaten war if they are refused.

Canton Advances Rapidly.

Meanwhile the Cantonese are making surprising advances toward the north, at once aiming to unite the southern march of the Kuominchun army of Feng Yu-hsiang and to drive east and south in order to envelope the lower Yangtze provinces now controlled by the reactionary Sun Chuan-fang and by this movement capture the important and strategic port of Shanghai.

To Join Two National Armies.

Feng's army, never defeated tho forced to retreat out of Peking, is coming south and reports state it has penetrated Honan province. The entire Hupeh province is now in the hands of the Cantonese who have organized two great armies from the soldiers who mutinied against Wu Pei-fu and sent them northward into Honan to make a juncture with Feng's troops.

Wu Pei-fu himself is apparently completely defeated and reports say he is still retreating northward beyond the Yellow river.

Fight for Shanghai.

The Cantonese in the Hankow region are preparing for battle at Kulkiang against Sun Chuan-fang's forces with every possible prospects of victory which will open the way for advance toward Shanghai. Sun, who expected to be reinforced by Wu's troops, is left in the lurch and faces ultimate defeat and surrender of Shanghai and the lower Yangtze.

Imperialist Tools Losing.

If this is accomplished, the Cantonese will hold practically all of China, leaving the reactionary native tools of foreign imperialism, Wu Pei-fu and Chang Tso-lin, dominant only in three northeastern provinces, Chihli, Shantung and Manchuria.

FURRIERS ELECT ISRAELSON IN CLOSE STRUGGLE

Irving Israelson, progressive candidate for business agent in Furriers Union of Chicago was elected to office in the most hotly contested fight in the history of the organization.

The Militstein machine used every weapon in the arsenal of reaction to hold their power. Furriers were intimidated and they were informed that their jobs would be gone if the progressives would win. A progressive victory would mean a strike.

Militstein Repented Too Late.

Militstein pictured himself as a self-sacrificed martyr who was maligned and slandered by the progressives, but that ont of pure Christian charity he would forgive his enemies in the union.

Israelson replied to Militstein, asking the latter why he did not adopt this gracious policy before? Why did he not dismiss the charges he had brot against the progressives before the very eve of the election.

Too Close to Employers.

Militstein was incapable of serving the furriers, Israelson argued, for the reasons that he was too close to the employers which bred class-collaboration and too long in office which bred carelessness. The successful candidate for business agent attacked the letter sent by Shachtman, international president, to Militstein, which showed that Shachtman was interfering in the election on Militstein's side.

When the votes were counted Israelson received 165 votes and Militstein 143.

The ballots were then locked in the

BRITISH MINERS MAY TURN DOWN LEADERS' TERMS

Peace Talk Proceeds With Baldwin

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 23.— The British coal strike may reach a climax within twenty-four hours, it was predicted today. Within that time may come a decision for peace negotiations or a decision to dig in for a long drawn out fight.

In some quarters it was asserted that the miners' executive is in full retreat, since it is offering to accept wage reductions ranging from ten to thirteen per cent, but efforts to effect peace thru the acceptance of wage reductions may fail by the refusal of the rank and file of the miners to accept lower wages.

Meanwhile the operators are flatly rejecting all overtures for peace based on proposals for the negotiation of a national agreement.

Mexico Said to Have Replied to U. S. Note on Land Law Protest

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 23—Although lacking confirmation from official sources it is reported that the Calles government has sent a reply to the note of the United States protesting the enforcement of the Mexican land and mineral laws.

The reply is said to state that the laws are not confiscatory nor anti-foreign, but follow the constitution's articles. Also, attention is directed to the statement of the government that if experience shows the advisability of so doing, the laws may be modified.

Tom Mooney, Ten Years in Prison, Prepares Appeal for His Pardon

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 23.—Thomas J. Mooney, serving a life sentence in San Quentin prison, in connection with the bombing of the preparedness day parade of 1916, today was preparing an appeal for a pardon, it was learned. It will be presented to Governor Richardson next month.

District Attorney Matthew Brady, has bolstered Mooney's appeal by writing a letter in which he says he believes that Mooney was convicted on perjured testimony.

Force the American Federation of Labor to Act on Organization of Nation's Million Auto Workers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 23.—Here in the capital city of the automobile industry great pride is being shown by the capitalist exploiters over the fact that the output of passenger cars and trucks for the month of August jumped 172,000 over the figures for August last year.

But great care is being taken by these same profiteers to hide the fact that the wages of the workers are slipping to ever lower levels, in starting comparison to the growing profits being taken by the owners in the industry.

This is an actual condition that faces the American Federation of Labor when it convenes here shortly to legislate for the organized workers of the United States. It is confronted by the problem of the organization of the auto workers. The nunmber of organized auto workers is today at its lowest.

Production Increases 70 Per Cent.

August production showed an increase of 70 per cent over the same month last year. Production last month is set at 434,394 vehicles, of which 379,111 were passenger cars and 45,383 trucks. In August, 1925, this country's automobile industry produced 252,451 vehicles, of which 216,057 were passenger cars and 36,564 were trucks. In July of this year production was 356,455 vehicles, representing 315,863 passenger cars and 39,592 trucks.

The total for the first eight months of the year also shows a substantial increase in production, as compared with the first eight months of last year.

Workers Increase; Wages Fall.

The year 1925 revealed the startling fact thet more men were being employed in the industry, but that they were receiving a smaller wage total, meaning that the individual wage was falling. Similar revelations will with-

Keep it Strong and Fighting

By ALEX BITTELMAN.

KEEP your DAILY WORKER. It is YOUR most precious and most valuable possession.

No progressive labor movement worth while can reach size and influence without The DAILY WORKER continuing to champion its cause.

No struggle against the employers will develop real effectiveness and make victory for the workers a possibility without YOUR daily paper vigilantly hammering away at the enemy.

Keep your DAILY WORKER. It is the indispensable weapon of all your struggles.

As a worker—man, woman or youth—you need class education, guidance, encouragement and organization.

As one of the millions of the unorganized and brutally exploited slaves of American capitalism, you need a sincere and militant champion of your cause which is: TO ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED.

As an honest trade unionist, who earnestly desires to fight the employers and protect the interests of labor, you want clean, honest, militant and strong trade unions.

As a member of the mighty American working class, who is beginning to throw off his shoulders the shackles of capitalist tutelage and capitalist politics, you are trying to reach out after the formation of a party of your own class—a labor party.

Well, this is what The DAILY WORKER stands for and fights for without let-up and without compromise.

Keep YOUR DAILY WORKER. It is your paper. Keep it strong and fighting.

YOUR enemy, the capitalist, has a powerful press to befog and confuse the minds of the exploited masses.

The capitalists control the public schools and nearly all other means of education.

The rich and wealthy, the enemy that you must fight continually in order not to be driven under, control the moving pictures, the pulpit, the radio, and everything that can be used to poison the minds, kill the spirit and chain the bodies of the masses.

Your enemy understands perfectly the value of propaganda and agitation. DO YOU?

IF YOU DO—

KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

• • •

The DAILY WORKER is nearly three years old. It has demonstrated not only the indispensable need but also the practical possibility of a militant English labor daily in the United States.

As the progressive forces in the labor movement grow—SO DOES THE DAILY WORKER.

As the American working class becomes stronger and its battles with the employers more successful—SO DOES THE DAILY WORKER.

The fate of the DAILY WORKER is inextricably bound up with the fate of the American labor movement.

Consequently—

KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

MINERS SUPPORT LABOR PARTY IN EASTERN OHIO

Watkins, Board Member, Urges Class Action

(Special to The Daily Worker)

YORKVILLE, Ohio, Sept. 23. — A conference held here at Miners' Hall, has launched the labor party of Eastern Ohio.

The call for the conference was issued by Local No. 971, of the United Mine Workers of America, and was sent to all the locals in Sub-District No. 5 of District 6. Locals from various parts of the sub-district were represented and participated in the conference.

Watkins is First Speaker.

The conference was called to order by Jack Bell, whereupon a resolution was presented calling for the formation of a state-wide labor party to include all trade unions, fraternal organizations and working class organizations, irrespective of their nature.

A general discussion ensued with Andrew Watkins, member of the international executive board of the United Mine Workers, as the first speaker. J. Kanik, international organizer of the United Mine Workers of America and also a delegate to the conference, Robert Farmer, Joe Kobylak, Zo and others participated.

J. S. Griffin, the only colored delegate, made an eloquent plea for the labor party to stand square-footedly for equal rights for the Negroes, otherwise the labor party could never grow into a power. All the speeches were enthusiastically applauded, thus evidencing that the workers are sick and disgusted with the old parties and are ready to take a new step.

Plan Second Conference.

The program and platform were then read and it was finally decided to send the platform with its nine points to the locals of the United Mine Workers in the sub-district together with a call for a second conference, which will be held at the Miners' Temple, Bellaire, Sunday, Oct. 17, at 1 p. m. This conference will unquestionably be well attended, for the workers have begun to realize the necessity of independent political action.

An executive committee for preparing the second conference was elected and consists of Jack Bell, chairman, John Rukus, secretary, W. Cunningham, assistant secretary, Robert Farmer, D. Spehar, C. Ryan, J. S. Griffin, P. L. Nealy, Joe Koyhlak Jr., Frank Sepich.

The Nine Points

The nine points in the program adopted at the conference are as follows:

1. The legal right of all workers to organize into trade unions and to strike.

2. A law providing for the eight hour day, five-day week for the workers. In dangerous and harmful occupations, the working day shall be further reduced.

3. A minimum wage law.

4. Prohibition of child labor and protection of women and young workers in industry.

5. Abolition of all state constabulary, since it is used not to protect the rural communities, but to interfere in labor disputes in industrial sections, on the side of the capitalists.

6. Abolition of injunctions and no government interference in strikes.

7. Stoppage to threatened persecution of the foreign-born by registration, photographing and fingerprinting, and equal rights for the Negroes.

8. Nationalization of the mines and workers' participation in control.

9. Fight against militarism and the menace of war.

These are the main questions for all the workers of this country.

ANTHRACITE BARONS DENY CLOSED SHOP

Hudson Coal Company Challenges Checkoff

ARTICLE TWO.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Sept. 23.—Discussion has raged in the anthracite fields since the signing of the five year agreement over the question of whether the check-off and closed shop is included in the contract.

The Hudson Coal Company says "no," and goes further and claims that the union has no right to go on coal company property and urge men to join the union.

So convinced is the Hudson Coal Company— one of the largest operators in the valley—that John L. Lewis, Thomas Kennedy, international president and secretary, and Hunsicker Coppelint, president of District 1, surrendered these demands when the strike was settled, that it is "bringing the case up," as the miners say.

Closed Shop Challenged.

Following a "button strike" on one of its properties—meaning a cessation of work to force non-union miners and delinquent miners to line up—the Hudson Coal Company representatives have challenged the union officials to show where in the agreement a closed shop is called for or where the right of union representatives to appear at the pit mouth and solicit members is specified.

The truth of the matter is that the Hudson Coal Company, after weakening the morale of the union members employed by them by the series of "get-together suppers" they have been giving their employes, or believing that the morale has been weakened, are beginning an offensive against the union, on behalf of all the other coal companies, and in which all the rest of them will join as soon as the ground has been prepared.

"Arbitration" is Company Demand.

The anthracite agreement is an arbitration agreement—the miners did not know it when it was signed (they would not have accepted it if they had not been deceived by the international and district officials) —and the coal companies, with the Hudson concern in the lead, are going to insist that the arbitration provisions be put into effect.

This means that the demand of the Hudson Company for a decision against the closed shop, the right to organize and the check-off, will be followed by another demand that the case be placed in the hands of a mediation board as provided by the agreement, and which must contain one or more so-called "impartial" members.

The Operators' Plan.

By such maneuvers, extending over a period of five years—the life of the agreement—the coal barons believe that the union can either be destroyed completely or worked over into a mere efficiency instrument for their own use.

It can be seen that the question raised by the Hudson Coal Company is one of life and death for the United Mine Workers in the anthracite districts, never before in recent years has a coal company dared to deny the right of the union to organize, to prevent men from working unless their union dues were paid, or to refuse to

121 A. C. W. Members Arrested in Strike on a Bronx, N. Y. Shop

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—In the Bronx borough 121 striking members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union were arrested for picketing in front of Sam Finkelstein's shop. This large men's clothing manufacturer has been struck for several weeks by the union's effort to regain recognition. For the last six years the employer has maintained an open shop.

Several girl students were arrested with the strikers and held by a woman magistrate, Jean Norris, for singing songs on the picket line. Twenty-two workers were fined $10 apiece and cases of the others were postponed. Magistrate McAndrews warned that sentences of 30 days to six months would be given if the strikers were brought in again.

...TED STATES ...Y PULL OUT OF GENEVA MEET

Blames France and Her Allies for Trouble

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. — The belief that America's delegates to the Geneva conference on disarmament are preparing to withdraw was strengthened here today. Unqualified approval was given in official quarters to the speech made yesterday by the chief of the American delegation, Minister Hugh S. Gibson, in which he bluntly told the league powers that the conference was getting nowhere and as matters stood the whole thing looked like a waste of time.

U. S. May Withdraw.

Whether actual withdrawal of American delegates will follow this plain-spoken admonition remains to be seen. Secretary of State Kellogg has made far contented himself with merely saying that America's delegates would remain at Geneva so long as there is any prospect of success. Gibson, however, virtually told the powers there is no such prospect—unless and until France and her continental allies cease their obstructionist tactics.

Lack of Progress.

The work of exploring the disarmament question, Gibson pointed out, was delegated to two committees, the first of which was purely a military commission to consider technical aspects of the question. Yet this committee, he added, has consistently violated its mission, and insisted upon injecting European politics into its deliberations —with the result that there has been confusion, bickering and an utter lack of progress.

Also, he pointed out, the commission (dominated by France and her small allies) has in effect "steam-rollered" minority views and failed even to present to the general conference any views that differed from the majority.

Led to Confusion.

"Our military commission," said Gibson, "appears consistently to have approached questions from both the political and military points of view and the American delegation cannot but feel that this has led to confusion. The American delegation believes this situation can be remedied by specific directions to the effect that we desire to receive replies to questions that are based on expert technical information without regard to political or economic considerations."

Gibson then boldly suggested that all of the reports formulated by this French-controlled commission be returned with specific instructions to do the work over again. This was tantamount to saying that four months of work is entirely valueless, and that a fresh start must be made if the conference is to get anywhere.

The state department made public the text of Gibson's speech with evident approval.

GENEVA, Sept. 23. — The world court delegate conference today adopted the report of the juridical committee, proposing that all of the United States reservations to the world court be accepted, providing a satisfactory interpretation is given by the United States on the second part of the fifth reservation.

Each member state is expected to send a separate note to the world court that it be accepted, providing a satisfactory interpretation is given by the United States on the second part of the fifth reservation.

Each member state is expected to send a separate note to the United States announcing its acceptance of the reservations, but delicately suggesting that the accepting is conditional upon a satisfactory interpretation of the fifth reservation's latter part, which provides that the world court shall take up no cases affecting United States interests without the consent of the United States.

AUTO TRUST AT FAULT
AUTO WORKERS HELPLESS IF THEY CONTINUE WITHOUT ORGANIZATION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 23.—Some of the facts about the auto industry the youngest and for the moment the mightiest of all the nation's greatest industries, that has its center here in Detroit, are as follows:

Growth of the Industry.

1905—Four cars produced.
1909—Production reached 2,000.
1924—Just quarter century later the total reached 2,500,000 cars.
1925—First eight months' production totalled 2,784,369 passenger cars and 339,283 trucks, falling only a few hundred thousand short of the 1924 total for the whole year.

Value of Industry's Products.

The value of motor vehicles, parts and tires made in 1924 was $5,165,586,146—greater than the wholesale value of annual production of any other single industry.

Number of Auto Workers.

339,663 is the total of wage workers in auto factories proper.
300,000 employed in factories making parts and accessories.
115,000 employed in rubber tire plants.
245,000 toil in repair shops.
111,000 work in garages.
This totals nearly 1,000,000.
There are estimated to be a million or more truck drivers and chauffeurs in addition.
This does not include the army of salesmen, dealers, oil workers and others less associated with the manufacturing industry.

The Drop in Wages.

Wages paid in the automobile factories in 1924 are estimated at $47,215,700. A smaller number of employes in 1923 received about $579,000,000. The smaller number of workers in 1923 received the higher wage total.

How Many Automobiles?

Experts claim that the maximum possible number of automobiles that the nation can support is somewhere between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000. This prediction was made in 1924. The 25,000,000 maximum is now being rapidly approached. When the saturation point has been reached, production will be needed only for replacements, estimated at 3,000,000 cars per year. This means a crisis in the auto industry, a struggle to reduce wages, increasing unemployment thru the shutting down of the weaker plants crushed thru competition.

THE AUTO WORKERS WILL BE HELPLESS TO PROTECT THEMSELVES IN THIS CRISIS IF THEY REMAIN UNORGANIZED.

FORCE A. F. OF L. ACT TO UNIONIZE AUTO INDUSTRY

Detroit Convention to Consider Problem

ent doubt be made for the year 1926 now closing.

Thruout the auto industry in the Detroit district it is revealed that where wages in 1920 reached $1.25 for skilled labor, it had now fallen to $1 per hour. This is especially true among wood workers in Fisher Body plant, a subsidiary of the General Motors Corporation, now capitalized at $1,500,000,000.

In other departments of the industry wages that had ranged from $1 and $1.10 per hour, are now down to from 70 to 85 cents per hour.

In the Hudson auto plant a ten per cent reduction was put into effect on Sept. 1. These are merely some of the facts showing how wages are falling. In the Ford plant the usual wage is $6 per day, altho this rises in the case of the older workers to $6.80 per day. This higher pay, however, is wiped out by a constant elimination of the older workers.

These are some of the conditions developing restlessness and discontent in the industry that calls for organization.

The A. F. of L. on Trial.

This problem of the organization of the more than a million workers in the nation's automobile industry will be put squarely before the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor that assembles here at the Graystone Bell Room, Monday, Oct. 4.

This is assured thru a letter sent by order of the recent convention here of the United Auto, Aircraft and Vehicle Workers of America, to William Green, president of the A. F. of L., pledging every assistance possible in the organization of the auto workers. The letter to the A. F. of L. cites the struggles of this labor union in the auto industry. It demands the return of the A. F. of L. charter that was taken from it in 1918. This communication addressed to President Green is as follows:

Another Jurisdictional Clash.

"Dear Sir and Brother:—Our general organization, under the old title of Carriage, Wagon and Automobile Workers' International Union, stands suspended by the American Federation of Labor because of our inability to comply with a resolution adopted at the 1917 convention of the A. F. of L., held in Buffalo, New York.

"The resolution provided that we remove the word 'automobile' from our official title and turn over to some 10 or 11 other national and international unions all of our members over whom they claim jurisdiction.

"In view of the fact that our local unions have always co-operated with the local unions of organizations affiliated with your body, and in view of the fact that at the last convention of the American Federation of Labor a movement was initiated to organize the automobile industry and inasmuch as we are vitally interested in any movement that will have for its purpose the organization of the automobile workers, we take pleasure on record in our convention held in Detroit, Mich., this month to render all assistance possible to any move made by the A. F. of L. to organize the automobile industry, and furthermore our general officers and general executive board are instructed to ascertain upon what terms and conditions the A. F. of L. will consider lifting the suspension of our charter."

Organization Dates From 1891.

The Carriage and Wagon Workers' International Union dates back to 1891, being one of the first international unions organized to establish standards of the American Federation of Labor. Years later it took in the automobile workers and then began the struggles that led to the lifting of its charter more than a quarter century later.

This union, like many others, was blasted out of the recognized labor movement as the result of jurisdictional disputes. Numerous craft unions laid claims to the members it sought to organize. The Carriage, Wagon and Automobile Workers' Union had set out to organize the auto workers in the only way they could be organized, thru the building of an organization including all the workers in the industry. Thus it ran counter to such craft unions as the mechanists, painters, moulders, upholsterers, sheet metal workers, carpenters, blacksmiths, electrical workers, metal polishers, all these being firmly entrenched and their jurisdictional boundaries jealously guarded within the American Federation of Labor.

Like the auto workers' union, so the International Jewelry Workers' Union, for instance, lost its place in the A. F. of L. because it would not surrender the polishers of metal to the Metal Polishers' Union.

Industry Spread Over Nation.

The auto industry is pretty well spread out over the nation. Most of the big plants, however, are centered in such cities as Detroit, Flint and Lansing, in Michigan; Toledo and Cleveland, in Ohio; Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, St. Louis; at Kenosha and Milwaukee, in Wisconsin; St. Paul, Minn., and Los Angeles, Cal., in addition to a host of other cities.

It is expected that delegates will come to the A. F. of L. convention representing the central labor unions of some of these cities. They will probably be called on to support resolutions demanding the organization of the auto industry, if not the reinstatement of the United Auto, Aircraft and Vehicle Workers' Union of America. Efforts will be made by interest the delegates of at least some of the international unions. In this way the fight will invitably come to the floor of the convention.

CHICKS LEAVING IMPERIAL NEST

Ireland, Canada, South Africa Worry J. Bull

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 23.—The report that Henry Bourassa, Canadian nationalist leader, would be the dominion's representative at the coming empire conference in London, and that he would visit Dublin before going to London, threw a scare into the ranks of the British loyalists here.

The danger does not end here. It is bad enuf for one of the most anti-British of Canadians to visit Dublin, that hotbed of anti-Britonism, but after he gets thru talking things over with Free State officials he will cross the Irish Sea and call on Premier Hertzog of South Africa, whose love for the empire will never give him heart failure.

Went More Elbow Room.

The Canadians, Irish and South Africans are in favor of resolutions demanding drastic modifications in the powers of the British government over the dominions and restricting the functions of the king's agents in the dominions. They went more freedom from imperial control.

When the Irish Free State, thru Desmond Fitzgerald, recently demanded a non-permanent seat on the council of the league of nations the demand was not supported by Austen Chamberlain. Against the Irish, Canadian and South African block at the imperial conference, there will be the Australian, New Zealand and British block, which is in favor of closer imperial relations between the dominions.

May Postpone Conference?

The incoming premier, MacKenzie King, will not attend the conference, in his case Downing street may consider postponing the meeting until a more favorable moment on some convenient ground. Privately, the imperial government might take the position that any other representative except the Canadian premier would have a sufficiently high official status to qualify as a Canadian representative at the meeting.

Imperial Unity Shattered.

Conservative politicians here go so far as to see in the present clash among the dominions the disintegration of the empire. Should the three dominions insist on equal status they are in a good position to take what they want now should the imperial mother prove obdurate. With a disastrous coal strike at home, a France-German entente looming on the continent, Mussolini prowling like a wolf circling the Mediterranean looking for a likely carcass to sink his fangs in, the Chinese in arms against British goods and British power, it would only take a revolution in India and Egypt to complete the picture of imperial disaster.

Prediction Coming True.

During the world war, a French banker predicted that England would manage to pull thru this one, but would never win another. She has not won any since, and her prospects of getting other nations to do her dirty work for her are not bright.

It should not be forgotten that the United States has been carrying on a flirtation with Canada for quite a while, with a large section of Canada responding warmly to Uncle Sam's advances. England needs a united front of her dominions now more then ever.

Ford Goes to Court.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Henry Ford, thru counsel, today asked the interstate commerce commission to reopen the case involving the consolidation of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton with the Detroit & Ironton railroads, which the commission's examiners recommended should be held against public interest.

Martel Stages "Palace Revolution" in Detroit in the Republican Party

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

FRANK X. MARTEL, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor, tried to stage a "palace revolution" within the Wayne county republican party in Detroit last Tuesday. It developed into a farce that furnished plenty of opportunity for humorous writing in the exploiters' press. It could not have been otherwise. But it was a tragedy for the working class.

Martel was at one time an advocate of independent political action for labor. But in recent years he has steadily gone backward and downward.

Martel helped keep the Detroit Federation of Labor for a time in the forefront of progressive city central labor bodies over the land. Under pressure of the reactionary Gompers' regime, however, and not achieving the great immediate success desired, Martel became a leader in retreat into the lap of conservatism.

He just about reached the bottom rung of the ladder in his descent this week when, with the willingness hut also the blindness of a Don Quixote, he became a very comical chairman of a rump republican gathering that survived an uproarious and general fist fight, in which all and sundry engaged, that broke up the G. O. P. gathering in the "motor city" in spite of the fact that a good part of the local police force was turned out to maintain "law and order."

Martel is getting ready, on behalf of the local labor officialdom, to receive the rapidly approaching convention of the American Federation of Labor. Thousands of dollars are being raised to finance the occasion. Martel's antics will probably receive the applause of the A. F. of L. executive council. He has followed loyally in the campaign just over the political policies of the A. F. of L. He tried to play "labor politics" inside the party of Truman H. Newberry, who spent $195,000 to get elected United States senator, but who was compelled to resign because of the stink raised by the colossal corruption. The mostrils of the nation, however, have become better attuned to the repellant smell of bribery and vote-buying, so much larger sums were spent recently in Pennsylvania, Illinois and elsewhere.

Martel's policies, which are the policies of the A. F. of L., were blasted beyond recognition in the republican primaries of Tuesday, Sept. 14, last week, when all the so-called "labor candidates" running on the Wall Street ticket were hopelessly and unanimously defeated. But that did not deter "Don Quixote" Martel from new attempts. There was another primary, Sept. 21, the Tuesday of the aforementioned republican county convention, to select delegates to the state convention next week.

Martel found the basis for his struggle in the grievances of the jitneymen who were being successfully fought by the municipally owned Detroit traction system. Martel with Edward N. Barnard, attorney for the jitneymen, engineered the election of favorable county delegates. Since the county gathering is usually a mere rubber stamp affair little interest is taken in the selection of delegates. It was therefore not difficult for the Martel-Barnard forces to pack the gathering. This they did.

The "palace revolution" began about 7:30 o'clock in the morning when, according to William Davis, manager of the Moose Temple, Detroit, where the affair was staged, the Martel-Barnard forces began arriving and seizing the front rows of seats in the convention hall. When the followers of John S. Haggerty, the county chairman of the republican party, and visitors arrived hours later they had to content themselves with back seats. The actual hostilities did not begin until 11 o'clock. Promptly on the hour Barnard went over the top as cheer leader, nominating Martel as chairman against the regular machine. Martel went to the stage, with able support, crashing the footlights in the ascent to temporary power. The hall was immediately filled with tumbling, wrestling, punching, clinching, yelling and screaming individuals, with some woman caught in the melee. Police reserves were called out from all available stations. They helped add to the growing turmoil. But every "palace revolution" gradually spends its force. And so this one did. The contending forces decided to disagree and, much ruffled in mind and body, met in different halls, where rival delegations were selected for next week's state convention.

Martel must by this time realize that his "Don Quixote" stunt got him nothing. If it had been filmed, Douglas Fairbanks might have made use of it in his next movie. But the workers are the real victims. It is for such exhibitions as these that the real workers, the part of labor for independent political action, is hamstrung and turned aside by those labor officials temporarily raised to power.

Martel has made a plaything of labor's political struggle. He stages a spectacular stunt within the republican party. But the storm subsides and the money power, the bosses, are as securely enthroned in power in their party as ever. They have the money and the apparatus. It may be safely predicted now that the republican bosses at the state convention next week will put the skids under Martel and Barnard and their delegates, and do it very effectively.

The staging of "palace revolutions" within the republican and democratic parties by labor officials may succeed in packing old party gatherings here or there over the nation. But little flea bites do not trouble the plunderhund that rules the political parties of the privileged classes in society today. They simply scratch and go on their power suffers no setback. Martel may get the stage and limelight for a moment. But the republican party is still and will remain the party of the capitalist class.

Labor can only make progress thru the development of its own class strength on the basis of its struggle against the enemy capitalist class. Martel has turned aside from that struggle in Detroit. Like other Martels in other cities, Labor must go forward without them. The independent political action of the workers must be developed and strengthened until it becomes, all-powerful. The Workers (Communist) Party sets that struggle as its major task in the present parliamentary campaign. Labor in Detroit responds to the party's appeal. It must do so everywhere thruout the nation.

The Mooney Case

News Story on Page 1

Thomas J. Mooney, a member of the Molders' Union and an active labor organizer, was convicted and sentenced to death with Warren K. Billings for a bomb explosion that occurred on Market St., San Francisco, during the preparedness day parade in 1916 and resulted in the death of nine people. It so happens that this took place at a time when Mooney and Billings were winning the enmity of the powerful California traction interests by organizing the San Francisco street carmen.

The trial of Mooney and Billings has become a classic of frame-up cases. But despite proven perjured testimony and a biased judge, Mooney and Billings were sentenced to death. Their conviction caused an international reaction. In every country of the world labor organizations staged great demonstrations. In Soviet Russia, large delegations of workers called on the American ambassador and on the U. S. consule and demanded Mooney's and Billing's release.

THE MOONEY CONVENTION.

One of the greatest labor gatherings in the history of the American labor movement convened in Chicago and is known as the famous "Mooney Convention," attended by 1,600 delegates representing labor organizations in all parts of the country. Following the convention a "Mooney Strike" was called, it is estimated that a million workers laid down their tools on the appointed day and demonstrated in behalf of Mooney and Billings.

After this the sentences were commuted to life imprisonment and altho the agitation for their release has been carried on for ten years all efforts to gain their freedom have been of no avail.

Hudson Coal Company Challenges Checkoff

allow union representatives on company property to transact union business.

The United Mine Workers in the anthracite districts are facing a fight. One would expect that the district and national officials would be preparing the membership for the struggle, but this is not the case.

Union Officials Do Nothing.

The Hudson Coal Company is allowed to continue its company union propaganda and to perfect its speed-up system without interference from the union officials. Well-posted and militant miners, alarmed by the situation, told the writer that in unions whose members are employed by the Hudson Coal Company it is difficult to get out more than 5 per cent of the membership, even to a special meeting. Miners who are fighting for the union are discriminated against, given the poorest and most dangerous working places and find the foremen continually hostile.

A militant stand by the district and national officials doubtless would put a stop to these practices, temporarily at least, but nothing is being done. The miners are discouraged and many of them are dangerously cynical.

Failure of Union Leadership.

What is needed is a campaign of publicity and organization to strengthen the union against the coming attack, as assurance from the officials that they will bring the full strength of the union to the defense of every miner who gets in bad with the bosses because of his union activity. But the hnik of the miners do not believe that the officials will make this kind of a fight. This is the real danger of the whole situation—the loss of confidence in the militancy and integrity of the union leadership because of its acceptance of a union-wrecking agreement and their failure to rally the membership for a struggle which every miner knows must be fought if the union is to be saved.

Coal Barons Impatient.

The district and national officials who put over the disgraceful agreement after swearing by all they held holy that it was not such thing, who assured the miners that the anthracite agreement was a closed shop contract, officials like Cappelini, who are supported by the operators and who will lowed Judge Maxey to run his washeries during the late strike, must have the cold fact that their double-dealing has been uncovered by impatient operators like the Hudson Coal Company, who demand that they have waited long enough for their agreement to be enforced. It is their agreement and not the union's.

Progressive Forces Alert.

The progressive forces opposing the Lewis-Kennedy-Cappellini machine know that the union must get ready to fight, but, as in Illinois, where after the exposure of Peabody Farrington as a $25,000 tool of the Peabody Coal Company, President Lewis made peace with the corrupt Farrington machine the progressives, in the anthracite the officials make common cause with the operators against the militant rank and file.

The struggle against the Lewis-Kennedy-Cappellini machine becomes therefore a struggle against the operators, for the life of the union and for the defeat of tax and corrupt-official family.

The Hudson Coal Company demands are a danger signal which every honest anthracite miner recognizes, but of which the union officials pay no attention.

Kept Off Ballot.

In all probability the entire progressive slate was elected with the exception of those who were kept off the ballot by Millstein, for technical reasons. Among those are J. Sonnenschein, candidate for secretary treasurer; Robert Goldstein, candidate for vice-president; Max Paul Fendrick, candidate for conference committee.

According to a report made by a progressive member of the union to The DAILY WORKER, 61 new members voted whose names were not on the ledger.

Typhoid Menace in Florida.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Sanitary conditions resulting from the Florida hurricane now constitute the most serious aspect of the situation, according to first-hand reports telegraphed the American Red Cross today.

An infected airplane carrying 50,000 units of typhoid serum and other surgical supplies left Indianapolis this morning for Miami. It will make stops en route at Nashville, Atlanta and Pensacola, and is due to reach Miami late this evening.

Jo W. Hendrix, Red Cross official at Sebring, wired national headquarters this morning that 30 bodies had been removed in the Moorahaven district, and it was believed the high waters contained 150 more.

DELEGATES AT T. U. CONGRESS FLAY BROMLEY

Called Betrayer by Miners' Delegates

BOURNEMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 10—(By Mail)—Plenty of excitement was furnished yesterday at the Trade Union Congress when John Bromley rose to second a motion of Robert Smillie's asking for continued support of the miners' strike.

The miners had stood betrayal by the leaders of the T. U. C. They had stood starvation, government attacks and public insults from Ramsay MacDonald, J. H. Thomas and others including Bromley. It was Bromley who wrote the infamous article against the miners and in justification of the calling off of the strike, that was used by Churchill and the coal operators in their strike-breaking publicity.

Miners Break Loose.

To put Bromley up as a defender of the miners so that his political shirts might be washed was more than the miners could stand. Their delegates in the convention put on a demonstration that threw the convention into an uproar and compelled the chairman, Mr. Pugh, to adjourn the session.

The following is an account given of the incident by the London Daily Herald, official daily organ of the Trade Union Congress, which is under the control of the right wing:

A storm of passion burst with lightning suddenness upon the calm of the Trades Union Congress this afternoon. Disorder raged for nearly half an hour, but after a 40-minutes' adjournment calm was restored.

Mr. Smillie, with his caressing voice, had on behalf of the general council been making an appeal for financial assistance for the miners, and Congress was obviously moved by the appeal.

Mr. Bromley, who was to second the appeal, which took the form of an emergency resolution, was rising to his feet when "Point of order, Mr. Chairman," in a rich Lancashire accent, rang thru the hall.

It came from Mr. McGurk, a miners' delegate, and he proceeded to ask whether the general council had deliberately gone out of its way to insult the miners by asking Mr. Bromley to second the resolution.

There were shouts and cries from the miners' delegates in support of Mr. McGurk, and a clamor of excited remarks, punctuated by the clang of the chairman's bell, came from other parts of the hall.

Mr. McGurk stood, with all eyes on him. He reiterated his demands for an apology, apparently in connection with an incident on the national strike which had appeared in the journal of Mr. Bromley's union.

"Put Baldwin up," shouted a delegate above the din, and cries of "Traitor" could also be heard.

"Come Down Bromley!"

Pushing forward towards Mr. McGurk, with great excitement, came Mr. Hough, the Yorkshire Miners' treasurer, shouting to Mr. Bromley to sit down, and calling to the council to put someone else up.

The chairman hammering his bell, kept calling for order.

"Have you seen Bromley's poster used against us?" shouted another miner, and then Mr. Richardson, the federation treasurer, could be heard appealing to his miner colleagues. "We have been humiliated, we have made our protest," he said.

Bromley Rose Again.

There was a lull in the hubbub and Mr. Bromley, who had sat down, rose again to speak.

Mingled cheers and hoots greeted him and many miners and other delegates made to leave the hall.

The aisles were blocked with gesticulating, arguing and excited delegates.

Mr. Pugh began to read the standing orders relating to the expulsion from the congress of a delegate who refuses to obey the chair, but the warning of disciplinary action did not calm the storm.

The miners and others shouted to Mr. Bromley to sit down, and then came the strains of "The Red Flag."

There was a pause, and then the chairman was heard to say: "Congress will adjourn until 4 o'clock."

The general council went into session, and the miners also held a meeting.

Mr. Richardson, Mr. McGurk, and Mr. A. Parkinson, M. P., went as deputation to the council and explained their position. They had made their protest, they said, and would no longer obstruct the business of congress.

Fakers' Dignity Suffers!

The atmosphere in the hall was still tense when the chairman entered again with the council and took his place in silence. He explained the standing orders, and spoke of the dignity of the congress that had been sullied by the incident.

Mr. Richardson's last permission to make the statement that he had already made to the council. He finished, and then, to a final burst of cheers, Mr. Bromley made his speech in seconding the resolution.

"Seeing like this has happened for over 3 years." I was told by a delegate who has attended congress for that number of years.

Soviet Unions Telegraph to British Congress On General Strike Betrayal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOURNEMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 23.—As the Manchester Guardian quite properly divined, the refusal of the British government to grant the Soviet Union delegates to the Trade Union Congress permission to enter the country, was no less pleasing to Downing Street than to the trade union generals who deserted their armies in the great general strike.

Tho the T. U. C. officials did the "correct thing" in protesting the government's action, they were greatly relieved that Tomsky was not able to appear before the convention and tell the delegates in person that the struggling Russian workers had contributed more to the miners' strike fund than all the other countries of the world combined.

Soviet Workers Cheered.

The reception that the Russian comrades would receive from the delegates was foreshadowed when Delegate Richardson speaking to Robert Smillie's motion for continued support to the strikers declared that "two-thirds of the money that had come into the miners' coffers in their great trouble had come from Russia.

JOHN BROMLEY,
Engineers' head, flayed at Congress.

"When they can send $3,000,000 whilts emerging from tyrannous conditions and fighting their own battles, there must be something good in them."

The cheers that followed Richardson's remark rocked congress. It was not surprising that the T. U. C. leaders preferred to circulate the following telegram from the Soviet fraternal delegates, who were banned from the country, than to hear a report delivered personally at the congress:

Dear Comrades:—In the name of eight and a half million organized workers of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the Soviet C. C. T. U. sends fraternal greetings to you and, in your person, the whole British proletariat.

The Soviet workers send particularly warm greetings to the courageous battalion of the workers who continue to defend their rights, their living standards, and their post historic gains, despite furious attack and capitalist betrayal by certain leaders of the general strike and the capitulating mentality of others.

The Soviet C. C. T. U. expresses the hope that congress' first word and primary business will be as regards assisting the miners. To do otherwise would be a step unworthy of the grand proletarian organization of British workers.

Refused Admission.

The Soviet C. C. T. U. greatly regrets the impossibility of its delegation attending your congress of such tremendous importance.

The government, under the mask of democracy, representing a dictatorship of the manufacturers, bankers, mineowners and landlords, has done its best to keep out our delegation.

Thereby they plainly indicated to British workers that they are without any rights, and cannot even decide for themselves who shall and who shall not attend their own labor congress.

The conservative government willingly admits representatives of Amsterdam and the American Federation of Labor, who either blackleg on the miners or shamefully talk of loans on interest, that is, speculate like usurers on the misery of distress of the miners, on the tears and misery of workers' wives and bairns.

The conservative government does not admit representatives of the Soviet workers, who under extremely difficult conditions are giving of their last penny to help their class brothers in their great fight.

Thereby the conservative govern-

GEO. HICKS,
Head of Building Union, who went along on the betrayal of the general strike!

ment displays audacity to control the policy of trade unions.

It seems the great democracy does not allow the immense workers' organization to make even the most elementary act of comradely solidarity.

Naturally the Soviet workers are highly indignant at such mistreatment of British trade unions by the British government.

The Soviet workers believe that blame must be laid therefore on the bending the knee attitude towards the government of T. U. leaders like Thomas.

They were too loyal to capital and too disloyal to the working class.

When the general council must now report on activities during the general strike, and subsequent period, Thomas, the main instigator of defeat of the general strike, thinks nothing of leaving for overseas, thereby evading all responsibility.

Had its delegation been admitted to congress, and had the British police and home office not been able arrogantly to trample on the elementary rights of British trade unions, the Soviet C. C. T. U. would have considered it its duty to report to your congress each step it took in connection with British events.

For concrete davelopment these events scorse of times demonstrated, and still confirms, the absolute correctness of these evaluations made by the Soviet C. C. T. U. in declerations and resolutions.

It was on the hasa of its own historic experience and experience of numberless general strikes fought by our working class before it overthrew once and for all its own bankers and mineowners, that we appraised the unforgivable tactics of the general council leaders during the general strike.

Vision of Revolution.

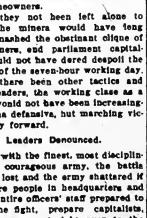
We may be accused of being too sharp, but when it comes to choosing between empty compliments meaning nothing to leaders and serving the working masses, we will always choose the latter course.

These are the dictates of our working class conscience and our bounden duty.

If we Soviet workers hold it necessary to do everything possible to extend fraternal material assistance, we equally believe it our proletarian duty to extend moral assistance.

Had the general strike not been squashed and the general council's power cutting it off, the general strike would have led to glorious victory,



rl. THOMAS,

end you would already have long been freed of your government aristocrats and mineowners.

Had they not been left alone to fight, the miners would have long since smashed the obstinant clique of mineowners, and parliament capitalists would not have dared despoil the miners of the seven-hour working day.

Had there been other tactics and other leaders, the working class as a whole would not have been increasingly on the defensive, but marching victoriously forward.

Leaders Denounced.

Even with the finest, most disciplined and courageous army, the battle may be lost and the army shattered if there are people in headquarters and in the entire officers' staff prepared to shirk the fight, prepare capitulation, and even go straight over to the enemy.

We wnow wish that the congress of fraternal British unions should, with complete proletarian frankness, sum up the experience of the great strike and draw corresponding conclusions.

Only honest recognition of mistakes will prevent their repetition. Only frank admission of errors will open the eyes of the masses fighting against the capitalist offensive.

Refuse to do Anything.

The Soviet C. C. T. U. particularly regrets to confirm the fact that at the Paris meeting of the Anglo-Russian committee, that delegation completely turned down all our proposals re assisting miners, including the embargo and 1 per cent levy for the benefit of strikers enfaring, but fighting, determined not to be slaves to the mineowners.

The Soviet C. C. T. U. believes there isn't a more important question, not only for the British labor movement, but also the entire world labor movement, than that of aiding the miners.

If the miners go down the capitalists will crush the British workers section by section.

So This Is Democracy!

Not for nothing "Democracy" now appears in the form of the emergency powers act. This "Emergency Democracy" of the government die-hard conservatives won't stop at throttling the whole Trade Union Movement.

Conservative, if the miners stand firm and fast, should the work masses of other unions support them, if the mineowners lose more and more without hope of getting out, then both victory is assured the miners, and retirst from power of the workers' greatest enemy, the conservative government, which came to the helm of the state on a shameful swindle.

Despite the refusal of the British delegation to the Anglo-Russian committee to adopt our proposal re helping miners and even discuss them in a business-like fashion (which we believe quite unexplainable from the labor viewpoint), the Soviet C. C. T. U. will continue the policy in its own country of assisting the British miners.

A. A. Purcell

A. A. PURCELL,
So-called left winger, who flopped.

Levy of One Per Cent.

The Soviet C. C. T. U. resolved to allocate a further million roubles for the benefit of the miners on account of receipts from a one per cent levy which we don't doubt will be adopted by the overwhelming mass of the workers of the union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Proletarian solidarity is displayed only in deeds. Just as proletarians of over a hundred nationalities inhabiting the Soviet Republics helped each other in their struggle, so our whole proletariat considers it its fraternal duty to help British brother-workers in this, their critical hour.

Helped More Than Once.

We are firmly convinced in our hour of trial the British proletariat will do the same by us. More than once it has withheld the melted fist of the British bourgeoisie hanking over our workers' state.

Thus will grow and strengthen brotherly bonds between the toilers of both countries, the bonds that will become a tower of strength when in Britain a real workers' government, whose action is inevitable, is formed.

We strongly believe the Trades Union Congress will do all to further consolidate the Anglo-Russian Committee, a symbol of international trade union unity, a symbol of brotherly bonds existing between the British and Soviet workers.

So long live international working class solidarity! Up the fight against the capitalist offensive!

With comradely greeting—Soviet C. C. T. U., Chairmen, Tomsky; Secretary, Dogadov.

In reply to this broadside the T. U. C. issued a sneaking statement typical of the imperialist labor leaders of England. The Russians were invited to send fraternal delegates and the British felt that they would remain neutral on questions effecting the British workers and devote themselves to expressing goodwill.

This conception of the duties of fraternal delegates to other countries has nothing in common with international solidarity or the identity of interests of the workers of all lands, a conception which British right wing labor leaders have in the past professed adherence to.

William Hutcheson, fraternal delegate from the United States and "czar" of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners got along very nicely with his abstractions on the difference between a living wage and a saving wage.

Denver Trade Unions Aid British by Sale of Tiny Miner Lamps

DENVER, Col., Sept. 23.—A shipment of the little lamps made in the form of those used by the coal miners of Great Britain and sold to aid relief work in the British strike has reached Denver and found a good reception in sales to sympathizers of the British coal diggers. Over $100 has already been collected by this means.

These lamps are on pins for wearing on the coat lapel, and may be secured here at the Auditorium Book Store, 1407 Arapahoe street, or at the office of the Colorado Labor Advocate. Denver workers are asked to aid the relief work in this and other ways.

RUSSIAN UNION LEADER SHOWS WHY SOVIET LABOR DELEGATES WERE NOT ALLOWED IN BRITAIN

MOSCOW, Sept. 5 (By Mail).—In connection with the refusal of the British government to permit the delegation of the central council of Soviet Labor Unions to the British Trades Union Congress in Bournemouth to land, Comrade Tomski has made the following declaration:

"The refusal of the British government to grant visas to the members of our delegation was not unexpected, it was in line with the general policy of

TOMSKY,
President of the Soviet Unions, denied admission to England to attend T. U. C.

the bourgeois government which is waging a class war against the proletariat of Great Britain, nevertheless, the refusal has caused the greatest indignation amongst the members of our unions, altho nothing else was to be expected from a government which stands completely upon the side of the mine owners.

Class Struggle Always Political.

"From the very first days of the strike it was clear to everyone who did not, like the proverbial ostrich, bury his head in the stand, that the miners' struggle had taken on the character of an intense class struggle between the capitalists and the working class of Great Britain.

"The class struggle is, however, always a political struggle and only the tactics of leaders by individuals of the Thomas type is afraid to recognize this.

Capitalists Prepare.

"The preparations of the two parties to this struggle were unequal. On the one hand, the whole forces of the bourgeoisie rallied around the mine owners and the British government which is in the hands of the strongest capitalist party in Great Britain, the conservative party, which opposes the working class with all the means at its disposal. Moreover, there was the vast capitalist press which is distributed in millions of copies, the fabricated public opinion, the courts, the laws, etc.

Labor Leaders Timid.

"On the other hand was the general council which showed its pusillanimity in oaths of loyalty to the bourgeois state. It became ever more clear to everyone that the abolition of the habeas corpus, the nomination of district commissars with extraordinary powers, the ordering of troops on to the streets, the support of strike-breakers, the arrests of working class leaders, etc., was by no means democratic, by no means constitutional, not even in accordance with the standpoint of the bourgeois British constitution.

"All these facts prove once again the real character of the notorious 'democracy' they prove that the bourgeoisie, when its class interests demand it, takes no fetishes like constitutions, democracy, the law, etc., into consideration and certainly not the opinion of the British workers and their trade unions.

HARRY POLLITT,
Leader of the Minority Movement.

Provas Leaders Wrong.

"The refusal of the British government to grant us visas is a further proof for the incorrectness of the policy of the leaders of the general strike who wished to present an open and intense class struggle, a political struggle, as a purely economic strike. This false policy determined in fact the direct betrayal of the general strike by its leaders.

"Economy alone does not exist in nature and politics is simply the concentrated logic of economics. This is proved, to put it mildly, by the 'incorrectness' of the policy of the general council, which assured the conservative government that above all of its loyalty to the constitution.' Loyalty to the same constitution which the conservative government had brushy and cynically pushed to one side from the first moment of the strike on.

"The unforgiveable and criminal error of the general council in refusing the assistance of the working class of the Soviet Union which demanded the direct betrayal of the strike, stresses this once again. Everyone who grasps the interests of his own class and understands how to defend them logically (the conservatives are well aware of their class interests and know how to defend them) only wines the opinion of his own class.

"To turn the opinion of another, a hostile class, into consideration and to run after it slavishly as the general council did when it rejected our assistance, means purely and simply to betray the interests of one's own class.

A Contrast of Classes.

"Considered from a logical class point of view the conservative government acted logically and correctly according to its bourgeois class interests. It knows what it wants and that what it wants is the lowering of the standard of living first of all of the miners and then of the workers of Great Britain in the other branches of industry, for it is only the first blow which is being delivered at the miners.

MINERS' CHIEF IS POPULAR AT BOURNEMOUTH

Cook Assails the Right Wing Leaders

By SCOTT NEARING, Federated Press
BOURNEMOUTH, Eng. —(FP)—Miners' Secretary A. J. Cook took the center of the stage at Bournemouth on the second day of the British Trades Union congress Sept. 7. Hoarse and nervous, Cook drove ahead with his customary determination. He denounced as scabs the workers who, he declared, had interfered with the miners in their conduct of the strike.

"You can't be passive," cried Cook. Either you must help the employers win the dispute or else you must help the workers to win. We have been fighting for 19 weeks a life and death struggle for the principles of unionism that are common to us all. While we have been engaged in this fight others are working behind our backs—blacklegging on us."

Cook was cheered when he rose to speak. He very evidently is the outstanding figure at the congress. Ernest Bevin, who directed the general strike, spoke for the first time at the same session. His reception was far less friendly than Cook's.

The congress challenged the British government on the emergency powers act under which about 500 workers have been imprisoned the past few months. Bishop of the garment workers was the only one to oppose the resolution. He took his stand on the ground that the workers of Britain never had enjoyed real freedom, and that this resolution is far too mild and puerile."

There has been general agreement that there should be no discussion of the general strike on the ground that it might injure the cause of the miners. The leaders of the general council are all reticent or silent. They are evidently not proud of their record.

A. J. COOK.
Miners' leader, who led the miners' delegation at the T. U. C.

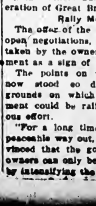
The enthusiasm for the strike seems to be confined to those who were responsible for carrying it on—the local leaders who actually put the decision into effect. Today I talked with one of these men, J. McLaughlin, president, Building Trades Federation at Scarboro, and a delegate to the congress. He was as enthusiastic about the strike as a boy with a new gun.

Many of the delegates take a similar view. Before the general strike they had no idea that labor was really strong. They know now that the workers can have the works whenever they decide to take them.

The mayor of Bournemouth opened the congress with an address in which he emphasized fair dealing, goodwill and uplift. His plea for the employing class was greeted by emphatic protest from the delegates, who were manifestly out of sympathy with his principles of tolerance and compromise. The president of the Bournemouth trades and labor council followed the mayor with a bitter denunciation of the municipal government for employing nonunion workers during the strike.

NOAH ABLETT, OF BRITISH MINERS, IS OUT TO FIGHT

Union Executive Member Declares for Struggle



Noah Ablett, member of the Miners' Union executive, declared his attitude in face of the situation now confronting the miners and the Miners' Federation of Great Britain.

Rally Movement.

The office of the M. F. G. B. to re open negotiations, he said, had been taken by the owners and the government as a sign of weakness.

The points on which the owners now stood so determinedly were grounds on which the whole movement could be rallied to a tremendous effort.

"For a long time I have sought a peaceable way out, but I am now convinced that the government and the owners can only be brought to reason by intensifying the struggle."

LONDON, Sept. 23.—"I stand now for a fight to a finish. The safety men must be called out; and all means, however drastic, must be employed to defeat the efforts of the coal owners 'to give the miners a hell of a hiding.'"

In these words Noah Ablett, member of the Miners' Union executive, declared his attitude in face of the situation now confronting the miners and the Miners' Federation of Great Britain.

1926 CAMPAIGN OF THE PARTY

Engdahl, Dunne, Simons and Shachtman Speak

Chicago witnessed the launching of the 1926 election campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party at the mass meeting held in Mirror Hall, on the northwest side, addressed by J. Louis Engdahl, candidate for United States senator in Illinois; William F. Dunne, candidate for governor in New York; Max Shachtman, of the Young Workers League, and William Simons.

Urges New Recruits for Party.

Engdahl pointed out how the Communist struggle grows out of the immediate needs of the workers, ridiculing the attack of the exploiters' press that Bolshevism as it manifests itself in the country is an importation from Europe. He made an appeal for new members for the Workers (Communist) Party.

Dunne reviewed the necessity for breaking the workers and farmers away from the old capitalist political parties before rallying the masses in a labor party.

Shachtmen told of the dangers of new wars facing American imperialist rule on many fronts. Simons acted as chairman.

More Meetings; Collect Signatures.

Many gatherings are being scheduled for the campaign. Open air and factory meetings will be held as the weather permits.

This week is witnessing an intense drive for signatures for the petitions to place the various candidates on the ballot. This work is being directed from the district office, Workers (Communist) Party, 19 South Lincoln St.

Engdahl Goes to Minnesota.

Engdahl left last night for Minnesota to spend two days in the party's campaign in that state speaking as follows:

Friday, Sept. 24, 8 p. m., Minneapolis, Moose Hall, 43 S. Fourth St.
Saturday, Sept. 25, 8 p. m., St. Paul, Labor Temple, 416 N. Temple St.

On his return trip to Chicago he speaks at Milwaukee, Wis., Sunday, Sept. 26, at Miller Hall, 802 State St.

SECTION 3, NEW YORK TO HOLD MEMBERSHIP MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Section 3 of the Workers Party of New York will convene in a very important meeting of all members next Monday, Sept. 27. The meeting will be held directly after work at Bryant Hall, Sixth Ave. and 42nd St. Every member of Section 3 must make certain to be present.

Being Formed to Join Traction Properties

A new $250,000,000 corporation is being formed in Chicago for the purpose of consolidating the traction properties of the city. The Samuel Insull is now in Europe, his representatives were present at the meeting of bankers that agreed on the scheme and it is believed that Insull will be elected to direct the reorganization.

Bankers Out For Profits.

The bankers are out to make money on the plan and they have suggested that the city forego for the present its arrangement for a division of earnings. A charge of 4 cent for transfers will be made. This little plan is expected to mean $1,500,000 to the bankers' coffers.

The construction of initial subways with the $45,000,000 traction fund now in possession of the city treasury is proposed. The city council must endorse the scheme before it can be put into operation.

Because his cheese was too ventilated, and his butter too scarce A. Krause, a small butter and cheese man got into trouble with the law recently. Judge Frank Padden took $25 away from Krause but Krause's customers will not get any of it.

R. W. Andersen of the Southmoor garage, could not see any reason why a few gills of gasoline out of every gallon purchased by Fordists could not just as well contribute its motive qualities to his own limousine. Judge Padden non-concurred in this decision and Anderson was soaked $25 for the missing liquid.

Scelee Cest Money.

Joseph Stecke, who supplies fish to fish-eaters somewhere on North Halsted street, was an nifty a scale-trimmer as ever handled a cleaver. But Stecke manicured one fish that held on to his scales and the operation cost him $25. Judge Padden got the scales of justice to work on the fish that Stecke sold and Stecke was informed that he should sell his fish undressed. Perhaps his honor likes to take his fish in the nude. Now the scales have fallen from Stecke's eyes and he promised that his fish will leave his store in the future arrayed as a politician's right hand.

HOLD LARGEST MEETING ON BOSTON COMMONS IN THE PARTY'S CAMPAIGN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass.—The Boston Commons meeting of last Sunday was the largest yet held by the Workers Party of Boston. H. M. Wicks was the principal speaker and talked on "Issues of the Campaign," with particular stress upon the "League of Nations" with particular reference to the "League Court." As soon as Wicks started to speak the other meetings on the Commons, where every form of religious and political exponent holds forth, began to dwindle and before long the majority of the people on the Commons were attentively listening to the Workers Party speaker.

Harry J. Canter was chairmen of the meeting and dwelt on some phases of the political situation of Massachusetts before introducing the main speaker. This meeting was a part of the tour that will take Wicks thru the state of Massachusetts. The balance of the tour is as follows:

Friday, Sept. 24—Lowell, Mass.
Saturday, Sept. 25—Kinge Square, Maynard, Mass., 7 p. m.
Sunday, Sept. 26—Girls' Club, 9 Prichard, 7:30 p. m., Fitchburg.
Monday, Sept. 27—Gardner.
Tuesday, Sept. 28—Springfield.
Wednesday, Sept. 29—Holyoke.
Thursday, Sept. 30—Pittsfield.

A number of dates in the southern part of the state have already been filled in the home town of Senator Wm. M. Butler, New Bedford, where there are no party members, six street meetings were held in one night, in various parts of the city with a total attendance of more than 1,500. This is the first time the Workers Party has ever appeared before the workers of that town. Good meetings were also held in Quincy, Revere, Peabody, Salam and Gloucester. After finishing the tour of Massachusetts Comrade Wicks will go into the state of Pennsylvania, where he will spend the month of October speaking as candidate for governor on the Workers Party ticket of that state.

JOIN THE ELECTION SIGNATURE CAMPAIGN SUNDAY, SEPT. 26

The election signature campaign meeting held by Sections Nos. 5 and 6 at Workers' Lyceum, Sunday, Sept. 19, went to work with enthusiasm, altho it was far from well attended, showing that comrades can sleep on the job in whitefui peace, while a handful of devoted "Jimmie Higgins" go to the front.

By sunrise Thursday, Sept. 30, Hemmersmark and Engdehl will be on the ballot, if those that slept last Sunday will wake up in time to come next Sunday, Sept. 26, at 10 a. m., to the meeting at Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd., for a half day of honest to goodness Communist work. In the meantime petition blanks and votere lists can be had from G. Bjornson, 1623 Humboldt Blvd. Telephone Humboldt 8838.

Waukegan Bank Shut Down, 'For Adjustment'

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Sept. 23. — The Security Savings Bank of Waukegan, second oldest bank of this city, was closed today by state bank examiners "for adjustment."

Frozen assets in the form of unsecured loans made by a former administration were blamed by J. A. Miller, one of the principal stockholders, for the closing.

Queen's Agent Coming.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—Lois Fuller, personal friend of Queen Marie of Roumenia, sailed for New York aboard the White Star liner Olympic today to act as the queen's advance agent in connection with the queen's forthcoming visit to the United States.

The strictest secrecy surrounds the plans of the royal visitor.

Rush Anti-Toxin to Florida.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—All available typhoid anti-toxin and vaccine at the headquarters of the seventh naval district (Key West) have been rushed to stricken Miami to combat the menace of epidemics, according to a message to the navy department this morning from the base commandant.

WORK OF THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

SILK MILL GIRLS CONTINUE SCRAP

By MARY,
Young Silk Striker.

LOWELL, Mass.—When you look at the building of the Lowell Silk Mill with its nailed down windows, you get the impression of a prison. Thru the dirty window panes you can see only pale spots of the electric lights, and a dizzy making noise breaks thru the thick walls into the narrow street. Four hundred human beings are imprisoned in this mill. Ninety per cent of them are young girls just left school, spending their youth days among looms, rats, roaches, breathing the hot damp air with a constant temperature of 90 degrees, for a wage of 9 to 18 dollars per week. Yes, it was hard, practically impossible to work, breath, keep up our families and be healthy under these circumstances.

Six Loom System.

On the top of this the bosses wanted us to run six looms instead of four. They wanted to cut our wages 33⅓%.

Our wages are so low anyway—from 9—13 dollars in average, and the new system will make impossible for us to work. It will ruin our health completely. This is why we went out on strike.

This is why every morning about 100 strikers picket the mill gates singing our strike songs. Our beloved song "Solidarity".

This is why we demand a 20% increase in wages. We want some of the silk we are weaving. We want some sunshine and air. We want sinks to wash up our hands. We can't wash our hands in rusty pails. We want a sanitary chest in the mill and a resting room too. We think we have a right to use the elevators instead of climbing five flights of stairs.

Yes, we want humen conditions and an American standard of living. Above all we want a union—an organization to protect the interests of the workers in the Lowell Silk Mill against our enemies—the bosses.

We learned to do many things during the strike. We have many young workers in the strike committee. We learned how to educate scabs.

We didn't know we had so many speakers among us, but now we know. We discovered it while appealing for money before labor unions to help us win our strike.

Oh yes, we, the young strikers of the Lowell Silk Mill, learned a lot during the strike as you see.

We learned that the bosses are our greatest enemies but we're determined to fight and fight until we'll get our final victory thru one big textile union.

AMERICAN DELEGATES TO ARMS CONFERENCE GOES AFTER SUB-COMMITTEE

GENEVA, Sept. 23.—Violent discussions were precipitated in the preparatory disarmement commission today when Hugh Gibson, American minister to Switzerland and head of the American delegation to the conference, criticized the work of the military sub-commission.

Gibson requested that the new instructions be issued to the military sub-commission not to engage itself with political questions, but to confine its activities to technical considerations.

Passaic Strikers' Kids Lead Pickets in Army

By a Young Worker Correspondent.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J.—(By Mail). At the present time there is a strike at the Sarnoff-Irving hat factories of Perth Amboy, N. J., involving about 300 young workers (plants employ only young workers).

The strike is now in its third day and 42 of the workers are out already. Being young workers and inexperienced in strikes the workers gather in groups every morning on corners near mills. I am a former employe of the Sarnoff-Irving hat factory, so naturally I am interested in this fight.

With two Passaic textile strikers' children—who are in Perth Amboy for a vacation—I went to the plant. Seeing that the strikers had no picket line, but were only standing on the corners, I got in touch with some of the strikers I knew, to discuss the question with them of forming a picket line to march up and down in front of the mills. I told them two Passaic strikers' children were here who could lead the picket line for them if they wanted it. They were glad to hear this and all the workers present immediately formed a picket line numbering about 125 workers in all.

With little Frances Fisher, 12 years old, and Elizabeth Hubens, 13 years old—the two Passaic textile strikers' children—at the head of the picket line, the workers started the march up and down in front of the mills. The workers remaining in the mills all rushed to the windows to see the picket line, while all the bosses were standing in front of the doors down stairs, to keep workers in the plants from joining the picket line outside, if any attempted to do so. After picketing, the two Passaic strikers' children were taken to the strike meeting in an automobile, while the rest of the workers marched down in a body. The hat works strikers asked the Passaic strikers' children to teach them some of the Passaic strikers' songs. This they gladly agreed to do.

Thus the Passaic strikers' children are militant fighters in labor's ranks wherever they go—imitating their striking fathers and mothers at home.

Condemn Scabbing by Students

RICHMOND, Ind.—(FP)—"Be it resolved that this conference goes on record as against the practice of college student's scabbing during industrial disputes." This resolution was passed unanimously at a conference of thirty young college students who have been spending their summer vacations as manual laborers in industry. The conference, held at Earlham College, passed few other resolutions, being largely devoted to a discussion of the value of college students working in industry and what this various students could do in the coming year to establish closer contact between students, and Industrial workers.

The students, both young men and women, represented 16 colleges and universities in the central west as well as two labor colleges—Brookwood and Commonwealth,—and the Training Mayer Summer School for Women in Industry. With them were five young industrial workers, most of them working in organized trades and being members of their respective unions, and several other active workers in the labor movement.

PRINTERS' UNION OF CLEVELAND, O. BOWS TO BOSSES

Subservient Letter Issued by President

By a Worker Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 23.—In order to force the painters and glaziers of this city to terminate their strike, the manufacturers, bankers and master contractors formed what they called a "Citizens' Committee" of 57 members, this committee later becoming a permanent institution. This body of men will hereafter function in every strike of the workers of this city—and the workers will have to buck up against them, whether they wish or not.

Kow-Tow Statement.

The committee issued a statement on its relation to organized labor, and the Cleveland Typographical Union, No. 53, thru its president, hurried to answer the statement, and to emphasize that it is a "good" union. One paragraph of the statement will suffice to indicate its character.

"The Cleveland Citizens' Committee, made up of sixty prominent and well-known men of this community, in a pronouncement recently addressed to the public of Greater Cleveland, says: 'The committee has no intention of attacking or discrediting those unions which conduct their operations in a fair, businesslike, reasonable and constructive manner.' We are proud to state that Cleveland Typographical Union has followed such a policy in its dealings with employers and the public."

$5,000,000 Fund.

What does the Citizens' Committee call "fair, businesslike, reasonable and constructive?" Perhaps the use of police and firemen to protect scabs! Perhaps the boycotting of the lumber yards which supplied the contractors during the building laborers' strike! Perhaps the establishment of a fund of $5,000,000 to force the independent contractors into line—and to fight the painters and glaziers! And this fund remains permanent!

Pledge Fairness.

And the printers pledge fairness, reasonableness and constructiveness to this band of pirateers! Does Mr. Hoban intend this for publicity—when during the strikes and struggles the so-called Citizens' Committee controls every channel of publicity?

Militant Action Required.

Mr. Hoban would have done better to refrain from sending a letter to the Citizens' Committee—and from multigraphing the letter and sending it to all the unions in the city. The workers of Cleveland will have to adopt quite different methods in combatting the Citizens' Committee if they hope to make any progress. Not subservience, but well-planned, militant action is required.

U. S. STEEL TRUST INAUGURATES USUAL BOSSES' INSURANCE SCHEME; WORKERS HAVE NOTHING TO SAY

By a Worker Correspondent.

GARY, Ind., Sept. 23.—A great deal of coercion is being used by the straw bosses in the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co., the subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, to compel its employes to become members of a so-called "Employes' Insurance Association."

The membership in this association costs $1. Initiation fee and $1 per month. It entitles the member to $1,000 insurance "payable in the event of death from any cause at any age, and in the event of permanent and total disability from illness or injury of any nature, occurring before age 60."

The insurance is paid by deduction from the salary or wages of the employes. The "association" selected the Missouri State Life Insurance Co. of St. Louis, Mo., for this group insurance.

This insurance, despite its name, is not an organization by, of and for the steel mill workers, but by, of and for the steel trust. It is a scheme to tie them to their slave jobs. It is a scheme to rob them still further. The workers will have nothing to say in case the board of directors of this "Employes' Association" would raise the premium at their will. The workers are not running this association. They are driven into it. Men are complaining that the straw bosses threaten to fire them in case they do not take out insurance. And yet the circular issued by the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co. states that "membership in the association is optional."

It is quite possible that this is a scheme to abolish the compensation act of Indiana under which the workers are entitled to compensation in case of death of injury. The steel trust is garnering hundreds of millions of profit, it works its employes twice and three times as hard as two or three years ago. The tremendous speed-up causes numerous cases of death and injury. But the "poor" steel trust can not afford to face the responsibility. It makes the workers pay the price for death caused thru the speed-up.

The workers must unite their forces and fight against the tyranny of the steel trust.

LEATHER GOODS' WORKERS BEGIN UNION CAMPAIGN

Succeed in Organizing Many Shops

By a Worker Correspondent.

NEW YORK.—The Suit Case, Bag & Brief Case Makers' Union has been conducting for the last few weeks an intensive organization campaign thruout the trade. As a result of this campaign many important firms have already settled with the union, granting to their employes shorter hours, better wages, and union recognition. Several firms, however, refused to come to peaceful terms with the union, and their shops have been called on strike. Among them, are: Lowy & Lowy, suit case and bag shop, of 159 Mercer street, the Olympic Suit Case company, of 150 Wooster St., and Diamond Auto Trunk and Case company, of 616 Broadway. Attempts made by these firms to operate their factories with strikebreakers have failed, and their shops are completely tied up.

Organize Brief Case Shops.

The union is also conducting a special campaign at the brief case shops. The conditions in the brief case shops are in general much lower than those prevailing in the suit case and bag shops. Most of the workers employed in these shops are young boys and girls who are made to work long hours for the big sum of $10 and $12 a week. The business condition in the brief case shops is now very good. The employers are very busy and are naturally taking advantage of their opportunity to make as much profit as it is possible. The brief case workers who have been out of work for many months during the slack period just ended, feel that they are also entitled to make a few dollars more in the busy time and not to have to work as long as 50 and 60 hours a week.

The union is determined to help these workers and once for all establish union conditions and standards in these shops. And if the employers remain stubborn, a general strike may be called in all brief case shops in the very near future.

The Suit Case, Bag & Brief Case Makers' union has lately also put an organizer in the field in Philadelphia who is now preparing the ground for a general organization campaign in that city and as soon as the situation in New York will be clear, the union will concentrate all its efforts on Philadelphia, and also Newark.

SHERMAN SERVICE ADVERTISES IT PUTS THE "MAN ELEMENT" IN HELPLESS COMPANY UNIONS

By ROBERT DUNN, Federated Press.

"First in the line," the head of Sherman Corp. Engineers, America's foremost labor spy agency. "We are entirely alone in our field"—"We have no competition," are frequent in its advertising copy. It has competitors, but few can tussle with it on its high plane of "X-Ray" service, harmony engineering," and scientific manipulation of what John Sherman, founder, calls the "man element" in industry.

Organized in Boston in 1910 as the Sherman Detective Agency, it changed a few years later to Sherman Service, Inc. Within the last year it has taken the title the Sherman Corp., with main offices in New York (2 Rector street), Chicago (302 S. La Salle street), St. Louis (114 N. Broadway), Detroit (First National Bank building), Boston (31 Milk street), Philadelphia (1016 Chestnut street), Cleveland (Park building), Toronto (10 Adelaide street, E.). At the same address are its employment offices for hiring of industrial spies or operatives. The employment branches function under different names, so that the worker who answers the blind ad in the local paper thinks he is being taken on by the National Mutual Service or the National Manufacturers' Syndicate, which are the employment departments of Sherman Service.

Railroads Hire Spies.

The corporation claims clients in some 33 states, with more than 50 industries, in addition to railroads, representing a long list of users of its undercover service. The railroad companies are particularly profitable clients, one having been known to use 50 Sherman operatives in one year at a cost of $360,000—a maximum rate of $600 per month for an operative or approximately $20 a day. The New York, New Haven & Hartford and Pennsylvania are two that have made use of Sherman operatives in liquidating labor unions. These two roads have been leaders in establishing company unions. One of Sherman's specialties is the introduction of company unions.

A Sherman salesman calling on a prospective client in New York told him that the company has done over $25,000,000 worth of business in the last few years. He spoke of their "invisible and unobtrusive service" which would pay the client to install. He suggested that a Sherman spy be put in the plant just for a week as a try-out, to make a "preliminary survey." The contract for placement of operatives is cancellable on 30 days' notice.

From Steel to Textiles.

In spite of careful guarding of clients' names, it is known that during the past few years Sherman users have included Kirschbaum Clothing Co., Klotz Silk Co., Bell Telephone Co., Standard Roller Bearing Co., Philadelphia Silk Mfg. Co., Sequoit Silk Mills—all of Philadiphia—as well as American Sugar Refining Co. of Boston, American Woolen Co., S. S. White Dental Co., Sperry Gyroscope Co., Illinois Steel Co., Steel & Tube Co. of America, a number of Paterson silk mills represented in the New Bedford Manufacturers' Association, operatives being under control of Senator William M. Butler, now running for election and requesting the votes of spied-upon textile workers in that state.

Sherman operatives follow the usual spy procedure—many being instructed "to get themselves elected to office in the labor unions" and some of them have been claimed by Sherman executives "to hold the highest positions" in the unions. They have been uncovered in strikes such as the steel strike of 1919, the 1922 strike in Lawrence, Mass., and among clothing workers in Philadphia.

Not only stoolpigeons of the ordinary sort, and provocateurs to stir up race hatred, but the smoother type of "constructive harmoner" is attached to the Sherman payroll. Since Sherman began stressing "industrial counsel" and claiming to be the "largest engineering organization of its kind in the world" with a million-dollar engineering staff" he has adopted the latest frills for catching the attention of employers. His production engineers, who "turn out reams of bulletins, confidential reports and special studies on American steps, slogans to stimulate production, open shop drive, thrift plans. Unions in specific industries, Sherman himself writes for journals like Printers' Ink, Industrial Management, Manufacturers' Record, Textile World, while his spat-weafing salesmen speak at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Case Business College, etc. Many Sherman executives, such as A. H. MacDonald and Tohlas F. Butler, have set up independently in the spy-furnishing business, sometimes undercutting Sherman.

Deceased President of Hod Carriers Knighted by the King of Italy

Dominic d'Alleasandro, president of the Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' international Union for the past 23 years, is dead.

D'Alleasandro cherished the title of knight which was conferred on him by the king of Italy.

D'Alleasandro had been ill for several months, and spent his declining days in a Washington sanitarium.

A meeting of the union's executive board will be called shortly and d'Alleasandro's temporary successor will be selected from among the six members of the board. A permanent president will not be chosen until the next convention, unless a referendum vote is ordered by the membership. The Hod Carriers have not held a national convention for 20 years, and are now balloting upon the question of holding one this fall.

Charleroi Mayor Kow-tows to The Nightshirt Squad

CHARLEROI, Pa.—(By Mail)— Our city mayor, S. L. Woodward, openly boasts of us whom he supports when a handful of about 150 Y. K. K. paraded in this city last night. He stood in the middle of the street directing the traffic, giving the right of way to the klan.

Mayor S. L. Woodward, before his election, was denounced as a K. K. K. by his opponents, nevertheless he was elected by a crooked ballot.

The miners are forming a labor party and they mean to fight for the election of a decent citizen who will support the workers in the future. We workers no longer will fool with crooked politicians, supporters of the coal operators.

By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

IV

The Germans made another gigantic thrust at the British and this time it was the battle of Flanders. They captured a great stretch of the British lines and if it had not been for a six day stand of laborers and chauffeurs and what not behind the lines, every man hiding in a hole and fighting for himself with any weapon he could pick up, the Germans would have taken the whole railway system in Flanders. A month or so later came another offensive, this time to the south, against the French, the battle of the Aisne and the Oise; it looked as if Paris was doomed and people in America held their breath while they read the bulletins in the newspapers.

In the midst of that battle, covering nearly two hundred miles of front, an epoch-making thing happened; the hard-pressed French commander put in the first of the newly-arrived American troops. These boys had had only a few months training and the French didn't think they would hold; but instead of giving way like the rest of the armies, they hit the German line and went forward a couple of miles over a three mile front. So more of them were rushed in and a few days later came the battle of Belleau Wood, and all over America went a thrill of exultation. It was not national pride, but more than that, men felt—it was a victory of free institutions. When you ran over the lists of dead and wounded in these battles you found, Horowitz and Schnierow and Samerplan and Samaniego, Constantinopulos and Toplitsky and Guong Ling; but they all fought alike, and it was a victory for that golden flood of eloquence that was being poured out from the White House.

In the midst of these excitements came Bunny's commencement time, and he had to make the great decision. He and his father had the most serious talk of their lives; Bunny had never seen the old man so deeply moved. What he said was, "Son, can't you possibly see your way to stay and help me with this job?" What Bunny answered was, "Dad, if I didn't get into the army, I'd never feel right the rest of my life."

Dad pointed out what it was going to mean to him personally. He was no longer able to carry this load alone. There had to be more and more wells, and every one was an added care. They simply had to have a big refinery and that meant also a chain of service stations, you could not count on government contracts forever. This Paradise tract was Bunny's, but if he wanted to give it up, why then Dad would have to negotiate with some of the big people who had been sounding him out on the question of mergers. If Bunny went into the army there would be no use counting on him, because Dad was sure this war wasn't half over. "Those that go now aren't many of them coming back," was the way he put it; there was a catch in his voice, and with a little bit more they would have had to pull out their pocket-handkerchiefs, which would have been equally embarrassing to both. All that Bunny could do was to repeat, "I've just got to go, Dad; I've just got to go."

So Dad gave up and a couple of weeks later Bunny got his notice to report to his training-camp. Aunt Emma spilled tears over him, while Grandma drew her withered old lips tight over her badly-fitting false teeth, and said it was a crime, and it ended her interest in life. Bertie made arrangements for a farewell party, and Bunny reported that he had opened negotiations with Vernon Roscoe, the biggest independent oil operator on the coast, president of Flora-Max and Mid-Central Pete, who had several times broached the project of a vast enterprise to be known as "Ross Consolidated."

They drove up to Paradise, to give Bunny a farewell look at things, and there they found that Paul was expected home for a furlough, preliminary to a journey across the Pacific Ocean. This war, Dad said, was like a fire in a "tank-farm," you could never tell which way things would explode, or what would go next. Here was Paul, with the bunch of carpenters he directed, ordered onto a transport to be shipped—of all places in the world—to Vladivostok in Siberia!

It appeared that when the Bolsheviks took charge of Russia they found themselves with a great army of war prisoners, among them a hundred thousand Czecho-Slovaks. This was a new name—you looked it up in the encyclopedia and couldn't find it, and had to have it explained to you that they were Bohemians, but this was a German word, and just as we had changed hamburger into liberty steak and sauerkraut into liberty cabbage, so the Bohemians became Czecho-Slovaks; which nobody knew how to spell when they heard it, or to pronounce when they saw it. The people of this race were revolting against Germany, and the Bolsheviks had agreed that their Czecho-Slovak prisoners would be shipped to Vladivostok, where the allies might take charge of them, and bring them to the fighting front if they saw fit. But on the way across Siberia the Czecho-Slovaks got to fighting with the Bolsheviks and the released German war prisoners, and had seized a great section of the railroad.

So now into this weird mix-up the allies were intervening. The newspapers explained the matter: the Bolshevik movement was an uprising of fanatics, imposed upon the Russian people by the guns of hired mercenaries. Chinese and Mongolians and Cossacks and escaped criminals and general riff-raff; it couldn't last very long, a few weeks or months at the most, and what was needed was to supply a nucleus about which the decent Russians might rally. The allies were now undertaking to do that; American and Japanese troops were to help the Czecho-Slovaks in Siberia, and American and British troops were to organize the Russian refugees at Archangel in the far north. So here was Paul, going to build barracks and Y. M. C. A. huts along the famous Trans-Siberian railway line, about which he had been debating with Dad. Bunny was going to a training camp, and maybe when he got through they would send him to the same front—that was a case where he would let Dad use his influence! Bunny meant to work hard and rise in the service, and maybe he would have Paul and his carpenters under his command!

They had a hard time keeping their spirits up, because of Ruth, who was utterly inconsolable. She would go about the place with tears running down her cheeks, and now and then would have to jump up and rush from the room. When the time came for Paul to say his last farewell, Ruth almost went out of her mind; she locked her arms about his neck, and he had to pull her fingers away. It was sad for a fellow, to be driven away with his sister lying in a faint in a chair. Old Mr. Watkins to to come up and take her home, and send up Sadie to do the housework for Dad. By golly, it made you realize about war!

A Cable to Stalin

The New Leader, official organ of the Jewish Daily Forward, or to be more exact, Abe Cahan's English expression, recently published a fake speech attributed to Joseph Stalin, general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. Stalin was alleged to have commented caustically on Comrade Zinoviev's general usefulness to the revolutionary movement, in a matter that brought joy to the hearts of those ill-informed persons who consider Zinoviev and the Communist International synonymous terms.

It is no secret that a minority of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union disagreed sharply with the prevailing opinion of the Central Committee on questions of policy. As usual in Communist parties, the issues were fought out openly and considerable frankness was indulged in before the final decision was reached. Zinoviev's point of view was defeated by such an overwhelming majority that expectations entertained by Soviet foes of a possible rupture in the party were consigned to the burial ground of dashed hopes. The unity of the party was maintained. The iron battalions of the revolution emerged from the discussion with unbroken ranks.

It was not surprising that the capitalist papers should assume that a civil war would follow a disagreement in the party over a political issue. "They'll do it on you every time," to parody a colloquialism. Stalin's troops, in good old 1920 style, were chasing Zinoviev's troops around the steppes and the day that did not chronicle an assassination or two was a day ill conceived. Finally the liars got tired and decided to tell the truth for a change. But like the lad who was in the habit of shouting "Wolf! Wolf!" when there was no wolf and ran into a wall of skepticism when the four-legged brute actually appeared, the capitalist liars had no audience when they began to turn out reliable news.

Among the publications that rehashed the fake Stalin speech was The New Leader. The editor of that paper is nobody's sap. He is about as precocious a lad as ever came from Indiana. But he does not entertain friendly sentiments towards Communists. Which accounts for his blunder in stealing a fake story from the Hearst press and running it in the New Leader as if it came from Moscow.

Nobody in his senses would believe the yarn. Official refutation of the fable was not really necessary to convince the average American worker that the story originated in the brain of some cognac-crazed white Russian in Riga or Berlin. But the Workers (Communist) Party, which is responsible for THE DAILY WORKER, got in touch with Moscow (the terrible secret is out) and the response was a cable to the effect that Stalin did not say the things ascribed to him.

The general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party conveyed the information to the editor of the New Leader with a suggestion that he be decent enough to publish the refutation. The reply was published in a recent issue of this paper and it did not contribute much to the general fund of knowledge. This is putting it mildly.

Now comes the aftermath. The New Leader's worker readers protested. The exposure of its journalistic venality hit somebody. The current number of the New Leader has an article apologizing for the blunder by denouncing the Communists. And to prove how serious it takes things it sends a cable to Stalin, asking for confirmation or refutation of the alleged speech.

The circulation manager of the New Leader is advertising a few "scoops" as a reason why people should dig up a few dollars for a subscription. One of the "scoops" is a fake story of a fake split in the Anti-Fascisti Alliance of North America. The circulation manager was remiss in his duty. A better fake would be the Stalin story. But then that was not a "scoop." It was only a borrowed fable.

The Free Press

Control of the daily press in the big cities by direct ownership vested in capitalist hands is easily discernible to intelligent workers, but the method of control of the suburban and rural press is less obvious. One of the methods by which it is kept in line with powerful capitalist interests has just come to our attention.

The Illinois Press Association is to hold its annual meeting at the University of Illinois beginning September 30.

The enterprising secretary sends out the following information to all editors and publishers in the state:

Those who would like to do so can write to the railroads for transportation the same as they done in the past. In other words, you go to the ticket agent and buy your ticket, take a receipt for the money paid for this ticket, send the receipt to the railroad company passing thru your city and THEY WILL GIVE YOU ENOUGH ADVERTISING TO PAY FOR THE AMOUNT OF THE TICKET. THIS APPLIES TO YOURSELF, ALL MEMBERS OF YOUR FAMILY AND ANY MEMBERS OF YOUR NEWSPAPER STAFF. THE NUMBER IS NOT LIMITED. If you want to take advantage of this plan of attending the meeting, I suggest you write a letter to the railroad company immediately so they can be preparing the advertising.

The emphasis is ours. Here is plain and open bribery of the press arranged so as to evade the laws which prohibit the issuance of passes by railroads to others than their employes.

When the railroads have some particularly brazen demands they wish to put across they can be sure of sympathetic comment by the editors and publishers who have accepted their hospitality.

Advertising pays.

Hurrah for the free and untrammeled American press!

"We are slowly reaching the bottom of the pit that was dug for humanity in that crude and cruel act, the defation of 1920" declared John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor in a Labor Day message. Walker hit the bottom long ago, but he burst thru the floor when he supported Frank L. Smith in the last primary contest.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

By N. BUCHARIN.

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Bucharin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

THE fourth thesis, finally, advanced by the comrades of the opposition, is the assertion that our state organs are almost completely degenerated, that they have become entirely detached from the masses, and that the state, economic, trade union, and co-operative organs, as also the party organs and above all the state economic organs, are joining forces with the N. E. P. men, the kulaks (rich peasantry), etc. To this I must observe: It is true that thru the fault of our bureaucracy there is a tendency to such degeneration among us; this cannot be contested. But we must contest with the utmost decision and energy the suggestion that our state industry is already degenerated, that it no longer represents the industry of the working class. This is an assertion towards which the oppositional comrades are steering, and they have very nearly ventured to express it outright.

OUR industry is the state socialist industry of the working class, but it has fallen a victim to the bureaucratic spirit. This is our definition. The fight against bureaucracy must therefore form one of our leading tasks, and here we must unfold our increasing energy. But still we are very far from a position which would justify the comrades of the opposition in advancing such a thesis.

The Peasantry Question.

THIS is how matters stand with regard to the first problem—the problem of economic policy in its relation to the industrialisation of our country. I now pass to the second problem, one of most decisive importance: to the problem of the peasantry, and to the economic aspect of this problem.

When we attack this question first from its theoretical side, one point stands forth conspicuously, and I draw your attention to it because it represents, so to speak, the springboard from which the "New Opposition" takes its leap when solving this or that question in connection with the peasantry. This is the manner in which private capital and peasantry are identified with one another, and agricultural economics confused with capitalist economics. Private economics are regarded as identical with private capitalist economics, and there is a lack of comprehension of the fact that there can be such a thing as non-capitalist private undertakings. The discussion at the XIV. Party Congress dealt with all this, but it has not been so completely formulated until now.

I MUST first of all draw your attention to a theoretical compilation of all oppositional proposals, ideas assertions, theses, etc., to Comrade Preobrashensky's book, "On the New Economy." Here the economics of our country are regarded as follows: On one side we have state economics on the other private economics, and nothing besides. Private capitalist economics, the economics of the small peasantry, and every kind of private economic undertaking—among the poor peasantry, the middle peasantry, etc.—are all thrown together.

IT need scarcely be emphasized that this standpoint is entirely wrong. When Lenin asked, "Who is going to defeat whom?" we the capitalists or the capitalists us, he put the question from the viewpoint of: Who is going to win over the peasantry? Shall we win over the main mass of the peasantry, or will the capitalists do it? In Lenin's conception the peasantry played chiefly the role of an object subject to the influence of the opposing class forces. And when we put the question of "Who is going to defeat whom?" the answer will be essentially decided by the question of who succeeds in drawing over the peasantry to his side, for the struggle between the working class and the capitalist is a struggle for the peasantry. It is thus entirely absurd and flatly contradicts Lenin's standpoint, when private capitalist economics are identified with agricultural economics in all their various strata.

THIS brings us to the second question of this series of peasantry problems: the question of "pumping over" means from agricultural sources, and from private economic undertakings, into industry and into state economics. This is no simple question. It is perfectly clear that our state industry cannot obtain the means for its expansion solely from the work done by the working class within this state industry itself, and that it must necessarily draw on the non-industrial reservoir for the means to support and expand industry. One of the resources upon which we must draw, is the peasantry. The peasantry must take its share in helping the state to build up a socialist state of industry, and thus the tax revenues, the industrial profits on the goods which we sell to the peasantry, and other various revenues, are drawn to a certain extent from the peasantry.

I WOULD be entirely wrong to say industry should develop solely upon what is produced within this industry itself. On the contrary, the whole question is: How much can we take away from the peasantry, to what extent and by what methods can we accomplish the pumping over process, what are the limits of the pumping over, and how shall we calculate in order to arrive at favorable results? This is the question. Here lies the difference between us and the opposition, a difference which may be defined by saying that the comrades of the opposition are in favor of an immoderate amount of pumping over, and are desirous of putting so severe a pressure upon the peasantry that in our opinion the result would be economically irrational and politically unallowable. We do not in the least hold the standpoint that we are against this pumping over, but our calculations are more sober, we confine ourselves to measures economically and politically adapted to their purpose.

Resolutions Adopted by I. L. D. Conference

Resolution on the Right of Asylum in the United States.

THE seizure by government officials of a number of Italian workers who fled from terror and persecution in fascist Italy to the United States in the hope of finding the asylum for political refugees which has been traditional in this country for many decades, and the threat made by the government of this country, as well as the action already taken in a few cases, to deport these Italian workers, must be immediately challenged by American labor.

These refugees have fled Italy because of the incredible reign of terror that exists against any genuine labor movement or labor activities in that country. The elementary right of organization into labor unions or other working-class economic or political organizations is today suppressed in Italy. Those courageous workers who dare to lead in the work of re-building the labor movement so savagely crushed by the Mussolini dictatorship are the special objects of fascist vengeance, torture and imprisonment. In many cases this persecution becomes so intolerable that workers are forced to leave the country in order to save themselves from death or life imprisonment.

AMERICA has for a long time been considered a safe haven for those who have sought to escape the ferocious regimes of European capitalism. Of late the international solidarity of the American capitalists has been expressed in a policy of deporting all those radical workers who come to this country under the impression that they would find here more tolerable conditions. The great majority of these foreign-born workers have been in the forefront of the work of building up a strong, solidified labor movement in this country.

THE second annual conference of International Labor Defense therefore protests vigorously against the policy of the United States government in deporting these Italian workers to Italy, which amounts to delivering them bound and shackled to the hangman of Mussolini, and demands that these workers shall not be deported but promptly released and permitted to continue their work in the labor movement of this country. We express our energetic opposition to the policy of the American government in doing lackey work for Mussolini, whose bloody rule has been renounced by labor in all parts of the world.

There Are 11,000 Millionaires In the United States!

ELEVEN thousand people hold the wealth of a million dollars or more and every penny has been coined from the toil of labor. In the present financial need of THE DAILY WORKER they will not help. They own the thousands of newspapers that HELP THEM. In every strike and in every movement of militant labor they fight. They poison the minds of the working class. They oppose the progress of labor only to add to the wealth of eleven thousand millionaires.

Against the thousands of newspapers fighting the workers The DAILY WORKER is the only American English daily fighting for them. For three years it has given its invaluable service to the working class.

Now it needs financial help.

EXPOSE POLICE PLOT ON STRIKERS

Labor Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

NO doubt the readers of The DAILY WORKER will welcome a rest from my exhortations for a day. And here comes the relief. A laborer in the proletarian vineyard who attended the Streator convention thought he would throw me off the MacPherson case for a while and lead this column on the road to higher and better things. As a thesis on the Streator convention I recommend it to research workers and others who are compelled to explain current phenomena:

• • •

IT really is too bad you didn't attend the Illinois State Federation of Labor convention. You see I feel that intellectuals like US need a close contact with the aims and aspirations of labor and see as often as we can at close range its devotion to the cause of the world's masses. I think we need to be stimulated now and then to spur us on in this noble struggle with labor's banner afloat. And since you could not be there, let me pass on to you a few impressions. Second-handed as they may be, perhaps you can catch the inspiration anyhow.

• • •

POOR Mr. Olander and Mr. Walker certainly are wasting away to a mere 200 pounds each in their terrific struggle for labor. It is certain that the rank and file of delegates do not fully appreciate the devotion of these two stalwart leaders—since they only increased their salary $1,500 this year of prosperity. How they will manage on their wages of $6,500 I shudder to think. Of course there is their expense accounts but they only take care of the cost of their living. The one thing, however, that pleased me most was that the announcement of the salary increase was the only occasion for a genuine outburst of applause throughout the whole convention. So in their own way, you see, the delegates really do want the right thing done.

• • •

AND the way the leadership came to the rescue of humanity and our sacred institutions in a combat with Communism was most encouraging. Would you believe that there were actually two delegates there who admitted Communist affiliation or at least an obvious sympathy with it? But the way they were put in their place by the heads of labor was a most inspiring indication of the future of labor under their stewardship.

• • •

I THINK Mr. Walker's report is a masterpiece also. Such a scholarly discourse on the most interesting subjects. All about education and our public libraries and other heavy subject matter not to mention a most interesting correspondence between Mr. Welker and Senator Caraway who it seems entertained a most erroneous idea that had to do with our labor leaders accepting money from the discredited Mr. Smith. Really I thing Mr. Walker is quite right, it is preposterous that our congressmen are permitted to make such ridiculous statements. Naturally it must detract our leaders from their heavy work of organizing the workers into trade unions.

• • •

AND about organizing. The convention handled that subject with the most thorfui fact. Really the subject was hardly mentioned. Of course it will be obvious to you that the omission was nearly a trick—not to inform the enemy of our plans. The truth is that there was hardly any sign attached to the convention in any way that would indicate it to be a labor meeting. Which believe me is some fact. The whole thing was done so cleverly that I heard seasoned newspaper men say it was quite impossible to make a distinction between this convention and a convention of the chamber of commerce. Now isn't that putting it over in great style. You certainly have to hand it to our leaders.

NOW as regards this man Brennan. It seems to be that labor should support him in the coming election. He was the kindest thing and most thoiful. I mean as regards the convention. He had a headquarters, in Ottawa. A city 18 miles away from Streator. He was very useful to our leaders. He gave them considerable help and co-operation in running the convention. And not only that but he furnished refreshments as well. The legislative committees and quite a few of your Chicago leaders hardly had to spend a cent for whisky. Mr. Brennan kept them quite cock-eyed all the time and they had a very good time. It was quite fortunate that this was so else who knows but what that whole political question would have been discussed on the convention

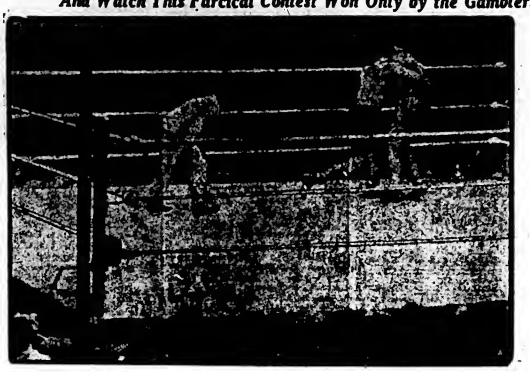
25,000 Workers Attend Anti-Injunction Meet

132,000 People Paid $2,000,000 to Sit in a Drenching Rain And Watch This Farcical Contest Won Only by the Gamblers



Here is a ringside photo of the "big fight" transmitted over the wire by telaplx. It shows Tunney hugging the weakened Dempsey. In one of the ten rounds during which neither man was off his feet. Tunney easily won the decision. But the ones who really cleaned up were the promoters and the gamblers who switched bets to Tunney at the last minute.

CANTON ARMIES BESIEGING THE CITY OF WUCHANG

Movement for Break with Britain Is Growing

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, Sept. 24 — The city of Wu Chang, still in the hands of Wu Pei Fu is closely invested by the Cantonese who hope to force surrender by siege, parleys having failed.

The anti-British movement is growing and sentiment is developing for a complete rupture of economic relations between China and the empire.

Political sections are now organized in the armies of the Kuomintchun and the Kommintang to consolidate the nationed forces and educate the personnel of the armies. General Fung has been appointed the Kommintang representative of the national armies.

Cantonese Near Shanghai.

The Cantonese troops are now within 260 miles of Shantung. As the provinces of Fukien and Chekiang were preparing to walk into the Cantonese camp, bringing their artillery with them, the imperialist powers show real alarm and are mobilising available war vessels on the Chinese coast.

Great Britain is rushing war craft from far flung possessions to Chinese waters. There are well-authenticated reports that Japan is in no mood to come to Britain's assistance and the United States is playing possum.

Eight units of Britain's Medterranean fleet, guarding the road to India are today lounging the Red Sea on the way to the Orient.

Chuen is Herd Pressed.

Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, commanding the lower Yangtse area, is looking for a quiet place to run to. Chuan-fang, is the only "white hope" of imperialism now left in this part of China and it is not believed that his 30,000 mercenaries will be able to hold forth against the conquering Cantonese.

The revolutionary elements in Shanghai are preparing a big celebration for the "army of liberation" as they call the Cantonese. Recently the workers of Shanghai went on a general strike against the imperialists, asked for a loan of $250,000 from the Cantonese government and got it.

Marshal Chang Tso-lin is throwing up earthworks around Peking, with one eye to the advance of General Feng, from Kaigen and another on the southern armies. Cheng is chopping off heads of mutinous soldiers and it is believed here that either of the two national armies come within gunshot of Chang's troops they will walk out on him.

British Government Worried.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Nothing less than consternation prevails in government circles over the situation in China. The cotton interests have been bringing pressure to bear on the government for more vigorous action. British trade in China has been hit hard by the boycott. Textiles suffered particularly.

The British claim to have information that Japan is preparing for war. This intelligence is however, believed to be for American consumption, with the object of getting the United States into loggerheads with Tokio and forcing the latter into common action with Britain or else indicting the United States to back up Britain against China.

U. S. ADMIRAL ACTS AS FORCED ARBITER IN NICARAGUAN WAR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.— The government and revolutionary forces of Nicaragua yesterday signed a 15-day armistice in order to negotiate peace terms, Rear Admiral J. T. Latimer reported to the navy department today.

All disputes will be subject to arbitration by Latimer, who was sent to Bluefields to act as peacemaker. Hostilities in Nicaragua ceased when the armistice was signed.

Jack Lait Says Gamblers Won Philly Bout

Jack Lait, famous sport writer, sizes up the Philadelphia bonanza battle in the accompanying article written for The DAILY WORKER, a few revealing sentences of which are:

"It took no sharpshooter to call the turn. It required no referee or meticulously chosen judges. Before Jack Dempsey, the killer of old, had dragged his listless and lifeless carcass half way across the soggy ring at the clang of the opening gong, it was a foregone cinch. The man was unfit to fight."

And of Tunney: "The first good heavyweight that meets Tunney will beat him. Munn, Hanson, Persson—not to any Willis—would swallow him like an oyster."

"Anyway, the bookies paid off on him."

• • • • •

By JACK LAIT, Special Ringside Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—The shell of what was once a great champion has paid that toll which the proverb says must be served to youth. Jack Dempsey, who, at his worst can always tell his children's children that he once was a champion, lost like a dog in the sesqui-centennial stadium Thursday to one Gene Tunney, who, tho he is the champion, will never be a champion.

The heavyweight title, proudly owned by Sullivan, Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Jeffries, has indeed fallen into a low estate in the stewardship of the intellectual Tunney. At least three men fought in the preliminaries who could lick him the best day of his life, which is today.

INVOKES RIGHT OF REFUGE FOR FASCIST PREY

Vacirca Faces Death If Deported

By LAURENCE TODD, Fed. Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—(FP)—Vincenzo Vacirca, former deputy in the Italian parliament and friend and associate of the murdered deputy Matteoti in the editorship of a newspaper in Italy, has invoked the right of refuge in free America.

Ordered deported from New York because his temporary permit to visit the country has expired, Vacirca has appeared with counsel before the board of review of the immigration bureau in Washington and has shown that he is now a man without citizenship in his native land and likely to be murdered by the fascisti at the orders of Mussolini if he is sent back there.

His own statement of his situation is:

Citizen of No Country.

"I have no legal right to go anywhere as I do not belong to any country. The United States is considered by me as my second country. My children, two girls 9 and 10 years old respectively, are native American citizens. In the name of the right that any man has to live somewhere, I ask to be granted the privilege to stay here with my wife and children until a change will eliminate the present persecutions and a new government will restore my rights as an Italian citizen."

In the Official Gazette of the Italian government, of April 7, 1926 is

Report Many Dead in Race Riot in Miami

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MIAMI, Sept. 24. — At 1:45 o'clock this afternoon, all police and details of militiamen were rushing to the Negro section of Miami, where a race war was reported to have broken out.

More than 20,000 Negroes live in the section where the trouble was reported. A cordon of police and militiamen was thrown around the northwest section of the city. Authorities declined to reveal the cause of the reported outbreak.

Police later reported that two sailors, detailed here on special service, had been shot and wounded during the disturbance, having entered the Negro section in violation of restrictions.

At two o'clock the situation was officially reported well in hand, but other unconfirmed advices stated many were killed.

Charge Department of Justice Involved

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 24.—Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti have made their final motion for a new trial. Hearing of affidavits and arguments on the motion occurred before original Trial Judge Webster Thayer at Dedham courthouse. The judge now has the case under advisement.

Department of Justice Disclosures.

Besides the confession and supporting evidence implicating the Morellis as the real criminals, the most startling disclosures of the defense were contained in affidavits of former department of justice agents. Fred J. Weyand, now working for Maine's attorney-general, and Lawrence Letherman, employed by Bascon Trust Co., both swear that department of justice agents took an important part in framing up Sacco and Vanzetti on the murder charge because they could not get sufficient evidence against these two Italian workers as radicals to deport them.

Weyand insists that the Boston office of the department of justice has files of correspondence between the then district attorney, Frederick G. Katzmann, and William J. West, federal agent, regarding the Sacco-Vanzetti frame-up. Katzmann was chief prosecutor of the two Italians. He entered no denial of the federal agents' charge. His assistant, Harold Williams, is now United States district attorney, but has made no move to have the Boston files opened to prove

600 STRIKERS ARRESTED ON WAY TO HALL

United Fight Pledged; Amalgamation Urged

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 24. — Twenty-five thousand striking cloakmakers and other workers jammed New Madison Square Garden to show their opposition to the latest attempt of the bosses to smash the cloakmakers strike by means of an injunction and adopt a defiant resolution pledging themselves to united struggle against it.

600 workers were arrested on their way to the meeting, 400 were nabbed in one clip at 7th Ave. and 30th St. They were strikers who had been meeting in Webster Hall, 11th St. and Third Ave.

Speaker after speaker urged the 40,000 striking cloakmakers to stand solid and continue their struggle in spite of the menace adopted by the bosses to smash the strike.

Zimmermen Opens.

Charles S. Zimmerman the chairman, in opening the meeting declared: "We are on strike for twelve weeks and declare today that we will not accept forced arbitration. Only the cloakmakers themselves can improve their conditions."

Zimmerman read a note from five cloakmakers in the tombs prison which read: "Will meet you on the picket line on our release. No sentence will prevent us from fighting for our rights."

Schlosberg Wants Amalgamation.

Joseph Schlosberg, general secretary of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' of America, said in part:

"Greetings and congratulations from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers! Fellow workers are out to win. If the bosses think injunction will help them to win they have not learned anything from the history of past strikes.

Elect Labor Judges.

"I look forward to the day when all organised workers in the needle trades who find themselves in the same boat as far as the bosses are concerned will unite themselves into one big body of needle trades workers, thousands strong to take up their collective problems and deal with them collectively and when that day comes, and I hope it comes before long, we will fight together on the industrial and the political field. Then we will elect labor judges instead of bosses' judges."

Girl Workers Are Militant.

Gold Workers are out to win. If the bosses think injunction will help them to win they have not learned anything from the history of past strikes.

Ben Gold, manager of the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, who recently lead the successful strike of 12,000 furriers in New York City said, "If the Amalgamated leaders are so sincere in their statements let the cloakmakers give a call for a general strike and then we will see who will be the first ones to come out. We, the furriers will be the first ones to answer."

KEEP IT AND BUILD IT!

By ARNE SWABECK.

OUR DAILY WORKER has lately shown signs of marked improvement. It has assumed more of the character of a mass labor paper. It's importance can perhaps now not fully be recognised by its supporters and sympathizers. However, should it fail, the rejoicing in the enemy's camp would strike this fact home with terrible effect.

Yet as long as the importance of our Daily Paper is properly appreciated, it will succeed, it will strengthen itself and it will grow in influence. The improvement of our DAILY is there. The next step is for the supporters to take it up and build.

The DAILY WORKER is becoming the center of the movement which expresses militancy in the class struggle. The American labor movement itself has a militant tradition. There are signs that this tradition will reawaken and then The DAILY WORKER will fully come into its own.

No other place in the country does a paper appear in the English language consistently taking the position of fighting for all the interests of the rank and file workers. To those who are bitterly exploited in the shops of the heavy industries and today remain unorganized, as well as those who have enrolled in the ranks of the trade unions, The DAILY WORKER can become much more of a center when it is brought to the attention of all those workers that it is the only paper that expresses their desires and fights for their needs.

All the workers who are now acquainted with THE DAILY WORKER, should more then in the past submit their grievances thru the columns of the Daily, express their aspirations and let it become a center not only for the movement in general, but also of their struggles in their particular shops. That means to contribute to its columns, to order bundles to distribute amongst the workers and so gradually extend the circles around the center established. Proceeding this way, we will not only keep The DAILY WORKER, but we will build it. This is our most important and most pressing task.

PASSAIC POLICE FRAME UP ON U. T. W. LEADERS

Arrest and Torture Strike Officials

(Local 1, U. T. W., Press Service)

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 24. — Accusing the police in the strike area of starting another reign of terror in their efforts to break the big textile strike, the strike committee of Passaic Local No. 1603, U. T. W. of A., issued the following statement today:

"This morning the police effort was concentrated against our leaders. That the police are using the arrest of a non-striker charged with throwing bombs, and the third degree confession extorted from him in their renewed efforts to break the strike is proven by the unwarranted arrests this morning of Gustav Beck, chairman of the strike committee of the local, and officers connected with the leadership of the strike.

"Yesterday the police arrested three picket line leaders: Joseph Bellani, Tom Regon and Tom Winick. These men were brutally beaten up before and after they were handled into the patrol wagon. Bellani was later charged with being implicated in the third degree confession wrung from the non-striker arrested yesterday morning on the charge of having thrown a bomb in Clifton.

"Teddy Timochko, a 17-year old striker was beaten up this morning.

Beat Woman.—Frame Strikers.

"Monday morning Peter Idex, of 73 Hope Avenue, Passaic, while on his way to the picket line was assaulted and beaten up by Special Officer Miller and Officer Zober, the son of Police Chief Zoher.

"On the same day Garfield police beat up Anani Soyko, 116 Ray Street, Garfield. When she was released her arms and legs were blue and swollen from the beating she received.

"Peter Maksomz, 146 Ray Street, Garfield, was arrested and beaten up Saturday while standing on the corner of Morris and Jewell Street, Garfield. The police held him on the "identification" of one girl and beat him up again at the station.

"In each case, the arrested strikers were threatened with further beatings unless they went back to work.

"The union strenuously protests these police efforts to frame the strike leaders and break our strike. The union emphatically denies that any of its members had any part whatsoever in the bomb outrage. All impartial observers and investigators are agreed that the violence in the strike has been on the part of the police.

While the mother heads her band of women fighters, her son is in charge of another group of rebels fighting in the mountains near Baalbek.

EW RULINGS IN DISTRICT 1 AID OPERATORS

Cappelini's Sham Battle with Bosses

ARTICLE THREE

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 23.—The experience of the miners of District 1, under the Cappellini regime shows that there is more than one way of breaking down the working candidness.

In some instances, officials simply refuse or neglect to take up and fight violations of the agreement. The companies then are able, thru establishing precedents, to continue contract violations such as refusal to pay for rock work, timbering, etc.

But the operators also can be favorable and miners' conditions made worse, productions increased without additional pay, by TAKING UP CERTAIN CASES. All previous officials of District 1 have carefully refrained from trying to secure decisions on restrictions of output by the mines, knowing that no contract ever negotiated has contained a clause allowing this, and believing, quite correctly, that any attempt to argue such cases would result in a decision against the union.

"Restriction of Output."

But one of Pres. Cappellini's first moves dealt with restriction of output. He lost the case—as he doubtless expected he would and the speed-up system of the operators is bulwarked now by a legal conference decision.

Another case which brought a defeat and a much greater demand upon the coal diggers, because of Cappellini's policy, was that dealing with "topping" (the technical term for coal piled up above the side boards of the car). In this case, President Cappellini made an issue of the demands of the company for six inch topping, written into the agreement in cold type, and, of course, was beaten, and had another precedent established which the operators now take the fullest advantage of.

More Coal For Operators.

What this means to the miners is easily understood when it is known that in order to have six inches of topping on a car at the breaker it is necessary to load from 12 to 24 inches of topping at the face due to the loss in transit.

The miners therefore, are loading from one-half to one ton more per car than they were before Cappellini "fought" these cases. As we said in the beginning there is more than one way of aiding the operators. It can be done just as well in some instances by taking up cases, as by neglecting them. Cappellini's policy seems to embody both of these features.

Willis Grabs Advantage.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—(FP) — Because organized labor has declared that it will make a fight against his democratic opponent, former Senator Pomerene, Senator Willis of Ohio announced at the White House that his re-election will be an endorsement of Coolidge by the voters of Ohio.

The committee requests that all sympathetic organizations make no conflicting arrangements for that date.

Condylis Withdraws from the Leadership of Greek Government

ATHENS, Sept. 24. — Gen. Condylis, today announced his withdrawal from the premiership. He will be a candidate in the nearing parliamentary elections.

It is believed here that Gen. Condylis desires to remain free to watch over the defense of the republican regime in case it is menaced by the hopes of the monarchists, and also to be able to defend the system of proportional representation. The majority of his cabinet will not take part in the elections, so the ministry now simply becomes a business cabinet.

Gen. Condylis said today: "I repeat my former declaration that in case of the restoration of the monarchy all

N. J. REVEREND SCORES BOSSES' STRIKE ACTIONS

Assails Brutality of Passaic Police

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 24.—Declaring that there are two Passaics, one clean, tree-lined, with luxurious homes; the other dirty, with narrow streets, dark, miserable homes, the Rev. Norman W. Pendleton, pastor of the Rutherford congregational church, Rutherford, in his sermon last evening scored the mill owners for their cold-hearted attitude towards their workers and criticised the protestant churches for the unworthy part they have played in the big strike.

Assails Police.

Rev. Pendleton told his congregation he had seen with his own eyes in his unnecessary brutality of the police and had watched the strikers peacefully picketing the mills:

"I have watched the strikers march, at a snail's pace, along the sidewalks; many of them boys and girls, singing their songs of 'Brotherhood and Solidarity,' harmless as a Sunday school picnic.

Saw Brutality.

"I have watched the unnecessary brutality of uniformed officials. I listened to the Rev. John Hayes Holmes make an eloquent plea for the triumph of true Americanism and the vindication of constitutional rights, and saw a nervous sheriff lose self-control and make himself foolish. And there it all I have marvelled at the power of these people to hold themselves in, to hold their peace, when it would seem that there was almost evident purpose to drive them to violence."

INVOKES RIGHT OF REFUGE FOR FASCIST PREY

published a solemn decree signed by King Victor Emmanuel and Mussolini and Federsoni, denouncing Vacirca as a defamer and slanderer of Italy and the existing government, and as conducting "poisonous propaganda among the working classes, in particular among our colonies of emigrants against the institutions of which Mussolini is the head.

It describes Vacirca as a "resident in New York," and declares inflicted upon him the loss of his Italian citizenship and the confiscation of his property in Italy.

Mussolini's Brother Incites Murder.

With the original copy of this decree Vacirca presented to the board an editorial published by the "Press D' Italia," a fascist organ founded by Mussolini and, edited by his brother, inciting the fascisti to hang Vacirca to a lamp post as a traitor because of his anti-fascist activities in Switzerland and the United States.

The language used in denouncing the socialist deputy in this Mussolini editorial is too vile for translation into English. It was after similar denunciations of Matteoti and the liberal editor, Amendola, had been published in the fascist press that these two leaders were deliberately murdered.

Vacirca's History.

Vacirca filed with the review board a statement of his struggle for Italian liberty. Born in Italy 40 years ago he lived in the United States from 1912 to 1919, marrying here in 1915. On his return to Italy in 1919 he was immediately elected to parliament for the Bologna district and two years later from the Siracusa district. He held various local offices also.

In 1921 the fascisti began their attempts to kill him. In four towns they shot at him and on one occasion killed some of his friends. His house was ransacked, his wife beaten, and they were soon ordered to leave the town under pain of death. In Riscusa, Catania, Bologna, Cassena and other cities he was pursued, menaced and insulted and compelled to flee.

When in January, 1924, he asked for a passport for himself and wife Mussolini personally refused ot, and they escaped to Switzerland without passports. The American consul in Zurich gave them temporary papers of identification, and Vacirca came to New York in May, 1925. His family joined him later. He has lectured and edited the anti-fascist daily "Nuovo Mundo" in New York City.

Since he has no passport and no citizenship, the Italian socialist deputy cannot travel. If deported by the United States to Switzerland, the Swiss may surrender him to Mussolini to be murdered by the dictator's followers.

Decision by the board of review may be made within a week. Meanwhile the case assumes an importance greater than any which has arisen since America's public opinion prevented Elihu Root from surrendering to the czar's hangmen the refugees Rudovits and Poures, 30 years ago.

HEARST DRIVER DELIVERS SHORT, SNAPPY SPEECH

When He Quit Talking Newsie Quit Selling

"If I catch you selling papers between eight o'clock and the time the bulldog shows up, you don't get any more 'Americans.'"

This monologue took place at the corner of Halsted and Madison streets at six o'clock in the evening Dempsey and Tunney caressed each other for the ten rounds. The author of the speaking part was a short, wiry fellow with a red sweater.

He was a driver for the Hearst Evening American and the butt of his remarks was a meek newspaper vendor who expected a landoffice business calling pedestrians into reading "all about the big fight," in expectation of big business the impresario of the newsstand called opt his whole family.

Newsie Kept His Head.

"This goes for Daily News and everything else" the red sweatered fellow continued, whhont any attempt at diplomacy. A big pile of Daily News almost brought tears from the newsmonger's eyes, but he thot it better to lose a few dollars in profits than lose a week in bed so he agreed to accept the ukimatum.

Thinking it peculiar that a driver should be clothed with such dictatorial powers, The DAILY WORKER reporter sprooched the humble newsvendor, after the driver was at a safe distance and inquired whether the wiry lad was Benito Mussolini in disguise.

A sickly laugh was the reply.

It appears that something went wrong with the Hearst service on the bout and that this was the method to secure things with their competitors.

For the benefit of uninitiated the "bulldog" mentioned in the first paragraph is the first edition of the morning.

Curious way to build up circulation!

And is it surprising that you don't see The DAILY WORKER on all newsstands?

JACK LAIT SAYS GAMBLERS WON DEMPSEY-TUNNEY FIGHT IN PHILLY

The lamb slaw the butcher, yes. But it was an active, vigorous lamb and weary, sagging old butcher who showed that once was famous for its perfect delineation of the fighting man, a careworn and tortured expression.

"Experts" Off.

The "experts" who said that Dempsey was in the pink of fighting condition should wash their mouths with soap. This veteran reporter, who has taken in every important boxing match of his period, and that ranges back a few years, has never seen a carrier-defender of a title since that pitiful afternoon in Reno, when Jim Jeffries staggered forth to do battle with Johnson.

Dempsey Unfit.

It took no sharpshooter to call the turn. It required no referee or meticulously chosen judges. Before Jack Dempsey, the killer of old, had dragged his listless and lifeless carcass half way across the soggy ring at the clang of the opening gong, it was a foregone cinch. The man was unfit to fight. No contender in history ever got the break that Tunney did—weighing 185 pounds, a defensive boxer, a so-so hitter and a 3-to-1 outsider, matching the champion of champions in such a situation and coming out the monarch of pugilism.

The whole business was off key. Fancy a heavyweight king, who drew 132,000 people and $2,000,000 never being introduced, and the alleged aspirant not even rising to take a bow when his name was called.

It Was Raining.

It was raining. Tex Rickard had taken his pitcher to the well once too often. He had put on seemingly endless preliminaries, meaningless combats between unimportant nobodys, until far after nine-thirty. And by the time Dempsey and Tunney got into the ring, it was pouring so that no one cared much about anything. Then they started taping—yards and yards of gauze they wound about the hands of the supposedly two best gladiators in the whole world.

And when it finally started, it was wetter than ever. Dempsey, that notorious-devastating master, shuffled out of his corner with the look of a school boy caught playing hookey—as indeed, he had, for more than two years.

Tunney Nervous.

Tunney was as nervous as a bride, sparring, backing, hoxing until it dawned on him that he was roped in with a phantom, a shadow without substance.

Even then he never assumed the aggressive, except in the last two rounds, when he had the championship in his hand and should have taken no chances.

An astoundingly stupid fighter is this Tunney. He won every round from what had been a truly miraculous champion, and yet he came forth convicted of almost every misdemeanor under boxing commitment rules. He could have knocked Dempsey out in the first round if he had forced his way; he should have dispatched him in any of the following rounds. But, when he had the world to gain he was careful, and when he was already champion before the decision that made him so, he was undecided, now forcing it, again taking to his heels.

Dempsey Green.

Dempsey was a pathetic spectacle. He started with his face green. Set in a silly grin. He tried to put on the snarl of the murderer, but his features wouldn't respond because his heart wasn't in it. After he got a few cracks to his jaw, he folded up as he did in the first eleven rounds of his match with the late Bill Brennan.

Spitting gobs of blood, his left eye closed tight, his right cut and bleeding from a ragged wound, he bobbed and crouched and missed and swung and pulled and tried to look ferocious. Like a grotesque, synthetic thing, his tailor-made nose stood forth in the middle of the face like some fantastic butterfly that had fluttered into a slaughter-house.

Missed A Mile.

Tunney, a second-class defensive boxer, couldn't stay away from him. Dempsey kept leading, following, swinging in and missing a mile, and Tunney had to strike at him through a sense of shame. It would have been a sin not to hit him under the circumstances.

Dempsey scarcely laid a glove on Tunney. The few times that he did connect, always at the start of a round, those blows which of old were enough to send the crowd home were steamless, spiritless and stingless. No power, no heart, no soul in them. Dempsey may have entered the ring with an honest desire and intention to win, but it failed him after the first counter punch that nailed him on his nice new nose.

Dempsey Weak.

After that he stalled, with an occasional sporadic flurry of going through the geetures of fighting.

The whole tragedy just showed again that being a champion spells a good fighter, and keeping out of the ring kills a champion.

Dempsey never was much shucks against a fighter that kept moving, and Tunney did that—he kept moving, mostly backward but still kept moving. Jack loves them big, anchored and flat-footed. Tunney is none of these. He made a sucker out of poor Jack, being made to order for the job.

Bookies Won.

The first good Heavyweight that meets Tunney will beat him. At best he is one of the better lighter heavy men, no matter what his weight. Munn, Henson, Parason—not to say Wills—would swallow him like an oyster. And he is the heavyweight champion today.

ANYWAY, THE BOOKIES PAID OFF ON HIM.

N. J. UNIONISTS FIND PICKETING LAW DON'T HELP

WILDWOOD, N. J., Sept. 24.—The convention of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor defeated Henry F. Hilkers, its secretary for 17 years, replacing him with Hugh V. Reilly of the Newark machinists. Reilly gained his support from the carpenters, iron workers and the Hudson county delegation besides his own.

The legislative committee of the New Jersey state federation of labor was instructed by the Widwood convention to prepare a bill amending the 1918 law to provide for a 44-hour week for state, county and municipal work.

The committee likewise was instructed to take up the question of obtaining some effective legislation for peaceful picketing. The only picketing law that went into effect July 4, 1924, has proven a joker and of no advantage to New Jersey organized labor, although the unions backed the bill hoping for a gain against injunctions.

The convention endorsed Theodore M. Brandle's attack on the port of New York authority committee. Brandle, Hudson county union head, charged the port authority with favoring open shop employers with the contracts for certain building construction job). Ex-governor George S. Silzer is implicated in the deal by Brandle. Contracts amounting to $4,000,000 are involved.

The 48th annual New Jersey state federation of labor convention's endorsement was answer to Silzer's statement that Brandle was not backed by organized labor. Brandle said that the bidding was limited to firms unfair to labor and that "an examination of the bids had led interested parties to suspect there had been collusion among the bidders."

The superstructures for two bridges connecting Staten Island and New Jersey are the jobs concerned. All New Jersey building trades unions are particularly interested in "the fight for union labor on these public works.

63 Affidevits.

Sixty-three affidevits supported the defense motion; twenty-seven the state's opposition. The deposition of Celestino Madeiros, whose confession was the basis for the new trial motion, was read into the record, together with recent correspondence Thompson deemed essential to show his stand thruout the preparation of the case.

The Confession.

The main facts of Madeiros' confession were already known: that he and a gang identified in other affidavits as the Morellis of Providence, R. I., committed the South Braintree payroll robbery which resulted in the murder of the two guards, Berardelli and Parmenter. Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted of first degree murder for this crime and have spent over five years in the shadow of the electric chair while their friends have carrfad on a momentous battle for their lives.

Appealed to Butler.

Defense Counsel Thompson appealed to United States Attorney General Sargent, upon advice of Senator William M. Butler, for aid in securing access to the Boston department of justice files. Sargent did state even write an answer to Thompson's request, altho Thompson is a fellow republican and head of the Massachusett's bar grievance committee.

floor. It would have been most disagreeable and as it is—thanks to Mr. Brennan—nothing was said and now our great electorate can march to the polls and vote its mind.

OUR old friend Farley Christensen had some supporters there also. They were very naive. They felt sure that the convention should reverse its traditional policy and condemn both Smith and Brennan and endorse Farley himself. In view of all the money Mr. Insull has spent it would have been most ungrateful for Mr. Walker to have allowed this to happen. And, as I have said, with the able assistance of Mr. Brennan, it did not take place. And about our old side-kick, Farley. I saw him last night at the Morrison, and he had on trackers. I ask you what has labor in common with knickers. It seems to me that the Commonwealth Edison Co. and public utilities combine and the like are much nearer labor. I feel that the labor leaders are right.

BUT what I have said about our leaders cannot be said, I am sorry to put down, about the city of Streator. Its accommodations for the delegates was quite inadequate. There were dances and that sort of thing and liquor aplenty, but as one married man from Peoria said to me: "There isn't a decent whore in the town." It's no wonder the delegates voted to go to East St. Louis next year.

BUT on the whole the convention was a huge success. Not a boss in America could possibly be offended at what we did. They even kept that Farrington matter off the floor, too. And you know there were delegates there who thought a resolution should be passed condemning Farrington's action as a sort of threat to leaders in the future. And that, of course, would have been most disastrous. How are we going to attract real men to our movement if we deny them the opportunity to pass from our organizations into more highly paid professions. I am glad you are going to Detroit. I understand a similar performance is guaranteed there. Therefore I am sure you, too, will come away, as I have, with a great determination to carry on with—L A B O R.

Activization Units Are Party Builders

By ARNE SWABECK.

Following the successful conference held by the Workers (Communist) Party, District 8, on August 29th and to carry out effectively the plans laid down there, the Party Activization Group was organized two weeks ago. Good results of its work can already be noted.

During the month of September, although not yet past, the number of applications for membership in the party have almost doubled that of any previous month since the reorganization. Nuclei are showing signs of increased activities. Over $600 has been collected by the Activization Group for the party campaign, while the coal miners have responded splendidly to the new progressive movement developing thruout the union.

Starting out modestly, the group while its beginning with about 25 members participating. However, all pledged themselves to show a real example of activity and by their examples increase activities in the units. They were ready to take up any work assigned to them. The first began by sending party units, sit in at their meetings, take note of the needs of the unit and help along in the work explaining not only the purpose of our activities, but the methods.

The Activization Group proceeded on the theory of no matter what objective obstacles may exist. Communists never lose courage of the party, always engage in its campaign of struggles for better conditions of the workers. While the tempo and methods of our campaigns change accordingly to the existing objective conditions making rapid advances possible when labor actively engages in struggles, it likewise necessitates tightening and strengthening of the ranks in the party when labor is inactive and apathy prevails.

To attain the greatest possible results in our campaign to the immediate objective of the group: In other words, to establish uniform leadership in the active work. The work of the Activization Group is systematized. The members get a valuable training as organizers. They learn of the difficulties and short-comings of the units. The group is based on the principle of continual and gradual extension, to week by week draw in more and more comrades to this active circle until it nowly becomes a movement of mass activity extending itself to the nuclei, forming similar groups there and finally embrace the whole live section of the party and thus becomes transferred to the units themselves.

For the next meeting of the Activization Group, the members will bring in additional comrades. There are no limitations, all live party members are invited to participate. The next meeting will be held on October 5th at the Greek Hall, 765 W. Van Buren Street.

UNITED TEXTILE WORKERS MEET ELECTS McMAHON'S MACHINE BUT PASSES PROGRESSIVE MEASURES

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 24.—The convention of the United Textile Workers just closed elected the following officers: Thomas F. McMahon, President; John D. Starr, vice-president; Silas Corey, secretary-treasurer. Nine elected on the executive committee were: Tobias Dubnoff, of Philadelphia, John Hanley, George Sayer of Fairhaven, John Powers of Providence, John Campos of Fall River, Carl Holderman of Passaic, Alex McKown of Philadelphia, Joseph Bunak of Salem, Mass., and Joseph Plaza of Utica.

Support Willimantic.

In support of the heroic strikers of Willimantic, who have been out for 18 months, some 50 families living in a tent colony provided by the union, the convention authorized an appeal for relief the name as for Passaic.

Two Good Resolutions.

The convention adopted a resolution favoring amalgamation of the separate crafts to conform to the need for a more powerful union as industrial development necessitates. Also a resolution for the organization of the unorganized was adopted unanimously.

Secret Contract Helps Scab Mills.

Some delegates raised the question of the union's official organ running scab advertisements, but McMahon escaped with a poor excuse about the secret contract with the Passaic mills which he had lired up to. No vote of record was taken on this.

Machine Satisfied.

The whole tone of the convention was reactionary and the McMahon-Conboy machine feels that it is firmly entrenched as a result of the convention endorsing their policies. One change in the constitution aimed at the Communists, undoubtedly, was adopted in Section 8, Article 28, by adding a section to keep out "undesirables."

The next convention is scheduled to take place in New York on September 13, 1928, two years from now.

FIFTH AVENUE FASHION SHOPS TO SEE STRIKE

Tailors and Furriers Fight Rich Bosses

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 24.—The fashionable gentlemen of New York who buy their clothes in 20 leading tailoring establishments along Fifth avenue will for the first time see their tailors on strike next Monday unless an eleventh-hour settlement is made.

Bosses Will Fight.

Fifteen hundred members of the Journeymen Tailors' Union and the Furriers who work in the society shopping zone have failed in efforts to get the bosses of these high class custom tailoring houses to grant their demands. The bosses say they will fight the union to the limit. The contract expires Saturday and the strike will be on Monday.

Try to Organize Women.

Efforts are to be made by the union tailors to organize the girls and women dressmakers who work in the shops that furnish the silks, satins and fur creations to the fashionable capitalist society of New York. If this is done it will be the first time Fifth avenue has witnessed such a strike. The Tailors' Union tried to get union conditions for these unorganized workers, and this is one point on which the employers refused to negotiate.

Union Demands.

The demands of the union are for a 40-hour week, a 10 per cent wage increase, guarantee of 44 weeks of work during the year, a provision governing discharges and a limit of overtime to five hours a week.

The girls who do dressmaking get extremely low wages.

Rochester Labor in Effort for Passaic

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Leaders of the Rochester labor movement are members of a committee to assist in raising relief for the striking textile workers of Passaic, as the result of a meeting last night at Carpenters' Hall, No. 113 North Fitzhugh street. With over 400 representatives of labor organizations present, the following were elected to take charge of relief work:

Chairman, William A. Dennison, business agent of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union; secretary, Sol Horwitz; treasurer, Frank Harnett, business agent of the Plumbers' and Steamfitters' Union; executive committee, C. F. McNaughton; Frank Wilson, president of the Plasterers' and Bricklayers' Union; Edward Mc-Lyre; John Flynn, president of the Central Trades and Labor Council; Rev. L. R. Plank, Mrs. Esther Wehman and Miss Belle Rudin.

Election of the committee followed speeches by Ella Reeve Bloor, relief field organizer, and Tessie Burke and John Windish, two strikers from Passaic, who told of conditions in the mills and the wage cuts which precipitated the strike.

Florida Mail to Resume.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Mail service conditions in Florida will be normal within the next three days, Acting Postmaster General Bartlett today predicted after receipt of advices from postoffice inspectors in the

NEW BUILDING TRADES STRIKE IN CLEVELAND

Open Shop Movement on the Offensive

CLEVELAND, Sept. 24. — A new strike of the building workers is threatened in Cleveland. Six hundred and fifty building workers on the Ohio Bell Telephone building, comprising carpenters, electricians, iron workers, etc., have gone out on strike because the contractors sent four non-union painters to work on the job. There was nothing left for the unions to do but call the men off.

Big Open-Shop Drive.

This is not at all remarkable when one considers that the painters' and glaziers' strike, which was called off a few weeks ago, resulted in a complete fiasco for the men. The Citizens' Committee, which has been formed with a fund of $5,000,000 at their disposal to fight the union, is again functioning and believes that the situation is such that they can more more militantly against the building trades, which are the best organized in Cleveland.

This undoubtedly is preliminary to the preparations of the contractors, backed by the bankers and chamber of commerce, for the strike of the carpenters, which is bound to occur on May 1 next year, when the agreement terminates. The Citizens' Committee is bent upon destroying the union and believes that the present moment is the most opportune, since the unions showed no resistance when they established the fund to fight the unions.

Fight First, Laugh Afterwards.

To ridicule the Citizens' Committee and its fund may be the method of some of the building trades leaders, especially of Charles Smith, the business representative of the building trades, but it would be far better if these men would recognize facts and face them squarely and prepare to meet the assault of the bosses.

If these preparations are not made, when the carpenters make their demands with the threat of backing them up with a strike, the contractors, backed by the Citizens' Committee, the so-called "huhhle" of Charlie Smith will laugh them out of court.

TEACHERS FLAY DISMISSALS BY SCHOOL BOARD

Protest Meeting Will Be Held Next Week

In protest against the Chicago school board's retrenchment plan at the expense of the teachers, the staff of the Lindblom High School held a meeting to protest against the board's action in dismissing teachers, thus breaking an agreement.

An increase in Pupils.

The new policy of the school board calls for an increase from 33 to 35 pupils per teacher in the high schools. It is estimated that about 200 teachers will be hit by the new ruling.

A general mass meeting will be held a week from next Saturday, when a formal protest will be drawn up for presentation to the board and the teachers will secure an attorney to represent them.

Bayonne Labor Helps Passaic Strike Aid

BAYONNE, N. J., Sept. 24.—At a special meeting last night of the Ukrainian Workingmen's Association, Branch 167, it was decided to call a meeting of all Ukrainian societies of Bayonne and vicinity for the purpose of organizing strike relief for the 16,000 striking textile workers of Passaic.

John Melnick, labor leader, was elected to head the committee which was formed to make arrangements for the conference. The proposed conference will have as its sole purpose the finding of means to give financial and moral aid to the Passaic strikers, Melnick asserts in his appeal to the various Ukrainian organizations, pointing out that the Passaic strike and fight for better living conditions is the fight of the working class as a whole.

Bunny went back to Beach City, to face a trial of the same sort. Grandma did not cry out or faint, she just went up to her studio room and locked the door and did not appear, even for meals. When Bunny was ready to go, he went and knocked on the door, and Grandma let him into her laboratory of paints and oils and high art. Her face was drawn but grim, and only her withered red eyelids gave her away. "Little boy," she said—he was still that to her, he would never grow up—"little boy, you are a victim of the old men's crimes. That means nothing to you now, but remember it, and some day, long after I'm gone, you'll understand."

She kissed him without a sound, and he stole out, with tears running down his cheeks and feeling somehow as if he himself were committing a crime. He felt still more that way when, a week later, he received a telegram saying that Grandma Ross had been found dead in bed. He got a three day leave to come home and attend the funeral, and had to say his good-byes to the rest of the family all over again.

The training camp was located in the south, a place of blazing sunshine and vigorous perspiration. It was crowded with boys from every part of the state, mostly high school and college fellows, with a sprinkling of others who had got into the officer class by having military experience. The sons of grape-growers and orange and walnut and peach and prune growers, of cowmen and lumbermen and business and professional men in the cities—Bunny wanted to know what they were like, and what they thought about life and love and the war. He drilled until his back ached and he studied, much the same as at school; but he lived in a tent and ate ravenously and grew in all directions.

Now and then he would explore the country with a companion, but keeping himself out of the sex adventures that occupied most of the army's free time. Here was a place where no bones were made about plain talk; your superiors took it for granted that when you went out of the camp you went to look for a woman and they told you what to do when you came back, and had a treatment-station where you lined up with the other fellows and made jokes about where you had been and what it had cost you. Bunny knew enough to realize that the women in the neighborhood of this camp who were open to adventures must be pretty well debauched after a year, so he had little interest in their glances or the trim silk-stockinged ankles they displayed.

He had made application for the artillery, but they assigned him to study "military transporation," because of his knowledge of oil. He took this quite innocently, never realizing that Dad with his wide-spreading influence might have put in a word. Dad was quietly determined that Bunny was not going across the sea, no, not if this man's war lasted another ten years. Bunny was going to be among those who had charge of the army's supplies of gasoline and oil, seeing that the various products were up to standard and were efficiently and promptly shipped. Who could say—perhaps he might be among those who would have the job of working out contracts, and might be able now and then to put in a good word for Ross Consolidated.

The new deal was going through, and Dad wrote long letters telling of the progress—letters which Bunny was to return when he had studied them and not leave lying about in a tent. Also there were rumors in the papers and then more detailed accounts, designed to prepare the public for the launching of a huge enterprise. Late in the summer Bunny got a furlough and came home to get the latest news.

"Home" no longer meant Beach City; Dad had only been waiting till Bunny had got through with school, and now he had moved to another house. It was a palace in the fashionable part of Angel City, which he had leased through a real estate agent, for fifteen thousand a year. It was all pink stucco outside, with hedge plants trimmed to the shape of bells and balls like pawnbroker's signs. It had a wide veranda with awings hanging by brass chains and ferns planted in a row of huge sea shells and big plate glass windows that did not come open. Inside was furniture of a style called "mission oak," so heavy that you could hardly move it, but that was all right because Dad didn't want to move it, he would sit in any chair, wherever it happened to be, and the only place he expected comfort was in his den, where he had a huge old leather chair of his own and a store of cigars and map of the Paradise tract covering one whole wall. One thing more Dad had seen to, that Grandma's biggest paintings were hung in the dining-room, including the scandalous one of the Germans with their steins! The rest of the old lady's stuff, her easel and paints and a great stack of her lesser works, were boxed and stowed in the basement. Aunt Emma was now the mistress of the household, with Bertie as head critic when she was home.

On the desk in Dad's den was piled a stack of papers a foot high, relating to the new enterprise. He went over them one by one and explained the details. Ross Consolidated was going to be a seventy million dollar corporation and Dad was to have ten millions in bonds and preferred stock and another ten millions of common stock. Mr. Roscoe was to get the same for his Prospect Hill properties and those at Lobos River and the various bankers were to get five millions for their financing of the propect. The balance was to be a special class stock, twenty-five millions to be offered to the public, to finance the new development—one of the biggest refineries in the state and storage tanks and new pipe lines and a whole chain of service stations throughout Southern California. This stock was to be "non-voting," a wonderful new scheme which Dad explained to Bunny; the public was to put up its money and get a share for the profits, but have nothing to say as to how the company was run. "We'll have no bunch of boobs butting in on our affairs," said Dad; "and nobody can raid us on the market and take away control."

An Insurance Magnate on Unionism

The International Labor News Service favors us with a dispatch date-lined Montreal, purporting to be the gist of a speech delivered in that city by Haley Fiske, president of the powerful Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

Fiske was addressing the officers of the company stationed in Canada. The story does not tell us whether there were any agents present—those fellows who hike up-stairs and down, ring doorbells in the morning and far into the night, collect nickels, dimes and quarters and urging the population, as a sacred duty to take at least a little policy, just enough to bury them. Those poor fellows are poorly paid. They are entirely at the mercy of the superintendents. They have no union. As a matter of fact, the A. F. of L. refused to grant insurance agents a charter on the ground that they were not engaged in productive work.

The president of this billion dollar concern did not always believe in unionism. During the war there was considerable agitation for unionism among the agents in Massachusetts. Meetings were held and A. F. of L. organizers were appealed to for aid. Haley Fiske sent his son to Boston to discourage the agents from organizing and because of company terrorism and A. F. of L. sabotage the attempt was not a success. Haley Fiske discharged every insurance agent that was active in organization work.

Haley Fiske talks of "ruling classes" in England and even uses the term "master class." Of course, the Metropolitan is a "big happy family" and the company is a "mother" to the agents. The kind of a mother that would eat her children for breakfast.

If the 15,000 agents of the Metropolitan Insurance company decided to organize into a union, Haley Fiske would have a different story. One masters are very considerate as long as we remain meek and humble.

Women Workers and the British Communist Party

The response of British working women to the recruiting campaign of the British Communist Party, a campaign which has brought in more than 5,000 new members, is one of the most encouraging phases of the struggle which entered a new period with the general strike.

From typical reports of recruiting meetings in the industrial districts published by The Workers Weekly, official organ of the British Communist Party, we learn that in some sections, Doncaster for instance, 40 out of 60 new members are women.

These women are not following their husbands and fathers into the party, but are taking the lead in the recruiting meetings in exposing the fatal weaknesses and cowardice of the reformist trade union leaders and showing the men the way.

In Great Britain this development has the greatest significance. The struggle of the women for the franchise has been won only lately and is still surrounded with many restrictions. There is no tradition of women in politics in Great Britain; on the contrary, the traditional attitude is that of female subservience to the male.

A report of the conference of the British Trade Union Congress by Dorothy Gary, sent out by the Federated Press, shows that the trade union movement as a whole has not yet realized the importance of organizing women workers and encouraging initiative by them.

The most militant section of British women workers have realised apparently, as a result of the great struggles taking place in England, that the Communist Party, as in all other spheres of the class conflict, is in the lead with its program for mass participation of women side by side and on an equal basis with men in the battle of the working class.

In America our party must also redouble its efforts to enlist the women of the working class in the proletarian advance guard.

"The New Leader" Makes a Second Mistake

By Wm. F. Dunne

IT has never been our custom to torture dying enemies or to taunt them with their slight hope of salvation as they lie on their death bed.

But the words of dying comrades often can be quoted as revelations by the enemy and, in the case of the New Leader, it is our duty to call attention again to the torturous methods by which it seeks to exhale its last breath in one of the most monstrous fabrications ever foisted upon American workers, i. e., the fake republication of the world famous letter attributed by Stalin, secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, concocted by the Hearst syndicate.

THE DAILY WORKER received a telegram from the department for Agitation and Propaganda of the Communist International, signed by John Pepper, branding the Hearst report of Stalin's speech as a lie made up of the whole cloth. The DAILY WORKER published the cable and C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, sent a copy to the New Leader with the request that it, claiming as it does to be a revolutionary working class paper, publish this important item of world interest to working class readers.

JAMES ONEAL, editor of the New Leader, replied in a letter which we were proud and glad to publish as it gave us confirmation to everything The DAILY WORKER has ever said about the warped mentality of this socialist party leader. But the matter did not end there. The publication of the Oneal letter stirred up a storm in the ranks of the socialist party and the New Leader editor has been forced to repudiate the refusal to correct its Stalin story in its issue for September 13.

BUT the New Leader stands and is the worst possible way. It tries to confuse its readers and in so doing is forced to display an ignorance of world affairs so abysmal that it is tempted to express pity rather than the condemnation which the maneuver merits.

For instance:

The New Leader, while it offers to print a denial of the Stalin speech if made by Stalin himself, tries to cast doubt on the authenticity of the denial printed by The DAILY WORKER in its issue for September 15.

THE cabled denial was signed by John Pepper and in connection with its twisting attack the New Leader asks the following questions and urges its readers to ask them of The DAILY WORKER.

The questions are:

1. Who is John Pepper?
2. What authority does he have to speak for Stalin?
3. Why does not Stalin speak for himself?

WE are glad to answer these questions in advance of any individual inquiries from readers of the New Leader, doubly glad to do so as the answers expose both the ignorance and the duplicity of the New Leader.

1. John Pepper is the pen name of Joseph Pogany, one of the leaders of the Hungarian revolution and Minister of War in the Hungarian Soviet government which was crushed with the aid of Herbert Hoover and Rumanian troops. Imprisoned after the fall of the Soviet, government and sentenced to death, he was exchanged with Bela Kun and others for Hungarian prisoners held by the Soviet government of Russia.

After being in America for two years he returned to Soviet Russia and is now, as already stated, the head of the department for Agitation and Propaganda of the Communist International.

In 1924, "Current History" published a long article on the Hungarian revolution with a sketch of Pogany's activities and a picture of him taken in his Red army uniform. The editor of the New Leader either knows these facts and pretends ignorance, or if he does not, is too ignorant to edit even a socialist paper.

2. The authority which Pepper has to speak for Stalin is that vested in the head of a department of the Communist International carrying out the instructions of its executive committee. The false description of Stalin's statement published by the Hearst press and given world-wide circulation and which the New Leader published as the gospel, evincing a childish confidence in the veracity of William Randolph, was of sufficient importance for the Communist International to take upon itself the task of denying that Stalin, secretary of the leading party of the Communist International, had made any such statements.

The task naturally was allotted to the Agitation and Propaganda department.

3. Anybody except the communist-baiting editor of the New Leader will admit at once that a statement by the Communist International has much more authority than one made by an individual and this is the reason why the denial was made by the C. I. instead of by Stalin himself.

But the last thing the editor of the New Leader desires is a correct answer to his questions. What he wants is to create more confusion in the minds of his readers and thus make more difficult a clear appreciation by them of the deception he is guilty of.

SEVEN the cable of inquiry to Stalin which the New Leader has sent and which it publishes in a box in connection with the article to which we refer, is so worded as to confuse the issue. It reads:

Stalin, Moscow: Please affirm or deny authenticity of severe criticism of Zinoviev attributed to you in American press reports of the proceedings of the Russian Communist Party central committee.

"The New Leader."

IT is well-known to the editor of the New Leader that in the discussions which have been taking place in the Russian Communist Party, Stalin has criticised Zinoviev severely. But this is not the question at issue. The question is:

Was the report of Stalin's speech carried by the Hearst press and reprinted by the New Leader, true or false, and also:

Was the repudiation of the statements ascribed to Stalin, in a cable signed by John Pepper and published in The DAILY WORKER, an authentic document?

IF the editor of the New Leader was striving to get the truth he would have cabled asking first:

Were the specific statements in question true or false and, second:

Was the repudiation published by The DAILY WORKER an authorized and official statement?

In conclusion it must be said that the editor of the New Leader is about the only person in the United States possessing even a slight knowledge of the revolutionary movement and professing sympathy with it who has accepted the Hearst version of Stalin's speech. His hatred of the Communists has led him into a blunder that the youngest member of the Young People's Socialist League would be ashamed to make.

AS for Editor Oneal's expressed desire to print Stalin's own denial of the Hearst lies, we feel quite sure that he will be given the opportunity.

Stripped of its vilification of the Communists and jesuitical reasoning, the article in the New Leader is not only an admission of a mistake but an admission that the editor deliberately used the lies of the capitalist press to make a case against the leader of the Communist Party of Russia, the Communist Party of America and the Communist International.

This kind of a united front with the capitalist press has not met with the approval of the readers of the New Leader and it shows that the working class integrity of the socialist party membership is of a far higher level than that of its leaders—old and new.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

By N. BUCHARIN.

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Bucharin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

IF we look at the matter with the eyes of Comrade Preobrashensky and a number of other comrades who do not notice the difference between private capitalist economics and peasantry economics, then it is only natural that anxiety as to the limits to be observed appears to be entirely superfluous, since we deprive the private capitalist of everything which we possibly can and only permit his continued existence as a possible milch-cow for the future. But we cannot adopt the same attitude towards the peasantry as to the private capitalists. We cannot find a common formula applicable alike to the middle peasant, the rich farmer, and the poor of the villages, as Comrade Preobrashensky would like to do. This is not the right way to put the question. Theoretical standpoints such as this lead us to different conclusions, practical politics as in other things.

The opposition proposes: Sell as dearly as possible. In selling goods at higher prices to the peasant, you are taking more from him. "Take more!"—this is the whole wisdom of the opposition. The formulation held down by one of the comrades of the opposition, Comrade Osovsky, in an article which we published as discussion articles in the "Bolshevik," consists of the statement that we are now taking less from the peasantry than the czar did. We should take more, and all evils will vanish from among us. But we must not judge like this, not merely because it would be inconsistent with our policy with respect to the peasants, but because it is incorrect from the standpoint of economic adaptedness to purpose. It is a naive illusion, a self-deception. It is ridiculous to suppose that our industry could develop with maximum rapidity under such circumstances.

LET us take a rough example. This year we could take ten times as much from the peasants as we are actually doing, and invest this in industry. But what would happen next year? Next year our agriculture would be worth nothing, we should have no raw materials, no cotton, no export grain, etc. At the same time industry receives an enormous influx of capital, everything which we can possibly squeeze out of the peasants. It would be nonsense to believe that this would secure the more rapid speed possible in the development of industry; obviously the first result would be a narrowing down of our markets, an absence of buyers.

I HAVE chosen a rough example intentionally, but it serves to show that the maximum speed of development of our industry is by no means guaranteed by the maximum sum extracted from the peasantry. The matter is not so simple as all that. If we take less today, we thereby promote accumulation in agriculture, and insure for ourselves a greater demand tomorrow for the products of our industry. If we secure higher gains for agriculture, this will enable us to take more next year than we could last. We thus secure for ourselves a still greater increase of revenue for the following year, and this revenue we can employ in our industry. This policy naturally involves a somewhat slower rate of speed this year, but will be compensated later by a rapid rise in the curve of our development. But if we adopt the policy of the opposition, we fly to a high summit of capital investment during the first year, only to fall the more inevitably, and probably with a very abrupt drop. We can by no means guarantee our progress by these means. The policy pursued by the C. C. is adapted to the actualization of our industrial development. The policy recommended by the opposition would not only plunge us into a series of political difficulties, but would retard and destroy the speed of progress of industry.

NOW to the third question, which I have already discussed in my positive consideration of the situation. The comrades of the opposition exaggerate most frightfully the differentiation within the peasantry, and thus they constantly tend to fall into the mistake of ignoring the middle peasant; they devote too little attention to the question of the uplift of the middle peasantry, to the question of the co-operatives, etc. In connection with this aspect of the peasant question they have further failed to grasp the problem of the transformation to be undergone in the economics of the peasantry, the problem of the guidance of the peasants into other systems of work and other paths of development, their guidance into socialist methods thru the agency of the co-operatives, and thru the growing influence of the organs of the proletarian dictatorship on the economics of the middle peasantry. This question plays an extremely important part in our discussion. It is expressed in various combinations, forms the basis of various differences, and remains one of those fundamental bones of contention between the great majority of the C. C. and the leaders of the opposition.

The Social Character of the Soviet State.

LET us now turn to the third problem, the problem of the power and the dictatorship of the proletariat, and the policy of the proletarian dictatorship within our country. You may perhaps ask: Has this question then become a matter of contention in our party? And yet it is true; the opposition has made even this question a matter of contention. Even in this question it has begun to express its doubts in a series of attacks and assertions. At first it was only the character of our socialist industry which was made the subject of doubt, then came the doubt as to the correctness of our tactics in the peasantry question, and now the character, the class character, of our Soviet power in our country is being questioned. This is another step in the development of the oppositional idea, another step away from the true Leninist standpoint.

COMRADE TROTSKY, in one of his speeches at the plenum of the C. C., advanced the thesis of the "extremely non-proletarian character" of the soviet power existing in our country. When the peasant question came under discussion, in connection with the results of the elections, the opposition stated that we are threatened by a deviation in the direction of the rich peasantry, and demanded decisive intervention on the part of the party, in order to prevent any further shifting in a state already far from proletarian.

IT must be observed that the idea that our state is not a workers' state, that it is no longer the state of proletarian dictatorship, is gaining continual ground in oppositional circles. It might be thought that this sentience simply escaped from Comrade Trotsky in the heat of discussion. This is possible; but in this case it would have been his duty to withdraw the assertion afterwards. This was the more necessary that I drew attention, in my speech at the plenum of the C. C., to this sentence, as something entirely foreign to us.

I REPEAT that it is possible for Comrade Trotsky to have made this assertion in the heat of the discussion. But this sentence does not stand alone. An article will appear in the next number of the "Bolshevik," by Comrade Osovsky of the opposition. I have already made mention of another article of his in the "Bolshevik," in which he maintained that we should not by any means take less from the peasants than czarism and the landowners took. Comrades, you must accord more attention to this question, for you will well be able to grasp that the question of the character of our state power is to us the central question. Have we a proletarian dictatorship or have we not? All other questions decidedly depend on this one, for if we have no proletarian dictatorship, this proletarian dictatorship must be actualized. And then we have to clear out of the way every obstacle hampering the realization of this proletarian dictatorship.

COMRADE OSSOVSKY writes:

"It would be well for us at the present moment to recollect the words spoken by Comrade Lenin at the session of the Communist fraction of the VIII. Soviet Congress. He said that our state is not a workers' state, but a workers' and peasants' state. It is only now, six years later, that it becomes comprehensible why Comrade Bukharin is by no means able to draw the conclusions rising from the fact that our state is no workers' state, but a workers' and peasants' state. The Lenin view of the workers' and peasants' state assumes a certain inevitable distance between this state and the state consisting of the proletariat and to a certain extent of the peasantry. The attempts to ignore the inevitable distance between the workers' and peasants' state and the proletariat are likely to be disastrous to the proletarian revolution."

CAPTAIN OF INDUSTRY.

RUBBER, the Story of Business, by Harry E. Firestone, in collaboration with Samuel Crowther. Doubleday Page & Co. $3.00 net.

YEARS ago the paper-backed books of Horatio Alger were the rage with every lad in the country; they still enjoy a certain vogue today. Millions know of the stirring struggle carried by Ben Beasley from bus boy to banker's role attained by sheer grit and honesty; of how New Nixon countered the wily moves of a rascally lawyer, paid the mortgage on the old homestead, saved his dear sacrificing mother from virtual starvation and, by hard work (and more honesty) built up the powerful trading corporation of Beasley & Co.; and who can forget the noble battles with circumstances that were fought by the dozens of other Algerian characters, all of them with invariable success!

Those who gained a manful inspiration from this sort of tripe were, it goes without saying, quickly awakened by years of real effort in any short shrift. The popularity of Alger waned in the exact proportion to the materialization of concrete realities.

But now this king is practically dead. Let Samuel Crowther lives! And this book, Roswell for Henry Ford, John H. Patterson, and others presents us with a "biography" of Harvey S. Firestone, written if so much per word, by Roswell Crowther, who politely hides his authorship behind an "in collaboration with."

Who is Harvey Firestone? How did he become a millionaire Rubber magnate? Why is his name so frequently connected with Liberia and the Philippines? From reading this book you will never find out the answer to these questions. You are given the flabby story of how Firestone started out as a horse trader for his father in Ohio, then switched up then a job as bookkeeper, then country druggist of rapille extract and wild rose lotion, bookkeeper again, rubber tire maker in a shanty, then in the position of leading the manufacturers in the world; the rapid process of growth and decline of the business is very well described. Pretty tales are told of the inventor receives honorable mention in the plant; and is slipped a five-dollar bill.

With such a paradise at Akron is it to be wondered that Firestone says: "We do not believe in shop committees or in any form of self-government in the shops. But we do believe in being fair, and when a dispute arises we take the position that the workman is right and proceed on that basis." Which is so much gas and gaiters, as the British say. Just as the author conveniently forgets to list the great labor turnover in the plants, so he completely omits any reference to the great Akron rubber strike in 1913, a desperate struggle for decent conditions which was brutally suppressed by the combined ruthlessness of the Goodriches, Miller, Goodyears and Firestones of the tire industry. When the test comes Firestone does not "take the position that the workman is right and proceed on that basis." The ideal tire industry employer, like his prototype in the tin lizzie industry, has built his reputation and his wealth on the body and mind-wracking torture of the highly ingenious and cold-blooded proposition of intensified speeding up of workers.

In almost every ointment is a fly; every preacher points a moral. The fly is the contrast of America with the Philippines. One of the rubber producing only a small fraction of 1 per cent under its own flag, while Great Britain controls more than 77 per cent of the world's rubber output. Under the exploitation of Libby American and Philippine fields, especially the latter. And the last chapter of the story is devoted to propaganda for the removal of what vestige of independence the Philippine Islands still enjoy.

"Surely," said Firestone to a committee of interstate and foreign commerce of the house of representatives, "it is practicable to recommend that our government take active steps to remove those laws in the Philippine Islands which are an effective barrier against large-scale development of rubber plantations there and to enact such laws as would encourage the investment of capital in the Philippine Islands." And the author adds that "if the Philippines are to be developed, capital must have assurance that it will be properly protected, which the present political situation does not assure."

The rubber industry is a powerful one in this country, and Firestone's pleading voice with Hardin and Coolidge are not in vain. In his interests bills are introduced into congress to throw the rubber plantations wide open for exploitation. To be sure, this will occur only at the expense of Philippine independence, and will be built up on virtual slave labor in the islands. Rubber will be sapped as much from Filipino laborers as from the trees planted there. But it were asking this captain of industry to turn into a St. Francis of Assisee to consider the exploitation of Libs and expansion policy. For, after all, as he himself admits, he wants to do this only for the people, for all of them, from the humble worker who curses every time he rides his lizzie and gets a blowout to the kid who complains about the high price of rubber bands for his bean shooter.

It is a crying shame that the whole nation, high and humble, does not give vent to a popular demand for the election of this champion of the rights of the people to the presidency. At least the Ohio electorate should show their appreciation. Even Delaware has elected its powder king, Du Pont, to the senate. Firestone deserves a seat in that august body—at least.

A PEEK EACH WEEK AT MOTION PICTURES

DIRECTOR OF "POTEMKIN" INVITED TO GERMANY.

AN AMERICAN MOVIE MADE BY WORKERS.

S. M. Eisenstein, the man who directed the production of the famous Soviet film "The Cruiser Potemkin," received a request, form several of the best German theaters to assume directorship of dramatic productions. The theatres are willing to secure the best German artistic talent for his direction. This request was transmitted to Eisenstein thru the Soviet Society for Cultural Relations wkh foreign countries.

In the meantima the Press reports Eisenstein engaged to direct a picture for Douglas Fairbanks for which he has secured permission and a few months leave of absence from the Soviet Films.

The Photoplay Magazine runs this interesting comment on the picture, "Potemkin":

"The photography is beautiful enuf to enchant an artist and the action is vivid enuf and swift enuf to satisfy any box office demand for melodrama. The scene in which the Cossacks pursue the populace down a long flight of slope, shooting in the crowd, is unforgettably impressive. When enuf of our directors have seen this episode, you'll find it duplicated in home-made dramas."

As we workers are apt to put it in the vulgar: "Thanks for the hazzy ride." Remember that a worker's motion picture outfit made the picture in the world's first workers' government. Wait a little while boys—there is even better stuff coming!

"THE PASSAIC TEXTILE STRIKE:"

It is indeed a pleasure to see such a working-class enterprise as this. The Passaic strike is on full blast, the labor world is agog with it, and now here it comes for us all to take a good look at it. They are bringing this picture from city to city—seven reels of actual scenes from the Passaic strike, acted by the strikers themselves, woven into a graphic story to inspire all labor with their deeds.

The prologue brings a bit of life of the family of a textile worker. A bitter, hard life it is. Then the arrival of Weisbord and THE STRIKE. Picket lines. Demands. Twelve thousand join the union; 16,000 on strike; 645 strikers go to jail. Injunctions. Fight. The company union and more fight. And finally common cause with organized labor in the A. F. of L.

Surely, if ever, here is a picture for every working man to see. For each and every worker to see at least once, to see it for himself, with his own two eyes—to see what labor can do when it wills. If we could, we would send every worker whose vision remains to a view this picture for his own good. We would send him to see it, to feel it and to drink of its inspiration to strengthen his head and heart for militant labor. When you go to see the picture, do this for the labor movement: take your children. Take your children and as many other children as you can. Give them the opportunity to learn of the struggle in which they will soon become a part. Your children are our fighters of tomorrow.

"The Passaic Strike" is now being shown in many cities. It will soon be shown in Chicago. The demand is very great, but you can do a service to the labor movement by starting the wheels going to have it shown in your city. For terms write to the National Textile Strikers' Relief Campaign, room 14, 743 Main avenue, Passaic, N. J.

Textile Contrasts - - -

By Raymon Coffman

(Ramon Coffman is the "Uncle Ray" of newspaper fame. He is the father of the "Childs History of the World," and his articles for children go into a million and a half homes every day. He is now writing for the Hearst syndicate of Chicago. Coffman has always been a friend of the labor movement and has written several times for The Federated Press.)

EIGHT years ago I spent several weeks of my life as a tutor in the family of Arthur R—, a New York millionaire. I had never performed such work before, and I did not realise when I obtained the position that I was to be little more than a glorified nursemaid to Mr. R—'s two sons, Arthur, 15, and George, 12.

The history of my work as a "tutor" does not concern us here, but it did give me an insight into the life of the family of a baron of the textile industry. Mr. R— was the owner of five mills in which cloths were made. I did not at that period see the inside of a textile mill or meet any man or woman who worked in one; but I observed with interested eyes the Park avenue mansion.

The mansion was of four stories. On the first floor there was naught but a reception hall, a dining room, and the quarters in which the servants prepared food for the four master-parts of the household. To rise to the second floor an automatic electric elevator was provided. This floor was given up to a magnificent drawing room and the bedrooms of the master and the mistress.

I slept on the third floor, in a room equipped with a private bath and a fireplace. It was desirable that visitors should see that the tutor, in the chosen guardian of the scions of the family, was adequately provided for. The rooms of the boys, with further private baths, were, of course, on this floor.

Tempted tho I am to go into further details, I must not drift too far into this description. Remarking only that the numerous servants of the household were stuck up on the fourth floor; that I visited a further R— household by the New Jersey seashore and learned of still another in Maine; that I did not count the family automobiles or the servants; that I ate at the master's table and partook of food (tho a bit of it stuck in my throat), and that one of the men servants confided to me: "Yies, Mr. R— is very rich; he inhirrited his five millis from his father;" I shall pass on to another side of the picture.

A few blocks east of the R— mansion on Park avenua there are buildings which do not provide four floors to a family. I knew of those eight years ago, and that is why the food did not always course down my throat so pleasantly, and why my private bath did not give me an unstinted feeling of luxury; but it was only later that I gained something of a knowledge of the lives of men and women who worked in the mills which supplied the income for the goings-on of the R— family life.

That first glimpse was attained at Paterson, N. J. There was a strike in progress. I did not make a scientific study of wages, hours and working conditions; but I did learn a single salient fact—that while Mr. R—, the master, worked (or at least put in time) two hours a day, on obtaining a family-expenditure-privilege of $100,000 or more a year, the men and women who make the cloth were confidently less fortunate.

I have been reminded of all this in 1925 by a visit to another home of the textile industry—Passaic. This visit is fresh in my mind as I write. It having occurred only two days ago.

A good proportion of the city of Passaic is "out." Sixteen thousand workers have raised the question the right of mill owners to blacklist them and spy on them and to slash their wages at will. These strikers are probably a little more than half of the working population of Passaic, a city claiming about 70,000 persons within its limits. If you are in the habit of counting one working person to each family of five, you will need to revise your system calculations to provide for Passaic. The father works. The mother works. Big brother works. Big sister works. Of course I am speaking in hit-or-miss fashion. There may be no big brother or big sister in a family; all of the offspring may be below the legal age for child labor. The mother may be dead, or the father may be dead. What I am driving at is that the Passaic child cannot look forward to a university education, no, matter how much he might desire one, or how well he could utilise one. I am speaking of a normal child, in a normal mill worker's family. A normal child, when the age of possible income-producing comes, will not pursue his education while his mother or father, or little brothers and sisters, are suffering for lack of proper financial provision. No, he will rot out to the mill and strive to get a job to eke out the family income and make it adequate to living needs.

On the day I visited Passaic, a statement by the head of the largest mill in the city appeared in the daily newspapers. This gentleman contended that the average wage for the whole textile industry has been $22 per week.

Twenty-two dollars and some odd cents! There is a figure to conjure with. Knowing the cost of rents, the cost of food, the cost of clothing, may we conclude that this is a handsome sum for a family of five to grow up on? I suppose that you will reply that it is inadequate; and indeed it is not sufficient to maintain even a very miserable standard of living for a family of five persons. Hence it follows the young daughter or son must go into the mills as early as possible. Their ten or twelve dollars a week, added to the family income, may drag the family out of debt, or mostly out of debt!

Back in January of this year some of the mill owners put their heads together. They were looking forward to a time when their profits would slacken. Something must be done, and done qUickly. What more natural than that they should cut down on that "burdensome item," the wages? After all, they weren't in business for their health.

It was not present when the mill owners conferred, but I'll bet the nest hat I hope to buy that this sort of argument prevailed upon them:

"If we cut the wages, say 10 per cent, we can probably persuade our employes that it is necessary because of hard times, and probably they will accept it without making trouble. Then we can maintain a decent level of profits. On the other hand, if there should be a strike, it would come at an auspicious time. There is a slack in the industry, and a few weeks disappearance of the workers from the scene will not seriously handicap production. They will be licked, and we'll fire all agitators and drive them out of town."

If that reasoning prevailed, it did not work out very well. Sixteen thousand men, women and children walked out. It was one of those movements which sometimes occur among unorganized workers when they are goaded to revolt. Some, indeed, who were less bold, less far seeing, remained at their places, fearing the proverbial wolf and anxious to hang on to what crusts they had; but the greater part of the workers braved the snow of the winter and did not scab.

The strike has continued strong 32 weeks without a break. The rich mill owners were at first indifferent, thinking that the workers could be forced to come crawling back to work at whatever miserable wages the mills chose to pay. But they did not reckon with the spirit of the striking textile workers or with the American labor movement, which has supported them thruout the strike. When they saw how well the strikers were sticking the mill owners roused themselves and resorted to violence in an effort to crush the spirit of the strikers. In this they were ably supported by the local police, whose many acts of unprovoked violence are too well authenticated for reasonable doubt. The owners have resorted to every deceit, framsup and device. They have prostituted the courts to their purposes, and stiff jail sentences and enormous bail bonds have been the rule thru the strike. More than 465 strikers have been arrested to date in the police campaign to harass the striking workers and break their strike. But, miracle tho it may appear, they have not been able to break this strike, and it looks to me as tho they will never accomplish this purpose. They will have to recognise the workers' union.

I have seen the Passaic workers in action, attended their meetings, observed their efficient and excellent relief system, talked with the young workers, in whom I am especially interested. I can say without hesitation that nothing in years has stirred my faith in the workers' world as has my first-hand experience with this strike of exploited textile workers. The human brotherhood and solidarity displayed in this struggle for existence will certainly have its effect on the unorganised workers everywhere in the other textile industries and in all American industry.

Finally, I cannot see how any worker or labor sympathizer can fail to gig down deep into his pocket for strike relief for these heroic people, strikers: fathers and mothers, grandmothers, grandfathers, young workers, all of them of heroic mould; all of them sternly determined in their fight for a decent living wage. The Passaic strikers are fighting the battles of every working man and woman in this country and should be backed to the limit of labor's purse. More, in their struggle against police and court autocracy and the attempts of men like Chief Zoper to nullify the constitution, these striking textile workers are fighting the battles of every American citizen. Every decent American citizen should get behind them and back them with money and with articulate moral support in their battle against autocracy and arrogance in industry.

Introducing Mr. H. C. Frayne

A Typical Labor Faker.

By V. Zack.

HE is a well-fed gentleman, short and stout. His belly hangs down between his legs. He becomes frequently indisposed: he looks like a man who has the sugar sickness. He thinks a lot of himself. He is New York state representative and high in the councils of the A. F. of L. But that is not so important as his membership in the Civic Federation, where big capitalists meet with their lieutenants, the big labor leaders, in order to figure out how to hoodwink the laboring men.

And then, nowless important is Mr. Frayne's membership in Tammany Hall, of which he is a prominent executive member. This ought to be sufficient for a personal introduction.

Mr. Frayne has no power, the A. F. of L. is a decentralized organisation, all power is vested in the various international, upon whom Mr. Frayne invokes only when it serves his purpose. Mr. Frayne's power is merely the power of his ability to serve the highest bidder, usually the capitalist class, and that's quite a power at present in the United States, especially in strongly centralised industries, or in industries with powerful employers' associations.

Every morning at 10 a. m. Mr. Frayne comes to his office, giving advice to numerous other little Fraynes who need his supreme counsel, and there is plenty of money in strife, as it is in all Tammany jobs, from the Tammany judge down to the Tammany labor leader. The New York labor movement, is divided into two categories, the bona fide labor movement, that is the one controlled by Tammany Hall, Tammany unions and the others. Amongst the others used to be the socialist unions, the "damned Jews," as the bona fides call themselves, but in the last five years, socialism moved closer to Tammany, progress. It did not make a scientific study of wages, hours and working conditions; but I did learn a single salient fact—that while Mr. R—, the master, worked (or at least put in time) two hours a day, on obtaining a family-expenditure-privilege of $100,000 or more a year, the men and women who make the cloth were confidently less fortunate.

I have been reminded of all this in 1925 by a visit to another home of the textile industry—Passaic. This visit is fresh in my mind as I write. It having occurred only two days ago.

A good proportion of the city of Passaic is "out." Sixteen thousand workers have raised the question the right of mill owners to blacklist them and spy on them and to slash their wages at will. These strikers are probably a little more than half of the working population of Passaic, a city claiming about 70,000 persons within its limits. If you are in the habit of counting one working person to each family of five, you will need to revise your system calculations to provide for Passaic. The father works. The mother works. Big brother works. Big sister works. Of course I am speaking in hit-or-miss fashion. There may be no big brother or big sister in a family; all of the offspring may be below the legal age for child labor. The mother may be dead, or the father may be dead. What I am driving at is that the Passaic child cannot look forward to a university education, no, matter how much he might desire one, or how well he could utilise one. I am speaking of a normal child, in a normal mill worker's family. A normal child, when the age of possible income-producing comes, will not pursue his education while his mother or father, or little brothers and sisters, are suffering for lack of proper financial provision. No, he will rot out to the mill and strive to get a job to eke out the family income and make it adequate to living needs.

On the day I visited Passaic, a statement by the head of the largest mill in the city appeared in the daily newspapers. This gentleman contended that the average wage for the whole textile industry has been $22 per week.

Twenty-two dollars and some odd cents! There is a figure to conjure with. Knowing the cost of rents, the cost of food, the cost of clothing, may we conclude that this is a handsome sum for a family of five to grow up on? I suppose that you will reply that it is inadequate; and indeed it is not sufficient to maintain even a very miserable standard of living for a family of five persons. Hence it follows the young daughter or son must go into the mills as early as possible. Their ten or twelve dollars a week, added to the family income, may drag the family out of debt, or mostly out of debt!

Back in January of this year some of the mill owners put their heads together. They were looking forward to a time when their profits would slacken. Something must be done, and done qUickly. What more natural than that they should cut down on that "burdensome item," the wages? After all, they weren't in business for their health.

It was not present when the mill owners conferred, but I'll bet the next hat I hope to buy that this sort of argument prevailed upon them:

"If we cut the wages, say 10 per cent, we can probably persuade our employes that it is necessary because of hard times, and probably they will accept it without making trouble. Then we can maintain a decent level of profits. On the other hand, if there should be a strike, it would come at an auspicious time. There is a slack in the industry, and a few weeks disappearance of the workers from the scene will not seriously handicap production. They will be licked, and we'll fire all agitators and drive them out of town."

If that reasoning prevailed, it did not work out very well. Sixteen thousand men, women and children walked out. It was one of those movements which sometimes occur among unorganized workers when they are goaded to revolt. Some, indeed, who were less bold, less far seeing, remained at their places, fearing the proverbial wolf and anxious to hang on to what crusts they had; but the greater part of the workers braved the snow of the winter and did not scab.

The strike has continued strong 32 weeks without a break. The rich mill owners were at first indifferent, thinking that the workers could be forced to come crawling back to work at whatever miserable wages the mills chose to pay. But they did not reckon with the spirit of the striking textile workers or with the American labor movement, which has supported them thruout the strike. When they saw how well the strikers were sticking the mill owners roused themselves and resorted to violence in an effort to crush the spirit of the strikers. In this they were ably supported by the local police, whose many acts of unprovoked violence are too well authenticated for reasonable doubt. The owners have resorted to every deceit, framsup and device. They have prostituted the courts to their purposes, and stiff jail sentences and enormous bail bonds have been the rule thru the strike. More than 465 strikers have been arrested to date in the police campaign to harass the striking workers and break their strike. But, miracle tho it may appear, they have not been able to break this strike, and it looks to me as tho they will never accomplish this purpose. They will have to recognise the workers' union.

I have seen the Passaic workers in action, attended their meetings, observed their efficient and excellent relief system, talked with the young workers, in whom I am especially interested. I can say without hesitation that nothing in years has stirred my faith in the workers' world as has my first-hand experience with this strike of exploited textile workers. The human brotherhood and solidarity displayed in this struggle for existence will certainly have its effect on the unorganised workers everywhere in the other textile industries and in all American industry.

Finally, I cannot see how any worker or labor sympathizer can fail to gig down deep into his pocket for strike relief for these heroic people, strikers: fathers and mothers, grandmothers, grandfathers, young workers, all of them of heroic mould; all of them sternly determined in their fight for a decent living wage. The Passaic strikers are fighting the battles of every working man and woman in this country and should be backed to the limit of labor's purse. More, in their struggle against police and court autocracy and the attempts of men like Chief Zoper to nullify the constitution, these striking textile workers are fighting the battles of every American citizen. Every decent American citizen should get behind them and back them with money and with articulate moral support in their battle against autocracy and arrogance in industry.

...orts and Sports

By NAT KAPLAN

HEAVYWEIGHT championship fight brings a good share of odor with its glory. Press talk of graft and politics in the Dempsey - Tunney fight are only evidence of the fact that once more, the usual partners of prize-fighting were present.

In Illinois, O. W. Huncke, chairman of the Illinois boxing Commission lifted the lid of professional prize-fighting and exposed a nasty mess. It was the kind of mess that is sure to be found as long as sports remain a "business"—particularly a gamblers' business. In this kind of "business," big and certain profit means the necessity of corrupt athletes, and promoters. A wise gambler bets on "a sure thing." Fights are "fixed" and the foolish poor fish who ventures a few hard-earned dollars on the fight is sure to be "cleaned." Boxing is no place for "sphere."

O. W. Huncke resigned very likely because he was new in the business. The Illinois Boxing Commission was organized less than three months ago. Probably he has not yet become part of the game and was thus "disgusted at the continual battle of the crooks of boxing to flout the rules of the commission." The climax came when the Rosenberg-Taylor bantamweight title fight was banned because of the uncovering of the attempt on the part of a clique of New York gamblers to win the fight for the champion by bribery, gun-play and intimidation. This lamest attempt at "fixing" a fight is nothing new. But the extent of it in the state has forced the commission to call in the National Guard for fight to "safe-guard the domestic tranquility."

This condition is quite the accepted thing in all professional sports and threaten the country. Wrestling is rotten with it. Baseball is not immune. You will recall the "world series scandal" of a few years ago. But all sport is not tainted. In contrast there is Workers' Sport. Organizations are springing up here and there and banding together. A healthy wholesome air surrounds these efforts. There is both room and need for them, and they deserve full-hearted support.

In New York and Chicago they have been at it for a couple of years. (Turn out some day for instance to see the Manhattan Workers' Sports team play soccer—and see the differences). The Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor at its last convention issued a call for its affiliated bodies to build Labor sports. The Young Workers' League more than anyone else have been instrumental in promoting workers' sports. A recent statement of the Y. W. L. puts the matter very pointedly: "Professional sports—baseball, prize fighting, etc., are a supposed substitute for real sports. Professional sports can be characterized by corruption and graft (fixed games, etc.) and nationalist propaganda side shows."

There you are. Professional sports—workers' sports. You say there is no Workers' Sports Club in your city? Really both, man! Organize one! Get another person and you've got a baseball team!

The Little "Red" School House

By OLIVER CARLSON.

ONCE upon a time (so the story goes) the little red schoolhouse was the fountainhead of American culture and learning, where the Jacksons, Lincolns, Grants and, in fact, all the great political, industrial, financial and military geniuses were taught the three "R's" and received the necessary knowledge, and encouragement which sent them forth into the world to make of this country a nation greater and more powerful than history has ever known of heretofore.

But this story is not one that deals with the little red schoolhouse of yesterday. It is the story of the little Red schoolhouse of today. It has only just begun to function, but from the success already achieved we can safely predict that it and its successors will play no small part in moulding the exploited youth of today into able fighters for the abolition of capitalism.

The Waino Young Workers' School.

NEARLY 500 miles northwest of Chicago lies Waino. It is the center of a farming community dominantly Finnish. The big lumber companies have reaped fortunes in that region, but the big timber is all gone now, so they sell cut-over land to the poor fish from Chicago, Milwaukee and other large cities who have swallowed the stories about "become independent by being a farmer." Every year yields a new crop of settlers, who struggle on in vain for a year or two and then return to the cities, poorer if no wiser than when they came. The Finns have stuck together, have organized co-operatives and halls of their own, and thus managed to eke out an existence—and have become class-conscious.

It was in the above-mentioned region where a Young Workers' Summer School was conducted last year—and where a larger and more successful one was held again this summer for a period of five weeks, from June 21 to July 24. It was a unique school in more ways than one.

Its Aim, and How Organized.

OF all the students at the course—and there were 57 of them who completed the entire course—not one paid a cent for tuition, for board, or for railroad fare from his home to the school and back again. The course committee, which had been on the job many months before the school opened, had succeeded in getting a sufficient number of organizations to support the idea of the school financially that the students who were selected to attend the courses need have no financial worries. Altho the Workers' Party and Young Workers' League were the moving spirits behind the school, still a very large number of non-party organizations gave both financial as well as moral support to it. A number of co-operatives, women's organizations, farmers' clubs, etc., are included in these.

The aim of the school, as expressed in the certificate given each student who completed the course, is:

"To train young workers and farmers to an understanding of their position in present-day society, and of their relation to the working class generally.

"To teach them how to examine and understand the basic forces at work in society.

"To give them a knowledge of the various types of working class organizations, their policies and their tactics, then preparing them for active and intelligent participation in these organizations, to the end that capitalism shall be abolished and replaced by a classless society based upon production for use instead of for profit."

In conformity with these aims, the course of study embraced the following subjects: Sociology, Marxian Economics, American Social and Labor History, Forums, Current Events, Working Class Theories, Historical Materialism, Problems of Socialist Reconstruction, Public Speaking, Theory and Practice of Young Workers' Organizations, and Playground-Athletic-Social Leadership.

The Composition of the School.

ALTHO slightly over 60 students entered the school, only 57 were able to complete the entire course. (It may be important to note that 118 applications were received from prospective students, fully half of whom had to be rejected because of the physical inability to handle so many). These students came from six states: Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota and Oregon, and from no less than 39 different cities, towns or villages.

In age, the students varied from 15 to 27 years. The average age was between 18 and 19 years. They were virtually evenly divided as to sex, there being one more girl then boys.

Most of them were workers. The most numerous groupings consisted of lumber workers (13), farm workers (7), domestic workers (9) and clerical workers (7). In addition to these there were students, schoolteachers, pipefitters, millinery workers, etc. Approximately 50 per cent of the students were members either of the Young Workers' League, the Workers' Party, or both. The remainder were wholly unorganized or belonging to farmers' clubs, athletic clubs, co-operatives, etc.

Student Activities.

FROM the very start we were determined that the students should have as much as possible to say about conducting affairs of the school. The entire student body met regularly every week to discuss school problems and the work of its sub-committees. The student body was responsible not only for keeping the school clean, but also for helping the cooks in clearing the tables and washing dishes, for keeping discipline, conducting entertainments, editing a wall newspaper, supervising and conducting athletics, etc., etc. Every student did his share of work—and the work was done willingly and cheerfully. A student council, consisting of the chairman of each of the sub-committees and two members elected directly from the student body, was in general control of all work. The instructors were not permitted to serve on any committee nor have a vote in the meetings of the student body. Not the slightest friction developed between students and instructors—quite to the contrary, this method of putting the responsibility for the success of the school directly upon the students themselves did much to make the school a success and to develop initiative amongst them.

A model Young Workers' League was formed, divided into seven nuclei. The showing of the students was exceptional. Basic tasks and problems were discussed and executed with a gusto that would surprise many a veteran.

The wall newspaper was one of the finest examples of work that I have seen from young people. It appeared regularly twice a week, containing all manner of material, both serious and humorous, and was well illustrated throout. I believe that every student in the school contributed at least once to the paper.

The Importance of the School.

UNDOUBTEDLY there were many shortcomings with our Red school in Wisconsin, but the students voted it a huge success and were unanimous in demanding that an advanced school be conducted next year. All of them left the school deeply imbued with a spirit of class consciousness and have now gone back to their homes to agitate and organize. It is important to note that more than half of the class came from two of the most important sections of the country, i. e., from the Iron Range of Minnesota and the Copper Range of Michigan. They are going back to begin the work of rousing their comrades and fellow-workers into action. The traditions of struggle from both Calumet and Mesabe Range indicate that something can be done to organize and lead the copper and iron ore slaves into action. The students from the little Red schoolhouse will be the pioneers to set the machinery into action. The little Red schoolhouse is no longer an experiment. It is a fact, testified to by more than one hundred students, who are carrying the message that they learned there into mine and mill and logging camp. These students are young Americans (nearly 90 per cent of them native born) and they will be the torch-bearers for still greater numbers to follow them in creating a revolutionary mass movement of American workers.

Long live the little Red schoolhouse! May it grow and flourish from coast to coast.

THE SUNDAY WORKER

Class War in America in the 1880's

By Amy Schechter.
(Decorations by Jerger)

Tenth celebration of Labor Day, the anniversary of the establishment of the eight hour movement has once again been enacted, with the usual touching scenes of fraternization between capital and labor—with army, church and Wall Street patting labor on the back and praising it for being a faithful and obedient servant and bringing in fat dividends and keeping the Reds in their place. This is a good time to turn back—just by way of contrast—to those stormy days forty years ago when America's real Labor Day was born in the midst of violent conflict between the classes. No farce that, but a tremendous drama of class struggle from which the revolutionary workers of every European country have drawn inspiration for the day which has become a sort of rehearsal for revolution; a day when capitalist governments are afraid and troops are massed in all the industrial centers.

May 1, 1886, was the culmination of a movement of the greatest significance in the history of the American proletariat. It marked its conscious entrance into the arena of class struggle. "I only wish that Marx could have lived to see it," writes Engels to a friend, a month later. "What the downbreak of Russian czardom would be for the great military monarchies of Europe—the snapping of their mainstay—that it for the bourgeoisie of the whole world the breaking out of class war in America . . . the way in which their (the American proletariat) have made their appearance on the scene is quite extraordinary—six months ago nobody suspected anything, and now they appear all of a sudden in such organized masses as to strike terror into the whole capitalist class . . ."

Never before or since, in this country, has the irreconcilable antagonism between capital and labor and the inevitability of class war been stated with such calmness and realism as it was by both sides in the struggle. With the final swallowing up of the last vestige of the public lands by the great corporations, "American labor war" as Commons put it, "now permanently set up in the wage system." And labor conditions at this period were admirably calculated to drive into the minds of the workers a realization of the intolerable slavery which that system involved, and their last illusion of the possibility of escape gone, to send them into turning at bay.

The tremendous displacement of man power by machinery in the course of the preceding decade and a half had driven hundreds of thousands of skilled workers, large native element among them—into the ranks of unskilled labor.

The official report published in 1886, puts the displacement in the silk industry (in the last few years [illegible] at 56 per cent in winding and 95 per cent in [illegible] cotton goods, at 50 per cent ("in the last [illegible] years"); in the manufacture of agricultural machinery, at 50 per cent; of shoes "in some cases 90 per cent, in others 50 per cent to 60 per cent," and so on in a number of other industries.

The mass immigration of this decade, over 5,000,000, [illegible] the attention. The labor market was greatly overstocked. Moreover, capitalists had discovered that profits hitherto unheard of could be made from the employment of children, and in many lines adult labor was being rapidly superseded by child labor.

Troops Firing on Labor Demonstration, Baltimore St., Philadelphia.

in a number of towns, parents were unemployed while their children were working.

Then came the great depression of 1884-1885. Wages were slashed again and again. In the mines, where some of the hottest struggles of the period were fought, the cut was 40 per cent. The textile workers were also very hard hit. In Paterson, for instance, wages were reduced 50 per cent within three years. Large numbers of mills were shut down. Contemporary press descriptions of the streams of starving textile workers wandering about in a despairing search for bread might be taken from an account of the Russian famine.

The following is taken from the Hartford Examiner's account of the textile region along the Willimantic in February, of 1885:

"Since July, fifteen of these concerns have shut out their employees, and their inability to find work has brought starvation nearly into death . . . In the severity of the winter young girls have tramped from place to place in search of work, have begged shelter and food and slept in outhouses and barns, and are today the victims of hunger and exposure . . . the males tramp out farther in the state . . . and become desperate . . . while the old people and infants remain in the villages starving by inches . . ."

Not only were wages extremely low and, in many cases paid monthly, but the pleasant practice of holding back 15 to 20 days' pay out of a month's, sometimes till the end of the year, or even of the term of employment, "so that," writes the Commissioner of Labor, "the poorest paid and most numerous classes are thus unable to exist from pay-day to pay-day without credit." The masses of unskilled workers lived in an eternal round of debt. Hours for this class of labor were from eleven to twelve in states where legislation had already been enacted; in other states anything up to twenty, and in all states hours were limitless for tenement industry. Pennsylvania miners worked up to 13 hours. Minnesota passed a law limiting work on the railroads to 18 hours a day.

Horrible things were done to the children of the proletariat. Throughout the country children, from eight in the south from six years worked eleven, twelve and thirteen hours a day under unspeakable conditions. Often, as in the Harmony Mills, in Cohoes, N. Y., known as workers as "Hell's Mills," children were flogged with leather straps when they could not keep up the pace required. The mill owners said that "They were kept under control in a way that benefited their morals . . ." A superintendent, either uncommonly naive or uncommonly stupid, told the Labor Bureau officials, "Now, I have noticed a strange thing. Families come here from Ireland and the girls are as rugged and healthy and rosy-cheeked as you would ever see, and yet in two years the girls would be consumptive, and half the family would be dead in seven years." Conditions at this period were admirably calculated to drive into the minds of the workers a realization of the intolerable slavery which that system involved, and their last illusion of the possibility of escape gone, to send them into turning at bay.

Families come here from Ireland and the girls are as rugged and healthy and rosy-cheeked as you would ever see, and yet in two years the girls would be consumptive, and half the family would be dead in seven years." In New York City we read of children working at stripping and preparing tobacco, "11 to 13 hours, not as long hours as grown persons, but enough to kill them rapidly." Tens of thousands of workers grew up illiterate because they had been shut up in the factories since earliest childhood.

In mill as well as mining towns workers were compelled to live in the filthy tenements provided by the companies at exorbitant rents. The Fall River "Cotton Manufacturer" wrote of these tenements, "They are not as good as we would like to have them, but they are good enough for operatives."

At the beginning of the decade capital believed that under existing circumstances the great mass of unskilled and defenseless was completely in its power, and subject to limitless exploitation. But gaining impetus during the destitute years of the 1884-1885 depression, a great wave of revolt swept thru this class of labor, "an elemental protest against oppression and degradation," manifesting itself in thousands of furiously-fought strikes, and carrying hundreds of thousands of workers into the Knights of Labor. In the year from July, 1885 to July, 1886, membership rose from 104,066 to 703,924. "The movement bore in every way the aspect of a social war," writes Commons. "A frenzied hatred of labor for capital was shown in every important strike . . . Extreme bitterness towards capital manifested itself in all the actions of the Knights of Labor, and wherever the leaders undertook to hold it within bounds they were generally discarded by their followers, and others who would lead as directed were placed in charge . . ."

This great mass movement of the proletariat—"that mighty and glorious movement," Engels calls it—created panic in the ranks of capital, with its force and its swiftness; its destruction of the barriers of craft and nationality and race, its direction toward "the solidarity of all labor." To add to this was the fact that for the first time organized revolutionary propaganda was gaining a real foothold in the general labor movement.

In the far-west the Red International, preaching somewhat unclear but militant socialism exerted some influence. But the revolutionary party that was becoming a real force among the workers was the Black International, affiliated with the anarchist international in Europe. In the New York section, led by Johann Most, simon-pure anarchy prevailed. But in the middle west and the west, particularly in Chicago, which was the stronghold of the movement, a sort of anarcho-syndicalism prevailed. The practical result of their theories meant a close connection with the unions and participation in the daily struggles of the workers. In every big Chicago strike of the period we find the anarchists—or Communists, as the bourgeois press called them—in the front ranks, leading and organizing.

By 1886 the Black International had between six and ten thousand members. Of these at least 2,000 were in Chicago, and included a large English speaking element. The party exerted a powerful influence over very much larger numbers, in Chicago, for instance, the Central Labor Union, to which the majority of the unions in the city were affiliated, was completely under anarchist control, co-operating with the international in all its parades and demonstrations, and spreading revolutionary propaganda among the thousands of unemployed who tramped the streets of the city.

Capital, then, was thoroly afraid, and openly and thru its official spokesmen talked class war and preparation for the forcible suppression of the proletariat. Labor replied by announcing that it would meet force with force, and by forming armed defense units in connection with unions, anarchist groups, and other workers' organizations.

General Sherman, Chief of Staff of the U. S. Army, in an official speech on Governor's Island declared:

"There will soon come an armed contest between Capital and Labor. They will oppose each other not with words and arguments and ballots, but with shot and shell, gunpowder and cannon. The better classes are tired of the insane howlings of the lower strata, and they mean to stop them."

The San Francisco "Truth" influential in the west, answered with the following call:

"Working people of America! I tell you these words are not mere mouthings . . . they mean blood . . . because you dare to ask for what is your own, the full product of your own labor . . . Arm yourself at once . . . the day of battle will be upon us long before we are prepared . . . This sign, this speech of Sherman, is deadly in its significance. We have no moment to waste . . ."

Commenting on a strike, the Chicago Times remarked that "Hand grenades should be thrown among those who are striving to obtain higher wages, since by such treatment they would be taught a valuable lesson and other strikers would take warning of their fate."

In a furious reply, the Labor Unionist of Akron, Ohio (neither socialist nor anarchist) cries:

"God speed the day that hand grenades will be thrown among honest men, who asking for their just right, when refused, quit work . . . That day would be the dawn of deliverance for enslaved labor . . ." The Unionist then goes on to recommend the institution of a military order by the Knights of Labor, "For, if such teachings as the above go on, the day is not far distant when the laboring man will need to know the use of firearms. The organs of monopoly teach giving us hand grenades . . . Let us be prepared when they are ready to open the ball and let them dance to the music of a little dynamite and hot shot . . . If the organs of monopoly wish to hasten the revolution . . . let them preach the hand grenade doctrine." Come on, monopoly, with your hand grenades!

There was continual talk of enlarging the army for the campaign against labor. A Washington dispatch appearing in the general press (Nov. 1884) states that "The businessmen of this country are in favor of an increase of the army and its concentration in the larger cities so as to suppress riots and control strikers." Another, (Jan., 1886) says that "in view of the discontent of the laboring classes Congress is urged to enlarge the regular army." In 1884, the press gives the annual report of General Phil. Sheridan to the Secretary of War, in which he says that "The danger of warfare with foreign nations seems remote," but tells of "signs of other troubles . . . between capital and labor" and the danger of "entire cities being destroyed by the infuriated populace . . ." After another lecture, by still another general, on how to put down labor revolts, with a detailed plan for the defense of the municipal buildings and the city hall Park, New York, a western labor paper came out with an equally detailed description by a friendly army officer, on street fighting tactics for workers, and the use of barricades with careful and highly technical diagrams. Riot drills were frequent—and frequently broken up by workers.

Strike resolutions and resolutions of mass meetings of strike sympathizers were frequently direct class challenges. During the 1885 strike on one of Gould's railways a convention of employees on the whole Southwestern system passed a resolution declaring that "Labor and capital have met in a deadly conflict," and pledged support to the strikers, sustaining them by . . . sympathy, money and . . . lives if necessary." A Chicago mass-meeting addressed by a miner who had come from Shawnee to get aid for the strikers in the long and desperately-fought coal strike in Hocking Valley, Ohio, passed a resolution declaring that "The employment of all means to protect the wage working class from the tyranny of capital is justifiable. Whereas the military has been called out to defeat the interests of the working classes, the mass meeting resolves to arm themselves and offer resistance to the class who are depriving them of their bread, their happiness and their lives."

This sketch of conditions in the first half of the eighties will give some general idea of the causes behind that "entrance of the American proletariat on the scene" of which aroused not alone Engels, but revolutionists the world over to such enthusiasm, and the American bourgeoisie to such fear and determination to put an end to this challenge to its supremacy. In the next article will be described the culmination of the movement, and the campaign of capital against its two arch enemies—the Knights of Labor and the Black International—with its climax in the Chicago Anarchist frame-up, following the great eight-hour strikes and demonstrations of May 1.

The Confession of An Agent Provocateur

A Sensational Document on the White Terror in Poland

The Polish press today is carrying on a conspiracy of silence concerning the mass arrests of Ukranians which have just been made everywhere, at Lemberg, Cracow, Przemysl, etc.

We have already pointed out that we were once more concerned here with an affair fabricated entirely by Pilsudski's police in order to discredit the movement of the national minorities which is becoming a greater menace each day.

Besides, it is very possible that documents had been discovered. But one would have to have very poor sense not to realize that he is here dealing with the work of provocateurs.

Yesterday we promised to publish a document which would demonstrate irrefutably the skill of the Polish reaction in practices of this kind. We shall see later.

It was a matter of a very simple fact: the confessions of an agent provocateur. It is the confession of one of those poor hangers which Upton Sinclair's "100%" definitely depicts.

Here, in its tragic simplicity, is the letter which he sent, after being seized with remorse, to the Sejm deputy, Gogula.)

* * * *

Mr. Deputy,

In the district of Nowogrodek, one hears everywhere: "Jancevitch is a provocateur! Jancevitch has thrown a thousand people into the dungeons!" etc. . . . Looked at superficially, without considering the causes, one may believe that it is really so. I beg you to listen to me then, to learn how all this happened.

How One Becomes a Provocateur

I WORKED as an instructor for the "Wyzwolenie" Party (Party of Freedom). Tho war had had a negative influence on my mental constitution. I did not have a single means of subsistence and I felt very little desire to do physical work. Thus, I allowed myself to be easily convinced by the Agent Weraxa and became agent of the "Defensive" at Nowogrodek. I was given the task of discovering a supposed conspiracy set on foot by a secret White-Russian organization, enemy of the state. The thing had to be done quickly and I had neither the time to discover the conspiracy nor the possibility of learning how to organize this. They gave me very short notice, threatening not to give me a single sloty if I did not deliver a document. On the other hand, they promised me $5,000 and the possibility of living in Posen under a false name in case I should discover this secret organization. In order to encourage me they showed me mountains of money. That made me determined at the outset to find some facts, and even when the searches and inquiries gave no results, they were very well satisfied with me in the "Defensive." They paid me a very high salary, higher than the one promised. And they, gave me gifts of important sums. I led an easy life, but I did not discover the secret organization and learned nothing of it. I passed the greater part of my time in the company of my colleague, Weraxa. I fell completely under his influence, and he depicted to me a stately existence and a rich and idle future.

"ON POLISH LAND." By the Polish Artist Sokolova-Skalja.

The Other Side of the Medal.

ON the 27th of March, 1925, I was arrested by the Defensive. At the outset, they treated me in a friendly manner and gave me whiskey. But later they began to beat me. Each time the treatment became worse. They demanded that I discover the conspiracy and deliver the world-be White-Russian organizations of revolt for which they promised me the $5,000 and immediate freedom. In the course of the last two months, I had received the sum of 660 slotties. I realized clearly: I was becoming a victim of my master, Weraxa.

I was unable to find anything, not knowing a single organisation other than the "Wyzwolenie" and the "Independent Peasant Party"; and svan of these parties I knew no more than any other person reading the newspapers. The bad treatment became worse, but I could not say anything. Then they began to torture me with an electric current. My strength left me. It seemed to me that my bones were being pulled apart. Frightful muscular cramps paralyzed my limbs. The misery was unendurable. After several repetitions, I lost consciousness.

The Denunciation.

TO put an end to my tortures, I agreed to everything they demanded of me. I said everything that might interest the "Defensive." My statements were partly invented, partly a confirmation of what the police claimed. It is in this manner that I confirmed the charge that the following persons had taken part in the conspiracy: M. Makowski, the Sejm deputies, Hotowatah, Gegula and Sobolewski; and a hundred other persons in addition.

After this examination by the agents of the Defensive I said no more about the thing to any one.

Later, I was summoned before the examining magistrate. The examination took place in the building of the Community of Nowogrodek in an office of the Defense to which they conducted me from the cellar which had served as a prison for me and where I was tortured in the most horrible manner for six days. The presence of agents of the Defensive during the examination agitated me so much that I once more confirmed, before the examining magistrate, the statements which I had made to the Defensive. I ought to say here that the police prepared me for this examination two whole days before. Day and night, two agents were continually present and taught me that I was supposed to declare to the examining magistrate. They gave me whiskey to drink constantly and promised me my freedom if I would be ready to repeat my confessions to the magistrate.

A Street in Warsaw Guarded by Pilsudski's Military and Police.

Just before my appearance they gave me more to drink, so that I made my confession in an intoxicated state.

On the first of April, I was conducted to the prison of Nowogrodek, and on the second of April, the prisoners had already arrived. I was isolated, and yet it was sufficient for me to show myself in the yard for a shower of hisses and blows to be brought forth. On the second of May, I received a violent blow on the head which left a deep wound. They bandaged my head and declared that the blow had been dealt out of vengeance. At the district tribunal I gave the same testimony.

Tardy Remorse!

SOME time later, my wound healing, I began to calm down, but remorse assailed me. I saw the truth in all its horror. An abyss had opened up for my innocent victims. I decided to act according to my conscience and my feeling for justice. This time I sent true confessions to the attorney of the district court of appeals and to the court of the tribunal. I submitted myself to a medical commission which found, in spite of the five months which had passed, the marks of the tortures of which I had been the victim. They discovered five scars, one of which was ten centimeters long, the others of different sizes.

The tribunal will bring everything to light.

Irresponsible?

IN the court room, in the presence of the judge and of the witnesses, I shall show you, Mr. Deputy, the traces of the tortures which I have undergone, and you will be able to see that the sufferings which I have endured were the most inhuman. They have killed the feeling of responsibility in me for all that I have put forward. The chief culprit and the initiator of my false confessions was no other than the commander of the Defensive, the commissioner, Kutsuper. I have been maltreated by Agent Jan Wodnitzki, who, in order to deceive me, called him Janusch Dembski, and by two other agents whom I do not know, but whom I shall be able to recognize.

You can make use, Mr. Deputy, of the material that contains the confessions which I have written in prison and which I have sent to the courts, to the attorney of the district tribunal of Wilna and Nowogrodek, to the Court of Appeals and to the Court of the Tribunal. Up to the present, I have not yet received a single reply and the victims of my bad actions are still repining in prison.

I am perhaps unworthy, Mr. Deputy, of having my mistake pardoned by you whom I have so cruelly denounced. I hope, by way of compensation, that what I write you will have convinced you that I was under the influence of a strange will and under the pressure of unbearable physical suffering which I have had to undergo at the hands of the Defensive.

At this moment, I curse my action. I am incapable of describing all this concretely. This is only part of my arguments; the rest, Mr. Deputy, you will have at the special hearing, and more precisely in the court room.

I beg you, Mr. Deputy, to give me your moral support and thus to aid justice.

Signed: Bronislav Jancevitch.

THE SUNDAY WORKER

Meditations of a Cherry Picker

By PAULINE SCHULMAN.

CELIA and Doris met on a fruit farm as cherry pickers. Doris inquired how badly Celia would remain on the farm. Celia replied that had she not felt as if she owed a debt to society she would remain through the winter.

Doris looked at her with her large blue eyes and asked: "What do you mean by owing something to society? I cannot understand the word, debt especially, in connection with that other abstraction, Society."

Celia: "Did you notice a little while ago how I was stung by a bee? Do you know why? Because I interfered with its labor. It was busy with a cherry which I was trying to pick. So it stung me in self-defense. A little insect, without brains, yet it knows how to protect itself when its work of production is interfered with.

"Do human beings understand how to defend and protect themselves? No, because they are submissive slaves. They let a few individuals not only take their food away from them, but also the food of their little children. They build houses, and weave cloth for others, and in return they get but very little, hardly enough to eat, or keep neat and body together."

Celia was a bit out of breath. She stopped her brave, fanned herself with her apron, sent a fleeting glance at the cherry-laden tree, set herself down on the grassy spot, and renewed her charge at Doris. "Another incident let me mention, perhaps then you will better understand the nature of my fight to society."

"The other day I brought food from the village. I walked for it, as you may remember. I placed the food in my basket and started to go back to my farm. But the next day I found the food gone and the dishes broken. A poor child looking at me with indignation, as if to say: 'I had to do it. I was hungry.' They emptied the pail of my milk but they do not give me enough to eat. Well, I shouted myself. As to the child—they were in my way, so I broke them."

"You ask them that helpless woman question mark. Again, unable to answer. Because of ignorance, persecution and fear how to help themselves. And soon, the master of the earth, is not the slave, and when he is obliged to flee elsewhere has been the horror of bread that he is hated, his life hungry, very hungry indeed."

Doris: "What has all this to do with your cherry picking?"

Celia: "Did you see the vineyard outside this cherry orchard? And how far longer are you going? Do you know why you are grapes? Because the owner knows that without grapes he cannot eat or else the strength of the grapes will be reduced. This is why workers know that in order to create a plant or any other product, a certain deal of attention must be given to it, and especially to its gardener.

"In the homeland to one pays any wages to the workers. The hands are neglected altogether. They become poor and more unequal, they have not leisure from their lives of labour with finally develop into animal machines."

"And damn," said Celia, "on the cultured field and with human planks I had an opportunity to pay my debt to society."

Doris seemed to be bored by Celia's talk, and was gazing into the distance. Suddenly the sound of the bike were approaching once more stopped, now to reach the matrimonial harbor of safety where she would feel secure.

Doris: "Why did you come here, lady, field of real, not human planes?"

Celia: "Why did I come here? Oh, I see it. It is already twelve years that I am responding to the call of the flesh, refusing to read from the subways, hearing naught else but the whirr of the machine, and seeing endless gray walls before me.

"Life became dry and monotonous because the work I was doing did not interest me. It was dead material that I was handling, and for the benefit of whom? For a few individuals, my employer and his family, in order to enable them to live in luxury. Is it for this that I came here, I asked myself every single day. Of course not. I was eager to learn, and therefore entered the school of life in which I felt I could learn a great deal. Especially was I interested in problems concerning the rich and poor. When I was but a twelve-year-old child I used to ponder over the question why this division into classes and how it came about.

"My questions were usually answered by the statement that a girl of my age must not ask such foolish questions, for these ways of life have been instituted by the 'Lord,' etc. I think, will explain why I am here for a while."

When Celia and Doris were walking on the road, the neighboring farmers could never tell that these two were living in two different worlds. These two cherry pickers were far, very far, apart from each other in spirit.

Doris was contemplating the home which in her opinion was the refuge. She walked "aimlessly" and without "a purpose" in life, as she herself once stated.

But Celia kept on trudging up the hill and down the mountains, fearing none and nothing save the danger of becoming confined to a small little home. She traversed in her imagination every nook and corner of the world, a world that fully belonged to her, with its sorrows and joys, beauties and miseries.

How We Make Rubber

By ESTHER FRADKIN.

I WAS one of several hundred workers in a large rubber plant which is located in a small town in Massachusetts. I had to paste the lining on the last with my fingers. The first two weeks my fingers were so sore that I could dress mornings only with the greatest difficulty. When I told the girls about this, they advised me to soak my fingers in hot water and to massage them.

One afternoon when I went into the ladies' room to massage my fingers I noticed Mary standing in the corner with her face to the wall. Mary was a beautiful, healthy young woman who worked opposite me. She often made mistakes in her work, which the other girls tried to correct before the forelady noticed them.

When I came near Mary I was surprised to see that she was milking her breasts and allowing the milk to fall into the sink. She was crying bitterly. The elderly woman, whom we called Mother, was helping her. I learned later that Mary was trying to save baby by nursing it after work.

In the other corner of the room on a couch lay Nelly, also in tears. Her little boy was in the hospital in a critical condition. A few weeks before he had been run over. His mother was working at the time.

Everyone in the crowded room was moved by the plight of these two young mothers. One of the younger girls said: "Catch me getting a kid and going to work in a factory. If I get married my husband will work and I'll take care of the kids." "But suppose your husband gets sick, or loses his job? What are you going to do then?" asked one of the older women.

The woman whom we called Mother kept quiet for a while, then said: "I've worked here a long time, girls, and I've seen many young mothers suffer. But I think, what's the use of crying? Why can't we do something?" Angela, the floor girl, shouted: "Yes, why don't we do something? Why don't we form a union and get a nursery where mothers can leave their babies when they're working?" A soft little gray-haired woman in the corner of the room said quietly: "You read in the papers every day that unions are striking trying to get bread for workers and their children. They don't get bread, and they won't get nurseries. The only time that we'll get them is when we workers take over the factories."

Everyone in the room shouted: "Yes, yes, Emma is right." Mary and Nelly had stopped weeping now. They were listening to what we were saying. Then the bell rang. All of us, Mary and Nelly along with the rest, filed into the workroom, back to our tables.

Fragment

By OSCAR RYAN.

Look you, Evelyn:
John has gone to the front,
Where he will do great things.
—Oh? you're not everjoyed?

He, you have NO imagination,
But squirm at material inconvenances?
—A fine wife for a soldier!

You know, after it's all over,
He will come back to you;
—Glory, peace and power.
The lot of our countrymen;
And John the hero of it all.
—Just think! a hero!
—Why, you're crying . . . ?

FUNNY BIRDS

Hey—What's This?

A bird that goes to work for Mister Capitalist in some other workplace. This bird has no tail. It has only one wing. Its head is on backwards. Its feet are broken. He can't fly but sometimes tries to make him fly. Already you know the answer? The word is only of four letters. Chee, it's a cinch.

Hey, Some More. What's This

This bird thinks Coolidge is a great man. He believes in Santa Claus and won't let his children join the Young Pioneers. He thinks he will go to heaven after he died. They put this kind of a bird in clocks. The word has six letters. What's the answer?

Yee-Hee!
You know how badly The Daily Worker needs money, don't you? Did your Daddy and Mommy say? Go see—and him to do it right now.

BOO-HOO!

Here's a picture of Johnny Red today. Just look how sad he is. The tears are streaming down his cheeks. He's as blue as a cat without milk for a week. And you fellows did it! You did! Johnny is used to receiving at least 27 contributions a week and this week he only got 11.

Rose Harowitz did not write and neither did Crammion Oliver nor a whole lot of other Tiny Reds. I'll say Johnny is blue—real blue—blue boo-hoo!

You little Reds had better send something in if you don't want Johnny weeping all over the place. We can't hire another janitor to be mopping up all his tears.

Our Johnny Red has Editorial Blues
The tears are falling
Into his shoes.

You had better send
A thing or two today
Or Johnny Red
Will just fade away.

REMEMBER?

How we begged little Dorothy Red of Minneapolis to tell us her name? Just look at her answer! It's the cutest little thing! COMRADES ALL! I am a little girl,
Eight years old
This white
DOROTHY RUBIN
is my name.
The Red flag I will help to carry to fame.

My father is a worker
My mother is one too,
They are both red fighters
Against the robbing crew.

The Capitalist gang
Is cheating
On little children like We
And robs our fathers and mothers
Of their dearest family.

That's why my father and mother
Put RED blood in me.
I will join with
The workers
And fight for a world that's free.

Alla, Girl, Dopathy. Stay with us! And be sure to write often now that we are all acquainted.

Meierhold Theater in Moscow

(2)

By Ruth Epperson Kennell.

Meierhold and a synthesis of his scenery showing machine and factory forms used in dramatic representation.

FOR contrast with the old literary forms of the conventional written drama, we turn to the Meierhold theaters, where an entirely new theatrical art is in process of development. The avowed purpose of the director, Meierhold, is to make the theater a living part of the people's lives; not to produce the literary works of men of letters, but to be a dramatic chronicle and interpreter of social events. Art has only an incidental value in the social purpose of the theater. Therefore the plays produced here are not printed dramas, read by the public—they are simply events which live on the stage and which in many cases have only a temporary interest. Striving to satisfy that need which is driving the people of the west from the theater to the cinema, Meierhold employs the devices of film art on the stage. His theaters are in theatrical circles what the Communist Party is in political circles—agitator for and constructor of a new society.

During the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the 1905 Revolution in January the Theater of the Revolution presented a play, "The Barometer Indicates Storm," which vividly depicted scenes from that bloody period. The Meierhold staging was particularly effective for this subject: the great curtainless stage and on it plain wooden walls with steps leading above, which could be anything from a factory to a railway station, and containing within their mysterious depths interiors of the winter palace, offices, meeting halls and other scenes disclosed when a section of the wall opened, or when a set came rolling out on a platform with the actors placed for action. Such devices, including a screen on which were flashed stirring slogans and photographs of the heroes, made possible the rapidly shifting scenes and swift action essential to the reproduction of 1905 events. The incident of Bloody Sunday was made a living reality again. The workers, led by the Priest Gapon, carrying ikons and portraits of the czar and singing hymns, passed across the stage on their way to the winter palace. A moment later sounded the rattle of machine guns and the people came running back, only to fall dead or, wounded, to be lifted and carried away by their comrades. At last, the terrifying rattle of the machine guns gave way to the sprightly music of a military band. Then followed the futile deputation of the czar, the removal of the senile old general from his post, the forming of the Petersburg Soviet, a stirring meeting of the central committee at which Trotsky was chairman, and as a climax the arrest of the central committee, who sang the International as they were led away. The production was viewed by tens of thousands of Moscow workers.

AT the Meierhold in January appeared a new play which is decidedly the most artistic its ingenious director has produced. If one marvels at the mechanical construction of the Meierhold stage, at the rapidly shifting scenes and the acrobatic feats of the actors, at the combination of motion picture technique with the spoken drama and the profligate use of the spotlight (which is sometimes indiscriminately directed at the audience as well as the actors, in characteristic disregard of the former's comfort), one feels that here is an art as yet in its experimental stage. But in "Roar, China!" there is a toning down and discriminate use of all these elements to create something beautiful. The one set used throout—that of a British battleship at dock in a Chinese river port, with a body of real water lying between the dock and the steamer—lends itself admirably to the display and senseless chatter, strikes a jarring note, for it is not possible to contrast realism with burlesque.

A British battleship is unloading its cargo, which is in charge of an energetic American. The coolies, directed by a cringing Chinese foreman, are carrying the heavy bundles on their backs, in an endless procession of bent, straining bodies. A strange jargon rises as they speak in their own tongue. The foreman drinks out his orders, the workers take up the cry and make it into a song, and in rythmic motion they move the heavy machines. Finally the dock is cleared and the perspiring laborers are ready for their pay. But the American haggles with them, finally refusing their demands, and in scorn tosses them a few coins.

On deck, the fat lady and her extravagantly dressed daughter are trying to amuse themselves. The orchestra, in queer Scotch kilts, is playing above and the girl and her mother dance with the American and a young officer; glasses clink and champagne flows—in short, a typical Meierhold scene. Then the doors leading to the deck slam a white-clad figure, the little Chinese cabin boy, with a face like a flower. Across the water, off stage, shooting is heard: it is the rising murmur of the disconcerted workers. The cabin boy is called upon to interpret it: the dock laborers demand more money; they threaten. The officer draws his revolver, and the cabin boy falls on his knees and begs him not to shoot his people.

V. E. Meierhold, head of the new revolutionary theater.

It is night and the ship looms up in the shadows. The American is on the deck bargaining with an old boatman to take him across the narrow stretch of water. On the docks are lounging several of the disgruntled workers, who watch the altercations with sympathetic interest. The American refuses the boatman's price. The boatman, in turn, sits on his oars and refuses to move. The American attacks him, the boatman hits his oar; there is a struggle, a splash, and darkness hides the scene. A little later the workmen fish out of the water the American's funny panama hat and laugh at it.

The alarm is sounded—the American has been drowned! The crowd grows, the Chinese police appear and the boatman escapes in the crowd. A long, serif form wrapped in a sheet is carried in. The terror-stricken people try to creep away, but are held back by the British marines, who have quietly assumed command of the town.

The mayor of the town comes on board the ship with his interpreter, a Chinese student, to offer regrets and apologies for the accident. The captain will accept no apologies; moral recompense must be made for this outrage to the British flag. "But he is an American," suggests the student. "It is all the same," replies the captain, "he is ours." He demands that two of the dock laborers be executed in punishment for the murder; if this demand is not acceded to by nine o'clock the next morning the ship's guns will be turned on the city.

Again the wailing siren call which heralds each scene—the dark, curtainless stage grows light. The workers are sitting about eating bowls of rice. Street fakers, peddlers, beggars and opium vendors pass to and fro. An old peddler, his wares dangling, comes down into the audience. The student appears with the terrible news: two of them must die! But why? They have committed no crime. And which two? They try to hide from one another, to escape. The student resolves to send a telegram to Shanghai for help, but two marines bar the way. Meantime, the foreigners in the town are taking refuge on the steamer and all is being prepared for the bombardment.

Once more the mayor and his interpreter board the ship, bringing a rich silk robe as a present. The robe is accepted, but their efforts at conciliation fail. As the dawn approaches the white figure of the cabin boy appears on the forecastle. He is singing a plaintive, almost inaudible lament, while adjusting a rope about his neck. With a sigh he slips over the railing and hangs lifeless before the door of the cabin. But his sacrifice is in vain.

The workers on the dock finally decides to draw straws. The two selected for the sacrifice by this means are a young man and an old man. The young man has a wife and child whom he cannot bear to leave, and life seems just as sweet to the old man.

With all the ceremony of a religious rite the execution takes place on the dock next morning. All the foreigners are there, including three sisters from the mission, an English clergyman, an American girl in smart knickerbockers and a tourist with his camera ready to take the most harrowing scenes. The wife comes with her child to plead for mercy. "Tell her to ask God for help," suggests the student. "I will not tell her," replies the student, but as if she understand, the woman turns from her to seek the accused child who received at the mission and tramples it on the ground. The stocks are removed from the necks of the prisoners, who make a last effort to escape. Then culminates comedy last and they submit to being tied to the piles; covers are drawn over their heads, mercifully hiding their faces.

When the gruesome details are carried out to the end, the mood of the Chinese workers begins to change. A subdued roar rises. At this moment, a telegram is brought to the captain, summoning his ship to Shanghai where an uprising has taken place. With drawn revolvers, the captain and his crew back off the stage followed by the workers, who brandish their oars threateningly.

THE league of nations has done something to justify its existence, the the accomplishment may be of doubtful value to those most concerned. Take a commission at the head of which was a virtuous English woman, 1,000 hundred christian girls have been saved from Arab harems. It seems that many of the girls interesting in this kindly process of snatching Arabian chief did not take kindly to a proposal for liberation when they learned that freedom meant going to work at starvation wages or entering in life of shame under more unfavorable conditions than life in a harem.

SOME of those girls acted very much like the female dependents of the rich. When you mentioned work to them, said the English lady, they looked around at their quarters and lit another cigarette. Every puff meant to suggest the greatest contempt for the proposed change in their manner of living. How many of these parasites who go around on a paid commission to save souls would take any kindlier to an "honest living" than those they are "saving" on a salary?

THE subject peoples of the earth cannot be saved by hypocritical busybodies or appeals to "the better side of their natures." Girls in factories, wives and daughters in mines, nuns in convents and women in factories, must eat or they will know the reason why. Under this glorious system of ours the working class can only eat at the pleasure of the boss. Those who come under the boss's displeasure, or for other reasons can't find work, live on somebody, or die. They die only as a last resort. Do away with capitalism and all other kinds of exploitation will be on the way to disappear.

NEWS that Gene Tunney had breakfast with ex-Governor Cox of Ohio gave birth to rumors that the man who cake-walked for ten rounds with Jack Dempsey has his hat in the ring for the vice-presidency on the democrat ticket, in case Calvin Coolidge is a candidate for the presidency to succeed himself. In which event Tunney is expected to be the democrat's white hope at the head of the ticket. This would make a political contest only second to the grand Stetic fiasco staged in Philly.

THE woman who admitted with a chuckle that she was glad she killed her husband has my relief from the nonsense that other local husband-dispatchers get rid of when confronted with the remains of a mate. This woman who has earned our approbation fought a twenty-eight-year duel with her man, with variable fortune. Lost the contest might drag, she purchased a gun, and when her husband advanced to the fray last week ready to fight another round, his adversary pulled the trigger. "In such a case "glad I killed him" is every shead of the Babbittarian "I loved him so."

TIMES change. President Von Hindenburg of Germany received Vice-Admiral Welles of the American navy, who is visiting Germany. He had his binejackets march up the Unter den Linden. No doubt the movies were on the job and in a few days we will see the picture on the screen. And the audience will applaud. Eight years ago the same Von Hindenburg cheerfully and any American caught shaking hands with the old monarchist would not be handled too gently.

FRANK TINNEY, the comedian, is held in double contempt, only by his wife and a second time by Judge Norman S. Dike. Tinney is famous as a laugh-producer, but it seems that he failed ingeminiously with his wife. For the laughs he drew out of the public she is getting $200 a week, but it is reported that every time Tinney makes out a check for that amount he scowls as unpleasantly as does his wife whenever she does not get the money. About the only avenue of relief to Tinney is to become a bum or a judge. Judges are above contempt, or is it the other way.

HERE is a piece of information that will knock the starch out of prohibition agents and topers alike, the both are usually synonymous: Dr. Oscar Jones, speaking before the Association for Medico-Physical Research at the Congress Hotel, declares that "starch drunkenness" is the cause of 90 per cent of the untimely, non-violent deaths that take place yearly in America. Now, then, let us suppose that prohibition means anything and people boycott moonshine, what is to stop them from filling up on starch and cheating the law?

TIRED PIGEON MAY THROW SOME LIGHT ON PHILADELPHIA FAKE

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Sept. 26.—An unofficial investigation into an "advance dope" message on the Gene Tunney-Jack Dempsey championship fight is being made here today by Postmaster Clinton White.

Thursday morning a carrier pigeon hopped thru the door of the post-office, apparently tired from long flight. Postmaster White examined it and found a note under the identification band, "Tunney will win," was the message.

The registration number of the pigeon was A. J. Are-31.

The pigeon made no attempt to continue its flight. Today it was to be held pending a report on its ownership.

Postmaster White has debated letting the pigeon go, on the advice of newspaper men he is keeping it penned up temporarily.

"The message may mean nothing and again it may mean a whole lot," Postmaster White said. "It does not seem probable that anyone is sending 'mystery messages' by carrier pigeon just for amusement."

Quigley and Holmes Enter Discard

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 26.—The state and congressional campaign clash between the Farmer-Labor and republican parties here went to fever heat with the exposure of an attempt by the notorious Walter J. Quigley, disbarred from practising law because he was caught shaking down bootleggers, to circulate a round robin among representative farmer-labor spokesmen, in which they were to repudiate the Farmer-Labor ticket.

The "round robin" with the names secured was to have been made public Sept. 28. But Quigley wrote to a loyal supporter of the Farmer-Labor Party who turned the material over to the campaign headquarters here.

This effort follows close on the heels of the exposition of the Farmer-Labor Party by Emil Holmes, candidate for lieutenant governor, and it is claimed by party officials that there may be some connection between the two incidents.

Urge Shift to Democrats.

Both the Quigley "round robin" and the Holmes' repudiation urged a shift to the democrats. Two of those alleged to have signed the Quigley "round robin" here been arranging meetings for Holmes in the northern part of the state, where he has been attacking the Farmer-Labor Party. It is charged, however, by Farmer-Labor Party headquarters here that the republican campaign bosses and not the democratic politicians are behind this effort to create turmoil inside the Farmer-Labor Party. This is being

PHILLY BOSSES SEEK WRIT TO SMASH UNIONS

Ask Injunction Against Building Trades

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26. — The plea of Master Plumber Daniel J. Keating for an injunction against the members and officers of the Building Trades Council has been heard in common pleas court No. 1 before Judge Henry S. McDevitt.

The hearing this morning concerned itself mostly with getting the correct data on the officers of the various organizations belonging to the Building Trades Council and on the officers of the Building Trades Council. Plaintiff Daniel Keating, under fire from defense Attorney Henry John Nelson, succeeded in getting himself enmeshed in numerous contradictions in a very short time, but relief came in the form of an adjournment of court until Friday morning when the hearing will be continued.

The trouble arose over the attempt of Daniel Keating to make use of non-union plumbers on the building now going up at 43rd and Locust street. Mr. Keating took it upon himself to strike out from the agreement with the council, the clause referring to the use of union labor. The building engineers and the rest of the workers employed refused to work with the scab plumbers and as a result Keating lost the contract, and has there by brought a plea for an injunction. It is well known that a number of powerful master builders are behind the quixotic effort.

More British Miners' Delegates in Russia; German Women Arrive

VICTORY OF LIBERALS MAY MEAN CANADIAN MINISTER TO STATES

The return of the liberals to power in Canada and the growth of American capitalist influence in the dominion may result in the selection of a separate Canadian ambassador to the United States. Mentioned for the post is the wealthy Vincent Massey, manufacturer of agricultural implements, shown above, who stands for low tariff on American imports.

RESCUE SQUAD DIGGING FOR BURIED MINERS

Three Electricians Are Killed Outright

(Special to The Daily Worker)

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 26. — Forty-three miners are entombed here since last Friday 800 feet underground in the G. Pabst iron mine.

A rescue party is toiling ceaselessly in an effort to reach the prisoners. The shaft is choked by twisted steel and rock.

The men were imprisoned when a cave-in blocked the exit. There are three men in the morgue whose lives were crushed out when the lift was hurled to the bottom. The dead men were electricians.

The head of the rescue squad expressed hope that the men would be taken out alive. It is believed that there is plenty of good water, air and food at their disposal.

BRITISH MINERS CALL DELEGATE CONFERENCE TO CONSIDER POLICY

LONDON, Sept. 26.—In consequence of Premier Baldwin's rejection of the miners' peace offer as the basis for a tripartite conference, A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, has summoned a delegate conference for Wednesday.

Cook said he hoped some avenue towards peace might be opened in the special session of parliament which convenes on Monday.

UNITED STATES TURNS BACK ON WORLD COURT

Coolidge's Army Went Down Before Voters

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26. — American entrance into the world court almost faded entirely out of the international picture today.

The official announcement at the White House that President Coolidge does not approve the evasive manner in which the powers have dealt with the senate reservations, and that he is disinclined to submit a new protocol to the senate, thereby inviting a new and more acrimonious party struggle, was taken today as shoving the whole project into a more or less permanent pigeon-hole.

More Opened Up.

At the time John Bassett Moore, the only American jurist on the court, was visiting in this country, administration recalcitrants insisted upon his opinion being consulted. Moore was called to Washington and he was asked point blank whether, as an American and as a jurist on the court, he considered the harding-Hughes-Coolidge reservations to be sufficient. His reply, in substance, was:

"If I am required to give a 'yes' or 'no' answer my reply is 'no.'"

Sticks in The Joker.

Thereupon, justice Moore re-drafted the entire set of reservations, and added the famous fifth, which the league powers in their Geneva conference have just failed to approve. This reservation provides that the world court shall not render any advisory opinion on an international dispute in which the United States has or claims to have an interest, without the consent of this government being specifically given in such a case.

To Protect Government.

Mr. Moore considered such a reservation absolutely necessary to protect the American government from any snap "advisory opinions" that might conceivably be rendered in such contentious matters as immigration, tariffs, etc.

Thus, ironically enough, it was the American jurist on the court who wrote the reservations which now hid fair to keep the United States permanently out of the tribunal.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The longshoremen, checkers and cargo repairmen of the North Atlantic coast, intl. Longshoremen's Assn., have signed an agreement for 80 cents an hour, 44-hour week all year, $1.20 an hour for overtime, Sundays and holidays. Acceptance of the agreement was by vote of the membership.

TELEGRAPHERS CONTRIBUTE TO BRITISH MINERS

Issue Strong Appeal to Membership

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS.—(FP)—The grand division, Order of Railroad Telegraphers, has donated $1,000 to the locked out British miners for the relief of their families. It is sending to all its members a strongly worded appeal for further donations. The appeal reads in part:

"The plea of the British miners is not for themselves—it is for their wives and dependents, and they urge that their fellow workers in every land help them to bring their struggle to a successful conclusion by removing, so far as possible, their wives and children from the attacks being made upon themselves.

Women and Children.

"They themselves are inured to danger, struggle and want, for they have been forced to go thru years of struggle to accomplish what the operators would now so wantonly destroy, but their women and children cannot bear, as they can, the burden of the struggle. Therefore, in the name of our common humanity and the justice of their cause, they ask you to contribute to aid their women and children.

"The place to send all contributions is Washington, D. C., to Frank Morrison, secretary American Federation of Labor, A. F. of L. Bldg., who will receipt and account for every cent received."

1,000,000 TONS SCAB COAL FOR BRIT PLUTES

Virginia Mines Make Huge Profits

By GORDON CASCADEN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 26.—Virginia fields are breaking all previous records for production of coal in the mines of this state, according to figures compiled by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Shipments of fuel to Britain, to break the miners' strike, are responsible.

September promises to pass the highwater mark set in August. During that month production of coal in the Virginia fields set three or four records, C. B. Neal, of Norton, secretary of the Virginia Coal Operators' Association, announces:

Production during the last week of August reached 271,100 tons, the largest single week's production. The total for August was 1,035,430 tons, the largest single month since February, this year, and the largest August in the history of the Virginia fields.

1,000,000 Tons Excess Production.

The total 1926 production, 8,625,000 to date, exceeds by 1,000,000 tons, the largest previous production in the history of the fields for the first eight months of the year.

This is the record of 71 active mines in Virginia. It represents 80 per cent capacity of these mines, which is as near to 100 per cent production as mine operations ever.

Railroads bringing coal to Hampton Roads with its twin ports of Norfolk and Newport News, report September business up to the high August level.

Wartime Volume of Business.

Railroads passing thru Cumberland, Maryland, one of the most important division points for railroads hauling coal from the mines to Baltimore and other seaports, report business as equal to wartime volume.

Heavier traffic is expected during the next two weeks and more trainmen are being employed to care for it. The increase in business is much heavier than is usual at this time of the year, with the approach of winter is considered the peak period of railroad traffic.

"Coal shows the greatest increase with production not abreast of the demand," a press dispatch under a Cumberland date line says.

200 Car Loads per Day Increase.

The freight movement over the Western Maryland railroad thru Cumberland has jumped from 500 to 700 loads a day. This time last year the daily movement was less than 300 trains.

The Baltimore & Ohio is moving a daily average of 1,000 trains from the Fairmont district alone, or 1,400 from the Connellsville division. The Cumberland and Pennsylvania, which is fed by the Georges Creek field, is carrying 125 loads daily.

All these trains pass thru Cumberland.

Soft coal traffic of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad for the first eight months of 1926 shows a 10,000 increase over the same period a year ago.

British Strike—Scab Coal.

"The British coal strike has been a leading factor contributing to the larger volume of coal and coke movement," J. S. Armstrong, a financial writer reports.

"As soft coal represents a third of all the car loadings originating on the Baltimore & Ohio lines, the gain in this item has had an important bearing on the improvement in total freight traffic handled," he continues.

Bondholders of stocks of other railroads hauling coal to Hampton Roads and Baltimore for shipment to the British isles are also happy. Every ton of "scab" coal shipped across the seas to smash the British miners' strike swells the profits of these American railroad owners.

What the Party Must Do to Keep The Daily Worker

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party

THE whole party must be mobilized for the campaign to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

Every party committee from the district committee down thru the city committees, section committees, sub-section committees to the executive committees of the unclei must actively and energetically take up the campaign to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

Every member of the party must give support to this campaign and make the work to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER his first duty.

The raising of the $50,000 fund to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER has first call upon the whole party. There is no other work which takes precedence over it. There is no other work which has greater immediate importance for the party.

THE DAILY WORKER is the center of the activities of the party. Without The DAILY WORKER, thru which we speak to the party members, to the sympathizers of the party and to the mass of the workers, the work of the party will be crippled. There will be no centralizing influence, no organ thru which the party can express its views and give leadership in the day to day events of the class struggle.

Our party today is the leader in support of those policies and movements which stand for a forward movement by the workers of this country toward a militant class struggle for a higher standard of life, and against the powerful capitalist imperialists who today rule this country in the interest of greater profits for the exploiters. The DAILY WORKER is the militant voice thru which the party expresses its policies and supports these movements.

TURN to any phase of the class struggle in this country which expresses a forward movement of the workers, thru which the workers have made actual achievements and our party, and The DAILY WORKER will be found to be the heart and center, the inspirer and organizer of these movements.

The strikes of major character which have been won during the last year, the greatest achievements in organizing of masses of the workers, the campaigns of resistance against the attacks of the capitalists, the movements in support of national groups exploited by the American imperialists, have been inspired and led by the Communists who are members of the Workers (Communist) Party. The DAILY WORKER is the most powerful weapon of the party in these struggles.

We must KEEP THE DAILY WORKER so that this work may go on, so that these movements and struggles may take on even greater volume, so that out of them will develop a mass revolutionary movement against American imperialist capitalism, which can meet it upon the field of battle and wrench power from it.

The Situation of The Daily Worker.

THE crisis which The DAILY WORKER is facing at the present time comes at a moment when the party has overcome the great difficulties in its work, when the outlook for a faster advance is brightest, when the working masses are showing signs of engaging in more militant struggles and the movement among the workers to fight their exploiters is growing in volume.

These developments promise a broader base for The DAILY WORKER in the future. If The DAILY WORKER can overcome its present difficulties it has before it the opportunity of widening its support and gaining a position where the danger of losing this important weapon in the class struggle will no longer seriously threaten us.

Our party has carried the burden of giving the revolutionary movement in this country a militant daily voice for nearly three years. It succeeded in establishing The DAILY WORKER in spite of the almost insurmountable obstacles to the successful launching of such an enterprise. It kept The DAILY WORKER alive during these three years in spite of recurring financial crisis.

IT is the party—the party membership—which must again rally to the support of The DAILY WORKER and carry it thru the present situation. It is primarily the party which must raise the money which will overcome the present crisis and place The DAILY WORKER up a sound footing to build itself and strengthen itself during the forward movement of the workers, so that it will no longer face dangers such as the present.

The danger to The DAILY WORKER is immediate. It must meet at once the accumulated debts of the last year. Quick action to raise $10,000 immediately and a campaign during the next three months to secure the whole of the $50,000 is the work before the party.

WHAT is needed for The DAILY WORKER is such a demonstration of loyalty and support as will give The DAILY WORKER $10,000 in the next ten days—a demonstration of loyalty and support which will show the enemies of The DAILY WORKER that the party membership will not permit this weapon to be wrenched from the hands of the party.

How the Campaign is to Be Conducted.

EVERY nucleus of the party has received direct instructions in regard to what the party members must do to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CERTIFICATES have been printed in books containing $5.00 worth of certificates.

Every party member must buy one of these books of certificates or take a book of certificates from his nucleus secretary and sell the certificates, which are in denominations of $1.00, 50c and 25c, among his friends, shopmates and brother union men, and thus raise his $5.00.

Those members who can buy a book of certificates and pay the $5.00 must do so in order to help raise the $10,000 which is needed immediately.

THE KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CERTIFICATES are being distributed thru the district offices. Each nucleus secretary should immediately go to the district office and secure the certificate books for the members of his nucleus. Do charged openly in the current issue of the Farmer-Labor Advocate, the official campaign publication.

Quigley and Holmes Enter Discard

It is pointed out that the republicans, recognizing the farmer-labor candidates as their real opponents, are making a drive to shift as many farmer-labor votes as they can to the democratic party, arguing that the democratic party is the party of protest and that nothing can be gained by a three-cornered fight thru combining the Farmer-Labor Party in the field.

Republicans' Reveal Themselves.

Three prominent republicans from time to time have expressed the hope and the desire, thru their bought press, that something could be done to rehabilitate the democratic party as a minority opposition. Paralleled with this desire was the hope that something might be done to kill off the Farmer-Labor Party.

There are many connecting links to show that these wishes and hopes fathered the Quigley "round robin."

Quigley was formerly a non-partisan league organizer and later was active in the campaigne of Charles Lindbergh, Floyd Olson and Frank Davis, the last of these, it is claimed, having spent about $50,000 to capture the Farmer-Labor nomination for governor in the recent primaries that gave the nomination to Magnus Johnson. The Minneeota Union Advocate, edited by William Mahoney, declares that:

Quigley Has Checkered Career.

"Quigley has had a checkered career in the progressive movement. At different times he has assumed treacherous attitudes and sought to profit by undermining the organization he was presumed to represent. He was active in the campaign two years ago but his sincerity was always questioned. When A. N. Jacobs was arrested for libeling Magnus Johnson, Quigley served as his attorney. This confirmed the suspicions that during the campaign while working on the state committee he was really supporting Tom Schall, (republican who was elected) against Magnus Johnson for senator."

This Jacobs was best known as editor of The Harpoon, a shakedown sheet. He spent his time hanging around the state capitol when the legislature was in session.

Held Out on Bait.

Quigley was careful to have a juicy lure for his conversion. He pointed out to the "lucky 16" who would sign his round robin that they would be the future leaders of the rehabilitated democratic party, while he now admits is nothing more than a corpse. Quigley paints a beautiful picture of democratic success in the 1928 presidential elections, which will result in national democratic victory and patronage flowing into the state.

Information secured indicates that Quigley was already claiming that among those who had signed his round robin was Oscar Brekke, president of the non-partisan league faction of the Farmer-Labor Party; R. A. Trovatten, former member of the state legislature from Yellow Medicine county, and a man named Emil Haligren and another named Carl Hultin from Hillman county. He also claims Sam Wallace of Perham. None of these has any real influence or standing beyond his own immediate circle. The Minnesota Union Advocate again points out:

"It is generally believed that republican and republican leaders in this state is back of the Quigley movement. Knowing the latter's sordid and unscrupulous character, it is not hard to understand how he could be induced to undertake the act of treachery to the progressive movement."

The Minnesota Union Advocate surveys the republican fears as follows:

"The republican party recognizes that this is a farmer-labor year. The state administration has betrayed agricultural interests and thereby imposed continued stagnation on the entire state. The administration of the state government has been a monumental jobs. Embezzlement and corruption and inefficiency have been rampant. The economy claims of the Christianson (republican) administration have been disproven by the increase in the cost of the government and the addition of high-priced office holders. The only way in which it is possible to prevent the defeat of the republican party is to destroy the morale of the farmer-labor supporters and cause a division amongst them. If Quigley and his bunch can take away 30,000 votes it may mean the success of the republican party, which would be worth a good many thousands of dollars to the special interests. We believe the republicans would pay well for this sort of treachery."

Farmer-Labor Party Solidified.

H. G. Teigan, secretary of the Farmer-Labor Party, points out that the Quigley maneuver can only succeed in strengthening the farmer-labor party. It will express and drive from it all elements not of the co-

GRAFT IN POST OFFICE EXPOSES SCHEME OF RAILWAY COMPANIES; RIVAL RAILROADS WIN A SHARE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(FP)— Three of the most hard-boiled enemies of organized labor in the post-office department are in disgrace as a result of disclosure of unfair routing of mail between Chicago and Florida.

One of the Ohio Gang.

W. H. Riddell was appointed as general superintendent of the railway mail service when the Harding administration took control in 1921. One of his intimate friends was a former division superintendent of the service who had been taken into the employ of the Southern Railway as its mail traffic manager.

Most of the big railroads have employed ex-officials of the railway mail service as their mail traffic managers. Their job is the getting for their respective roads as much of the mail-hauling business as possible. The bureaucracy in the government service is not permitted to forget that railway companies will have jobs for them in the future if they throw business in the right direction.

Between Chicago and Florida a great increase in mail traffic has taken place in the past three years. The ordinary and shortest route for the haul was over the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis and the Louisville & Nashville thru Evansville, Nashville, Chattanooga and Atlanta. But General Superintendent Riddell began diverting the traffic to the Big Four as far as Cincinnati and then over the Southern thru to Florida.

This gave a long and very profitable haul to the Southern and much pressure to his friend, the mail traffic manager of the Southern. It hurt the middle western roads that had expected to have the business. They complained. The railway mail clerks' organization, which is always told that the government cannot afford to give them better conditions, joined in shaking up the game.

Postal inspectors investigated and reported. Gross inefficiency in handling the mail was indicted. Riddell was also charged with refusal to obey orders from the heads of the department. Finally he was demoted to the rank of division superintendent, while the division superintendents at Cincinnati and Atlanta were likewise demoted.

POLITICAL POT SIMMERING IN EMPIRE STATE

Plute Parties Are Picking Jockeys

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 26—The New York state political pot, which has been steaming for the last few weeks, started boiling in earnest today.

The republican state convention will get under way at Madison Square Garden, New York City on Monday, while the democratic convention will start the same day at Syracuse.

G. O. P. Picking Candidate.

Gov. Al. Smith will be renominated by the democrats and there is every indication that the republicans will pick Representative Ogden L. Mills of New York as their gubernatorial candidate.

United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., will be a candidate for re-election. Supreme Court Justice Robert F. Wagner, of New York, close friend of Gov. Smith, will be nominated by the democrats for United States senator to oppose Wadsworth.

To Dodge Liquor.

A declaration favoring modification of the Volstead act will be made in the democratic state platform. It was said here today on high authority. If Senator Wadsworth has his way, no mention of prohibition will be made in the republican platform, according to reports at the capital.

UNITED STATES NOT INVITED TO TANGIER MEET

France and Britain Are the Hosts

MADRID, Spain, Sept. 26. — The United States will be left out in the cold while Great Britain, France, Spain and Italy meet early in November to discuss the future status of the Tangier international zone. This information was conveyed by the Spanish foreign minister who is sorry for this slight but could do nothing about it.

It appears that Spain had extended an invitation to the United States on Sept. 1st and the United States accepted. Afterwards Spain was forced to drop claim to Tangier and does not seem to be particularly worried just now, who sits in on the conference.

Powers Are Jealous.

France and Great Britain are the main instigators of the conference and Spain and Italy are simply tolerated.

Hub Clothing Bosses Sign New Agreement with the Amalgamated

BOSTON—(FP)—Twenty-four Boston clothing manufacturers have signed the new agreement drawn up by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union. The agreement requires the manufacturers to furnish the union with weekly statements of records of garments cut, so that comparison can be made with the records of the garments shipped to contractor shops for finishing. This will enable the union to check up on the contract shops and take steps to prevent work being done by nonunion contractors.

TAMMANY HALL CUPS ARREST DICK MOORE, NEGRO LABOR LEADER

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The arrest of Richard Moore, Negro leader, has brought much protest from such organizations as the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and others. Moore was arrested as he was speaking at an open air meeting in Negro Harlem denouncing the policy of Harlem theatres in paying less than the union scale to Negro moving picture operators. Police drove an automobile into the audience; dispersing the meeting and Moore was taken to the police station, charged with disorderly conduct at the complaint of the proprietor of the Lafayette Theater. The case was postponed. Moore is secretary of the New York council of the American Negro Labor Congress.

STRIKE CALLED TO AID ORGANIZE DURANT FACTORY

A. F. of L. Conducts N. J. Drive

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ELIZABETH N. J., Sept. 26. — An organization drive conducted by the American Federation of Labor to unionize the Star plant of the Durant Motor company in Elizabeth has resulted in a walk-out of the entire trimming department of several hundred workers thus far.

This had been preceded by a lockout of two days duration after which all but those active for unionization were taken back. Picket lines are being formed at all gates and A. F. of L. organizers are on the job.

Mass Picketing.

A mass picket demonstration was staged Friday and the strikers' appeal was well received by the workers still in the plant. Their slogan is, "100 Per Cent Union."

A mass meeting is being arranged by the machinists' union and is being extensively advertised by a dodger campaign conducted by the strikers.

Fascist Head Gunman Insults Mussolini; Lands in Rome Jail

ROME, Sept. 26. — Amerigo Dumini, who organized the fascisti in Florence, and was charged with being the organizer of the murder of Deputy Matteotti, was arrested in Rome charged with offenses against the Premier, Mussolini.

Dumini, who has been a strong supporter of Roberto Farinacci, former fascist chief, several days ago met a personal opponent of Farinacci in the Piazza Colonna. It is alleged that Dumini insulted Farinacci's opponent and made violent remarks concerning Mussolini.

BEN GITLOW TO SPEAK AT CHICAGO ELECTION CAMPAIGN RALLY, OCT. 6

A second election mass meeting to be held under the auspices of Local Chicago of the Workers (Communist) Party is to be held at the Emmett Memorial Hall, corner Ogden and Taylor, on Wednesday, October 6th, at 8 p. m.

WHAT ARE YANK GUNBOATS DOING UP IN HANKOW?

Sharp Query Sent to Kellogg

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—News that American marines on board the Pigeon were wounded while the ship patrolled the civil war zone near Hankow on the Yangtze River, China, prompted Dr. Herry F. Ward, chairman of the American Committee for Justice to China, to inquire what American warships were doing in that vicinity. Ward's wire to Frank Kellogg, United States secretary of state, reads:

Question Authority for Acts.

"The newspapers report that American gunboats are steaming to Hankow, 600 miles up the Yangtze River in the interior of China, despite instructions by the Chinese local authorities for all foreign vessels to proceed downstream because of the state of civil war about that city. Other units of the United States navy seem to be patrolling the same river about Hankow and United States marines have been wounded on board the Pigeon and other ships in the civil war zone have been fired upon. We respectfully ask under what clause of what treaty the United States claims the right to patrol Chinese internal waters with its warships and what act of congress authorizes action which is so likely to involve the United States both in the Chinese civil war and in possible conflicts between China and other foreign powers."

Prominent Persons on Committee.

On the national committee of the American Committee for Justice to China are, among others, Glenn Frank, president Wisconsin University; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Bishop S. J. McConnell, William Allen White, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, James H. Maurer, president Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, and a number of other labor and church leaders.

ENTRANCE OF U.S. INTO COURT IS A DIM PROBABILITY

Geneva Action Puts It in Far Future

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—America's actual entrance into the world court is a matter relegated to the dim and misty future, if it has not been forestalled entirely, by the action of the powers at Geneva in evading the fifth of the senate reservations.

Concensus of Opinion.

This represents the concensus of opinion in Washington, pro-court and anti-court alike. The irreconcilables declare the refusal of the powers to agree to accept the fifth reservation, which states that the world court may not render an advisory opinion in any case to which the United States "has or claims to have" an interest, without the consent of this government being specifically given.

The pro-court forces are correspondingly glum, and yet withal rather helpless to remedy it.

Can Only Resubmit.

If the powers abide by the decision reached at Geneva—and there is every reason to believe they will—the only way the United States can enter the court is for President Coolidge to resubmit the question to the senate.

Soviet Concessionaire Decides to Negotiate With Russ Labor Union

MOSCOW, Sept. 5. — (By Mail) — The chief director of the Indo-European Telegraph Agency whose employes are on strike has proposed the opening of negotiations to the Post and Telegraphic Workers' Union which is conducting the strike. The union has accepted the proposal.

TELEGRAPHERS ENROLL OVER THREE HUNDRED MEMBERS IN AUGUST

ST. LOUIS—(FP)— The Order of Railroad Telegraphers enrolled 374 new members in August, their total membership is 35,000 according to the A. F. of L. executive council report.

RAIL MEDIATION BOARD MAY SOON GET SHOW DOWN

P. R. R. Company Union The Big Issue

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(FP)— Five members of the board of mediation provided by the Watson-Parker railway act and appointed by President Coolidge to handle disputes arising between rail management and rail labor are busy in various parts of the country, clearing the ground of minor difficulties. The big problems have not been approached closely.

No Big Issue Settled.

In the offices of the rail unions and the railroad companies the labor-Pepresentation issue has not been forced to a settlement. Both sides wait for a test case involving the standard rail labor unions and some of the big roads that have fought these unions in past years to come to the board for its "interpretation of the law," which is the technical name of one of its opinions.

Penney Keeps Company Union.

Union men are looking for a struggle involving the Pennsylvania lines, where the company union is still recognized contrary to President Atterbury and the company detectives still active in spotting and removing trade union organizers. The Machinists' general lodge has issued a circular invitation to its membership to send in statements of cases in which union men have been discriminated against by rail bosses for union membership or union activity.

When the facts are in hand the Machinists will demand that the controversy join it in creating a board of adjustment. If the company replies as it is expected to reply—that a majority of its shopmen refuse to affiliate with the trade union and are represented by the company union—the trade union will appeal to the federal board and that body will have to give an opinion as to how the trade unionists can protect themselves when working on the Pennsylvania.

The board will have to investigate and find that the Watson-Parker act means something. Either they will find that it means that trade union membership shall be a basis only for hostile reads, or they will find that the law does not protect trade unionists. In the latter case the law will be just another scrap of paper, and the trade unionists will have done with it.

Thus far the board of mediation has received between 60 and 70 disputes and is now busy in scattered fires from Boston to San Francisco at the job of mediating them. The biggest case—the wage demands of the conductors and trainmen on eastern lines—is being handled by Chairman Winslow. Commissioner Hanger is in Boston, Morrow in Chicago and Williams and Davies on the Pacific coast.

Queen Coming Despite Ferdie's Illness.

PARIS, Sept. 26. — The illness of King Ferdinand will not prevent Queen Marie of Roumania from sailing for the United States on the Leviathan on October 12, according to a telegram received today by Ira Nelson Morris, former American ambassador to Sweden, just prior to his sailing on the Aquitania for New York.

Recommend Locarno Pacts' Adoption.

GENEVA, Sept. 26. — The league of nations assembly today passed a resolution recommending that all states adopt the procedure of conciliation as established at Locarno by mutual security pacts.

SCAB CLOTHIERS LEFT CHI ONLY TO MEET WORSE

Retribution Dodges the Sweater's Trail

By MAUD McCREERY, Federated Press.

WAUKEGAN, Ill.—(FP)—It ran away from Chicago, away from the power of the union that had wrung decent working conditions and decent pay out of its miserly grasp. It made tracks for Waukegan where the chamber of commerce used to welcome any and every anpioter that failed to make good under civilized conditions elsewhere. It established itself, paid starvation wages, violated the child labor law, ignored the sanitary regulations, double-crossed its employes, thought it could laugh at the union from its runaway perch in Waukegan, and now—it is strikebound, sewed up tighter than one of its own coat buttons, by the walkout of 122 of its 130 workers.

Could Not Get Far Enough.

The disillusioned runaway is the Greuer L. Rothschild coat and overcoat shop, formerly of Chicago, now of Waukegan. Its onsavory record in Waukegan caused the chamber of commerce to regret its location, compelled the state's attorney to prosecute it for violation of the industrial code and brought it to confess to a plea of guilty in court. Its slave-driving and sweat-shop labor policy roused its employes to such a ferment that they began to whisper organization, then plan it and finally to shout it in an open meeting.

Strikal

The public meeting took place Sept. 21. Next day five women and one man, who had been reported by the Greuer & Rothschild stools, were discharged. The following day three more women and two more men lost their jobs. And than with one accord over 100 others walked out, chose an organization committee and struck the works. Cutters and other key employes joined the semi-skilled. Only eight stayed on.

The Old Rough Stuff.

The police rushed to the factory in the patrol wagon and began the familiar rough stuff with the girl pickets, the there was no provocation. But organized labor has learned a change in police tactics and the next day the police were begging the girls' pardon for the previous rowdyism in uniform.

The only demands of the strikers are that the 11 workers who were victimized be reinstated by the boss and that the firm agree to collective bargaining. The case of a union is under way and when formed it will be a local of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who had control of the shop before it ran away from Chicago.

Philly Bosses Seek Union Smashing Writ

Keating's attempt to smash the Building Trades Council.

The attorney of the Building Trades Council interpret this move as a direct attempt to establish the open shop in the building industry in Philadelphia. And are ready to fight for the maintenance of the union standards and union control in the industry.

Names Many Union Officials.

The following were named in Mr. Keating's plea:

Joseph W. Attison of the Associated Building Trades of Philadelphia and Vicinity; James A. Kelly of the United Association of Plumbers, Local 113; Charles A. Wills of the United Association of Steamfitters and Helpers, Local No. 420; James Cooley of the Hoisting and Portable Engineers, Local No. 542; International Union of Elevator Operators and Starters, Local No. 69; Charles P. Sweeney of the Quaker City District Council Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers; James McDevitt of the Operative Plasterers, Cement Finishers, Asphalt and Composition Floor Layers, Local No. 592; Arthur Hill and Otto C. Roth of the District Council No. 1, Brotharhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, and James Ford of the United Housesmiths and Bridgemen.

Reminded of Naval War Preparations

Capitalist armament continue, we are reminded by the St. Louis Labor. Rear Admiral Moffet, naval air chief, announced plans for expenditure during the fiscal year of approximately $12,000,000 made available by congress for purchase of new naval airplanes. The program is expected to add 252 ships to the navy air fleet, 100 of them being fighting planes, 47 observation planes, 61 bombing, torpedo and scouting planes, and 74 training planes. Designs for the new planes will be determined in competitive flight tests, and the navy department expects about 24 airplane manufacturing concerns to participate in the competition. Thus competitive armament between the capitalist countries of the world goes on indefinitely and the people's money by the hundreds of millions is used for the purpose of legalized murder en masse and wholesale destruction of property and wealth.

What the Party Must Do to Keep THE DAILY WORKER

not wait for them to be sent. Show your co-operation in the campaign by helping at every point to carry thru the plan of work which has been outlined.

Settlements for the certificates sold should be made at every nucleus meeting and the money remitted promptly to The DAILY WORKER. Quick action is necessary at every point in order to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

THE sale of the KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CERTIFICATES should not only be carried on thru the party members in the nuclei. Every language fraction should hold a KEEP THE DAILY WORKER meeting and organize to carry the campaign for contributions into the fraternal and other organizations of which they are members. The fight of THE DAILY WORKER for the protection of the foreign-born workers should be the basis of this campaign.

Every trade union fraction of the party should take up the campaign and carry it into the trade unions of which they are members, selling the certificates to the members and securing donations from the unions themselves. The fight of The DAILY WORKER for militant trade unionism and support of the workers' strikes should be the basis of this phase of the campaign.

Our 10,000 party members, if they mobilise their strength and organize for the work, if they make use of every avenue of raising funds can raise the $50,000 needed to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

The Organization of Campaign Committees.

KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CAMPAIGN COMMITTEES must be organized in every leading committee of the party. Every district committee must organize a special committee, under the chairmanship of the district organizer, which will be responsible for carrying out the campaign.

Every city committee must organize such a committee. Where there are section and sub-sections KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CAMPAIGN COMMITTEES must be organized by the section and sub-section committees.

THE leading committees must organize the party speakers and send them to the nuclei, to the language fractions, to the trade union fractions, to mobilize these units of the party and stimulate their activity in support of the campaign.

Membership meetings should be called in the smaller cities for the whole city and in the larger cities by sections at which the campaign is outlined and the activity organized.

We Can KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

THE party can keep The DAILY WORKER if it mobilises its strength to achieve that goal. It is easily within the reach of 10,000 party members to raise a $50,000 KEEP THE DAILY WORKER FUND.

What is needed, what must be done, is that the party, down to the last member, is mobilized for this work, that all its strength and enthusiasm is thrown into the campaign.

WE can make the KEEP THE DAILY WORKER CAMPAIGN an impressive mobilization of the party.

WE MUST MAKE IT THAT.

WE MUST SHOW WHAT THE PARTY CAN DO WHEN IT THROWS ALL ITS STRENGTH INTO THE BALANCE—WHEN IT IS FORCED TO FIGHT TO KEEP ITS MOST IMPORTANT WEAPON IN ITS HANDS.

THAT IS THE KIND OF CAMPAIGN WE MUST HAVE. THAT IS THE KIND OF A CAMPAIGN WE ASK THE PARTY MEMBERS AND THE LEADING COMMITTEES OF THE PARTY TO ORGANIZE AND KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

BRITISH T. U. C. IS STIRRED BY WOMEN'S VOICE

Deliver Ultimatum To Fossilized Officials

(FP)—"The British Trades Union congress still fails to take the women workers seriously, as was shown at the Bournemouth sessions early this month," said Dorothy P. Gary of the Minneapolis Teachers' union in passing thru Chicago back to her job from a summer in Europe. At the British labor meet she assisted Scott Nearing and Bill Ross, the Federated Press correspondents who had been assigned to cover it.

"One of the liveliest sessions was that assigned to the women, but it was the rank and file delegates and not the officialdom that made it so," Gary relates. "While the number of women in industry has reached 4,000,000 only 800,000 are organized.

"This large body of workers, about one-fourth of the total British working class, is proving, when unorganized, a menace to many unions, and a drag on the entire movement. The bulk of the women are in the clerical, semi-professional, textile and clothing trades. They drive down the wages of organized workers and in time of strike they scab.

Many Militant Women Unionists.

"On the other hand, in many labor battles, women unionists have demonstrated that women make as militant fighters as the men.

"This first annual women's trade union conference had 85 delegates in all, 45 women and 37 men. Three resolutions were moved by men members, and the fourth by a woman member of the council.

Women Waste No Time.

"The protest from the women delegates began immediately. With great candor and rather pointed humor, these women unionists expressed their disappointment. Ellen Wilkinson, labor organizer and newly elected Labor M. P. led off: Why did the general council draw up these harmless resolutions? Why authorized women have some ideas on the subject. Why are so few women on this program?

Pointed Remarks.

"Delegate Horan, National Union of General Workers, stated, 'This program savors of a happy evening for the poor. Too much time is spent on plans to organize workingmen's wives, and too little on the woman in industry.'

"This silly stuff,' another woman delegate said, reminds me of that Daily Herald poster there: Women Will Like the Popular Picture Page in the Daily Herald.

Want Freedom of Action.

"Ruby Part, Women Workers' Union, told her experiences in organizing women. She ended with the statement, 'This policy of superseding the women is detrimental to trade unionism.' She was followed by Dorothy Evans, Women Clerks and Secretaries' Union, who also discussed methods.

"The conference discussion, which continued 3 hours, showed that the British labor movement does not lack intelligent trained women ready to tackle the problems which especially concern the working woman. It also showed a growing independence, and determination on their part to demand their full responsibilities in the movement.

"In all good humor, the women told the general council, 'if you would let us handle this question it would be much better.'"

Alfonso and Rivera Reach Compromise on Spanish Government

MADRID, Sept. 26.—While the results of the recent cabinet meeting with the king are still a profound secret, it is believed from the announcements so far made that the king and Primo de Rivera have reached a compromise that will tend to forestall any republican revolution.

The king has evidently forced Dictator de Rivera to yield to the demand for constitutional forms of government. De Rivera had previously insisted that his dictatorship must go on for three years. Now the national assembly is to be called for November.

On the other hand nine high officers of the artillery corps are announced to retire from command. This apparently is in line with de Rivera's demand for a reorganization of the corps and indicates that the king has given way to him on that issue.

De Rivera's own retirement is the subject of conjecture. Some rumor he will be forced to retire gracefully with the advent of the national assembly. De Rivera's enemy, one of them among the conservative party, Sanchez Guerra, has been called in by the king. Senor Guerra opposed de Rivera so bitterly that he refused to attend birthday receptions of the king and queen because they were supporting the dictator.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—Georges Michal, the Boulogne baker who holds the record for swimming the English channel, has tentatively accepted the invitation of the American Bakers' Association to visit the United States.

The Funeral Pyre of an Air Adventure

Thick black smoke, bolching from a deep red core of flame, marked the funeral pyre of two aerial adventurers and the famous Sikorsky-Fonck biplane, three minutes after it had started on its non-stop flight from New York to Paris. Captain Fonck and his associate pilot, Lieut. Curtin escaped with minor injuries; Charles Clavier, wireless operator, and Jack Islamoff, mechanic, died at their posts in the after fuselage of the machine. An over-burden of gasoline and a defective under-carriage were responsible for the tragedy. Before the plant plane had run half the distance necessary for the take-off, one of the temporary wheels broke and damaged a rudder. From then on a quick succession of accidents was climaxed by the plane's collapse in a fiery inferno and the explosion which ended the career of the "New York-Paris."

ALLIANCE WITH BRITISH LABOR WILL NOT BREAK

Russ Union Head Says Bond Unbreakable

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Sept. 3 —(By Mail)—In connection with the refusal of the British government to permit the delegation of the labor unions of the U. S. S. R. to the British Trade Union Congress in Bournemouth to land, comrade Melnichansky, a member of the Presidium of the Central Council of the Soviet Labor Unions declared:

Strike Was Political.

"This fact merely corroborates the political nature of the events in Great Britain. From the very first day of the miners' struggle the British bourgeoisie in the person of the conservative government grasped the political significance of the attitude of the workers and put the whole power of the state into operation in order to throttle the general strike.

"The British bourgeoisie and the conservative government have attempted to isolate the miners from the outside world. The refusal of permission to land is without doubt an act of revenge against the Central Council of the labor unions of the U. S. S. R. because of their regular assistance of the British miners in their struggle.

Cannot Break Alliance.

"The British government has the apparatus necessary to prevent our journey to Great Britain, but it will never succeed in breaking our alliance with the British trade union movement or in preventing us giving assistance to the fighting working class of Great Britain."

VATICAN PEACE PACT BLOCKED IN ARGENTINE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Sept. 26.—The government was prevented by the socialists from settling the dispute with the vatican over the appointment of an archbishop over Argentina. The conflict with the pope is a year old and originated with the refusal of the government to accept a papal appointee who was persona non grata.

The government had intended to settle the vatican question by having the senate select three candidates for submission to the vatican as candidates for the office of archbishop, the vatican to select his favorite from the three.

Unless the socialists compromise the struggle is liable to intensify and produce internal complications.

Soviet Labor Unions Send Relief Fund by Millions to British

MOSCOW, Sept. 5. — (By Mail) — The Presidium of the Central Council of Soviet Labor Unions has decided to send the British Miners' Federation the amount of the contributions which have at present come in together with an advance upon future collections, totalling a sum of 5,000,000 roubles, or $1,250,000.

CANTONESE CALL OFF ANTI-BRITISH BOYCOTT FOR RECOGNITION, BELIEF

PEKING, Sept. 26. — Reports reached here from Canton that the anti-British boycott in progress there for a long time had been called off. Opinion here is that such action must be based on de jure recognition of the Cantonese government by Great Britain.

MEXICO CHAMBER REFUSES PLEA OF CATHOLIC CLERGY

Insubordinate Bishops Are Not Citizens

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 26. — The Mexican chamber of deputies today formally rejected the catholic episcopate's petition for amendment of the constitution and adopted resolutions declaring that Archbishop Mora y del Rio and Bishop Ascual Diaz have forfeited their rights to Mexican citizenship by opposition to the constitution.

Refuse Arms Embargo.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 26.—Directly contrary to the policy adopted by the United States, the Mexican government has decided against the establishment of an embargo on the shipment of arms and munitions to Nicaragua, the International News Service learned today. The American government has taken a stand forbidding such shipments.

Mexican officials are represented as taking the stand that an arms' embargo is not necessary in Mexico because there are no large private manufacturers of arms in this country.

BRIAND LOOKS LONGINGLY AT POINCARE'S JOB

Staking Political Life on German Entente

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France ,Sept. 26.—Aristide Briand is getting lonesome out of the premiership and is greasing the skids for Poincare according to indications. Briand, as foreign minister has more to do with determining France's foreign policy than any other individual in the republic and he is now staking his political life on a Franco-German entente.

Preparing a Return.

Briand is said to be looking around for timber for a left government headed by himself. The Poincare crowd, on the other hand want a wholly conservative government. The national union government has not produced any results. The franc is still at the danger point and Poincare's drastic decrees have not satisfied the people.

Notorious Militarist:-

Poincare, the most notorious sword-rattler in Europe outside of Mussolini, has been remarkably pacifist on the surface since his return to power, tho it is apparent that he is still spending French francs bolstering up the military machines of Poland and Roumania.

Police of Capitalist Nations to Ignore Law in Jailing Communists

MOSCOW, (By Mail) The . -da of August 31, prints the following despatch from Vienna.

In connection with the failure of the Hungarian police to discover the persons alleged to be responsible for the explosion in the ammunition plants on Chapele Island, Hungarian police organizations have again revived the question, regarding the establishment of a united police front on an international scale.

"For the last few months," writes the Hungarian newspaper "A Reggel," "the Hungarian police have often felt the lack of direct connection with the police of other countries for the purpose of promoting pursuit and location of illegal Communist organisations."

The newspaper reports also that the police authorities of many European governments urge the establishment of international police communication and co-operation in order to carry on pursuit of Communist organizations in various countries.

It is pointed out that under the present jurisdiction police investigation begun in one government can be transferred to another government only thru ministries of foreign affairs or other diplomatic representatives.

The new project aims to eliminate intermediary instances and establish direct international police connection whereby the particular investigation concerns the Communist movement.

The project is sponsored by the Vienna police commissioner Schober, who is president of the International Police Union and supported by the chief of the Hungarian department of justice, Rassonyi, and the chief of the Rumanian Obbrana, Voyagers.

Spain's Dictatorship Tottering as Infantry Grows Cold to Prime

PARIS, France, Sept. 26.—The dictatorship of Primo de Rivera is either about to end or else Spain is for a civil war if General Berenguer, commander of the king's guard and mortal enemy of the dictator accepts the premiership offered to him by Alfonso.

The final break came when the king refused to sign a decree drawn by de Rivera limiting the powers of the national assembly to a consultative status.

The dictator's intention to go ahead with the decision to punish the ringleaders of the recent rebellion is said to have lost Rivera the sympathy of the infantry among whom he was popular because of his attack on the artillerists, the aristocrats of the army.

It is confidently believed here that the days of the dictatorship are numbered. King Alfonso is now hoping to gain credit for the restoration of constitutionalism tho he bee bisterto supported Rivera.

Co-operative Section

NEWS AND COMMENT

This department will appear in every Monday's issue of the The DAILY WORKER.

Progress and Poverty—In Ideals

THE period 1864-1869 saw the formation of the Co-operative Printing Society and the Co-operative Insurance company. The first National Co-operative Congress was held in London, 1869, and was responsible for the creation of the central board, from which there later sprang the English Co-operative Union. The union is a propagandist federation of the majority of Co-operative Societies in Great Britain. It looks after the legal interests of the movement, and conducts the educational side by means of literature, lectures, classes, summer schools, etc., and is advocating and organizing the formation of a Co-operative College. Once a year it organises a National Co-operative Congress and exhibition of productions. This functions in a similar way to the Trades Union Congress. Many resolutions of a progressive character await fulfilment in the faraway future, or else are quietly buried.

Material Progress and Education.

Material progress has handicapped education. As long ago as 1852 the Wholesale Annual stated: "We regret to find that educational grants do not keep pace with the general growth of societies. Necessity led many of the old co-operators to study co-operation; but the growth of profits which has resulted from that study appears to make many young ones care less than the old ones. Now, unless the young ones are taught what co-operation means, and what it is calculated to do, how are we to prepare our future directors, managers and other officers? Our opinion is that it will pay every society to devote at least 2½ per cent of its net profits to education, and then, though societies may and do succeed without this, yet it is because the older generation still lives and guides them."

Co-operative Guilds.

Toynbee and Stuart uttered similar warnings. To counteract this ignoring of the original aims and ideals the Women's Co-operative Guild mainly came to be founded (1883). This has been a valuable training ground for women taking an active part in progressive movements, and it has conducted an active agitation in the Co-operative movement, particularly in favor of the co-operative minimum wage.

The Guild has for its objects: The organisation of women, as co-operators, for the study and practise of (1) co-operation and other methods of social reform; (2) improved conditions of domestic life. The Guild had 1,077 branches, and a membership of over 51,000 in 1923. There is a Men's Co-operative Guild of very much smaller membership (only 5,330) and influence.

1871 saw the birth of the Co-operative News, and the publishing side has steadily developed since then. The movement now publishes two weekly newspapers, six monthlies, and a quarterly. The total circulation of all these publications was 932,000 copies in 1921, only about 24 per cent of the membership of the whole movement. (And this is not an exact proportion, as naturally an interested member probably subscribes to more than one paper.)

"Federalism" and "Individualism".

During these years an acute controversy raged between the advocates of federal co-operation, the "federalists," and the champions of production by the workers, the "individualists." Let each side speak:—The Federalist:—"We want an organisation of the whole community, and the basis for it is the retail store. Every one, rich or poor, should be asked to become a member, and purchase from it. The practical question before us is whether the existing organisation founded on the stores shall, in their combined capacity, seek to utilise their rapidly growing capital by producing for themselves the staple articles of their consumption, or whether they shall induce their well-to-do members to withdraw their dividend from the stores, and to set up independent companies, which will seek, like any ordinary manufacturer or wholesale dealer, to get the highest prices for their goods from such stores as choose to deal with them."

To this the Individualist replied:—"What is the federal system? To have a body of men like those employed in the wholesale society's shoe works at Leicester, governed by a business man who is appointed by the committee elected by a large number of voters? The workmen could not by any possibility become shareholders in the concern in which they are employed, and yet they are told that they are their own employers. If, then, a few men share the results of their own work, they are their own employers, but if one or one hundred men have a number of other men who may be arbitrarily discharged, and over whom they have complete control, it is a mockery to call such men their own employers. The effect of such Co-operation would be to make it impossible for any workman ever to be his own employer. It would go on perpetuating trade unions and strikes all the world over. To the federal scheme put forward as a general rule for regulating co-operative industry, we make the objection that the bulk of the profits will go, not to the working producers in any shape, but to the wealthy consumers."

Some of the federalists, to overcome this argument, advocated a bonus on labor employed in the stores and productive societies. But the trend of events, and the extension of the wholesale's productive side, settled the argument.

Communist Activities in the Cooperatives

The Communist International and its sections thruout the world are progressively taking a more active part in the development of workers and farmers co-operatives. The following is extracted from a report on Communist activities in the co-operatives made by Comrade KRIGER at the Co-operative Conference held in Moscow, during the sessions of the last Enlarged Executive of the Communist International.

OUR co-operative work is indeed still in its initial stage, and we cannot yet boast of specially great successes in this field. Nevertheless we have undoubtedly achieved appreciable results in some countries of Western Europe. Communist co-operative work is taking slowly but surely in a number of countries such as Czecho-Slovakia, England, France and Switzerland. But even in these countries, the connection between the Communists in the Co-operatives and the Centres of the corresponding sections of the Comintern is not yet established in such a way as would be desirable and necessary. In no country of Western Europe is there so close a contact between the Communist Co-operatives and the Central Committee of the Communist Parties, as for example, in Soviet Russia. The Central Committees of the Communist Parties do not yet devote sufficient attention to co-operative work, do not yet allocate sufficient party forces to the work and so on.

In the beginning, even the Executive Committee of the Comintern paid comparatively little attention to our work, as however we always tried to link up our work as closely as possible with the whole labor movement, and as the work in the separate countries began to develop more and more actively and the Communist co-operators also began to defend their point of view with energy in the course of the International Co-operative Alliance, the work of the co-operative sections has now become inseparably bound up with the whole work of the executive. Recently we have several times had the opportunity of reporting to the Secretariat and the Organization Bureau of the Executive Committee of the Communist International and we have received a number of directions and practical instructions.

In Germany, our comrades have already for several years been working to carry out the instructions of the Comintern Congress and of the International Conference of Communist Co-operators. The formation of fractions in the co-operatives has proceeded better and more quickly in Germany than in any other country. All the same, we in Germany, cannot yet boast of any decisive success. The German co-operative movement is in the hands of extremely counter-revolutionary leaders. The co-operative bureaucracy is fighting desperately against Communism and is leaving no stone unturned to get rid of the Communists. A number of individual Communist comrades having already been excluded from the leading bodies of the Co-operative movement; the co-operative bureaucracy is now threatening to exclude whole co-operative stores from the central league. The objective conditions of development of the German co-operative movement are at present entirely favorable to our activities. The immediate task of the German co-operative movement is to form a left wing round our Communist fractions as its nucleus.

In Czecho-Slovakia, the Communists hold firm positions in the co-operative movement. About 50% of the members of the Czech Consumers Co-operatives belong to our party or sympathize with it. Our comrades are carrying on successful economic co-operative work, but the political effect of their influence on the co-operative movement is not sufficiently felt. The formation of Communist fractions in the Consumers Co-operative is proceeding very slowly. In the German Consumers Co-operative Societies hardly any fraction work is being done at present. In the future our comrades should devote far more attention to the political side of their co-operative work and aim at bringing the general economic questions of the co-operative movement to a much greater extent in the revolutionary fight of the Czecho-slovakian working masses.

England. The party has completely recognized the necessity of Communist co-operative work and has combined it with party work as a whole. It is a fact of special significance that even the Trade Union Minority Movement is carrying out systematic co-operative work, thus promoting the formation of an opposition wing in the co-operative movement. The further development of Communist co-operative work, still closer alliance with the left wing of the trade union movement and the comprehension and intensification of the class problems in the English co-operative movement will result in the English co-operative movement gaining a firm foothold.

In France, the Communists exercise the greatest influence in the co-operatives of the Paris district, where about 15 consumers' co-operative societies are in their hands. There is a central co-operative commission in the central committee of the party which does systematic co-operative work, individual Communist co-operators have been active since 1920 at the national congresses of the co-operative movement and display considerable initiative. Nevertheless the co-operative work of our French comrades leaves much to be desired. One of the drawbacks, for instance, is the concentration of all their forces on the task of creating revolutionary co-operative circles parallel to the existing reformist co-operative circles, instead of concentrating their attention above all on the creation of Communist fractions in the co-operative organs.

Our French Communist co-operators have also taken the wrong line in the fight against the increase of prices. Instead of mobilising the mass of their members round the fighting slogan against the rise of prices, our comrades took the point of view that the committees of action ought, in the fight against the rise of prices, to enforce abatement of prices from private traders. This way of course leads to bargainings and agreements with private trades, and to a misrepresentation of the tasks of the committees of action. All these mistakes must be rectified in the near future.

I should like further, speaking quite in general, to say that, in our work of agitation and propaganda we ought particularly to follow the example of the co-operative movement in Belgium and Austria, where the co-operative movement forms an integral part of the political movement. It is true in the social democratic movement which is hostile to us.

Now a few words on the position of the revolutionary elements of the co-operative movement within the International co-operative alliance. Among the 62 members of the central committee of the alliance, 12 are communists (4 from the Soviet Union and one from Czechoslovakia). Among the 11 members of the executive of the alliance, there is only one Communist. Although our comrades have taken part in the work of the alliance there has been a change in the character of the conferences and meetings of the bodies forming the alliance. At these meetings questions of the new concrete tasks being brought up which are of great significance for the whole labor movement.

In the first place, our comrades are fighting against the principle of the neutrality of the co-operative movement. There are already signs that some leading co-operators are being compelled gradually to revise their attitude towards this question. At the last meeting of the central committee of the alliance in Paris even Professor Gide stated that the question of the neutrality of the co-operative movement is not one of principle but of tactics. Putting the problem in this way undoubtedly means a partial abandonment of the principle of neutrality.

SPEAKER NABBED BY POLICE ON HARLEM CORNER

Richard Moore Hauled Off Box

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Free speech rights were ruthlessly abridged when Richard B. Moore, secretary of the New York council of the American Negro Labor Congress, secretary of the Harlem Educational Forum, and director of the Institute for Social Study, was arrested last Friday evening on the northwest corner of 138th St. and Seventh Ave. upon a charge made by Manager Bort of the Lafayette Theater.

Peaceful Meeting.

Mr. Moore has participated actively since 1917 in social movements for the intellectual, political, and economic improvement of the condition of the working class in Harlem. He was holding a lawful and orderly meeting in conjunction with Dr. Hubert Harrison, staff lecturer of the Board of Education with whom he has spoken several times this summer.

Drove On Sidewalk.

He had just opened the meeting, having spoken not more than ten minutes on the general economic topics when a police car drove up on the sidewalk into the group of 50 or 60 persons who were listening and who had to jump aside to save themselves.

Mr. Moore went quietly to the police station. The charge entered against him by the theater manager was "disorderly conduct" in violating an injunction. His protest that he was exercising his constitutional rights as a citizen holding a perfectly legal and orderly meeting and that he knew of no injunction which he could in any way be held to have violated went unheeded by the court and he was take in custody to the night court.

The lawyer who appeared in his defense, moved for an adjournment in order to prepare the case which was granted by the judge who set the case for Friday Sept. 24, 1926. The judge released Mr. Moore in the custody of his attorney. The International Labor Defense is defending the case.

Robert W. Dunn to Give Course at N. Y. Workers' School

Robert W. Dunn, assistant director of Civil Liberties Union and one of the best students of the American labor movement, has been added to the staff of teachers of the Workers' School of New York City. He will give two courses—the first is "New Tactics of the Employers in the United States and How Workers Must Meet Them" and the second is "American Foreign Investments." The second course will be part of a general course on American which, besides this course of Dunn's, will include two short courses by Scott Nearing, "The Decline of the British Empire" and "Post War Problems in Europe."

Robert W. Dunn is both a student of and a participant in the American labor struggles. His books, "The Labor Spy" (co-author with Sidney Howard), "Company Unionism" and "American Foreign Investments," are classics in their various fields. As to his activity in the labor movement, the Passaic strikers and the New York subway strikers can well testify as to his activity in their behalf.

The bulletin of the Workers' School can be secured by writing to Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the Workers' School, 108 East 14 Street, New York City.

Are You Registered As a Party Member?

An Important Announcement for Every Party Member.

THE reorganization of the party on the basis of the shop and street nuclei has now progressed sufficiently for the party to take a registration of the membership after the reorganization.

The United Labor Ticket Assessment, while made to provide funds for party work in the election campaign and to advance the movement for independent political action, is at the same time a registration of the membership of the party.

The National Office has decided to complete the collection of the assessment in the form of a party registration. In place of issuing a new stamp to make the registration, the United Labor Ticket Assessment Stamp will be considered a registration stamp in the reorganized party.

This means that those members of the party who have already paid the United Labor Ticket Assessment WILL NOT have to pay for another stamp. They have already made their registration. On the other hand, the more than five thousand members who have not yet paid the assessment must place the United Labor Ticket Assessment Stamp in their dues books in order to be registered as members in the reorganized party.

Every party nucleus must immediately make an examination of the dues books of the members belonging to the nucleus and find ent whather each member has the United Labor Ticket Assessmant Stamp in his book. If a member has not purchased his stamp tha registration must be explained to him and also the reason why he must porchess the stamp.

THOSE NUCLEI WHICH HAVE MADE A SETTLEMENT FOR THE STAMPS AND HAVE RETURNED THE UNSOLD STAMPS SHOULD, AFTER EXAMINING THE BOOKS OF ITS MEMBERS, ORDER A SUFFICIENT NUMBER OF STAMPS SO AS TO PROVIDE ONE FOR EACH MEMBER WHO HAS NOT PURCHASED ONE.

THE NUCLEI WHICH HAVE NOT SETTLED FOR THEIR STAMPS SHOULD MAKE A SIMILAR SURVEY AND SEE THAT EVERY MEMBER PURCHASES A STAMP AND THEN MAKE THEIR SETTLEMENT WITH THE NATIONAL OFFICE.

The period for the registration will be extended to November 15. By that time every comrade who considers him or herself a member of the party must have the United Labor Ticket Assessment Stamp in his or her dues book. That means that the membership will have had SIX MONTHS in which to buy a fifty cent stamp. Every party member can purchase a special stamp during such a period.

There are between TEN AND TWELVE THOUSAND MEMBERS IN THE PARTY AFTER THE REORGANIZATION. The totale number of United Labor Ticket Registration Stamps sold must include ovely one of these members by November 15.

The party member can facilitate this registration by examining their dues books, and if they have not a stamp, going to their nucleus secretary for it immediately.

The nucleus secretary must assume the responsibility for seeing to it that every member is registered thru purchasing his stamp.

DISTRICT 8 S. S. CONVENTION SUPPORTS PARTY UNIFICATION

The following resolution was adopted by a conference of delegates from the South Slavic fractions in District 8 of the Party which was held recently:

The convention of the South Slavic fractions of District 8, discussing the position of our party, the present political and economic situation, realizes the great difficulty which confronts the present C. E. C. thru which it must struggle to prevent the disputes left from the recent struggle and which have damaged the development of our party.

For that reason the delegates unanimously declare as follows:

1. The convention is conscious of necessity of the complete unity of the party and the consrulisation of the same and for that reason stand unanimously with the C. E. C. and will support every action of the C. E. C. for unity and liquidation of all causes for further disputes because if the causes are liquidated, this guarantees the party's successful development.

2. The convention greets the actions of the C. E. C. that it has taken in the mentioned direction and we are of the opinion that it will take it in the future. We declare our willingness to support the C. E. C. in that direction for reaching our aims.

3. For the successful enforcement of the decisions and actions of the C. E. C. in the above mentioned direction, the convention demands from the newly elected committee to use all its power and ability to carry ont the decisions and actions of the C. E. C. to bring the best understanding to the membership of the South Slavic comrades in this district and so carry them into practice.

4. The convention unanimoosly accepts the following goal: Unity above everything!

Long live the Workers (Communist) Party of America!

Long live the Communist International!

WORKERS PARTY IN MINNESOTA F.-L. P. CAMPAIGN

Engdahl and Tallentire Urge Class Action

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 26.—Increased stimulus to develop the Workers (Communist) Party campaign in support of the Farmer-Labor ticket in the Minnesota elections, grew out of the mass meeting held here at Moose Hall addressed by J. Louis Engdahl, Communist candidate for United States senator in Illinois and Norman Tallentire, the party's district organizer for the Minnesota district.

Engdahl reviewed the recent developments in the attack being made by the republican forces on the Farmer-Labor movement, in which it was aided by the democratic party, almost wiped out in this state, as its willing tool.

Engdahl urged that the problem now was to hold the farmer-labor lines intact against the attack of the capitalist parties and their kept press, an attack that was getting support from traitor elements within the farmer-labor movement.

Numerous non-party elemnats were present at the meeting and new members were secured for the party.

Lunch Club Scene of Debate.

Engdahl also addressed the Minneapolis Saturday Lunch Club at the invitation of its chairman, S. A. Stockwell, former state senator. Engdahl followed Lincoln Colcord, contributor for The New Republic, a liberal weekly, who urged that the farmer-laborites capture the democratic party, as the non-partisans had captured the republican party in North Dakota. Colcord also heralded the "Committee of 48," now defunct, as the leader of the so-called third party movement.

Engdahl replied to Colcord by exposing the record of the democratic party since it was first established to serve the needs of the southern slave holding aristocracy. He pointed out that the workers must have a party of their own growing out of their own economic needs. This party must struggle against the two old parties. Engdahl showed the relation of the Workers (Communist) Party to the drive for the Mass party.

Colcord Gets Little Support.

Even among the liberals who attend the forums of the Saturday Lunch Club, Colcord got little support for his plea for Practically every speaker that joined in the discussion urged the cause of the Farmer-Labor party, some of them pointing out the failure of the non-partisan league experiment in the republican party in North Dakota.

Engdahl was showered with questions as to the situation within the Union of Soviet Republics. The gathering seemed satisfied with his answers.

Engdahl Speaks in St. Paul.

Followips his meeting in Minneapolis, Engdahl will speak in St. Paul, Minn., Milwaukee, Wisc., and then return to Chicago.

WHY I AM A COMMUNIST

By ROSE PASTOR STOKES

1. Because I am of the working class and know from experience the conditions of slavery ondar capitalism.

2. Because I have a free spirit and cannot tolerate these conditions without protest.

3. Because I have an active mind that has always sought solotions.

4. Because I have a scientific mind that is content not with half truths but with the facts of history.

5. Because in my search I have come to recognize that all history is out a series of class struggles.

6. Because today I see conditions preparing for the final conflict that will usher in the ara of working class power for the establishment of the classless society.

7. Because I have the courage to affirm what I see, regardless of personal consequences.

8. Because much reading and deep thinking (to which I have been driven by my class experience) have given me that vision which renders personal considerations of small consequence and human considerations of first importance.

9. Because (owing to those things) I find a greater measure of satisfaction in the triumph of the masses than in any personal victory.

10. Furthermore, because I am a lover of order, a lover of peace, a lover of love, a lover of work in freedom, of life in security and am convinced that but one road leads to these things—the road to proletarian power.

That is why I am a Communist.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

Red Army in Soviet Union Is Educator of Its Members, Workers and Farmers

Note: A short time ago The DAILY WORKER YOUTH COLUMN published a letter from the 10th Cavalry Division of the Red Army. The following is the reply of the representative of the Young Workers (Communist) League in Moscow to the letter, which contrasts the life of the Red Army soldiers with that of the soldiers in capitalist armies.

Moscow, U. S. S. R. Sept. 1.

Liaison Commission,
10th Cavalry Army Division.

Dear Comrades:

Upon my return from my vacation I found your letter awaiting me, and I am hastening to answer it, so that we shall be in close contact continually. I was very glad to get your letter, as I was beginning to think that the one I had sent you had not reached you.

Red Army is Educator.

I was particularly pleased—and the comrades in America will likewise be pleased—to read in your letter of the splendid work you are conducting among the masses of the population in the locality where you are stationed. I have already written to the comrades in America of this phase of your activity, which is so different from the activity of an ordinary army. The Red Army is indeed more than an army—it is also the educator of its own members and of the workers and peasants with whom it comes into contact in its work. That is one of the reasons why the Red Army is so much stronger than the bourgeois armies. The bourgeois armies are not interested either in the welfare of the soldiers or of the inhabitants. We therefore find not infrequently that the peasants hate the troops stationed in their neighborhood, because these troops, while not contributing anything to the population in any form, still do a lot of harm, such as appropriating things without paying or by paying very little, interfering with the work on the land, etc. On the contrary, the Red Army not only does not interfere with the peasants, but actually teaches them how to become better husbandmen. As a result of this, the Red Army is loved by the peasants.

I was also very much pleased with the progress that is being made in educating the Red soldiers. In bourgeois armies the only aim is to make good fighting machines out of the soldiers. The Red Army aim is to make good Soviet citizens out of its members—men who can do their duty to the workers' and peasants' state, whether in fighting its enemies or in reconstructing it economically. In this respect the Red Army is doing a praiseworthy work in eliminating illiteracy, which before the revolution was an outstonding characteristic of Russia, and teaching the soldiers to participate in the political and cultural life of the country.

The American Youth.

I now wish to tell you very briefly something about the work of the Young Workers (Communist) League of America. Since the plenum of the executive committee of the Young Communist International the League in America has bgun to work along the lines laid down by the E. C. Y. C. I. and the results are already noticeable. A plenum of the central committee was held not long ago, at which there was complete unity, and at which the tasks of the league were discussed very thoroly and resolutions covering all those tasks were adopted.

At the present time the league is engaged in the following main activities:

1. Getting in the young workers from the heavy industries. This is a very important task, as up to the present the League has been composed mostly of young workers from the light industries. The League is now beginning a campaign on a national scale among the young coal miners, and as a result of this campaign it will recroit many new members.

2. Setting up a workers' sport movement. Up to the present no workers' sport movement existed in the United States. Altho there is a mass participation in sports, it is all under the domination of the capitalists. The League has begun setting up workers' sport clubs, working within existing ara and winning the trade unions over to support workers' sport. A national conferance will be held as soon as thera ara enough organizations, and a national workers' sport organization established.

3. Anti-militarist work. I have already given you some idea of the tremendous militarization that is going on in America. To counteract this the League is organizing a united front of all workers, students and women's orgaaisations to carry on a struggle against militarism. This campaign is proving quite successful and a large nomber of orgbnizations have already andorsed the campaign, including many liberal and pacifist organizations. In many schools the students voted against militarism.

Increased Mass Work.

4. Mass activity. The League is beginning more and more to participate in the activities of the young workers, in strikes, movements for higher wages, better conditions, etc. At the present time the League is very active in the Passaic strike, which has already lasted seven months, and in the garment strike in New York. The League was also active in the furriers' strike, which ended in a victory for the workers.

5. Schools. The League, in order to improve the understanding of its members, has organized several schools, which will be attended by the best comrades in the League during the summer. There are four district schools and one national school. At these schools the problems confronting the League will be taken up and the comrades taught how to solve them. Theoretical subjects, Leninism, etc., will also be taken up.

From this you see that the League is becoming more and more active, and if this activity is continued it will be able to develop into a real mass organization of the Communist youth in America, the leader of all the young workers.

When you answer this letter, please send me the pictures which we took while I was in Liska, as I would like very much to take them back to America with me. Also write me of the new developments in the division, when the new recruits are coming in, how they are handled at the beginning and what instructions those who are demobilized are given.

With Communist greetings,
Representative, Young Workers (Communist) League of America.

Bronx Workers Defeat Bushwick Champs, 3 to 1

NEW YORK CITY.—In a hard-fought soccer game, the Bronx Workers' Sports Club defeated the Bushwick A. C. by a score of 3 to 1. The game took place at Van Courtland Park. The victory of the Bronx workers came as a complete surprise, the Bushwick A. C. being the champions of the second division in the Empire State League. They were expected to easily defeat the workers.

Good team work and excellent shooting won the game, and the entire team played well. The Bronx Workers' Sports Club has only been organized for several months and has already made a fine showing against much older teams.

The club meets regularly at 1347 Boston Road, Bronx, and all workers interested in sports are invited to join.

Children Slaving Under Dawes Plan

BERLIN, Germany.—In Germany child labor is prohibited only in dangerous industries. In other industries the law permits the employment of child laborers from 10 years on. In the country children hired by farmers total 1,170,000. Half a million of this number are under 10 years of age. The main mass of children is found in home industry, light industry, etc.

The following figures show how the insufficient wages of children affects their health: Out of 6,000 children in Schleswig (the most industrial part of Germany) 12¼ pct. are tubercular, 2 per cent are affected by spinal disease, 20 per cent by lung sickness and 23 per cent by heart disease.

According to the latest figures every fourth child (25 per cent) in the age from 7 to 14 sells their labor power and every second child (50 per cent) in the age of 10 to 14.

LABORERS' UNION STANDS ALONE IN LABOR DAY MARCH

Central Labor Union Wouldn't Parade.

By SIDNEY BLOOMFIELD

WORCESTER, Mass., 26. — Laborers' Union Local No. 630 continues to be the talk of the local labor movement. After months of discussion, haggling and doubting the central labor union as well as other local unions gave up the idea of a labor day parade. The Laborers' Union, organized only four months, at a special meeting decided to parade, utilizing the parade as an organization drive. A committee was appointed and within a week all plans were complete. On labor day the Laborers' local was the only unit in line, together with other societies.

600 Turn Out.

At the Central Labor Union, Delegate Thornton, of the Molders' Union, who was one of the labor day speakers, gave an enthusiastic report of the lone local union that celebrated labor day. Despite a drizzling rain, 600 members turned out with business agent Mike Rano, as chief marshal and headed by the Worcester Brass Band.

The parade started at 9:15 a. m. from the union hall on Shrewsbury street, down to Front street, before the headquarters of the open shop association. Mayor O'Hara and Deputy Chief of Police McMurray reviewed the parade from the reviewing stand at the city hall.

Banner Heads March.

The original schedule called for an open air mass meeting which was held at Victory Hall instead because of the heavy rain. A huge banner, carried by two men at the head of the procession bore the nicely painted pick and shovel together with the inscription reading, "Laborers' Union No. 630, just organized 600 strong. Come and join us now!" Thirty-seven signs were carried by the marchers bearing militant propaganda slogans on the most important labor questions such as the Youth, Women in Industry, Organization of the Unorganized, Anti-Speed-up Production, Open Shop Menace, Americanization, Help for British Miners, etc.

At Victory hall the great audience was addressed by Thomas F. Lonergan, president of the C. L. U., Thomas F. Conroy, secretary of the C. L. U., Wm. H. Thornton, and two Italian speakers. A committee of three headed by R. DeSanto of the Passaic, N. J., textile strikers was present. Brother DeSanto gave a short and interesting talk on the strike situation in Passaic and asked for support of the strikers. A collection was taken up which amounted to $59.10. Together with the previous donation of $50.00, Local No. 630 gave $109.10 to the Passaic strikers.

Even the opponents of a labor day parade were cheered by the militant and class-conscious spirit displayed by this new local, and after repeated expression of joy by the delegates and predictions of a huge parade next labor day as the result of the inspiring demonstration staged by Local No. 630, the report of Brother Thornton was unanimously accepted as one of progress.

Structural Iron Workers' Int'l. Puts Difficulties in Way of Organization

By A. ROSENFELD.

NEW YORK (By Mail)—Several months ago, we have sent a letter to the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, with a check for initiation.

Ask for Charter.

We asked in that letter to be admitted as a local of the international. We also asked that if a charter is to be granted to us, that we be—that it would be granted, that we should be considered the only local union of the Inside Iron & Bronze Workers of Greater New York and Vicinity.

The reason we asked this is because experience has taught us that if another charter should be issued to another group of men, which means, the creation of another local union, this would divide our ranks and we would never be able to accomplish anything.

Obstacles Put in Way.

The reply of the international was that if we want to be admitted as the only local of Greater New York and vicinity, we will have to pay the debt of the three local unions, which were in existence three years ago, and were expelled for not paying the dues and assessments.

The sum of the debt, the not specified exactly, would amount to about $35,000.

We communicated again with the international, stating we will be willing to pay the debt of the former three locals providing the international will assure us that they will give us a hand in organizing the iron and bronze workers and that the international will influence the outside local unions, especially Local 63, which is the nearest related to us, to assist us in our struggle with the open shop bosses.

Must Beg Aid.

To some it may sound ridiculous to ask such a thing from a parent body. "Why ask?" some one may say, "is it not the duty of the international to see that one local union should help the other one in their struggle for better conditions, especially when there is a possibility for it." But such are conditions. We are obliged to ask. And what was the answer? Well, there was no answer at all. The matter will be taken up by the general council, we were told.

Months have passed. We have gone thru a strike, we have solved many difficult problems, but the international did not have the time to solve our problem as yet, and we are still waiting for an answer.

PASSAIC MILL OWNERS RESORT TO FRAME-UP TO CHECK UNION

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 26.—The Passaic police, notorious thruout America for their violence and frame-ups during the early part of the textile strike, have again cooked up new cases of frame-ups to justify the mill barons' position of antagonism against signing a settlement even with the conservative United Textile Workers' Union of the A. F. of L.'

Frame Up Unionists.

Four men, three of them connected with the strike, are under arrest charged with the ancient frame-up allegation of "bombing." Those under arrest are Joseph Bellani of Garfield, member of the executive committee of the new Local 1603 of the United Textile workers and a candidate for councilman on the independent ticket; Thomas Winick of Garfield, Thomas Current of Clifton and Tony Pochno.

The Usual "Discoveries."

The police have "found" nitroglycerine in Pochno's home, much after the "find" of dynamite in the historic Lawrence strike, which later turned out to have been planted there by a prominent mill owner's agent. The Passaic police have often dropped explosives in the outside pockets of strikers and then arrested them the next moment for carrying arms. In this case they "found" a revolver on the ground and charged it to Pochno.

The mill owners have been desirous of finding an excuse not to settle the strike with the A. F. of L. union, and this sort of work was expected by the strike leaders.

More Production With Less Workers is New Boast of Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 26.—According to the report of the chamber of commerce of this city the value of production rose from $1,095,000,000 in 1922 to $1,124,000,000 in 1925. In 1923 there were on the average 141,648 at work, compared with 136,577 in 1925. Thus every men is turning out more goods. According to the report, the cost of prodnction has decreased 7 per cent in the two years—and unquestionably this has been taken out of the skins of the workers. In the presumption of the chamber of commerce that production increased this year and more men were employed, while it has no figures to substantiate this contention.

BOSTON FUR WORKERS STRIKE 1,000 STRONG FOR A NEW AGREEMENT

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—One thousand Boston fur workers are striking in 55 shops for a new agreement. Negotiations with the employers broke down when the old agreement expired.

AUTO FINISHING PLANT TIED UP BY UPHOLSTERERS

Recognition of Shop Committee Asked

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 26.—Four hundred upholsterers and trimmers of the Hays-Hunt auto finishing plant of Durant Motor Corp. are striking for recognition of their shop committee, improved working conditions and reinstatement of workers who were discharged for their labor organization efforts.

Strikers are picketing the plant and urging their fellow-workers to walk out in sympathy and join the union. The strikers are organized in Local 13, International Upholstery Workers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

For several months a group of Hays-Hunt workers have issued a shop bulletin which stressed the need of organizing the workers into unions for the improvement of their working conditions. The whole auto works—Durant Motor Corp. and its subsidiary, Hays Hunt—employs up to 10,000 workers when production is full.

Shirtmakers Fighting Wage Cut Lockout, But Take the Aggressive

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Workers for the Shirt and Boys' Waist Contractors' Association have been locked out for their refusal to accept 15 per cent wage cuts. The union, part of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, is prepared to carry out a strike of the industry to thoroly organize it and gain their demands.

The union officials expect 60 per cent of the workers will be back on the job as soon as the union signs agreements with the manufacturers, who promise to have work done only in union contracting shops. The union is against the extension of the contract system, which is so disrupted standards in other needle trades.

Encouragement.

"We ought to do what we can for our old employes," remarked the president of a big industrial concern.

"Yes, indeed," agreed the chairman of the board. "Let's issue an order asking all the younger clerks to address them as 'Sir.'"—Locomotive Engineers' Journal.

CONTRACTORS IN CLEVELAND SEEK TO KILL UNIONS

Non-Union Painters Are Hired by Builders

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 26.—Several days ago 600 union men working on the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. building went out on strike because four non-union painters were put on the job by sub-contractors. According to the recent statement of the builders, a sub-contractor doing one of the Jobs employs non-union men and the contractors consider an agreement with the sub-contractor "sacred."

Contractors Go to Court.

As the strike of the 600 men is holding up the construction work, the contractors went to court to secure a writ compelling the union leaders to call off the strike and send the men back to work.

"If contracts between the unions and the contractors are worth the paper they are written on then the union leaders should cancel their strike orders," says the representative of the contractors.

Trying to Break Union.

The contractors, backed by the Citizens' League, think that they can fool the workers of this city. The workers know very well that the purpose of the contractors in sending in four non-union men to work is to take the initial steps in breaking up the union and providing non-union conditions in the city, where the building trades are well organized. They will not succeed in their attempt, no matter how the court judges. Sixty subpoenas have been issued, but the men are unmoved.

Five Million No Bubble.

This move on the part of the contractors, however, should provoke a little thinking on the part of the building workers. Is the Citizens' League a live body, is its fund of $5,000,000 a factor, or are we to believe Charles Smith, the business representative of the building trades, that it is only a bubble? The Citizens' League is a powerful factor in the industrial life of Cleveland, and if the workers, and above all the building workers, do not awaken to the fact they will feel the full force of its power, especially the carpenters and others whose agreements terminate on May 1.

Lincoln Mine Opened Under Jacksonville Contract, Not 1917 Basis

By JOE KOHYLAK, JR.

NEFFS, O., Sept. 26.—The Lincoln mine of Loraine Coal & Dock Co., located on the National Highway near Bridgeport, Ohio, has resumed operation under the Jacksonville contract, after being idle six months.

The article written by a worker correspondent in The DAILY WORKER issue dated Sept. 17, 1926, was incorrect.

Every coal mine that resumed operation in eastern Ohio has gone to work under the Jacksonville contract.

HAVERHILL SHOE UNION DEMANDS PAY INCREASE; GOES TO ARBITRATION

HAVERHILL, Mass., Sept. 26. — The Shoe Workers' Protective Union is asking 10 per cent increases to restore the prices paid in the industry previous to cuts in 1924. The union's request goes to the shoe board of arbitration for action.

KLAN, MILITARY ORGANIZATION, SAYS CYCLOPS

Smith Banished by the All-Highest War Lord

AKRON, O., Sept. 26.—A split has taken place in the local klan, owing to the fight over the property owned by the klan, valued at $65,894. The Rev. A. O. Henry, a local minister and "exalted cyclops of the local klan," and another member of the klan have brought suit against Imperial Wizard Evans of Atlanta to prevent the latter from transferring the property to another "cyclops." A meeting of the local klan was held and it was decided to surrender the charter, withdraw from the ku klux klan and start another organization.

Banished from Realm.

W. K. Smith, the former head of the klan, was banished from the organization at the "grand conclave" held in Washington, when he was ordered out of the ranks of the Ohio delegation that was to parade.

"No one knows why Smith was banished," said a local leader. "The klan is a military organization. Smith's banishment is the result of military orders."

Education Needed.

The important thing for organized labor to do is to start a campaign of education of the workers as to the nature of the K. K. K., for there are many workers in that organization, particularly in the city of Akron. If this is not done, when the workers make demands for better conditions they will find that they are hempered by the agents and members of this "military" organization, which works hand in hand with the employers.

Lowell Silk Strikers Allowed Only Six Pickets, Says Judge

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—Only six pickets at a time are permitted at the Lowell Silk Mills by the injunction obtained by the firm. Hearings on whether the restraining order shall be made permanent begin Sept. 28.

The weavers demand the return of three-loom hase satin and four on ponge and casket lining, the wide looms to be a subject of further arbitration, 20 per cent increase, time and a half for overtime, improved sanitary conditions and ventilation, rest room, full time pay for time lost on job, recognition of the mill council and no discrimination against any worker. The firm complained that long picket lines with singing interfered with their business.

The workers have been out since July 23.

Harry Daugherty Is Adept at Destroying His Bank Accounts

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general of the United States, destroyed the records of his account in the Midland National Bank at Washington Court-house, Ohio, according to his brother, Mal S. Daugherty, who testified today at the trial of the former cabinet member, and Col. Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian. Harry M. Daugherty also destroyed the accounts of the late Jesse Smith and of Mal S. Daugherty, the bank president testified.

Building Construction In Ohio Is On Decline

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 26.—According to figures just issued by the F. W. Dodge Corporation, there has been a loss of 30 per cent in the contracts let in the state of Ohio in the month of August, as compared with July of this year, and a decrease of 24 per cent as compared with August of last year. For the first eight months of this year the contracts amounted to $250,000,000 as compared with $311,000,000 during the same period of last year, or a decline of 10 per cent.

A NEW NOVEL By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

A little farther on in the explanations, Bunny began to see the meaning of that perpetual and unbreakable hold which Dad and Mr. Roscoe were giving to themselves. In the prospectuses and advertisements of Ross Consolidated, the public would be told all about the vast oil resources in the Ross Junior tract at Paradise; but here it was being fixed up that Ross Consolidated was not to operate this tract, but to lease it to a special concern, the Ross Junior Operating Company, and nobody but Dad and Mr. Roscoe and the bankers were to have any stock in that! There was a whole series of such intricate devices, holding companies and leasing companies and separate issues of stock, and some of these things were to go into effect at once, and some later on, after the public had put up its money!

When Bunny, the "little idealist," began to make objections to this, he saw that he was hurting his father's feelings. Dad said that was the regular way of big money deals, and my God were they running a soup-kitchen? The public would get its share and more—that stock would go to two hundred in the first year, just you watch and see! But it was Dad and his son who had done the hard work on the Paradise tract, and at Prospect Hill and Lobos River too; and the government wanted them to go on and do more such work, to drill a hundred new wells and help win the war and how could they do it if they distributed the money around for people to throw away on jazz parties? Just look at those "war-babies," and all the mad spending in New York! Dad was taking care of his money and using it wisely, in industry, where it belonged; he was perfectly sincere and hard-set as concrete, in his conviction that he was the one to whom the profits should come. He and Mr. Roscoe were two individuals who had fought the big companies and kept themselves afloat through all the storms; they were making an unbreakable combination this time, and they were going to get the jack out of it, just you bet!

VIII

Meantime, the Germans had begun another offensive against the French, the most colossal yet; it was the second Battle of the Marne, and they called it their "Friedensturm," because they meant to capture Paris and win their peace. But now there were large sectors held by the American troops, of whom there were a million in France, and three hundred thousand coming every month, with all their supplies, in spite of the submarines. These troops were fresh, while all the others were exhausted; and so where they stood, the line did not give way, and the great German offensive was blocked and brought to a standstill.

Then, a week or two later, began an event that electrified the whole world; the allies began to advance! Attacking now here, now there, they gained ground, they routed the enemy out of intrenchments which had been years in building, and were counted impregable. All that mighty Hindenburg line began to crumble; and behind it, the Siegfried line, and the Hunding line, and all the other mythological constructions. To people in America it was the breaking of the first sunrays through black storm clouds. The "Yanks" were wiping out the famous St. Mihiel salient, they were capturing the enemy by ten of thousands, and even more important, the machine guns and artillery which the Germans could not replace. All through the early fall this went on; until the young officers-to-be in Bunny's training-camp began to fret because this man's war was going to be over before they got to the scene.

But all this time, not one word from Paul! Bunny received agonizing letters from Ruth, "Oh, what do you think can have happened to him? I write him every week to the address he gave, and I know he would answer if he was alive." Bunny explained that it took six weeks for mail to go to Vladivostok and return; how much longer it took on the railroad no one could guess; and besides, there was a censorship, and many things might happen to letter, in war time. If Paul had been killed or wounded, the army would surely notify his parents; so no news was good news. There had been practically no fighting, as Ruth could see from the newspaper clippings which Bunny faithfully sent to her; and reports were not necessary, but because nothing much had happened; if there were any real fighting, or losses to the troops, the papers would get it, you might be sure.

On the second of August of this year of 1918, the American and Japanese troops had made a landing in Vladivostok, practically unopposed; they had spread along the Trans-Siberian railway, and were policing it, and in fact running it, all the way to Lake Baikal where they had met the Czecho-Slovaks. With the help of these intelligent men, the allies now controlled the country clean across to the Volga; the Bolsheviks had to keep back in the interior. Now and then the newspapers would report that admiral this or general that was getting up a stable Russian government, of course with the help of allied money and supplies; at the west end of the line it would be a Cossack hetman, and at the east end a Chinese mandarin or Mongolian tuchun or other strange beast; thus new stretches of the earth's surface were being delivered from the wickedness of Bolshevism. Somewhere amid these picturesque and exciting events Paul Watkins of Paradise, California, was building army barracks and "Y" huts; and some day he would come back with a wonderful story to tell! So Bunny wrote, bidding Ruth keep cheerful, and have faith in the benevolence of her old Uncle Sam.

Schwab's Speech Is Danger Signal for American Workingclass

Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel company, has been on a tour speaking to chambers of commerce and manufacturers' associations.

His speeches have been pitched on a high note of optimism—for the capitalists—but they carry a threat to the workers of America.

After praising the prosperity and "the unbounded opportunities which lie at the feet of the youth of our land," Schwab sounds a note of warning. He says:

I can foresee the time when the factories of Europe will be turning out vast quantities of goods which will be sold in our market and the markets of the world in competition with American goods. European goods are produced at costs far below present costs in this country . . . . . People there have lost an enormous part of their wealth; standards of living have been reduced, and savings have been lost . . . . . IN ORDER TO EXIST THEY MUST WORK HARD, WITH LONG HOURS AND AT REDUCED WAGES . . . . . THE ONLY BASIS WHICH WILL SAVE OUR OWN MARKETS AND OUR FOREIGN MARKETS WILL BE THE BASIS OF EFFICIENT AND ECONOMICAL PRODUCTION.

Here is food for thought for the American working class.

The tone of this spokesman of the most powerful industrial capitalists is probably a preliminary to a new drive on wages and working conditions for which the labor movement must prepare.

It is true that Schwab does not urge a wage cut in so many words. But he makes it quite plain that he is not satisfied with present labor costs:

To maintain our present high wages with reasonable profits for manufacturers, WE MUST REALIZE ECONOMIES UPON A PROGRESSIVE SCALE, NOT MERELY IN PRODUCTION BUT IN MARKETING METHODS.

This is nothing more or less than an ultimatum to the working class. What Schwab says is this:

More work, much more work for the same money, more work, much more work with less workers, or wages must come down.

This challenge cannot be answered by the labor movement by reiterated statements of its desire for "worker-employer co-operation" and by the launching of various capitalist enterprises such as labor banks and insurance companies. This is exactly what Schwab and his class want—a capitalist-minded labor movement that will encourage its members to give unsparing aid to the speed-up systems designed to get more production with less workers and create a reserve labor supply in the shape of a jobless army of millions whose clamor at the factory gates will spur the more fortunate jobholders to renewed efforts.

The challenge of Schwab can be answered only by organization of the unorganized millions in basic industry and militant struggle against the speed-up and pauperization schemes of the American ruling class.

A Fraudulent System

The inside gamblers won the Dempsey-Tunney fight and nobody else. This is the opinion of reporters who have followed the pugilistic game since the days of John L. Sullivan, reporters who told the truth whether they could afford it or not.

Whatever may be said for professional boxing as a sport, under capitalist commercialism it is nothing but a brutalized confidence game.

Jack Dempsey held the world championship title for seven years and amassed considerable money, which was separated from him by hawk-beaked parasites from lawyers to managers. Jack was getting fat and lazy and did not want to risk his manly countenance in another scrap. But he had to fight or transfer the title to somebody else. A $450,000 consideration made a decision easy. So he decided to re-enter the ring.

Gene Tunney, who reads books and fought in the world war was picked to meet Dempsey. Whether he carved any Germans or not is a question. The latter slammed rivets in Seattle while the former joined the marines. Anyhow, the fact that he could be considered a patriot was good publicity. A number of morons could be whipped into frenzy against Dempsey and this sentiment would register at the box office. It did.

Dempsey walked into the ring like a grandmother into her funeral shroud. A whiff of garlic would have knocked him out. Tunney only injured one of his optics. He could not have knocked him down with a sledge. Not because Jack was strong, but because Tunney was only a marine.

The thing was so raw that even the capitalist editors could not get excited over it, the exception being the Methodist Chicago Daily News.

Boxing, baseball, football, tennis, swimming—every sport, brutal or refined is tarred with the commercialised brush of capitalism. Get the money and let the other fellow do the raving! That is the morality of the present system.

Wu Pei-fu Running Amuck

The gods are getting ready to get rid of Wu Pei-fu, and the first thing they do is to drive him crazy. His tuchuns are shooting in all directions and firing on their best friends. Only a few weeks ago they shot seven British naval ratings and the result was that British pride got wounded and burned down a Chinese town, killing 5,000 innocent people. This may seem tough, but the dignity of a christian empire cannot be tampered with.

Now, another of Wu's generals took some shots at a standard oil steamer. King Rockefeller is just as touchy as King George and at least as powerful.

In the meantime the Cantonese are going north and the armies of General Feng are coming south to join them. Unless all signs fail China should be in a position to talk cold turkey to them all before

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Bucharin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

By N. BUCHARIN.

THUS, translated into ordinary language, means: We have no proletarian dictatorship, our state is not a workers' state, but a workers' and peasants' state; the proletariat must however defend its interests, and must thus oppose to a certain extent this workers' and peasants' state. Thus, if the proletarian party wants to remain a proletarian party, it must consent to some degree against the soviet power. One things must be said first of all, that it is becoming the fashion to try and find support in Lenin's authority for all kinds of nonsense, and those who do that, think it is going to cost them nothing, and that they may practice their art as long as they choose.

HERE Comrade Ossovsky directs his fire upon me. Lenin grasped the fact that our state is a workers' and peasants' state. Bukharin fails to grasp it. And since Bukharin is well known to be an adherent of the majority of the C. C. it is only natural that the C. C. comprehends nothing of this question, and is thus pursuing a policy which, as Comrade Ossovsky points out, can become extremely dissetrous from the standpoint of proletarian revolution. First of all, I must challenge the testimony, and also reject the preference to Comrade Lenin as witness, or rather, I myself call upon him as witness, in order to prove that Comrade Ossovsky is entirely in the wrong, and that his standpoint leads in reality to conclusions disastrous to proletarian revolution.

The following was written by Comrade Lenin (Complete works, Vol. 18:1, in the article: "The crisis in the party," page 33, Russian) with reference to the trade union discussion:

"When dealing with the discussion of December 30, I must correct an error of mine. I said that our state is in reality not 'a workers' state, but a workers' and peasants' state.' Comrade Bukharin at once interpolated: 'What kind of a state?' In reply I referred to the VIII. Congress then just concluded. Now, when reading the report on the discussion, I see that I was wrong, and Comrade Bukharin right. I should have said that: 'The workers' state is an abstraction, and yet we have in reality a workers' state, but firstly with the peculiarity that it is not the proletarian but the peasant population which preponderates in the country, and secondly it is a workers' state accompanied by bureaucratic distortion.'"

THIS is surely perfectly clear, and Comrade Ossovsky ought to have known that Lenin wrote this. Lenin here states directly, when speaking of the character of the power: "We have a workers' government, but the peasantry is in the majority in the country." Right! "We have a workers' state, but accompanied by bureaucratic distortion." Right! Thus our proletarian dictatorship, our workers' state, has the peculiarities of working in an agricultural country and of having its state apparatus burdened with various bureaucratic aberrations.

THIS is perfectly true. But what is the class character of the state? It is a workers' state. To state that our state is not a workers' state, that it is already semi-bourgeois, is to assert that our state is already in a condition of degeneration, and to throw doubts upon the existence of the proletarian dictatorship in our country. And where Comrade Ossovsky says this in so many words in a printed essay, Comrade Trotsky expresses the same idea in the sentence on the "extremely non-proletarian character of our state." If this really were the case, it would be a very serious matter indeed. If we really had no proletarian party, would obviously place beva to pursue a very different line, and our party, in so far as it is a proletarian party, would obviously place questions on the agenda aiming at a radical purging of the present Soviet power. Could it be otherwise? This is the first thesis.

The Rumor of the Bureaucratic Degeneration of the Soviets.

THIS brings us to the thesis of the degeneration of our whole state apparatus, and of the deviation of our policy, and of the policy of the present Soviet state, from the interests of the broad proletarian masses. Comrade Kamenev has declared in so many words:

"The line you take is departing from the line of proletarian revolution, and is departing more and more of the interests of the broad proletarian masses."

THIS is entirely in harmony with the idea that "our state has an extremely non-proletarian character," and with Ossovsky's assertion that we have no workers' state. It harmonizes entirely with the whispers and rumors on the degeneration of the Soviet power at present occupying so much of the time of "pro-new-Soviet" ("Smyenovyekhovyy") elements and various other liberal opponents of our policy. The opposition has pointed out that the numerous bureaucratic groups in our state apparatus are complemented by the equally numerous bureaucratic groups in the economic organs, the co-operatives, the trade unions, etc. It would thus seem that the whole of the groups composing our apparatus have practically nothing in common with the interests of the broad masses.

WE have been believing, in our slim policy that our party is the true vanguard of the proletariat; but now it turns out that it is a bureaucratic clique entirely detached from the masses. We believe the Soviet power to represent a form of the dictatorship of the proletariat, but it appears that all we have is an extremely non-proletarian state, headed by a completely declassed caste. The logical continuance of this train of thought is bound to lead sooner or later to the idea of the overthrow of the Soviet power—it can lead nowhere else.

AND I repeat: Were I personally so convinced that the situation among us has reached a point at which we have no longer a dictatorship of the working class, and we are being ruled by an oligarchy detaching itself from the interests of the broad masses, then my only conclusion would be, that of Kautsky: Overthrow of the ruling power. Our comrades of the opposition have not yet reached this logical conclusion, and are not likely to. I, for my part, believe that the "god" by an oligarchy detaching itself from stops in time, and this will be an excellent thing from the standpoint of the interests of the party. But we should be very dense indeed if we did not comprehend that this remarkable ideological development takes a straight line in this direction.

The Rumor of Submerging of Soviets in the Peasant Petty Bourgeoisie.

THERE is another assertion of the opposition which tends in the same direction. The thesis that whilst our upper stratum, the party, the Soviet power, the state and economic organs, are all submerged in a bureaucracy opposed to the interests of the working class, at the same time our subordinate Soviet organs are being submerged in the peasant petty bourgeoisie. The comrades take the election results and say: "Look, there are peasants in the village Soviets, and there will be more and more of them here—this is the way in which the Soviets are being vitalized." The upper stories of our building are being flooded by a bureaucratic clique, the lower stories by the petty bourgeoisie, and nothing but complete catastrophe is to be seen on both sides. The two waves will close over our hands and we shall suffocate.

THIS thesis of the submerging of our village Soviets under a flood of peasants is truly a perverted thought on the part of the new opposition. The opposition appears to imagine it possible to govern an agricultural country in such manner that the working class, non-existent in the village is still to maintain a numerical ascendency. How can anyone imagine that the industrial proletariat is to have the majority in the village of Soviets? Anyone who can arrive at such an idea must truly have a cobbage in place of a head. (Applause.)

LAST WORDS ON EVOLUTION

By ERNEST HAECKEL

It is particularly interesting, to glance at the central nervous system of the vertebrates, the great stem of which we regard ourselves as the crowning point. Here again the anatomical and embryological facts speak a clear and unambiguous language. In all vertebrates, from the lowest fishes up to man, the psychic organ makes its appearance in the embryo in the same form—a simple cylindrical tube on the dorsal side of the embryonic body, in the middle line. The anterior section of this "medullary tube" expands into a club-shaped vesicle, which is the beginning of the brain; the posterior and thinner section becomes the spinal cord. The cerebral vesicle divides, by transverse constrictions, into three, then four, and avantually five vesicles. The most important of these is the first, the cerebrum, the organ of the highest psychic functions. The more the intelligence develops in the higher vertebrates, the larger, more voluminous, and more specialized does the cerebrum become. In particular, the grey mantle or cortex of the cerebrum, its most important part, only attains in the higher mammals the degree of quantitative and qualitative development that qualifies it to be the "organ of mind" in the narrower sense. Thru the famous researches of Paul Flechsig eleven years ago we were enabled to distinguish eight fields in the cortex, four of which serve as the internal centres of sense-perception, and the four that lie between these are the thought centers (or association centers) of the higher psychic faculties—the association of impressions, the formation of ideas and concepts, induction and deduction. The real organ of mind, the phronema, is not yet developed in the lower mammals. It is only gradually built up in the more advanced, exactly in proportion as their intelligence increases. It is only in the most intelligent forms of the placentals, the higher ungulates (horse, elephant), the carnivores (fox, dog), and especially the primates that the phronema attains the high grade of development that leads us from the anthropoid apes direct to the savage; and from him to civilised man.

We have learned a good deal about the special significance of the various parts of the brain, as organs of specific functions, by the progress of the modern science of experimental physiology. Careful experiments by Goltz, Munk, Bernard, and many other physiologists, have shown that the normal consciousness, speech, and the intellectual sense-perceptions, are connected with definite areas of the cortex, and that these various parts of the soul are destroyed when the organic areas connected with them are injured. But in this respect Nature has unconsciously given us the most instructive experiments. Diseases in these various areas show how their functions are partially or totally extinguished when the cerebral cells that compose them (the neurons or ganglionic cells) are partially or entirely destroyed. Here again Virchow, who was the first to make a careful microscopic study of the finest changes in the diseased cells, and so explain the nature of the disease, did pioneer work. I still remember very well a specimen of this kind (in the summer of 1855, at Wurzburg), which made a deep impression on me. Virchow's sharp eye had detected a small anspicious spot in the cerebrum of a lunatic, who there seemed to be nothing remarkable about it on superficial examination. He handed it to me for microscopic examination, and I found that a large number of the ganglionic cells were affected, partly by fatty degeneration and partly by calcification. The luminous remerks that my great teacher made on these and similar finds in other cases of mental disorder, confirmed my conviction of the unity of the human organism and the inseparable connection of mind and body, which he himself at that time expressly shared. When he abandoned this Monistic conception of the psychic life for Dualism and Mysticism twenty years afterwards (especially after his Munich speech in 1877), we must attribute this partly to his psychological metamorphosis, and partly to the political motives of which I spoke in the last chapter.

Resolutions Adopted by I. L. D. Conference

Resolution for General Amnesty in Poland.

POLAND is today a land of terror against the workers and peasants, and their organizations and press. The movement of the national minorities, the Ukrainians, White Russians, and others, is suppressed. Six thousands of workers and peasants are in prison, sentenced or held for trial under the laws of former czars and kaisers, which are still applied today. Among them is Stanislaw Lanetzki, a member of the Polish parliament, an active figure in the labor movement, sentenced to six years at hard labor. The news that has just arrived of the arrest of three peasant party deputies, whose parliamentary immunity Pilsudski is attempting to lift for the purpose of prosecuting them, is the latest instance of suppression.

The workers' press is suppressed and all publications are prevented or confiscated. The militant workers' and peasants' economic, political and educational organizations are suppressed and their headquarters are closed by the government. Even our sister organization, the Labor Defense of Poland, is suppressed and is obliged to function illegally. The government utilizes a system of provocations, employing hundreds of provocateurs, who are well paid to use their imagination in discovering "secret organizations" so that hundreds of workers and peasants are arrested and thrown into jail.

EMERGENCY courts are constantly at work and death sentences meted out to workers and peasants. These toilers, and the national minorities fighting for their independence, are submitted to most inhuman, tortures at the time of investigation and hangings. Many of them are doomed for the rest of their lives and a number of them are killed or die a few days after these "hearings." Those in prison, in many cases, must conduct hunger strikes for such elementary rights as visits from relatives and friends, for permission to receive letters, newspapers, periodicals, food, clothing and other necessities. These prisons are unsanitary and unheated. The prisoners must sleep on rotten straw sacks and are denied light in their cells. Hundreds and thousands of wives, mothers and children are starving while their supporters are kept imprisoned by the government.

THE present Bartel-Pilsudski government which came to power thru a coup d'etato against the former Witos government, not only did not halt these persecutions but threw into jail now hundreds of workers and peasents. Altho it released the generals and other reactionary prisoners who had been arrested by Pilsudski during the coup d'etat in May, it did not liberate the workers and peasants. In has, on the contrary, prolonged martial law, emergency courts, and death sentences.

The masses of Poland, workers and intellectuals, are aroused and are protesting by demanding general amnesty. Workers in other lands are sending their protests to Poland and reiterating the demand for amnesty. But the government is deaf.

The delegates to the second annual conference of International Labor Defense, representing tens of thousands of American workers, join with the demand for the release of persecutions in Poland against workers and peasants and national minorities.

We demand the immediate granting of a general amnesty to permit the imprisoned fighters to return to freedom and to their families.

WE declare that unless the Polish government yields to the firm demands of the workers all over the world, we will use every means at our disposal to arouse the protest of American workers against the situation that exists today in Poland.

We resolve that this resolution be sent to the Polish premier, Bartel, and copies to the Polish ambassador in Washington, and to the press.

Registration Shows Big Drop in Capital-City of Steel and Coal

By GEORGE PAPCUN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 24.—It is estimated that there are 330,000 persons of voting age in Pittsburgh. Out of these 330,000 voters only 44,000 registered to vote in the coming election for United States senator and for the state legislature.

The politicians are making a holler around Pittsburgh that the people are dropping out in voting. In fact, what it means is that they (who are the workers and in the majority) are losing faith in the present electoral system. In 1921 there were 148,954 registered. Then there was a drop in 1926 to 117,667, now the drop comes down to 44,000. As yet there is another registration day, but capitalist politicians predict that the registration will be very light and they do not expect it to go much higher.

The last registration day will be Oct. 2. It seems startling to the liberal section of the capitalist parties that is trying to capitalize the slush in the republican primary to try to get into power. Newspapers are writing editorials, petty bourgeois organizations are starting campaigns of all kinds to try to get the workers to register so they will be ready to vote on election day and again be fooled.

American Trade Union Delegation to Russia Is Announced by L. E. Sheppard

For the first time in the history of the American labor movement a delegation of the nation's most prominent trade union executives intend to investigate labor and economic conditions in England, Italy, Russia, Germany, Belgium, France and other European lands, according to an announcement made public today by President L. E. Sheppard of the Order of Railway Conductors, chairman of the delegation, and Albert F. Coyle, editor of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' Journal, its secretary. Chairman Sheppard, one of the best-known leaders of the American labor movement, was appointed by the president three years ago on a somewhat similar mission to investigate labor conditions in the Hawaiian Islands for the federal government.

The purpose of the delegation, according to its official representatives, is to secure reliable first-hand information regarding the conditions of labor and labor unions across the Atlantic, and especially to secure accurate facts about labor's status in Soviet Russia, under a Communistic workers' government, and in fascist Italy, where regular labor unions are declared illegal and ruthlessly suppressed by the dictator Mussolini.

A. F. of L. and Red Brotherhoods.

The delegation as announced today will consist of representatives of both the Railroad Brotherhoods and the largest unions in the American Federation of Labor. Although the Federation at its last convention in Atlantic City decided not to pay the expenses of an official mission to Russia, the present delegation in no way conflicts with this decision, since its members are going in their private capacity and not as an official body. On this voluntary basis it has been possible to include in the same delegation leading executives of both the A. F. of L. and the big Railroad Brotherhoods, who are outside the A. F. of L. field.

Five Big Unions Represented.

In addition to the inclusion of prominent officers of the Transportation Brotherhoods the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks is to be represented on the delegation by Phil E. Ziegler, editor of the Brotherhood's official magazine and director of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks National Bank of Cincinnati. Executives from five of the most influential international unions in the A. F. of L. comprise an important section of the delegation, while western labor is represented by Frank Palmer, editor of the Colorado Labor Advocate and a prominent member of the Typographical Union.

Welsh and Lauck Included.

The delegation does not intend to rely merely on personal observation, but is to take along a complete staff of economic experts headed by Dr. W. Jett Lauck of Washington, D. C., who has repeatedly served as a consulting economist for the Railroad Brotherhoods and the United Mine Workers of America. Honorable Frank P. Walsh, former joint chairmen of the U. S. war labor board with Chief Justice Taft, will act as legal adviser to the party.

According to today's announcement, the delegation will cover not only the largest countries of Western Europe, but also Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria where it will meet the leaders of the trade union, labor party and co-operative movements, and ascertain what organized labor in these lands is now achieving and planning for the future. Special meetings are to be arranged with the British Labor Office, the International Labor Office at Geneva, and the Federation of Trade Union Headquarters in Amsterdam, as well as with the accredited leaders of the Italian and Russian labor movements. The delegation intends to leave early next July and return during Sept.

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THAT Jesse Smith, right bower of Harry M. Daugherty, committed suicide because a campaign fund that was in his care suffered serious reduction owing to Smith's dabbling in stocks is one of the most sensational developments of the Teapot Dome probe taking place in New York. It should not be forgotten that Daugherty was the lad who caused the raid on the Communist convention in Michigan in 1922, about the time he got the infamous injunction against the shopmen. While we were being exhibited in the streets of St. Joseph with ropes on our hands Harry Daugherty and his flunkeys were being hailed in the capitalist press as national deliverers.

THE end is not yet. Daugherty is now on trial for graft, but the delegates to the Communist convention are not yet out of the toils. Harry did his work. Perhaps his masters no longer have any use for him. But he did them a good turn and in all probability they will not forget him. The officials of the shop crafts' union that should be making use of Daugherty's present dilemma to educate their membership on the ways of patriotism are rather silent, so much so that one is compelled to come to the conclusion that the labor leaders do not regret the legal obstacles placed in the way of strikes.

THE report that Chinese bandits kidnapped missionaries, killed thousands of people and sacked a city is being displayed prominently in London papers. This may be by way of offsetting the slaughter of 5,000 Chinese men, women and children by the the British. At any rate people refuse to get excited any longer over the misadventures of missionaries. The American people have had their fill of them, from Aimee McPherson to King Benjamin of the House of David.

CONSIDERABLE jubilation is expressed in police circles over the possibility of "Scarface Al" Capone, the Cicero gangster, making peace with his rivals. Only last week eight automobiles tore down 22nd street and searched for Al with machine gun bullets. When Al was seen next he was studying the ruins of Miami, Floride, and he freely admitted that a few thousand of the bullets that peppered his Hawthorne Hotel were intended for him. With America well out of the world court and peace in Cicero, American pacifists should be able to celebrate with an easy conscience.

VICTOR BERGER is a funny fellow. Indeed, it is seldom a fat man is otherwise, provided he has short legs and a long body. Victor has both and, in addition, a tendency to say things. Being a congressman, Berger has to introduce a bill occasionally, else he might be sued for taking money under false pretenses. Being a socialist, he must denounce the Communists unless the capitalists are to believe that Victor may be a "red."

• • •

ALL those things taken together, it is not surprising that Berger should frank a speech delivered by him in congress on April 27, 1926. Knowing that all congressmen are against Communism and many of them against fascism, Berger slammed both. It is with his argument and not his premise that we are concerned. Fascism and Communism are twin brothers, said Berger. And to prove it he says: "The reason why our ruling class dislikes the red-haired baby so is because the Bolsheviki laid violent hands on the sacred rights of property—while the fascisti just as violently are protecting the vested

GARMENT UNION ASKS A. F. OF L. TO AID STRIKE

Needs Funds; Marches to City Hall

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 27.—For the first time in twelve weeks of strike, leaders of 40,000 cloakmakers issued an appeal yesterday to international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and other sympathetic bodies, to aid financially in "a finish fight in which employers pin their whole hope on their ability to starve the workers into submission."

The Cloakmakers' Union reminds the various labor organizations that it has always been among the first to heed the call for help from other unions. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has also been appealed to to use his influence in getting a speedy response to the call.

The appeal reviews the present strike situation, declaring that the industry is again threatened with the return of the sweat shop system. After citing the wholesale arrests of pickets and the use of notorious gangsters by employers against strikers, the appeal refers to the injunction obtained against the union, "so sweeping in scope, drastic in effect and reckless in its provisions as to make it unique in the history of labor jurisprudence."

Please send checks to Mr. Joseph Fish, treasurer of strike, 130 East 25th street, New York, N. Y.

March to City Hall.

A march on City Hall, to protest the continued wholesale arrests of striking cloakmakers for picketing in the garment zone, will be the next step taken by the cloak unions to maintain their "rights to free assemblage."

DEFEAT THE ELECTRIC CHAIR!

Tell American Labor About the Revelations in the Recent Hearings for a New Trial for Sacco and Vanzetti

IT is felt that no comprehensive review has yet been published of the mass of new evidence made public at the recent demand for a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti, that covered five days of argument before Judge Webster Thayer, in the Norfolk county court house, at Dedham, Mass.

The DAILY WORKER will therefore publish a series of short articles reviewing the contents of the many affidavits presented, showing the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti and revealing the guilt of the members of the Bernilli gang in Providence, R. I., shielded all these years by the United States government itself.

These articles will be written by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, who attended some of the hearings in the capitalist court room at Dedham, Mass., during his recent tour for the Workers' (Communist) Party thru this section of the country.

These articles will begin in Thursday morning's issue. They should be brought to the attention of large numbers of workers. An increasing interest must be aroused in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Defeat the electric chair! Send for bundle orders to The DAILY WORKER, 1113 West Washington Blvd., Chicago, Illinois.

BROPHY'S OPEN LETTER CITES NEEDS OF U.M.W.

"Save the Union" Is Keynote

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Sept. 27. From the headquarters of District 2 here, of which he is president, John Brophy, candidate for president of the United Mine Workers of America in opposition to John L. Lewis, has issued an open letter to the officers and members of the U. M. W. of A., setting forth the program for which he and his supporters will fight to have made the policy of the union.

On the same ticket with Brophy, well-known for his long fight for nationalization of the coal industry, are William Stevenson of Bay City, Mich., and William J. Brennan of Scranton, Pa. It is believed that the Brophy-Stevenson-Brennen program, whose central slogan is, "Save the Union," will have the support of the majority of the union membership.

There is much dissatisfaction with the Lewis policies and the failure to check the violations of the agreement by the operators, the bad anthracite agreement, containing an arbitration clause with no closed shop provision, coupled with the failure to organize the unorganized fields, together with the expulsion of active members of the union carried on by Lewis, makes certain strong support for a militant program.

"The Brophy statement is as follows:

• • •

To the Officers and Members of Local Unions,
United Mine Workers of America.

Greetings:—In accepting the nominations given me by various local unions as a candidate for international president of the United Mine Workers of America, I am doing so for the following reasons:

It is no secret that today the existence of our union is in peril. In the

SOVIET UNION RAISES WAGES FOR MILLIONS

Better Management Has Material Reward

LONDON, Sept. 27.— Dispatches from the Soviet Union state that a special commission has recommended further wage increases to be given to the workers of many of the principal industries, over and above those assured in the most recent collective agreements. These general increases will run from two to five per cent according to the varying conditions.

Millions Will Get Wage Rates.

The increases will be made effective soon to coal miners, metal workers, textile workers, chemical workers, glass workers, match workers, postal workers and railroad workers. General wage increases for other industries are recommended to take effect next year.

In a recent instruction of the government, signed also by the trade unions and the Communist Party, the campaign for economy which has been going on for some time was pointed out as by no means signifying a lowering of the wages.

A Result of Better Management.

On the contrary, it said, wage increases would be allowed by the elimination of waste and inefficiency in production and fighting against wasteful management.

Not only higher wages, but cheaper products would result and the peasantry be able to aid in the industrializing process by increased purchases of industrial products.

Police-Spy Frame-Ups Are Met by Solid Front of the Passaic Textile Strikers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 27.—Implying that the bombing charges filed against 21 Passaic strikers were frame-ups and that confessions were wrung from them by third-degree methods, Thomas MacMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America, attacked the city officials and police of the textile strike area Thursday night at a meeting at Belmont Park, Garfield. Several thousand strikers stood in a pouring rain and cheered him.

Thomas J. Curtis, president of the Tunnel and Subway Construction Workers and first vice-president of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor, brought greetings to the textile strikers and assured them of the support of his union. Rose Schneiderman of the Women's Trade Union League also spoke to the strikers, announcing the gift of $500 by the League for the strike relief fund.

Gustav Desk, president of the newly-formed Local 1603, Alfred Wagenknecht, chairman of the general strike relief committee and George Aschenadse were among the other speakers.

Misconstructions.

"I regret to note that certain misconstructions were placed upon my statement of a week or so ago, relative to the Passaic strike," said MacMahon in his speech. "We do not believe that the workers are guilty of any intent to defy constituted authority. We warned the workers to avoid any act that would be interpreted, and said that we do not approve of such acts if committed.

"But bombing charges can be framed. This is no new thing in the labor history of the United States. I believe there are forces at work in Passaic today which are working to blacken the name of the strikers. Workers picketing the mills have been clubbed viciously by those sworn to uphold the law. Scalding water has been thrown on them from the windows of the mills and the authorities have taken no action to arrest the guilty persons.

Fake "Confessions."

"If a confession is secured under duress, that confession is not valid. The arrest of 20 men and one boy on charges of being implicated in certain bombings and their detention in jail without being permitted to see their attorney, is by my mind a grave infraction of the laws of New Jersey.

"It has been said that the United Textile Workers of America should expel those guilty of this crime. Are they guilty? Has the time come when men or women arrested are proved guilty before conviction? If the employers or police authorities or anyone else can convince the officers and members of Local 1603 that any members of their organization are guilty of such a crime, they will be expelled immediately.

Pledges Support.

"Until proved guilty, the workers can feel assured that every assistance will be given them, in order that justice may be done.

"I desire further to assure the workers that the action taken by the international officers of the United Textile Workers concerning the Passaic strike has been approved by the convention of that organization held in New York last week, and that every effort will be made by the International Textile Workers of America to secure moral and financial support to the end that victory may be won."

Brands Frame-Up.

Alfred Wagenknecht in his speech said in part: A real bomb-thrower tries to hurt somebody. These bombs seem to be harmless. This bombthrowing has been going on since May. Why is it that 21 bombers are caught all of a sudden as the strike nears successful conclusion. This is clearly a frame-up to break the strike."

BEATEN STRIKER WOULDN'T SIGN A 'CONFESSION'

Attempt to Terrorize Picket Fails

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 27.—Fake confessions, extorted by terror, are the latest move in the plot of the Passaic police to frame-up woolen strikers on charges of "bomb planting." Teddy Tomechko, 17, a striker, tells about it on his release after four days with the bullies of the Passaic force.

First a beating and kicking about; then an intimidating grilling by the detectives; then a confession thrust under his nose with a threat that if he did not sign it what had been done was nothing to what would come.

The young striker stood firm and was eventually released. While they were moving him from one jail to another he saw another striker with bruised and battered features, at the jail in Clifton, a nearby strike town.

Habeas corpus writs are being sought by lawyers for the 20 other strikers still held incommunicado on this charges of suspicion in connection with the explosions in strike-breakers' homes. No one was injured in the explosions and they are regarded by the strikers as "plants."

The Civil Liberties Union, says Forrest Bailey, director, will not only fight against torture and unconstitutional imprisonment of these prisoners but will take action for the restoration of picketing. "The Civil Liberties Union," he continued, "will resort to injunctions, civil actions, free speech tests, picketing tests, and every other legal means within its power to prove to officials in the strike area that they cannot use their positions as a screen behind which to conduct a bitter anti-labor war."

KEEP THE DAILY WORKER!

By W. J. WHITE.

WHENEVER the class struggle breaks out, and it is always breaking out, in one form or another, now in Passaic, now in the anthracite region, or in the coal fields of West Virginia, then it is that the working class of this country needs a paper.

When these great wars of the capitalists and the workers take place, and force is needed, the master-class have at their command their batteries of publicity, newspapers and magazines. The paid servants of the masters turn on their workers with these weapons, and every possible vile thing against them is spread broadcast, through the country.

The masters depend upon their daily press. At the very least thirty million papers enter the homes of the workers of this country every day and spread their owners' propaganda.

In this situation one of the big guns of the workers is The DAILY WORKER. We must build up this paper of ours, the DAILY WORKER, until it is not only read by the members of the Workers (Communist) Party but we must strive to have thousands of non-party workers read and get their news of the political and industrial warfare of the workers from this, our paper, The DAILY WORKER.

This task of getting thousands of outside workers interested and constant readers of our paper rests upon the shoulders of the class-conscious workers who can and do see the necessity for just such papers as our daily.

I can picture no greater calamity for our party in this country than the death of The DAILY WORKER. With such a death our English speaking workers will be without a valuable source of information to bring to their homes the story of the struggles of the working class thruout the world.

SPY BUREAU IS FORCED TO PUT OUT RENT SIGN

Was Involved in Frame-Ups in Passaic

By ROBERT W. DUNN, Fed. Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.— The "To Let" sign is hanging in front of the suite at 1482 Broadway, formerly occupied by the Eagle Detective Agency, strike-breakers. The Eagle Agency was involved last July in the efforts of Jacob Nesovitsky, self-styled international spy, to break the Passaic strike by framing-up Albert Weisbord in a breach of promise suit. The suit was dropped when the complainant, "Rosalind Lapnore," failed to appear and when the addresses given to the county clerk, proved fictitious.

$20,000 Job.

At the time, the Eagle Agency, thru its president, Max Sherwood, wealthy strike-breaker, denied taking part in the frame-up, but at the same time revealed Nesovitsky's connection with the Botany Mills of Passaic. Nesovitsky, it was found on investigation of Sherwood's story, had co-operated with one Shaw, another professional strike-breaker, in an attempt to end the strike by planting bombs and by the skilful placement, among the strikers, of agents provocateur. Twenty thousand dollars was paid for the job, Shaw said.

Came Spolensky.

Following Nesovitsky in the employ of the Botany Mills came Jacob Spolansky, another former department of justice man and "red expert," who has been working for the National Metal Trades Association open shop department. Spolansky is now expected to have returned to Chicago, leaving the spy work for the Botany people in the hands of the well-known International Auxiliary Co., otherwise known as the Eastern Engineering Co. of 17 W. 60 Street, New York City. The International, a labor spy bureau of long standing, has a number of operatives in the Passaic and Paterson district, some as outside men in the Passaic strike, and others on the inside of the Paterson silk mills.

The recent bomb-throwing, laid by the police at the door of strike leaders, may have something to do with the presence of International operatives when the Passaic mill owners have introduced in a final effort to discredit the strike now under the leadership of the United Textile Workers of America. It is known that the International spies have been particularly vigilant in breaking U. T. W. of A. strikes and organization movements in the past two years.

FARMER-LABOR RANKS DEVELOP PARTY LOYALTY

Seek Strong Basis for Minnesota Movement

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 27.—One of the most encouraging signs of progress in the Minnesota Farmer-Labor movement is the development of party loyalty on the part of the workers and farmers of the state.

The party is rising above even such personalities as Magnus Johnson and Hendrik Shipstead who have been and still are the party's outstanding standard bearers.

This drift of loyalty from personalities to party is best seen in the changed attitude taken toward the lesser candidates, especially the candidates for the state legislature who appear on the ballot as non-partisans without party designation.

In the past it has been the habit of too many legislative candidates to hide their farmer-labor affiliation in the hope of catching some of the "respectable" middle class vote. This practice has been more or less blinked at. But all that is now pretty much a thing of the past. It is felt that the party must build from the bottom and not from the top. The candidates will therefore be compelled to carry the party standards in the open without camouflage.

The movement gained impetus, to be sure, thru the election of Magnus Johnson and Hendrik Shipstead as United States senators. Magnus Johnson, however, suffered defeat at the hands of the republican, Tom Schall. He is now the Farmer-Labor candidate for governor.

But it is felt that strength of the party thruout the state must be better displayed thru the election of Farmer-Labor candidates to the state legislature and to the lower house of congress.

Here in Saint Paul, almost more than in Minneapolis, the organized labor movement is solid and enthusiastic in its support of the Farmer-Labor campaign. Last Saturday saw a meeting of all the building trades of the St. Paul trade unions to discuss the campaign. This Wednesday evening, Sept. 29, at 8 p. m., a gathering of all Farmer-Labor forces will be held at the Labor Temple, 216 W. Franklin St., for the purpose of organizing and developing the campaign for state, congressional and legislative candidates endorsed by the Farmer-Labor Association on the Farmer-Labor ticket. A city-wide precinct organization will be built up for the distribution of literature, for the conduct of meetings, and the raising of finances. Special editions of the Farmer-Labor Advocate will be circulated thruout Ramsey county.

Among the legislative candidates endorsed by the Farmer-Labor Association in Ramsey county (St. Paul) are Evans Kelley, 23rd district south; Frank T. Starkey, 38th district north; John J. McDonough, 38th district south; Al J. Samec, 39th district (5th Ward); A. H. Ehl, 42nd district north. Other candidates will be endorsed at Wednesday's meeting.

Joseph Jackson, 37th district; Geo. Nordlin, 37th district; Charles Hensler, 39th district, and Dr. Cannon, 41st district. All of these except Dr. Cannon are up for re-election. Senators Hausler and Nordlin have no opposition.

Candidates for Congress.

The Farmer-Labor Party has congressional candidates in eight districts. The candidates and their districts are as follows:

Third—A. M. Gaven, Glencoe.
Fourth—Thomas V. Sullivan, St. Paul.
Fifth—Albert G. Bastis, Minneapolis.
Sixth—Joseph B. Himst, St. Cloud.
Seventh—O. J. Kvale, Benson.
Eighth—William L. Carss, Proctor.
Ninth—Knud Wefald, Hawley.
Tenth—Ernest Lundeen, Rinchfield.

Three of these candidates, Kvale, Carss and Wefald are up for re-election. The campaign hopes, as optimistically expressed at the Farmer-Labor Party headquarters, are that Minnesota will send six Farmer-Labor congressmen to Washington. Those picked for victory are Sullivan, Himst, Kvale, Carss, Wefald and Lundeen. While still in the republican party during the war, Lundeen represented the 8th district in congress.

Efforts are being made to elect Thomas V. Sullivan from the district (4th, St. Paul), in which J. F. Emma, the Communist, received 12,000 votes as the Farmer-Labor candidate in 1924.

The state Farmer-Labor ticket is as follows:

For Governor—Magnus Johnson, Kimball.
For Secretary of State—Charles Olson, Duluth.
For Attorney General—Frank E. McAllister, St. Paul.
For State Auditor—S. O. Tjosvold, St. Paul.
For State Treasurer—Thomas J. Nelson, Preston.

last few years about two hundred thousand members have been lost to the union. Native districts, such as West Virginia, Kentucky, Maryland, Tennessee, Alabama, Colorado, have been destroyed by the attacks of the operators, and in certain bituminous fields, as western and central Pennsylvania and parts of Ohio, the Union is slowly crumbling.

The United Mine Workers Must Be Saved.

Old methods of organizing, which here failed, must give place to new. Local and District strikes, which were successful fifteen or twenty years ago, when we were fighting small coal operators, are frequently failures today, when we are opposed by gigantic corporations having scores of mines scattered in various districts.

Our great losses have been in the last four years.

A hundred thousand new members were in the Union at the end of the national strike of 1922. These were the miners in Somerset County, Pa., and the big coke fields and other regions that saved the national fight by joining forces with the Union.

Most of these newly organized men were striking against big companies, having mines in older organized districts as well. At the Cleveland conference some of us insisted that these men be protected, and that no contract be signed with any of these companies for any of their mines unless all their mines were included. But this policy was rejected. These companies were permitted to sign up in other fields while continuing to evict families, use gunmen and import scabs in the coke fields and Somerset.

I will make this point clear by the case of the Consolidation Coal Co., which is typical of others. The Consolidation in 1922 had approximately 40 mines in northern West Virginia; others in Maryland and seven or eight in Somerset county, besides additional mines in Kentucky. The company agreed to sign up for West Virginia only, and the National Union accepted this proposal over the protests of the Pennsylvania union miners. The West Virginia men went back to work under the policy of the National Union.

In Maryland and Pennsylvania strikes for Union recognition continued, but were of no use. With coal coming from 40 mines in West Virginia, the Consolidation did not care how long the other states struck. The company filled orders with West Virginia coal and sacrificed its West Virginia profits to ship strikebreakers and gunmen into Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Finally the Maryland and Somerset strikes were lost. And then Consolidation broke with the Union in West Virginia and used Maryland and Somerset county coal to crush the strike that resulted. The company is now making hundred per cent scab. Ten million tons a year without a union contract.

Bethlehem Mines Corporation, Hillman Coal & Coke and other big concerns were allowed to split the workers and destroy the Union in the same way. The Peabody Coal Co. is doing it now.

The policy that lost these many members to the Union was a "back-ward step" of the most disastrous nature. The men abandoned to the open shop were forced to accept wage reductions. And this meant cheap scab coal coming into the northern markets, which meant wholesale unemployment in the northern fields.

I give these facts not in a spirit of destructive criticism, but because we must recognize past mistakes if we wish to have a constructive policy in the future.

The policies we must adopt, I need hardly say, do not include wage reductions. There have been enough wage reductions—for the men I spoke of—under the old policy. Wage reductions offer no solution, but lead only to further misery and degredation.

What must we do to save the Union?

FIRST, ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED.

This can be done.

It can be done by active field workers who will give their entire energies to the job.

It cannot be done by political gumshoers who sit around wasting time while the work of organizing remains to be done.

And it cannot be done by a futile policy of local strikes only. The problem calls for national planning the national action, by company must be allowed to operate on a union basis in one field while breaking its contract in another, as the Peabody Coal Co. and others are doing.

Secondly, we must work for Nationalization of the Mines and we must organize a Labor Party.

NATIONALIZATION that is public ownership with union share in management, is the official goal of the United Mine Workers, and conventions have instructed that efforts be made to reach it. Much valuable time has been lost because these instructions have not been followed.

This is a matter of vital and of great importance to the Union. It will give hope to the rank and file who see no hope any longer in private ownership and management of the industry.

A LABOR PARTY is necessary to get justice for the Union in the courts and legislatures. Our conventions have expressed sympathy with this aim. But our cause has been injured by the support that certain leaders have given to reactionary anti-labor politicians, such as Calvin Coolidge. We are paying the price for that now.

NEXT, ALEX HOWAT and others who are being unjustly discriminated against must be restored to full privileges in the Union.

We must get the closest co-operation between the anthracite and bituminous miners, as in 1922, when they fought together. Nothing can take the place of working class solidarity. And it must be recognized that the anthracite districts cannot maintain wage standards if the Union is crushed in the bituminous fields.

I believe that by persistently and courageously fighting for the above program the Union can be saved. The present administration has shown no way of averting the disastrous losses the organization is sustaining. It is for this reason that I have accepted the many requests I have received from local unions and individual members of our organization to be candidate for International President.

In doing so I am glad to say that William Stevenson, of Bay City, Michigan, and William J. Brennan, of Scranton, Pa., candidates, respectively, for International Vice-President and Secretary-Treasurer, are in full accord with the above program for saving the Union, and when elected will co-operate to the fullest extent with me. We are conducting the campaign on the basis of the larger program and not on the personal issues and take this opportunity to place our policy before the rank and file of our organization.

With very good wishes, I am,

Fraternally yours,
JOHN BROPHY.

blaze," it was decided yesterday at a meeting of 1,500 cloakmakers.

The shop chairmen have called upon the executive board of the Cloakmakers' general strike committee to arrange the demonstration as speedily as possible and it is expected to take place this week. The protest to Mayor Walker is being made, union officials stated, because they have been unable to obtain satisfaction from police authorities. Arrests for picketing last week have been tantamount to jail sentences. Magistrate McAndrews, sitting in Jefferson Market Court, has frequently meted out fifty and ten days for "congregating," the union points out.

Day's Pay Donated.

A prompt response to the appeal for funds for men and women on strike for twelve weeks came yesterday from cloakmakers who have returned to work in settled shops and from dressmakers who were not affected by the garment tie-up. These cloak and dressmakers yesterday worked a full day and turned their day's wages over to those still on strike.

DISASTER TO IRON MINERS DUE TO GREED

Faulty Shafting Is the Cause of Tragedy

BULLETIN.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 27.—Hope flared anew today for the rescue of 43 miners entombed since Friday in the Oliver Mining Company's Pabst G. Mine.

Rescue workers will reach the trapped miners by Wednesday.

Should the rescue be delayed longer, however, the man never will be brought out alive, it is feared.

• • •

By JOHN B. CHAPPLE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 27.—Three mutilated bodies of workers who went hurtling for a half mile in a steel cage to the bottom of the G shaft of the Pabst mine of the Oliver mining properties have been recovered, one 48 other workers, miners on the fifth level, are entombed with practically no hope of their recovery, as the result of a cave-in of the G shaft Friday.

The shaft was not sufficiently reinforced to withstand the effect of recent rains, and the result was the worst mining accident in the history of the Gogebic range.

No officials are among the men trapped in the drift at the eighth level, breathing the choking blasting powder and gas damp, if they are still alive at all. They were all workers—mostly Finns, and not regarded as of much account by the steel magnates who profit from their unending labors in the bowels of the earth.

The three men who were on the cage when the cave-in occurred were flung out of the dirt inside the telescoped cage driven into the ground at the bottom of the shaft. The "safety dogs" which are supposed to keep such a thing from happening did not prevent it, and the men took the death plunge when the cable snapped. When the bodies were finally recovered, miners tried to tell who the men were by examining the boots.

Two Exits to Each Drift.

There are supposed to be two exits to every drift, but the emergency had not been used for years, miners reported, and when the men on the eighth level were cut off by the shaft cave-in, there was no way out.

Rescue squads who started up from the 8th level found the emergency way was blocked by a mass of debris thru which they dared not dig for fear of a fresh cave-in which would trap more workers.

Shaft Caving In.

Workers trying to reach the entombed men from the surface had only get down 250 feet by Sunday, and feared they were further below. The shaft was still caving in at intervals. From this point to where the 43 men are trapped it is 550 feet.

When the cave-in came the air and water pipes and light and telephone lines were all cut off, and there is no communication. Their carbide lamps are good for only a few hours, the air filled with blasting powder fumes and gas damp, and with a small supply of water, the trapped workers are once more sacrificed to steel industry profits.

The Inspired Press.

In the face of what the miners who are working in G shaft say, the mining officials, who don't know because they haven't been there, issue reports thru the capitalist newspaper of Ironwood that the entombed men are "perfectly safe."

On the other breath they admit that they "cannot hazard a guess as to how long a period will elapse before they are brot to the surface."

The bodies of the three recovered were taken out by going underground from G shaft to H shaft and then to the surface, but no one can get within hundreds of feet of the entombed men. Acetylene torches were used to cut thru the crushed steel that held the bodies of the workers in the cage.

"Difficult to Explain."

The mining officials say the cave-in is "difficult to explain" and the newspaper that jumps when the strings are pulled talks about the "terrible crowd" at the shaft but says nothing about the wives waiting in the biting wind for news from below.

Men and women huddled in the chill wind all thru the night, faces haggard under the lights as they listened to the rumble of the cables and waited for the cage to bring rescue squads to the top. The watchers strained forward each time the cage appeared and the miners stepped out, their carbide lamps, set atop their yellow oilskin hats, still aglow.

Nerve-Shattered Workers.

In the change house were exhausted workers, strewn on the floor, faces and hair fed with ore as the floor next to them is red. In the vicinity were still other workers, nerves shattered so that they could not sleep, talking in low tones. Hundreds and hundreds of lockers in the big room where the air is heavily laden with the carbide of miners' lamps, but no men are here. They are digging, digging, digging—half a mile below.

A street was filled [illegible] the mine of-

Minnesota Republicans Import Schwab in War on Farmer-Labor Party

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE carefully planned and deliberate manner in which the pinderband in Minnesota is developing its effort to crush the Farmer-Labor Party in that state is seen in part in the importation of Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of directors of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, to make a "prosperity" and "success" address before the annual meeting of the Manufacturers' Association of Minneapolis.

Our thousand "business men" the backbone of the republican party in Minnesota, listened to the steel professor promise that "the northwest, richly endowed with the gifts of God, can become the leading section of this country."

The speech was not intended so much for the business men who listened to Schwab ditiate energetically on the alleged divine blessing. His remarks were especially conducted to drop the restless workers in the cities and the discontented farmers; the former who have seen their unions crushed and wellnigh annihilated under the open shop Coolidge-Mellon-Hoover regime, while the letter have suffered bankruptcies and mortgage foreclosures under the tyranny of the food gamblers, the bankers, the landlords and the transportation interests. This breed of dope is summarized for the benefit of the labor press here by the capitalist Minneapolis journal, claimed as the organ of the steel interests, as follows:

Schwab said:

"The United States continues to develop more rapidly than ever despite the oft' repeated question as to whether the peak is not near.

"The young man of today has greater opportunities for success than any of his ancestors ever had in this country.

"The next 25 to 50 years will witness the greatest industrial development this country ever has known.

"There would be no farm problem if the principles that have brought success to industry were made to apply to agriculture.

"The greatest thrill in life comes not from money but from the realization of a dream or ambition after much effort.

"The happiest days are those of the struggle for success, not those coming after success.

"The richest memories and the greatest wealth are the associations and friendships developed by the fight for success.

"Confidence in oneself and one's business are the basis of success.

"The only way to make money is to take hold of something and develop it."

These are the gloatings of the multi-millionaire steel magnate, in whose mills the workers are unorganized and compelled to yield up the wealth they produce because Schwab has the governmental tyranny directed by the republican party at his every beck and call. Schwab wents to continue republican rule in Minnesota, knowing if it is wiped out there, the independent political action of the workers and farmers will spread to other states and to the nation.

The workers in the iron mines of northern Minnesota, in the lumber mills of the state, in the great flour mills of Minneapolis, in the factories and workshops everywhere, know that the "prosperity" that Schwab speaks of is not for them. Schwab lauded James J. Hill, the bitterly anti-labor railroad baron, and the late Archbishop Ireland, Hill's catholic ally. It was "Jim" Hill who first sought to bring the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington railroads under one management, carrying out Schwab's ideas which he stated in these words:

"No individual can accomplish much without the associations of others. Industrial development is the work of associations, big associations, and I am a believer in business on a big scale as a means of reducing expense and increasing efficiency."

• • •

That is supposed to be all very well for the railroad, the mining and steel industry. But according to Schwab and his republican allies, it is wrong for the workers and farmers to organize. It is wrong for the workers to build their trade unions. It is wrong for the farmers to support their co-operative purchasing and marketing organizations. And worst of all, it is wrong according to Schwab's press and Schwab's republican party for the workers and farmers to unite in a Farmer-Labor Party, as they have done in Minnesota, to protect their interests as the great capitalists are doing thru the republican party.

Evidently fearing that the Minnesota workers and farmers were fed up on this sort of buncombe, Schwab put sentimental in another part of his speech and painted this fireside picture:

"Money means nothing except enough to keep a person in comfort in his old age," he said. "On our estate at Loretta, Pa., I have built a little cottage and no one ever gets inside it except my wife and myself. There we go, from time to time, to play at being the poor folk we were 40 years ago."

Evidently Schwab expects the struggling workers and farmers of Minnesota to sympathize with him in his senile old age when he is returning to his second childhood and playing doll house once more. Minnesota labor, however, will realize that the joke is on the workers and farmers who have failed to build their own class power, these many years, and protect their own interests and provide for their own old age as the capitalist masters have done.

Schwab did not urge the menufacturing interests of Minnesota to raise the wages of the workers, nor did he tell the food profiteers on the Minneapolis chamber of commerce to cease robbing the farmers, in order that city and land labor might feed, house and clothe its sons in decency and comfort. Not at all. The business interests would have run him out of town if he had even attempted it. Instead, the steel magnate painted the ludicrous and impossible picture of "success" that showed all the workers and farmers in Minnesota becoming Schwabs, either as multi-millionaire bankers, landlords, industrialists or speculators, "if they worked hard enough." They know that they work hard enough. They are just discovering that the trouble is they are not their own bosses.

Schwab spoke for his class in Minnesota. He gloried in its achievements, and O. B. McClintock, president of the Manufacturers' Association, thanked him and called him "brother." McClintock added, "The banks feel better, and when they feel better we (meaning the manufacturing interests) should feel better," with the workers and farmers, of course, playing the role of Lazarus at this capitalist feast.

• • •

Just by way of showing the unity of the republican party in Minnesota, the banquet was attended by both the republican governor, Theodore Christianson, and the republican mayor of Minneapolis, George E. Leach.

Instead of salving over the class struggle and covering up the wounds of the class war, Schwab's speech should reveal to Minnesota labor, clearer than ever the class issues raised by the steel profiteer, whose party spent millions of dollars in his home state of Pennsylvania in the recent primaries to corrupt and confuse the working class voters of that state. Schwab's speech at Minneapolis should help rather than hurt the Farmer-Labor Party campaign in that state.

BALDWIN CABINET INSISTS ON MINE UNION SURRENDER

Hopes to Crush Strike With Cold and Hunger

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 27.—With cold weather setting in, the 160th day of the coal stoppage in England found the struggle again transferred to the halls of parliament, where another attempt to reach a settlement was made after the recent fruitless parleys in Downing street. The miners' delegate conference meets Wednesday to take up the refusal of concessions from either the mine owners or the government.

Government Relentless Against Union.

The house of commons is meeting this afternoon to consider the situation and will continue deliberations tomorrow. The house of lords will also meet this afternoon. Premier Baldwin is scheduled to explain to both houses the government's attitude in the coal dispute, after which it is expected that Ramsay MacDonald, former labor premier, and Lloyd George, liberal leader, will "criticise" the cabinet's policy.

The government's attitude however, has hardened perceptibly since it has thought that the complete surrender of the miners can be forced.

Compromise Will Delgate Strike.

Three-quarters of an hour after the session started Prime Minister Baldwin, Ramsay MacDonald and Lloyd George entered the house of commons for the critical coal debate. They found the house engaged in an argument over whether British soldiers are able to keep their beards properly trimmed with safety razors, which recently have been substituted for the long handled kind.

The trio of party leaders all appeared extremely jovial. Premier Baldwin immediately took charge of the business of the day, moving that the house meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. MacDonald objected, urging that the session be held Wednesday, at the same time as the miners' delegate conference.

THAT the jugular vein of Titus Ruffo should be slashed because of his animosity towards Mussolini is the opinion of an Italian fascist newspaper. Ruffo is a baritone and consequently makes his living by hurling violent sounds at a select section of the populace. A pretty good reason that he should not be allowed to die of old age, but in this case we are for Ruffo. By the way, the baritone is a brother-in-law of Mastro Nicola, who says that all is not well on the banks of the Tiber.

THOMAS A. MITTEN, street railway magnate of Philadelphia, pulled a good one on the dope-reading public when he stated that in his belief labor should run all industry. As a matter of fact they are running it now—for the other fellow. Mitten declared that the workers could "humanize" the capitalist system by purchasing it bit by bit. The worst we can say of Mitten is that his stuff is like what one would read in a right wing socialist paper. Needless to say, capitalism can only be humanised when it has metaphorically speaking—beneath six feet of clay.

"The Biggest Book in the World." "The Biggest Book in the World," a fantastical labor comedy by the German playwright, Karl Wittvogel, translated by Upton Sinclair, is announced as the first production of the Workers' Drama League, whose studio is at 64 South Washington Square, New York City.

Plans for the coming season will be announced at a general membership meeting at the league studio, 64 So. Washington Square, on Wednesday night, at 8:15.

Marion Gering, formerly with the Meierhold Theater in Moscow, Michael Gold, editor of The New Masses, and Jasper Deeter will speak at the meeting.

officials were down helping in the rescue work too.

He looked surprised.

"Hell," he said bitterly.

Officials in Fine Homes.

The officials were at fine homes on "Oliver avenue." But they would not answer to a ring of their doorbells. This was because if they did, the half-crazed wives of the men entombed in the earth would "bother" them—the miners' wives.

An official who had refused to answer knocks at his door or his doorbell was called on the phone.

"Can you make a statement concerning the cave-in?" he was asked.

Boss Was Grouchy.

"This is a hell of a time to wake a man up," came the curt answer, and the phone snapped angrily.

Back at the shaft the wives and relatives [illegible] and waited in the stinging wind. It is a hell of a time for them to have to be awake too, but they do not think of that.

The iron ore stock piles cast their sombre shadows over the buildings housing the steam turbines with their never-ceasing hum; the wind moans in sympathy and whines in fear; the shafts raise gaunly into the sky, their arms spelling the word "tragedy" in the light of the silver, cold moon.

The red tinge that is upon everything in the mining country is not all from iron ore; there is the blood of workers mixed with it too.

CATHOLICS GET DECISIVE BLOW FROM MEXICANS

Boycott Collapsed and Congress Vote Final

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 27.—The catholic church has received a terrific blow in the refusal of the Mexican congress by a vote of 170 to 1, to change the laws and the constitution of the nation to conform with the desires of the church.

Moreover, the church, which virtually promised to abide by the decision of the congress when the church leaders agreed to take their case before parliament, is now discrediting itself by attempts of its followers to revive the boycott from its state of collapse, following the adverse vote in congress.

Boycott Collapsed.

When the catholic leaders agreed to leave their case to congress the boycott lost what little force it had, and upper class catholic women began appearing at theaters and driving about town in their private carriages, contrary to the boycott order of the church. As these rich women of the church were the principal ones supporting the boycott, it has lost practically all force.

It is believed that the church, feeling its defeat on the boycott, accepted the invitation to appeal to congress as an excuse to back out of their failure with some grace. Although church members may try to revive it, the leaders may not authorize such action.

A prominent leader in congress has the following to say:

No Way Out For Hierarchy

"The catholics have closed the chances without looking ahead. They called for a showdown, implying they had behind them some means of forcing the government to concede their demands.

"Congress in throwing out the bill left the priests to explain to their followers whether they are going to leave the churches closed indefinitely or start an insurrection against the government, now the only way the catholic view can be promoted. The government has made preparations to meet any opposition the catholics may present."

Greek Labor Spurns The Red Herring of Fake Farmer Laborism

ATHENS, Greece, (By Mail)—The bourgeoisie seeing that the workers of Greece are strongly in favor of the Communists have founded a new petty bourgeois party under the guise of a Farmer-Labor program, and christening it the "Farmer-Labor Party of Greece" under the leadership of Papanastasiou, the head of the "Republican Unionists." But the workers are not to be fooled any more.

Went on a Tour.

The chief of the new "Farmer-Labor" Party went on a tour for the election campaign on behalf of his party starting from the city of Saloniki, where the population is predominantly industrial workers and refugees.

When Mr. Papanastasiou appeared before the masses of the workers to advocate the program of his party he was received with hisses and hoots.

The police interfered and arrested a number of workers on the charge of disorderly conduct. But this did not stop the denunciation of the pseudo-socialists and the speaker had to leave the platform, his place being taken by Communist speakers amid the cheers of the assembled workers.

General Strikes May Be Outlawed by Laws Sought in Australia

SYDNEY, Australia —(By Mail)—The campaign waged by the political and industrial wings of the labor party against the referendum to be taken by the federal anti-labor government to alter the constitution is now in full swing and it is hoped that the vote to be taken will result in the defeat of the government's proposals.

One of the constitutional alterations sought by the government is to enable the government to take action in Australia in the event of a general strike similar to that given to the Baldwin government in Britain under the Emergency Powers Act.

This legislation provides for the creation of desh unions and the utilisation of the military and navy as strike-breakers, the enforcement of industrial conscript on, arrest of persons and entry of homes without warrants, censorship of strike manifestoes, prohibition of public meetings, processions and free speech, and the institution of drag net regulations under which any and every working man can be jailed.

The All-Australian Trade Union Congress which met at Sydney on August 7, and which was attended by delegates from all parts of Australia, pronounced against the referendum proposals and decided to throw the full weight of the trade union movement into the campaign against the government's scheme.

We will send sample copies of The DAILY WORKER to your friends—send us names and address.

New South Wales to Limit Immigration; Too Many Unemployed

SYDNEY, Australia (By Mail)—(FP)—Authoritative but veiled information that efforts are being made by the British government to ship unemployed miners to Australia the N. S. W. labor government chooses that at the present time there is a great deal of unemployment in the mining districts, and that it will not be a party to any proposal to increase the number of unemployed in those centers.

The labor government is also taking steps to limit other classes of immigration on the grounds that there are already a great number of workers out of employment and the arrival of immigrants at this stage can only have the effect of increasing the army of unemployed.

NEW BASIS FOR MUTUAL AID IN RUSSIAN UNIONS

Independent Fund Will Furnish Free Loans

MOSCOW (By Mail).—The presidium of the U. S. S. R. Central Council of Trade Unions has recently decided upon the reorganization of the mutual aid funds attached to the trade unions.

The essential features of the reorganization are as follows:

The mutual aid funds are henceforth to be independent organizations, acting as juridical persons upon the registration of their constitution with the respective trade union organizations. Their work is to be conducted along the lines of savings banks.

Like Individual Savings.

The regular membership fees paid by the members will be regarded as their individual savings, which they will be entitled to withdraw upon severing their connection with the funds, or at any other time. The total amount to which the members will be entitled upon withdrawal depends upon the financial standing of the fund, but cannot be less than 70 per cent of the contributions made.

Special money grants to members may be made only in exceptional cases (death, losses by fire, etc.). By decision of the membership such special grants may be abolished altogether.

Give Loans Without Interest.

The fundamental activity of the funds will consist in granting the members loans without charging interest. Members of at least four months' standing will be entitled to such loans.

To administer the fund a council and management commission are elected for a term of not more than one year. The functions of the council are practically the same as those fulfilled by similar bodies in the cooperatives.

Operate Independently.

While reorganizing the funds the Central Council of Trade Unions deemed it indivisible at present to extend their activity (receipt of deposits, issuance of interest-bearing loans, obtaining credits from state, industrial or credit organizations, etc.).

The funds are to operate on an independent basis, tho the trade unions are still to continue to exercise general and organizational control over them.

British Army Officer Admits Far East Will Fight for Liberation

MELBOURNE, Australia— (FP)—Speaking at Melbourne, Colonel E. Pottinger, a British army officer who has spent 20 years in India, said that Asia's colored millions were slowly awakening and some day the white nations would get a rude shock.

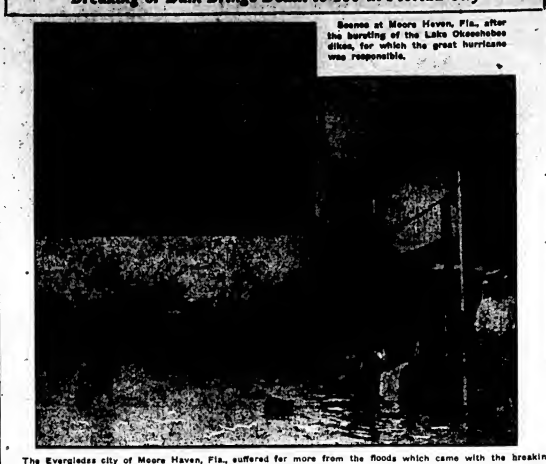
Hitherto, he said, the white man's domination of the colored races in Asia was based on force and maintained by prestige. But Asia's millions were beginning to show their white masters that force could be met by force. Today, as a result of Asia's awakening, the white man's prestige in the Far East was dwindling to next to nothing. Very soon the white nations would be forced to realize that they had something different to deal with in Asia than the slumbering millions of past generations.

German Workers May Suffer from German Help to the French

BERLIN, Sept. 27. — While Germans are rejoicing over the reports that the first detachments of French troops had left the Rhineland as a result of the secret negotiations carried on between Stresseman and Briand, sooners is felt in working class circles, particularly the Communists, over the other results of the Franco-German rapprochement.

The plan for Germany to increase its payments under the Dawes plan, and to furnish financial aid to France to bolster up the falating franc, is seen to have been a part of the Franco-German pact that will still further increase the suffering of the German workers, only to aid the capitalists of France.

Breaking of Dam Brings Death to 100 in Florida City



Scenes at Moore Haven, Fla., after the bursting of the Lake Okeechobee dikes, for which the great hurricane was responsible.

The Everglades city of Moore Haven, Fla., suffered far more from the floods which came with the breaking of the Lake Okeechobee dams than from the Florida hurricane itself. Nearly a hundred persons are believed to have been drowned. Photos show Moore Heven's main street as the waters of the flood began to subside, making search for the dead possible; and a mother with her baby rescued in a small host by two volunteer workers.

IDEALS AND RUBBER

The following article has been written especially for The DAILY WORKER by one of the leaders in the Filipino independence movement. We do not subscribe to his estimate of the divine character of the early advocates of American independence or to the statement that only in 1898 did the United States government cease to defend the "Rights of Man." Nor do we make the same distinction between Wall Street and Uncle Sam that the writer does. But with his analysis of the role of the rubber interests and the profit-making motive behind the opposition to Filipino independence we are in full agreement as we are with the right of the Filipinos to defend their country from conquest by American imperialism or any other group of exploiters. (Editor's Note.)

By CIRILO MANAT
(Filipino Association of Chicago)

OUT of the womb of the American revolution, Uncle Sam was born, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Only a handful of three million men fought against the then strongest and greatest of tyrants and imperialists, but divine providence has decreed that "might is not right," that "man has certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness," and that "governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

ONLY a period of a century and a half has elapsed since that glorious birthday of Uncle Sam, but today he has grown to be the greatest man on earth. This greatness was attained because until about three decades ago, he has continued not only to proclaim but also to defend the rights of man. He was, until then, guided by the spirit of justice and the light of truth.

UNCLE SAM came to the Philippines in 1898, inspired as we were told by the highest and noblest of ideals. In behalf of his alleged magnanimous altruism, however, he fought against us and spilled the blood of free men. For three years we defended our liberty, and would have continued that glorious war, had he not, recognizing the indomitable spirit of freedom in us, promised that he was only to prepare us for self-government.

THIS promise was formally made in 1916, but so far, Uncle Sam has not fulfilled his solemn covenant and word of honor. Commissions after commissions have been sent to the Philippines under the alleged purpose of investigating our conditions. They have gone to the Philippines, for what? Did they go there to find out whether we, the Filipino people, have already established the stable government required as a condition precedent to the granting of our independence?

AH, what a camouflage! The real intent is to survey the natural resources of the Philippines and dig the trenches for purposes of getting hold of our country's richest soil. Wall Street has been besieging us for twenty-eight years, and now here comes one Thompson, "The Wooden Horse" of the mercenary imperialists. "Tis mighty good the Fall of Troy has been written for men to read. We are not illusioned; we will not open the gate for Wall Street.

WHAT Wall Street wants is to gain complete possession and control of our 1,500,000 acres of solid gold. What it needs is a rubber land on which to fatten itself. What it seeks is to exploit us as a people and aggrandize itself at our expense. Oh, this pigish gluttony!

WE must declare to the world that if this project and backward step will have to meet our united opposition. If Uncle Sam could be persuaded to enter this partnership with Wall Street at the expense of his ideals of liberty and justice, which President Coolidge has recently eulogized as "final," then let Bacon, Hoover, Wood and Thompson work together if they please under the banner of Wall Street. Let this handful of corrupted insensates and useless oreatures force this war of conquest on us. We are no cowards or weaklings to be saddened by their venal efforts. The spirit of freedom, liberty and justice can never be conquered, for it is the rock on which we can safely stand, let thunder and storm come.

THERE will be no compromise.

This issue will never be settled until it is settled right. Once more we must rally to the defense of our country and the holy cause of human liberty. If we must die in this war in defense of our rights and of our beloved country, we will die blessing her and wishing her the dawn of her redemption. If war comes, let it come. We would rather die a thousand deaths than tolerate with open eyes contrary to our conscience our souls fettered and our freedom trampled upon by the votaries of his royal majesty—the almighty American dollar.

WE have faith in Uncle Sam and the American people. But if Wall Street should succeed in deceiving them and thus force them to enter this filthy enterprise of land-grabbing, and if they should conspire to murder our aspiration as a people to be free, there will be no other recourse. As compatriots, we will unite, and together must live or die.

J. BULL ABOUT TO PASS, SAYS THE GLUM DEAN

The Jolly Old Blighter Is Right We Wot

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 27. — The British empire is on the toboggan and nobody seems to give a dern, except the British imperialists, according to Dean Inge of St. Paul's who is known as the "gloom dean" and is living up to his reputation.

In fact the dean has reason to be gloomy, and the more people read what the dean thinks the more they hope that the dean's predictions come true without losing time.

We Agree With The Dean.

In short the dean sees the British empire passing out of the picture as a world power before long. Unless the United States comes to the rescue J. Bull goes to the nearest pourhouse. Indeed the dean has little confidence in the willingness of the United States to pinch hit in this crisis. We agree with the dean.

What Gets The Dean All Wet.

Among the things that make the gloomy dean gloomier are: The increase of class bitterness in England, the tendency of Canada to long for more freedom; South Africa's rebellousness, the future of India and the awful mistake made by nature in allowing Ireland to stay on the map. Ireland is again sinking into barbarism, says the dean, since the Free State was organized.

His touch on the jolly old dean, but we have not yet seen a single blighter who is sorry, tho they all agree that the dean is not talking thru his beaver for once.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

YOUNG RED ARMY AVIATOR IN RECORD THREE-DAY FLIGHT OVER COUNTRIES OF CAPITALIST EUROPE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 27.—A young Red Army aviator, in a Soviet plane fitted with new motors made in Soviet factories, has completed a remarkable three-day flight over western Europe and return to Moscow, making landings at the principal capitals, according to copies of Soviet papers received by the Russian information bureau. He covered 4,167 miles and his flying time was 34 hours, 26 minutes, making an average of 121 miles an hour. The airplane was a machine made for ordinary postal service, with a motor of 480 horsepower, manufactured after the design of Engineer A. N. Tupolov. On the strength of the performance the Soviet newspapers claim a record unsurpassed even by specially made French planes.

The young aviator, M. M. Gromov, still in his twenties, hopped off from the Trotsky airdrome, Moscow, accompanied by his mechanic, Rodzevic, at 2:37 A. m. August 31. The first stop, Koenigsberg, Germany, 733 miles, was made in 6 hours, 53 minutes. Another hop to Berlin, 208 miles, was made in 2 hours, 17 minutes, and the third leg, to Paris, 878 miles, took 5 hours and 54 minutes.

The itinerary of the second day, Paris to Rome to Vienna, called for the passing of the French Alps, the Italian Apennines and the Italian Alps, under rather difficult conditions. The run from Paris to Rome, 745 miles, was made in 6 hours, 43 minutes, and that from Rome to Vienna, 534 miles, in 4 hours and 10 minutes.

On the third day a planned stop at Prague was abandoned because of a thick fog. Warsaw 472 miles, was reached in 4 hours, 10 minutes, and the home run to Moscow, 745 miles, was made in 5 hours, 20 minutes.

Moscow was reached at 6:25 p. m. on Sept. 3, the aviators having been absent 62 hours and 53 minutes. The populace gave Gromov and Rodzevich an ovation.

Airplane construction in the Soviet Union was begun less than two years ago. The first Soviet-made airplane motors were tried out in the summer of 1925, one of them achieving a flight to Peking and Tokio.

CHILEAN PARTY EXPELS DEPUTY FOR BAD VOTING

Disobeyed Order Upon Vote to Censure

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SANTIAGO, Chile, (By Mail.)—The Communist Party of Chile expelled from the party Abraham Quevedo, Communist member of the chamber of deputies, because contrary to the decision of the party and the deputies of the "Asalariados" ("Party of the Wage Earners") allied with the Communists, he voted a motion to censure the government. This motion was submitted by a deputy of the "Radical Party"—Ecequiel Conde, hitherto allied with the present conservative-liberal government combination.

A Reactionary Move.

The executive committee of the Communist Party decided to abstain from voting on this motion because it was known that behind it was the Association of the Nitrate Industrialists, which wanted the overthrow of the present government in order to establish a new government entirely subservient to the nitrate interests and willing to reduce the export tax on nitrates.

The export tax on nitrates is one of the principal sources of income of the government, constituting about 50 per cent of the entire revenue. The nitrate interests want it reduced in order to be better able to compete against nitrates of other countries and against the synthetic nitrates manufactured in Germany.

A Conservative Regime.

The present government is the result of the combination of all bourgeois parties who elected a conservative as president against the candidate of the "Asalariados" ("Wage Earners' Party") which was supported by the Communists and which obtained more than one-third of all votes cast for president.

Tho the present government is by no means sympathetic to labor, the nitrate government which would have resulted from its overthrow, would have had to replace the loss in taxes by indirect taxation and would further curtail the rights of the workers in the nitrate districts.

Whole Regarded Over the Section.

Thus the Communist Party decided that it had to abstain from voting against a bourgeoisie government, the overthrow of which might have resulted in the reduction of unemployment in the nitrate districts, if the measures proposed by the nitrate interests stimulated the industry. On the other hand the proletariat of the whole country would have suffered economically and the workers in the nitrate districts would have been further curtailed in their political and trade union activity.

Quevedo is now publishing and spreading pamphlets attacking the decision and the activity of the party.

Wage Fixing by Cost of Living Alone Not Just, Unions Assert

MELBOURNE, Australia — (By Mail) — Under the system of fixation of wages now in operation in Australia, the basic wage for unskilled labor is fixed annually. Marginal rates for skill are added to the basic rate—varying according to the degree of skill. As the cost of living rises or falls, quarterly adjustments of wages are made to compensate for the alteration in the living cost.

While this system guarantees that the workers will not be penalized owing to any undue increase in the cost of living, it makes no allowance for real increases in wages due to increased production, productivity of the nation, etc.

The leading unions are now seeking to have these matters incorporated in the annual declarations. They contend that the present fixation of wages according to the rise and fall of the cost of living gets the workers nowhere, but actually keeps them on the same basis all the time. They also contend that it is hardly fair for the workers to be so penalized, while the employers are making greater profits every year.

New Zealand Labor to Amalgamate Its Two Union Centrals

WELLINGTON, New Zealand—(By Mail)—(FP)— During the last week of July, the joint executives of the New Zealand Alliance of Labor and the New Zealand Trades and Labor Council's Federation met in conference at Wellington and discussed the question of industrial unity by the two organizations on a national basis. The basis of discussion was the agreement arrived at by the Open Conference in April, 1926.

All delegates attending were unanimous on the question that unity between the two organizations is essential, and, more important than that, there was no serious difference between the two organizations. A subcommittee was appointed to bring down a final draft on the proposed basis of unity, and a further meeting of the joint executives will be held at an early date.

Workers (Communist) Party

ST. PAUL LABOR TOLD COMMUNIST STAND AT POLLS

Engdahl Reviews Fight for Class Action

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAINT PAUL, Minn., Sept. 27.—Before an audience in the Labor Temple here that included Williem Mahoney, editor of the Minnesota Union Advocate, the official organ of the trade unions of the city and state, J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, stressed the role of the Workers (Communist) Party in developing the independent political action of the workers and farmers.

After analyzing the origin and present position of the republican and democratic parties, the political instruments of the present ruling class, Engdahl showed that the Workers Party is supporting the Farmer-Labor Party in Minnesota in this campaign as part of the struggle to win the workers and farmers away from the capitalist parties.

Engdahl showed that the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, as the largest and most successful expression of labor's drive for independent action in the political field, must inspire and encourage workers in all other sections of the country.

Engdahl declared that the workers and farmers of the state should celebrate the desertion of such traitor elements as Emil Holmes, Walter J. Quigley and others who are trying to deliver votes to the democratic party in order to weaken the Farmer-Labor congressional candidate in the Ninth Minnesota district, was at the Minneapolis meeting. The Workers Party in this district, under the direction of District Organizer Norman Tellentire is planning to exert every possible effort during the campaign thruout the whole state.

Pittsburgh Party in Challenge to S. P. to Debate Election Issue

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 27.—The district executive committee of District No. 5 issued a challenge to the socialist party of Pittsburgh to debate Comrade H. M. Wicks, candidate for governor in Pennsylvania on the Workers Party ticket, on the subject, "Resolved, that the program and platform of the Workers' Party offers the solution to the political and economic problems of the workers." A reply from the socialist party is expected in the near future. The action of the district committee of the Workers' Party came as a result of the recent action of the national executive committee of the socialist party on the application of the united front tactic. The Pittsburgh branch of the socialists is represented on the national executive committee thru Wm. J. Van Esson, who himself is taking part in the united front campaign in this city.

Comrade Wm. Wolnstone, who will speak at the N. S. Carnegie Music Hall, Federal and Ohio streets, Pittsburgh, Sept. 28, on the slash hands will also tell an interesting story of the attitude of the New York socialists towards the united front campaigns. Every worker should attend this mass meeting to hear Comrade Weinstone.

Comrade H. M. Wicks will start a tour over western Pennsylvania with a mass meeting in the N. S. Carnegie Music Hall on Tuesday, October 12, where he will speak, together with Comrade B. Gitlow of New York.

Send us the name and address of a progressive worker to whom we can send a sample copy of The DAILY WORKER.

NEW YORK DISTRICT HAS BIGGEST MEMBERSHIP MEETING ON RECORD

The largest membership meeting yet held by the Workers (Communist) Party of the New York District took place on Monday, September 20, at the large hall of the Manhattan Lyceum. Over 1,100 party members came to listen to the report of the general secretary, Comrade Weinstone, on the work of the district in the past few months.

Comrade Jack Stachel, the organization secretary of the district, was the chairman of the meeting.

This membership meeting demonstrated that in the party in District No. 2, in spite of the fact that there are less dues-paying members at this time then before reorganization, the number of comrades that are actively participating in the work has increased to a very large extent. In the past it was only the meetings at which controversial matters were discussed by different members of the C. E. C. that we succeeded in getting about 900 party members to attend membership meetings. At this meeting the only thing on the ordar of business was a report on the party activities and this was known to every member. The large attendance signifies a growing interest on the part of the membership in the work of the party which corresponds to the ecrivization of larger sections of the membership then heretofore.

Comrade Weinstone gave a detailed report on the work of the party in the organization of the unorganized, the participation of the party directly and thru its members in strike activity, the united front activity of the party, and showed that the party has made tremendous progress in making contact with large masses of workers both organized and unorganized. That the party has been instrumental in organizing large masses of workers and bringing them into the fold of the American Federation of Labor. In almost every strike the party was on the job supporting and aiding the workers in every way possible.

In the united front activity the party has achieved tremendous results. This has in many cases resulted in the repudiation of the instructions of the S. P. by insurgent locals that send delegates to the conferences called by the party and the left wing. The party has been instrumental in setting large sections of the workers in motion and has brot them nearer to Communism, thanks to the successful application of the united front tactic.

Comrade Weinstone then spoke of the necessity of making this year's election campaign a political campaign so that the party may in this campaign receive the support of the workers that have supported the party and the left wing in the other campaigns. Comrade Weinstone spoke of the development of the movement for a labor party and the united labor and the relation of the socialist party to join in a united labor ticket in the coming elections.

He then pointed out that the party membership must do everything possible to make the membership drive of the party and the keep The DAILY WORKER campaign a success. In the campaigns of the party militant elements have come to the fore in the organizations of the working class and we must draw the best of these elements into the party.

A lively discussion followed the report in which the following participated, Bimba, Garvitt, Benjamin, Rosman, Nessin, Stachel and others.

After the discussion and the summary by the reporter the following resolution was unanimously adopted with four comrades abstaining from voting:

Resolution Adopted at New York Membership Meeting on Sept. 20.

1. The membership meeting after listening to the report of the secretary on the general activities of the district committee, wholeheartedly endorese the general line followed by the district, and notes its successes already achieved: (1) in organizing the unorganized; (2) in getting a foothold in the basic industries located in the district, and (3) in its correct attitude adopted toward the A. F. of L. and the flexible tactics pursened in the complicated questions relating to organizing the unorganized.

2. It particularly notes the leading role oesnmed by the district in strike activities, which has brought the Communist Party forward as a leador of masses of both organized and unorganized workers.

3. It greats the successful united front activities of the district in the campaign for Sacco and Vanzetti, Passeic, Negroes, anti-Fascisti, etc., in which new groups of workers were brought into the struggle and new contacts established. The membership meeting endorses wholeheartedly the campaign to secnre organization benefits for the party from these achievements in the election campaign, and in the membership drive, by securing new members for the party, new readers for The DAILY WORKER and new members for The Young Workers' League and auxiliary organizations of the party.

It calls upon all the members to throw themselves wholeheartedly in these campaigns, to give more systematic and detailed attention to the everyday tasks of the party, among the masses and more responsibility and greater discipline of the membership to the units, subsections, sections, fractions, and every other phase of party structure.

The membership meeting endorses the stand of the district executive committee presented in the report of greater discipline and greater responsibility of all members both in the organization to which they belong and particularly at the present time to the units and party organizations under whose direction they work.

The membership meeting endorses the insistence of the district for stricter adherence on the part of comrades in mass organizations to the party policies.

WHY I AM A COMMUNIST

By BELLE ROBINS.

I AM a member of the Workers' Party because I am a member of the working class. As such, I have learned, by experience, that in disunity there is weakness, in unity there is strength. A worker fighting singly for better wages, shorter hours, or for any working conditions will be discharged and meet with failure and disappointment. Fighting together as an organization, the workers will gain what they want. However, the state power is controlled by the capitalists, and judges, congressmen and senators have shown themselves but too willing to serve the employers in their battles with their employes. Therefore laws are passed that will benefit the capitalist class; laws favoring labor are declared unconstitutional; and injunctions and police are used to interfere with strikes and picketing and to browbeat the workers into submission.

WHAT is Labor's remedy? It must use its political power by electing its own representatives to sit in congress, in the state legislature, and on the bench, to make and interpret laws in the labor interest. It must organize on the industrial field; must fight for world trade union unity, for amalgamation of craft unions into industrial unions; must fight for ever shorter hours and higher wages; must organize the unorganised; must strengthen its forces and thru both political and industrial means wrest the state power from the capitalist class; must form soviets and as its ultimate goal the United Socialist Soviet Republic of the United States.

This is the program of the Workers (Communist) Party and I am a member of it because it is the only political party today that offers a logical program—an adequate solution for our problems.

Wolfe Holds Good Meeting in Denver

DENVER, Sept. 27.—Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the New York Workers' School, spoke to an audience at Barnes School Auditorium on last Tuesday. His subject was "The Necessity of Independent Political Action for the Working Class." He analyzed both the republican and democratic parties and showed how they were both run and controlled by the exploiters of labor. Both political parties receive their campaign funds from the big capitalists and therefore congress and senate obey the wishes of the big money interests. He showed how the Workers' Party is the only political organization that is taking aggressive action in getting the workers and farmers into a political party separate and opposed to the two old parties and when their representatives are elected will make laws in the interest of the workers and poor farmers. He also made an eloquent plea for a large campaign fund so that the Workers' Party will be able to get the message of a workers' and farmers' government to all workers in Colorado.

He made a strong plea to all workers awake to the present situation in the United States to join the Workers' Party. At the conclusion of the lecture Wolfe met with a number of party members.

Canadian Schools Are Militarized

TORONTO, Canada.—The militarization of the public and high schools here is growing thru the cadets, an organization similar to the Reserve Officers' Training Corps of the United States. A short time ago a parade of 7,000 of these militarized youngsters took place here. The Young Communists are carrying on systematic warfare against the militarization. Agnes W. McPhail and other pacifists have gone on record against the order.

Roads to a Mass Communist Party

Growing Influence of Shop Nucleus Papers

By JAY LOVESTONE
Shop Paper in Ford Factory Gets Pace.

THE sixth issue of the Ford Worker, issued by the Ford Shop nucleus of the Workers (Communist) Party, has already reached a circulation of 19,000. This is the biggest circulation of any of all the Communist shop papers now being published by the various shop nuclei of the Workers (Communist) Party.

The Ford Worker, moreover, is not given away. It is not thrown away. The circulation of 19,000 is a real, bona-fide circulation. The paper is sold at the price of one cent per copy. Opportunity is given, however, for workers to pay more than that sum in case they wish to support the paper, and to enable it to appear regularly.

Best Issue Yet.

This sixth issue of the Ford Worker is the best issue that has been published. It contains much live material. A special appeal is made in this shop paper, to help the British miners. A very live little story brings out the fact that what is needed in the United States is a workers' and farmers' government. Comment is made on the election campaign in Michigan, where Comrade W. Reynolds is the Workers (Communist) Party candidate for governor. The Workers (Communist) Party is the only working class party in the field in this state. There are only three candidates—that of the republican party, the one of the democratic party, and the candidate of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Turns Searchlight on Factory Conditions.

The Ford Worker deals very fully with the conditions in the factory. It gives some short articles with much accurate information. We quote from this issue—

"Ford will eat bie
By lefty-out
Since nineteen twenty-six,
six days work in five,
Some era in such a fix,
they barely keep alive.
The pay is much smaller,
the work is much more.
It makes a fellow wonder why the pay isn't more?
For grabbing the money old Hank can't be beat
The "new" would look funny
with Ford to compete.
Each doller he spends,
brings ten in return
Not a cent would he lend that others could earn.

Speed up is a slogan we hear every day.
But why such a slogen without extra pay?
The mon are working like HELL it is true,
The wages they're earning are mighty few.
The raise in production for Henry is fine,
But where in the hell is that raise of mine?"

A sneppy cartoon with a reel message is placed on the front page, in order to add more life to the paper. It really is a mighty good little paper in every way.

Today one out of every five workers in that Highland Park plant is a reader of the Ford Worker. Police interference, Fordson flag attacks on the newsboys selling the paper, and the notorious Ford spy system have all failed to stop the distribution of the Ford Worker. Every issue brings more and more readers. The first issue of the paper had a circulation of 1,500. It is expected that between 20,000 and 25,000 of the seventh issue of the Ford Worker will be printed.

Two More Auto Factory Papers.

Two more factory papers are now being published by the Workers (Communist) Party nuclei. One is called the Workers News, and is gotten out by the workers employed in the Dodge Brothers factory in Detroit. It sells for one cent. It is a mimeographed paper with a lot of punch to it. The infamous gang system in use in the Dodge Brothers plant is exposed in this fashion:

"In Dept. 53, we have the gang system, which is a money saving device for the company. If we work on a piece which has to pass through 20 operations and the job is spoiled on the 20th operation all men who have worked on it up to that time lose all time they put in, and if the job comes back for repair we are not paid for the time used in repairing. There is no one satisfied with this damn gang system. But when are we going to do about it? JOIN THE UNION AND WELL SPIKE THE GANG SYSTEM."

The Workers News Popular in Dodge Plant

ALTHOUGH this is only the second issue of the paper, there is to be noticed a real response from the workers of the Dodge Brothers plant. The editor of the paper who is one of the workers employed in the factory, writes:

"Over twenty workers have sent us letters congratulating the Dodge Workers News and many hundreds of workers have read with interest the first issue and they are satisfied and that's who we are trying to reach and satisfy.

"We hope to print 10,000 of the next issue and we request your help in two ways. SEND US ARTICLES ABOUT THE CONDITIONS—AND HELP TO FINANCE IT."

The threatening, doubled-up fist of a worker, landing on a scared, fat, plutocrat is the drawing appearing on the first page of this paper. The cartoon is drawn by one of the workers in the plant. It makes a real decoration for the front page.

AMERICAN LABOR'S SHAME! SCAB COAL SENT BRITAIN!

By GORDON CASGADEN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 27.—Baltimore's record of infamy as a strike-breaking port for shipment of scab coal to help smash the strike of British miners is black indeed, when it is taken day by day and ship by ship.

Yet Hampton Roads, with its twin ports of Norfolk and Newport News, can boast of a blacker record still.

Long as is the list of ships carrying coal from here during the month of August, it is short indeed when comparison is made with the total leaving Hampton Roads.

The list of steamships given below is taken from official documents, just compiled, for use by large financial interests and civic officials bent on "selling Baltimore" as an export center.

One boat only in this long list flies the Stars and Stripes. It is the Moore & McCormick (Commercial) S. S. "Commercial Pathfinder," a United States Shipping Board steamship turned over by the United States government to this private firm at a ridiculously low figure.

A majority of the ships, it will be observed, are British and many sailed from here for Queenstown, Ireland, "for orders to a British port."

Here is the black list of steamships leaving Baltimore for foreign ports during August, with date, nationality, name, destination and total number of tons of scab coal as cargo of each of them:

COMPANY UNION FAKE CONFRONTS OMAHA WORKERS

Need for Shop Papers, Local Campaigns

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

OMAHA, Nebr., (By Mail).—Company unions hog-tie the workers industrially while "progressive" republicanism keeps them bound to the political chariot of the party of Coolidge and Mellon in this "progressive" state of Nebraska. The Railway Clerks' Union of Omaha, with its 1800 members, will soon find itself in a life and death struggle with the company union that the U. P. is forming to combat it, while the railway shopmen in the Omaha shops have been blessed with company unionism since the defeat of their last strike.

Armour Company Methods.

The packing house of the Armour Company here publishes taffy about the workers going to work in autos, throttles all attempts at organization with a "sucker's union" and gives its best paid workers (the skilled butchers) $34 a week while its other "can-owning" workers average $17 and $18 a week when times are "good" and get $1 forcibly deducted as an instalment on a share in the company.

The Workers Party has a shop nucleus in the Armour plant and I found the workers here still talking of the special packinghouse numbers of The DAILY WORKER and deploring the fact that the campaign was too short.

Views of Bryanism.

Nebraska is the state of Norris and Howells and William Jennings Bryan. Progressivism is strong and the remnants of populism still persist. The records of Norris and Howells include voting against Mellon's tax reduction schemes for shifting the burden of taxation from big business to the rest of the nation, against the world court, against the Italian debt settlement, for income tax publicity, for the retention of the inheritance tax, etc. Moreover, Howells has been a consistent advocate of municipal ownership in Omaha and the ice plant, gas plant and water supply are now municipally owned. Consequently, the bulk of the workers and farmers of the state believe in and swear by Norris and Howells.

But disillusionment is beginning, not on the score of national politics but as a result of local developments in the municipal ownership field. The ice house of the city has paid off its indebtedness and is now running at a profit. The heroic apostles of municipal ownership declare that they are in a quandry. What shall they do with the profits? The Workers Party professes that they use them to reduce the cost of ice and sell it at cost. "But this would ruin the private ice dealers," answer the "progressives."

The Franchise Fiasco.

Another fiasco of the municipal ownership advocates in the Republican Party was exposed in the traction franchise question. The local traction company's 40-year franchise expires in 1928. The progressives, labor and the Communists united in demanding that the franchise be not renewed and a referendum to renew the franchise for another 40 years was defeated. Then the traction company began to bring political pressure to bear and it soon became evident that the traction interests are much more powerful than the ice companies. The progressives who had advanced no positive program are now proposing not municipal ownership but a 20-year franchise in place of a 40-year franchise. Some victory! These fiascos of progressivism on local issues are beginning to destroy the political illusions of the Omaha labor movement and the field is becoming more favorable for the Communists to agitate for independent political action on the basis of these issues.

N. Y. PAPER BOX WORKERS' UNION CHALLENGES WRIT

Declares War on Anti-Union Injunction

NEW YORK, Sept. 27. — At a monster mass meeting in Webster Hall, final preparations were launched for a general strike of paper box workers for the 44-hour week and a minimum scale of wages, thruout the five boroughs of New York. It was announced that the response of the open shop workers to the union's organization drive has been unexpectedly good, the chief obstacle being a sweeping injunction against the union handed out Sept. 2nd by Judge James A. Dunne, justice of the supreme court of New York state.

Dirty Injunction.

The action of Judge Dunne in issuing this injunction, which aims to stop organization work by enjoining the union from "endeavoring to persuade" the unorganized workers of the Specialty Paper Box Co., 41-42 Porter Ave., Brooklyn, to join the union, was denounced in scathing terms.

The workers unanimously and enthusiastically expressed their determination to ignore this pernicious injunction as a violation of their fundamental rights—to carry on the organization work, and go to jail if necessary, to enforce those rights. Prosident and Greenberg presided and the principal speakers were Arturo Giovannitti and Menager Fred Caiola.

Capitalist Courts Give Union Costly Victory in Boston

BOSTON, Mass.—In order to keep alive the reputation for fairness and impartiality of the capitalist courts, Judge Hammond of the equity session of the Superior Court of Massachusetts made an interlocutory decree on petition of Local 37 of Upholsterers' International Union of North America enjoining Payel Kuzmuk, doing business at 165 Cross street as the Kay Parlor Upholstering company, from hiring or employing other than members in good standing in Local 37 when available. The decree also enjoins the defendant from dividing the work otherwise than equally among journeymen and apprentices, from holding back any wages of the workmen for any cause and from settling any controversy otherwise than by referring it to arbitration. The decree was entered following a report of Benjamin A. Levy as master, to which Roever & Brark and Leo Mehr have represented the union as counsel and Samuel T. Lakson represented the defendant.

This decision is of considerable importance because it will delude numbers of workers into believing that they can rely upon the capitalist courts for justice. Meanwhile the capitalist class will point to this decision and on the basis of it establish numerous other decisions in favor of the employers. Every intelligent worker will see thru this strategy of the exploiters.

Union Men Strike on Company Hiring Non-Union Men in West Va.

STEWARTSVILLE, O., Sept. 27.—A splendid instance of union solidarity has been shown by the miners of this place working for the Valley Camp Coal Co. A short time ago the company, which also owns mines in Elm Grove, W. Va., had a dispute with the men in the Ohio mine owing to its paying them by check instead of cash.

The West Virginia mines, according to report, were among the last to work under the union scale in that state, and finally turned to the employment of non-union men. Thereupon the miners at Stewartsville refused to go back to work unless the West Virginia mines were also returned to union control. It has not been stated when the mine in Stewartsville will be re-opened.

MORGAN FIGHTS HENRY FORD FOR AUTO SUPREMACY

Sales of Flivvers Are Declining Seriously

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 27.—One of the greatest battles ever fought out on the industrial field in the United States is raging between two giant automobile octopuses. They are the Ford company and General Motors, backed by the House of Morgan.

It should not be forgotten in connection with this dramatic conflict that a few years ago when Ford was squeezed for lack of funds he approached Wall Street for aid and was rebuffed. He went to his dealers and within a few days he had the required sum and was never caught short since. But he is up against a real battle now.

Ford is Losing.

Sales figures for the past two years show that Ford is not gaining. Figures also show that the companies in the General Motors amalgamation have increased their sales tremendously in the same time.

In the first half of 1925 Ford sales were 828,000. The first half of 1926 saw only 714,000 flivvers sold. A loss of over 100,000. In the first half of 1925, 418,000 General Motor machines —Chrevolet, Dodges and Essex—were sold. In the first half of 1926, the number of those cars sold was 589,000.

Company Reorganized.

The Ford Motor company was incorporated in 1903 and the original capital subscribed was $100,000. In 1919, the company was reorganized under the laws of Delaware at a capitalization of $100,000,000.

Ford owns the company and directs its policies. The remaining floating around here that Ford and his son Edsel are at loggerheads over policy. It is said that the son wants a car with such parts similar to or other makes except Ford. Henry favors the present gear shift.

Ford's profits in 1925 are estimated at $94,500,000. While those of General Motors went well over $100,000,000.

Failed to Organize Workers.

The enormous profits made by Ford thru the enslavement of thousands of workers was in large degree due to the failure of the American Federation of Labor to organize the Ford employes. The reactionary leaders represented the task as impossible. Only now, thru the activity of the Workers (Communist) Party is there a real possibility being created of the message of unionism into the minds of the Ford workers. Thousands of shop bulletins are being sold each week despite the persecution of police and private thugs of the Ford company.

CLEVELAND LABOR BODY TO ENDORSE NO CANDIDATES

Previously Supported 'Friends of Labor' Plan

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 27.—At the last meeting of the Cleveland Federation of Labor the legislative committee introduced a recommendation that there be no endorsement of political candidates.

This is truly a remarkable recommendation, when one considers that the Cleveland Federation of Labor nominated its trade union candidates on the two major parties and now does not dare to endorse them—if they were successful in the primaries.

The federation decided that "locals may use their own discretion about admitting political speakers during the campaign, as no credentials will be given out."

The Ohio Federation of Labor decided at its conference in January at Columbus to put up trade union and other candidates sympathetic to organized labor on the major party tickets. But evidently this policy does not hold good in nominating that any wide-awake man might lose have recognized.

The employers are conducting a militant open-shop campaign in this state, and as labor—particularly organized labor—is not showing proper militancy the open-shoppers evidently consider it the proper time to smash the trade union movement.

Committee on Teachers' Salaries in New York Urge Large Pay Boost

NEW YORK—(FP)—Thirteen million dollars a year more for New York teachers is urged by the Committee on Teachers' Salaries, headed by Robert E. Simon. The proposed increases are based on the recent survey of teachers' salaries made by a committee under Professor J. P. McCaskiy, head of the Department of Elementary Education of Teachers' College, Columbia University. The new minimums proposed would, for example, raise the lowest junior high school teachers' pay from $1,900 to $1,980 a year and the maximum salary for that post after a stipulated period of service would be $3,900 instead of $3,800.

A NEW NOVEL
By Upton Sinclair
(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

IX

The nights were growing cold in Bunny's cantonement, and from Europe the thrilling news continued to pour in, and spread across the front pages of the newspapers, six or eight editions every day. The allied advance was turning into a march, that long talked of march on Berlin! A march also to Vienna and to Sofia and to Constantinople—for everywhere the central powers were weakening, collapsing, surrendering. President Wilson issued his "fourteen points," on the basis of which the Germans were invited to quit. There were rumors of negotiations—the German leaders were suggesting a truce! There were two or three days of suspense, and then the answer, there would be no truce, only a surrender; the march to Berlin was on!

And then one day an amazing report; the enemy had capitulated, the surrender had been signed! As a matter of fact, it was a false alarm, due to the American custom of keeping one jump ahead of events. Each paper wants to beat the others, so they get everything ready in advance—speeches that have not yet been delivered, ceremonies that have not yet taken place. Some new-reporter let his finger slip on the trigger, and the message came that set all America wild. Such a spectacle had never been witnessed since the world began; every noisemaking instrument conceivable was turned loose, and men, women and children turned out on the streets, and danced and sang and yelled until they were exhausted; pistols were shot off, and autos went flying by with tin-cans bouncing behind; newsboys and stock-brokers wept on one another's shoulders, and elderly unapproachable bank-presidents danced the can-can with typists and telephone girls. A day or two later, when the real news came, they turned out to do it all over again, but never could recapture their first fine careless rapture.

After that, of course, the fun had gone out of military training; all the young officers-to-be wanted to get back home, to go to college or take up their jobs, and all who had any influence quickly got furloughs that were understood to be elastic. Such a favor came to Bunny, out of the blue void where Dad wielded his mysterious power, and he went home to watch the movements of "Ross Consolidated," which had been launched at an opening price of $108 per share for the "class B stock," and completely sold out in two days, and was now quoted in the market at 147¾. They had made the stock of "no par value"—another new device which Vernon Roscoe's fancy lawyers had recommended; there were certain taxes both state and federal which could be dodged by this method, and moreover there would never be need to issue "stock dividends" to conceal the amount of the profit. Mr. Roscoe was certainly a wizard when it came to finances, just about the smartest feller Dad had met in the oil game.

It was a tremendous load taken off Dad's shoulders, for now the enormous Roscoe machine would market the oil and collect the money. Dad's job was new developments—the part of the game he really liked. He was a member of the board of directors of the new concern, and also a vice-president, at a salary of a hundred thousand a year, with charge of exploring and drilling; he would travel here and there and lay out the tracts and select the drilling sites, and see that every well was brought in properly before turning it over to another executive, the superintendent of operation. It was Dad's idea that Bunny should take a position under his father, to start with say six thousand a year, until everybody was satisfied that he knew the business; the two of them would have the time of their lives, driving all over southern California and smelling out oil, just like at Paradise! Bunny said that sounded good, but he'd want a little time to think it over and get used to the idea that he wasn't going to Siberia or to France. Dad said all right, of course, he mustn't jump into things in a hurry; but Bunny could see that he was a little pained because his son and namesake did not do that very thing!

X

They went up to Paradise to see the developments; and one of the first developments they saw was Rntb, who had their lunch ready in the Rascum cabin. Bunny was shocked by her appearance; she looked ten years older than when he had seen her last, her face was pale, and her smile was forced. She had given up all pretense of feminine charm, her hair was drawn back tight and tied in a knot on top of her head, and her skirts came to her ankles, which was half a leg longer than the fashion. Ruth was just settling out to be an old maid, said Meelie, and all on account of grieving her heart out about Paul.

"Oh, I know he's dead!" Ruth declared. "Just think, it's been five months since he went away, and don't you know Paul would have written me a lot of letters in that time?"

It did seem strange; and Dad thought a bit and said, "Yes, we've waited long enough, and now we'll just find out."

"Oh, Mr. Ross, how do you mean?" cried Ruth, clasping her hands together.

"Well, we ain't lost that army altogether in Siberia, and I guess there is some way to connect up with it.

Ruth had gone paler than ever. "Oh, I don't know as I'd dare find out! If I should hear he was dead—if I was really to know it—"

"Look here, child," said Dad, "the troubles you imagine is always a lot worse than the real ones. I want to know about my boss-carpenter, and I'm just a-goin' to!"

So Dad went to the telephone and called the hay and feed store of Mr. Jake Coffey in Roseville. "Hello, Jake," he began; "yes, we're all fine here, how's your old man? Say, I understand you had the nominating—I forget the feller's name, but the congressman from this district.—Well, I never asked him a favor, but I guess I got a right to one, seeing all I put up to elect him. Well, now, you send him a telegram and tell-him to toddle over to the War Department and put in an inquiry about the whereabouts and health of Paul Watkins. You got a pencil there?"

Dad turned to Ruth. "What is it now? Company B, Forty-seventh California, Two Hundred Thirty-second Brigade. They're in Siberia, and I want the War Department to cable an inquiry and have the reply cabled; you wire the congressman twenty-five dollars to cover the cost, and if there's anything left over he can keep the change. I'll mail you my check today. You might explain, if you want to, a member of the family is ill, and its a matter of life and death to get some word at once. And I'll be obliged, Jake, if you need any gasoline for your car, just drop round after we git this new refinery a-goin'. How'd you like that last dividend check from the company? Ha, ha, ha! Well, so long."

PAINTERS' LOCAL VOTES $1,700 ASSESSMENT TO AID BRITISH STRIKERS

At the last meeting of Local 147 of the Painters' Union of Chicago, the appeal for aid to the striking miners of Great Britain was brought up, and the local voted to assess each member $1 for relief to their British brothers. As Local 147 has 1700 members, this brings in $1,700 to add to the other funds going from Chicago.

The union also voted financial support to the Chicago Federation of Labor's radio station, and voted $200 to the Wage Earners' League.

The Ironwood Disaster

The death of three electricians, crushed in a shaft, and the burial alive of 43 miners in the Oliver mine at Ironwood, Michigan, brings to mind emphatically the great risks taken by workers in this industry as well as the fact that altho the industry is well organized from the capitalist standpoint, the workers are without any organization at all.

It is evident that Oliver company, altho conducting huge operations in and around the mine where the disaster occurred, has neglected the primary requirements of safe mining practice, i. e., to contact all workings so that in the event of the closing of one shaft by accident like that which has happened, the miners have at least either egress from the workings.

Forty-three miners may pay with their lives because the Oliver company, like all its capitalist brethren, considers workers' lives cheaper than the requisite safety provisions.

Fourteen of the entombed miners are Finns—foreign-born workers of a nationality which the agents of American capitalism in Minnesota and Michigan have taken special delight in persecuting. Like most of the foreign-born workers they are found in the hazardous heavy industries. The miners entombed with them are Slavs and men of other alien nationalities at which the 100 per cent Americans sneer.

Yet no disaster in industry taking a huge toll of workers' lives but lists a majority of names of foreign-born toilers.

Apparently the native American steers clear of the risks of the highly developed industries of which he boasts.

These facts should cause the American union movement to take stock of itself. If it does not give protection to the foreign-born worker in basic industry it cannot long maintain itself as an instrument for the American working class.

Ironwood, the Mesaba range, the steel industry, the lumber industry, the metal mines of the west—all are unorganized and in all of them the capitalists do as they please with the workers.

Without a union, without a political party of their own, there is a direct connection between disasters like those in Ironwood and the weakness of the labor movement.

If the leaders of the trade union movement will not start organization work from above it must and will be begun from below.

Coolidge Hears the Angels Calling

Washington correspondents report that Calvin Coolidge is quite discouraged over the refusal of the nations affiliated with the world court to accept the reservations adopted by the United States senate as a condition of entrance. Summed up, the reservations meant that the United States would join the court provided said court did not interfere in any affair in which the United States was concerned without the consent of the aforesaid United States. This was too much for the nations affiliated with the league so they had to demur.

This was grease for Calvin's elbow who has seen the handwriting on the wall and heard the G. O. P. banshees wailing in the congressional wilderness. G. O. P. senators were failing in the primaries like the armies of Pharoah before the breath of Jehovah.

The league of nations turned down the U. S. reservations, and Coolidge is by no means as worried over the situation as people might think. Calvin has no interests separate and apart from the capitalist system, but he wants to get elected again if he can and individualism is still something to be conceived with, even tho certain bankers would like to see this country safely tucked up in the league of nations' blanket.

The capitalist interests opposed to this country joining the league of nations seem to have a majority of the votes. If Wall Street could dig up enough votes to give Coolidge another term in office, the latter might have ignored the voices from the great open spaces. But a politician must consider his own political hide as well as the system on which he fattens.

Therefore Coolidge welcomes an opportunity to get out thru the back door of the world court mansion.

Lord Robert Cecil, the darling of American pacifists and umpire of the league of nations, felt quite unnecessary last week when a Chinese delegate mentioned the murder of 5,000 Chinese by the British naval forces. The noble lord was after delivering a soulful speech in favor of world disarmament when the canny Oriental unpoised his stuff. Verily, indeed, a British imperialist, unlike the birds of the air or the beasts of the earth, has not a place to open his head in peace.

Disaster seems to dog the steps of Russian white guards. The ill-fated airship that was to make the non-stop flight to Paris from New York was built under the direction of czarist emigres. The nine went down instead of going up.

One Reason for the Falling Franc.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

By N. BUCHARIN.

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding of all of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Buckarin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

EVERYONE in possession of even the most elementary political knowledge is aware that the Soviet power and the dictatorship of the proletariat represent a special system sectorally composed of several stories. No other than Comrade Zinoviev has often told us, with the greatest satisfaction, that the poor peasants should be induced to participate. To participate in what? In the Soviets. Do we suffer from the fact that this principle of vitalizing the village soviets has led to the election of non-party peasants to the soviets? I am of the opinion that we do not suffer in the least from this. Where is the laboratorium in which we convert the peasantry, overcome their individual psychology, induce them to follow us, educate them to co-operate with us in the soviets, and lead them on the proletarian and socialist road? This is best done in the soviets. And now we are told that from the center we proceed into a dark room—he may learn over the wireless. This is nonsense. We convert the peasant by actual practice, in order to induce him to follow our lead, to help us to secure the proletarian line.

THE structure of our Soviet machinery is as follows: There are supreme, middle, and subordinate organs. At the top there is a very powerful cadre, working under the leadership of our proletarian party, and composed in the main of party members. The further we proceed downwards, the more non-party participators we find, and in the villages we find the structure supported by non-party peasants who have hastened to our aid. We gradually introduce the non-party peasants, who represent a petty-bourgeois structure, into the lower stories. We are secure in our firm proletarian leadership, and influence the peasants in our own way, introduce them into our methods of work, teach them to work in the new way, and induce them to take part in the work of socialist construction, in this way the peasantry is educated by the proletariat. And when we admit the peasantry into the lower stories of the soviet power, this is a necessary prerequisite towards the guidance of the peasantry by the proletariat.

WE may take another example of the same kind, but from the experience of another country, for the purpose of refuting the clever assertions of our remarkable opposition. There is England for instance. England too has carried on imperialist war. As is generally known, Lloyd George, a bourgeois prime minister, admitted Henderson to his cabinet as representative of the working class and the trade unions. The same kind of thing has occurred in other countries. Now tell me this: is there a single Marxist who can maintain that at that time the English state was a bourgeois proletarian state just because Henderson was in the government? It need not be said that such an assertion would be absolute idiocy. You know who made this assertion. It was the opportunists. They said: Now, Henderson is a minister, and this is a fact, this signifies a fresh epoch in the development of capitalism; the workers share the power, and we have no longer a bourgeois imperialist state, but something quite different. The proletarian dictatorship is being judged by the opposition essentially in the same manner.

WHEN Lloyd George admitted Henderson into his cabinet, England did not cease for a moment to be a bourgeois imperialist state. Why? For a very simple reason. Because the bourgeoisie had sought out Henderson and his like for the purpose of transforming the ideology of the working class and making the workers amenable to bourgeois ideology. Henderson fulfilled the task set him by the bourgeoisie. The bourgeoisie was enabled to take the working class in tow for the time being, and thus the nomination of Henderson as minister was the link by which the bourgeoisie drew the working class behind it, without altering the class character of their bourgeois power by a hair's breadth. They simply took their class antagonist in tow.

BUT in our case the greater part of the peasantry is not our class enemy, it is our ally, and when we admit these peasants into the apparatus of our state administration, and thus induce them to follow us, then it is surely a remarkable state of mind which can maintain that, because we do this, we have no workers' state, but some eclectic petty bourgeois two-class state, etc., and that therefore we have to conclude it to be our duty to protect the purely proletarian ranks against the soviet state.

The rot of the theoretical error of the opposition lies in the fact that these comrades fail to understand that the proletarian dictatorship must admit its class allies to the organs of the dictatorship if it is to convert these allies to its standpoint, to guide them, and to lead them into the socialist path in the interests of what was to Lenin the supreme principle of the proletarian dictatorship, i. e. of the alliance between the working class and the peasantry.

THIS is the real definition of the standpoint. And if the existence of a proletarian dictatorship in our country is doubted because we have no industrial proletariat in the villages and in the village soviets, because we have no historical proletarians in our organs in places where not even a magnifying glass can discover a proletarian at all, then this simply means that the main task incumbent upon the proletarian dictatorship, the task of inducing the poor peasantry and the great mass of the middle peasantry to take part in the work of actualizing a socialist state of society, has not been properly grasped. This lack of comprehension is a striking example of that lack of faith in the possibility of the actualization of socialism in our country, of that lack of understanding for the methods towards this actualization, which was discussed in such decisive terms at the XIV. party congress.

FALL RIVER MILLS PAYING FINE DIVIDENDS, BUT STARVATION PAY; AN EXAMPLE OF TEXTILE BARONS

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

That easy profits from cheap labor encourage backwardness in management is shown in the story of the cotton industry in Fall River, Mass. A Wall Street Journal article on this greatest textile center holds lack of managerial initiative, quite as much as southern competition, responsible for the depression which has made part-time and unemployment characteristic of the last four or five years.

Bad Management.

"Fall River mills," says the journal, "have been developed, financed and managed by local interests to a much greater extent than other manufacturing centers. With little new blood from the outside, a policy of nepotism over a period of years has in numerous cases dulled the initiative of managements. When they could afford to do so the mills did not change their machinery and manufacturing methods to meet the new demands."

Work Week a Year for $430.

Wages in Fall River cotton mills in 1914, the journal shows, averaged only $430 for the entire year's work. In only one year since has the average reached $1,000. That was in 1920, when mill workers earned an average of $1,065. In 1924, the last year covered by the Wall Street Journal, the annual wage fell to $923.

Dividends Continue.

In spite of these extremely low wages, less than the barest family subsistence, and in spite of operations in the last few years running as low as 50 per cent of capacity, Fall River dividends continue. In 1920 they rose to $11,065,800, more than nine times the pre-war figures, and in 1924, with operations throttled down to half of capacity, Fall River cotton mill dividends were 85 per cent above 1914.

Figures showing for each year since 1914 the value of Fall River cotton mill products, the wages paid, and dividends are:

| Fall River Cotton Mills | Value of Products | Total Wages | Total Dividends |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1914 | $ 49,516,027 | $13,031,876 | $1,338,793 |
| 1915 | 45,392,734 | 12,707,368 | 1,145,159 |
| 1916 | 65,274,214 | 16,736,973 | 2,873,494 |
| 1917 | 92,143,272 | 13,581,486 | 4,331,261 |
| 1918 | 115,376,963 | 20,362,789 | 6,166,286 |
| 1919 | 125,753,717 | 25,997,711 | 4,935,145 |
| 1920 | 149,323,703 | 31,002,421 | 11,096,800 |
| 1921 | 67,360,675 | 24,242,805 | 3,994,375 |
| 1922 | 91,758,556 | 26,214,713 | 3,998,200 |
| 1923 | 100,876,526 | 28,618,736 | 3491,544 |
| 1924 | 90,922,713 | 18,980,407 | 3,271,450 |

The figures show that labor had no share in the great prosperity of the war years. In 1917, when the total value of their output had increased 86 per cent over 1914, wages had increased only 42 per cent. In 1918 the value of their output was up 146 per cent and their wages 56 per cent. In 1919 the figures were 175 per cent and 97 per cent, and in 1920, when the value of the product was 200 per cent over pre-war, wages were up only 137 per cent. This means that the percentage of wages to the total value of the product fell from 26.4 per cent to a low point of 17.1 per cent in 1918.

In 1924, when the dividends paid by these mills were 85 per cent over 1914, wages totaled only 46 per cent above that year.

Describing the position of Fall River in the industry, the Wall Street Journal says: "Today Fall River has more spindles than any other city in the United States, some 4,000,000. Like New Bedford, it is essentially a city of cotton manufacturing, to which is devoted 70 per cent or more of its manufacturing activity. There are approximately 36 cotton mills. There is also in Fall River the largest American Printing Co., with 250,000 spindles, 3,000 looms and 42 printing machines, all capable of producing 3,000,000 yards of cloth a week and printing 6,000,000 yards."

Rumor Argentine May Reenter Geneva League

GENEVA, Sept. 27. — The decision of the foreign affairs committee of the Argentine parliament to consider possible re-entry into the league of nations was received here today in political circles. The South American republic withdrew from the league in 1920.

Brazil Church Wrecked by Storm.

ITAMBE, Brazil, Sept. 27.—A heavy storm accompanied by a gale swept this city yesterday, causing four deaths and injuring 152. The heaviest casualties were in a church where a heavy ceiling fell during the storm. Many houses were damaged or blown down.

RUSSIAN FOOD WORKERS NOW 92% ORGANIZED

Congress Reports Wage Raise and Progress

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW—(By Mail) — The Sixth Congress of Food Workers of U. S. S. R. was held in Moscow June 5-13th, 1926. The congress was attended by 849 delegates representing 897,613 members.

92 Per Cent Organized.

Comrade Kroll, chairman of the union, reported an increase of 427,663 members between July 1924 and January 1926. The union embraces 27,000 establishments, including 15,000 shops employing less than five persons each. This acts as a great hindrance upon the activities of the union.

Nevertheless fully 92 per cent of all the workers employed in the food and drink industry are organized in the union. The number of non-unionists is thus relatively small.

Financially Secure.

The financial position of the union is perfectly secure. In 1924 the total receipts of the various union organizations, exclusive of the central committee, were 2,856,078 roubles; in 1925 the receipts rose to 3,235,728 roubles. The total expenditures for 1925 (including the contributions to the various funds) were 2,811,973 roubles. At the beginning of this year the union funds exclusive of those of the central committee amounted to 1,466,684 roubles. Together with the central committee funds, the union possesses nearly 1,700,000 roubles.

Wages Increased.

On January 1, 1926, there were 14,355 collective agreements covering 214,389 members of the union operating in the country. The real wages in 1926 increased between 12 and 21 per cent the various branches of the industry benefiting in varying degrees.

The union has 170 clubs with a membership in excess of 50,000; 1,350 libraries with 729,521 volumes, etc.

On the whole since the Fifth Congress the union has rapidly grown and consolidated its forces.

Industrial Delegates.

The congress was attended by delegates from foreign unions including Comrade Shifferstein, secretary of the Food Workers' International.

The action of the international, particularly as affecting its relations with the league of nations' international labor office, was subjected to some sharp criticism by the members of the congress.

WHERE THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

How the Bosses Use Sport Activity

IN America the bosses and the employers have developed the use of sports as a means of controlling the minds of the workers as a means of making better slaves out of them. This is true because sports and athletics have been developed on a more extensive scale here than anywhere else. Practically all American-born workers, particularly the young workers, are either active in some line of sports or else are interested in it.

The capitalists, aware of this, have developed an extensive network of sport organizations, have developed a flexible and ramifying technique thru which to control the sport activities of the young workers. Starting in with the schools, where sports (baseball, football, etc.) are actually beginning to displace the regular studies on the curriculum in point of interest to the students, and all the way up to professional sports, the American bosses can workers are brought up in a sport and athletic environment dominated by reactionary ideology.

At the school games which lately have begun to attract crowds numbering into the scores of thousands, there are generally military displays by the student soldiers. They play patriotic airs and the flag is prominently displayed around the field.

Coming out the school and entering the factory, the mine, or the mill or the shop, the young student, now a young worker, retains the interest in sport. And the boss takes advantage of this interest to launch company sports, company teams and by keeping the young worker active in these he diverts his thoughts from his job or his wages or his economic conditions, he fills him with class collaborationist ideology (the boss is a good sport, a good fellow—he buys us uniforms, etc.) and besides that he makes the young workers a better source of profit thru increasing his physical efficiency. To such an extent has factory and industrial sports been developed that many articles are being written about it and the efficiency experts are hailing it as one of the best means towards establishing good relations in industry, towards solving the problem of labor versus capital. The huge plants, employing tens of thousands of workers, particularly have developed company sports. The Western Electric Company, the mail order houses, the U. S. Steel Corporation and, in fact, every large concern has encouraged baseball, football, bowling, tennis, volleyball activity among its employees.

YOUTH DAY IN MOSCOW BROT OUT 200,000

Dutch Socialists Give Pledge to Kill Lies

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Sept. 4.—(By Mail.)—The 12th International Day of Youth was celebrated with the greatest enthusiasm everywhere in the Soviet Union. Mass meetings of thousands of young workers and peasants took place in all towns. In Moscow, 200,000 people took part in the demonstration which marched past the mausoleum of Lenin in the Red Square.

Before the beginning of the demonstration a great meeting took place in the Red Square, at which representatives of the central organs of the party and foreign workers' delegates delivered great speeches of greetings.

Dutch Delegates Astounded.

The chairman of the Dutch youth delegation, the social-democrat Spielmann, declared that the delegation had been astounded at all that it had seen and that it was promised to do everything in their power to expose the bourgeois lies concerning the Soviet Union. The meeting greeted the freshly arrived delegation of British miners and German working women with great enthusiasm.

200,000 Demonstrate.

200,000 people took part in the demonstrations in Leningrad including representatives of the Dutch, German and Italian youth. A torchlight procession with many thousand participants took place in Kiev. After the demonstrations celebrations took place in all the workers' clubs, meetings, concerts, etc.

During the demonstrations the Young Communist League took collections to assist the British miners. These collections were everywhere very successful.

Negro Delegates to Y.M.C.A. Meet Did Not Feel at Home

HARTFORD, Conn.—Kenneth C. Aldridge of this town was the only Negro delegate from New England states to the world congress of the Y. M. C. A. held recently in Helsingfors, Finland. Altho he says that the Negroes were given the same consideration as other delegates, "even the white American lad put aside his traditional prejudices, for the time being anyway," he records that they weren't allowed for a single moment to forget that they were Negroes.

Aldridge issued a statement of his impressions, which reads, in part, as follows:

"It often happens when a Negro returns from travel in Europe or some northern part of the United States that he expresses his enjoyment by such an expression as 'I didn't even know I was colored until I looked in the glass,'—meaning, I suppose, that the thought of his being a Negro disappeared entirely from his mind, due to there being no obvious sign of prejudice or the like in the section visited. I am sure none of the Negro delegates to the world's Y. M. C. A. conference at Helsingfors will make any such statement. We were ever aware of the fact that we were Negroes."

A. J. Cook Tells "Bits" of His Life

LONDON, England.—A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, has been telling in Tit-Bits the story of his life—and a very entrancing story it is. Cook, according to his autobiography, wasn't born in the purple; instead, he was born "on the streamth," his father at the time being a "soldier of the queen." His family long ago moved land in Somerset and the little village called Cooksley in that county was so labelled because it was "the land of the Cooks." When he was sixteen Cook developed religious tendencies, and became locally famous as "the Boy Preacher." He intended to qualify for admission to the baptist ministry, but changed his mind, and went to South Wales with £4 in his pocket, and his other worldly possessions wrapped up in a handkerchief. There his natural ability quickly asserted itself and it wasn't long before he was unanimously and enthusiastically acclaimed as one of the miners' leaders.

Boston Youth School Opens Successfully

BOSTON, Mass.— The Boston Young Workers' League School opened on Wednesday, September 8, 1926, with 35 students in attendance. The classes are held twice a week at the New International Hall, 41 Wenonah street, Roxbury, and at 36 Causeway street, Boston.

The first lesson was a success. The comrades participated eagerly in the discussion, and showed that they understood the necessity for education.

All Y. W. L. comrades and sympathizers will be drawn to the school by the great interest. The activity of the Y. W. L., District 1, intends to develop the school into an independent institution, which will be able to draw in and educate the league members and outsiders in the theory of the movement. All comrades who wish to attend can register at 36 Causeway street any night.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE manager of Hearstreet's press clipping bureau heard of Karl Marx, but only recently. Unknown to the father of modern socialism has been getting unusual publicity of late and we might not have known that this was so but for a certain Mr. Boyd, Hearstreet's manager. Evidently, thinking that Marx was as prominent a figure in modern society as Gene Tunney or at least Calvin Coolidge, Mr. Boyd offered the services of his clipping bureau to Mr. Marx in care of the International Publishers.

NOTHING is too good for our readers so here is the letter: "My Dear Mr. Marx: Don't you want to read what the United States is saying about your writings? Your name is appearing in the press or you would not have received this letter, and we are sure you will see the value of keeping everything about yourself or any literary matters in which you are interested. ...Order form enclosed." If Marx takes our advice not only will the instruct Mr. Boyd to keep him informed on what is being said about him but what is being done in his absence by some of his alleged followers.

THE pastors in the churches of Northern Michigan and Wisconsin put in a little time last Sunday praying for the entombed miners in the Ironwood pit. The spiritual aviators were as amiable to the mine owners as they were to their deity. They did not mention the defective shafting in the mine. They did not upraid their god for nodding on the job. Why should an all-seeing all-knowing, all-merciful deity permit so much sorrowing and suffering to fall on his creatures? That question began to bother me when I was fifteen years old?

OUR wire news service informs us that the entombed miners will not be lacking in spiritual sustenance, what with the presence of Leonard Uren, a salvation army leader of Ironwood, who happened to be in the mine, ministrating to the Finnish workers when the pit shaft got blocked. We venture to say that a pail of water and a good feed would be more appreciated by the 41 miners than all the spiritual hokum Mr. Uren could produce in ten years.

THE Daily Herald, official daily of the British Trade Union Congress came in for hard panning from some delegates for its action in accepting advertisements from the coal owners attacking the striking miners. Aside from the fact that the miners are on strike, they are the heaviest subsidisers of the Herald. This is a most amazing piece of scabbery. Several delegates were extremely caustic in their criticism, but Mr. Ernest Bevin in behalf of the directors of the Herald said he was glad the paper was broadminded and the directors would not establish a dictatorship over the press. All we can say in comment is that since Mr. Bevin was the "little Napoleon" of the general strike, it is no wonder it should degenerate into a general fiasco.

ANOTHER French cabinet split is threatened. As intimated a few days ago in our Paris dispatch, Briand is after Poincare's political scalp and Poincare opened battle on Briand by hurling a verbal thunderbolt at Germany, with a view to blasting the German-French accord that is now being patched up by Briand and Stresemann. Those negotiations are viewed with a watery eye by London, and the British government has replied by a proposed British-Italian-Spanish bloc to block France's road to her colonial possessions in north Africa. Thus are the preparations for the next war going merrily on.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 28.— Insanity, cold, starvation.

These three grim perils stalk side by side blazing the way of death 727 feet below the surface of the ground where 43 miners have been imprisoned in the G. Pabst mine here since Friday at noon.

Shortly after dawn today a newspaperman descended the wrecked G. Pabst shaft to the lowest level where a crew of ten men, working on a suspended platform are relining the opening with steel, concrete and timber.

Rescuers Work On.

This rescue party is working 280 feet below the level of the ground and a survey of their black workshop, dimly illuminated by carbide lamps, reveals that if the entombed men are to be saved it will not be thru this method of rescue.

In the F. Anrora mine, however, reports come to the surface of fast progress on the 300 foot bore being made from the thirteenth level of that mine to the eighth of the G. Pabst where at least forty of the victims of the slide are trapped.

Believe Only 26 Feet Left.

Late today may see the completion of this drift. The rescuers believe they are 26 feet from the victims, if such is the case it is believed that the men on the eighth level will be found alive.

The diamond drill for the emplacement of which it was necessary to blast thru granite in the second level of the G. Pabst shaft, has required constant repair and little faith is pinned in it as a means of reaching the men.

Company Rumors.

Altho the officials of the Oliver Iron Mining company have been sending out reports of tappings heard in the main shaft since last night, workers on the job discredit these announcements. Because of the apprehension held by relatives and friends of the men below they serve to placate the townspeople here, altho mumblings of dissatisfaction are to be heard on all sides.

A telegraph operator who descended the G. Pabst shaft to the emergency platform early this morning, came to the surface with the report that he could hear nothing which might be Morse code signals.

The whole weirdness of the jagged rocks, the blinking of the carbide lights of the miners, the echoes of their hammers and the occasional falling of some loosened material preys on the mind. This combined with the fear of death, is what the rescuers are trying to defeat.

Altho the men held below in the 1,000 foot tunnel may survive the pangs of hunger, many doubt their ability to withstand the mental strain. It is then that some may, as has been known to ho the case in similar disasters, hurl themselves in-

CHURCH SEEKS TO GET A. F. OF L. TO URGE MEXICAN FEDERATION TO BREAK WITH CALLES GOVERNMENT

ARTICLE I.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 28.—The struggle of the Mexican people thru the Calles government, backed by the "C. R. O. M."—the confederacion Regional Obrera Mexicana, or federation of labor, to free themselves of the reactionary hierarchy of the catholic church and force it to obey the fundamental laws of the nation has brought into the ranks of American labor the question of clericalism versus progress.

Church Working on A. F. of L.

The church, which is working night and main to bring the pressure of the United States government to bear upon the Mexican republic, even to the point of armed intervention on any excuses, and well joined to the oil and land interests of the United States seeking to chain Mexico to their imperialist chariot, is not overlooking

F.-L. PARTY IN DAKOTA FILES COMPLETE SLATE

Old Parties Surprised by N. D. Comeback

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D., Sept. 28. — A complete state and congressional ticket was filed Friday by the Farmer-Labor Party of this state. This action is the culmination of the organization of the Farmer-Labor Party last December in this city. It came as a complete surprize to the capitalist party politicians, who had fondly hoped that the insufficient percentage of votes that the Farmer-Labor Party obtained in the primaries last June, would put the farmer-laborites out of the running.

File Candidates.

Under the state law governing elections, the executive committee of the party is permitted to fill all the vacancies on the ticket. "Ted" Welker as chairman of the committee and L. C. Miller of Williston, its secretary, filed the following state and congressional candidates:

For United States senator, William Lemke, Fargo, one-time non-partisan league leader; for congress, first district, Donald R. MacDonald, Grand Forks; second distrit, C. W. Reichert, Carrington; for governor, Ralph Igerson, Burke county; for commissioner of agriculture and labor, D. I. Todd, Williston; for attorney general, Milton K. Higgins, Golden Valley, Mercer county; for secretary of state, Charles Johnson, Grand Forks; for insurance commissioner, Magnus Snowdahl, Fargo; for state auditor, Allan McManus, Grand Forks; for state treasurer, E. W. Carr, Kenmare; for railroad commissioners, James Wendtzum, Dover, Wells county; Oscar Komsmo, Northwood, Grand Forks county, and J. A. McGovern, Fargo.

Real Campaign.

An intense campaign is in preparation and will be carried into every voting precinct of the state. It is highly probable that a state paper will be launched by the Farmer-Labor party, not only as a campaign instrument, but also as a permanent organ of the Farmer-Labor Party of North Dakota.

BALDWIN RELIES ON STARVATION TO END STRIKE

Slaps Owners on Wrist and Continues E. P. A.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The house of commons, late today voted to continue the "state of emergency" regulations deemed necessary because of the situation created by the prolonged coal miners' strike, by a vote of 196 to 99.

* * *

LONDON, Sept. 28.—There is no sign of settlement of the great miners' strike, the government counting on the miners being starved into surrender and hopeful that the union's delegate conference tomorrow will result in that surrender.

The Baldwin government, that has had ample powers under the emergency powers act to combat the strikers with special police and engage in the coal importing business on a huge scale, will do nothing whatever to force the mine owners to even meet the miners and the government in a three-cornered conference.

Labor's proposal was made by the government, but when it was rejected by the mine owners, the government evades further responsibility by saying, as Baldwin did yesterday in the commons:

"We are pretty well at the end of our powers of mediation."

CONFIRM TALE OF WHITE TERROR IN CUBA; UNION LEADERS KILLED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Private letters reaching Washington from Cuba confirm earlier reports that the Machado government has instituted a terror against officials of labor unions, many of whom have been assassinated or have disappeared.

Appeals for help for Cuban labor are coupled with warnings that for a worker in Cuba to receive a letter from an American labor organization or labor leader may mean the death of the Cuban. The censors open both incoming and outgoing mail.

CASH IN BRIBE TRIAL TRACED TO DAUGHERTY

Ex-Attorney General is Caught in Toils

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Four Liberty bonds, part of the $591,000 which Richard Merton, German industrialist, claimed he gave the late John T. King, Connecticut politician, for putting thru Merton's claim to $7,000,000 in seized alien property, were traced to the Midland National Bank of Washington Court House, Ohio, at the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy triel in federal court today.

Daugherty, former attorney general, and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, are accused of having accepted bribes.

Mal. S. Daugherty, brother of the defendant, is president of the Midland Bank.

The four Liberty bonds were deposited to the account of Mal. Daugherty, subsequently a check was made out to Harry M. Daugherty by his brother, testimony showed.

Stenographers Aid British Strike.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—The Stenographers, Bookkeepers and Assistants' Union, No. 18455, of Milwaukee, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, a small struggling organization of office workers, made a donation of $20 from its treasury in aid of the British miners' strike. The union set aside all precedents in making its contribution.

ARTHUR GARFIELD HAYES WENT TO RUSSIA AND IS PLEASED WITH JOURNEY

NEW YORK—(FP)—That Russia is the "only live and interesting country in Europe" is the opinion of Arthur Garfield Heys, American Civil Liberties Union attorney, who has just returned from a trip abroad. Under the title "A Liberal's View of Russia," Heys told members of the New York Civic Club some of the new experiments "which distinguish Russia from the moribund continent." Robert Morss Lovett presided, as editor of the liberal New Republic.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 28.—Thomas Mille), 41, laborer, was buried alive here today when the bank of a ditch in which he was working caved in upon him.

BRITISH MINE LEADER FLAYS T. U. CONGRESS

Cook Praises Action of Soviet Workers

A. J. COOK

London, Eng., (By Mail)—"The T. U. C. was a great farce," A. J. Cook told me. "The miners believed that there was yet some hope of getting active support from the T. U. C. in view of the fact that the miners' struggle affected all workers.

"What did the miners receive from the T. U. C.? Merely sneers from Mr. John Bramley who appears to be prepared to do anything for the master class.

"I regret to have to say that from the opening of the congress the attitude of the General Council—and this was also reflected in the chairman's address—was of absolute despair. No lead was given, and there was not even a word of cheer for the miners in their terrific struggle.

"There was no preparation to meet the capitalist onslaught—an onslaught not only on the miners, but on the whole of the working class.

"Bournemouth was the most reactionary congress ever held in the annals of the British labor movement.

Attacking Russia.

"The delegates met under the cloud of the mining dispute, yet not until the fourth day of the congress was there even a mild resolution put forward by the General Council. This took the form of a request for a comparatively small sum of money which had been given, and which, when com-

WORKERS OF CENTRAL AMERICA REJOICE AT DEATH OF ORRELLANA

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 28.—Radical Central American revolutionary juntas functioning here believe that the death yesterday of Jose Maria Orrellana, president of Guatemala will open the way for establishment of a labor government in that country.

This in turn, they assert, will bring nearer the consummation of a union of the Central American Republics along radical labor lines.

Cobos Batres, generally recognized as one of the principal Guatemalan revolutionaries now living here, today received a message of felicitation on the president's death from the supreme council of Central American workers at Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

The message referred to the dead executive in disparaging terms, calling him a tyrant and the destroyer of Central American unity.

An enemy who "maintained his country in a condition of slavery to foreign capitalists."

DOUGHLEGGERS WANTED TO GET CONTRIBUTIONS

Politicians Afraid to Take the Coin

Colonel Smith, favorite pet of Samuel Insull, will have a three-cornered contest for the senatorship on his hands in the capitalist sweepstakes next November.

The latest jockey to enter the race is former State Senator Hugh S. Magill, who has found his big butter and egg man in Julius Rosenwald, head of Sears Roebuck and company and one of the most outstanding philanthropists of his day. In fact Rosenwald gives money to many worthy causes and takes it all from his sweatol employes.

Financial Bootlegger.

Magill's candidacy is designed to purify the atmosphere of money-bag pollution. It is funny, but nevertheless true that capitalist candidates are employing financial bootleggers to wheedle in the contributions they fear another blast from Jim Reed's slush-hunting committee like the very devil. Nevertheless it is believed that they will get theirs and damn the bookkeepers. Anyhow, a plute who wants a receipt for his contribution cannot be much good.

Mash For Brennen's Still.

The democrats are not worrying about Magill's entrance into the campaign. The more republican votes that get divided up, the more mash that comes to George E. Brennen's still. George is in a bed with a pain in his wooden leg but his wife is going around the state swinging a wicked bung starter and it is admitted that she is weak around the knees when she begins to talk, before she gets thru she has her audience trying to get a foot on the rail and pewing the air for the shining mahogany. This is a woman's day.

What happened to the candidacy of Parley Parker Christiansen? Since the Streator convention, the stalwart Dane has not even growled. We hope the blindness of the labor leaders to Parley's fedora in the senatorial ring will not entirely dampen the ardor of the "progressives." Surely Christiansen could not expect the personal friends of Samuel Insull's twins to regard a political purging drive such as Parley promised, with anything but coldness.

SPECIAL FORD NUMBER

THE announcement that Ford is GIVING his workers a five-day week with six days pay has become the talk not only of the hosses thruout the country but is a topic of conversation among the workers.

Just what is it all about? Is Ford generous?

Is he actually GIVING the workers something for nothing?

The DAILY WORKER will answer these questions in a special edition to appear under the date of Thursday, October 7. Workingclass writers will analyze this new departure and explain whether Ford is actuated by a desire to improve the standards of the workers or is simply using a new method to squeeze more work and consequently more profits out of his wage slaves.

TRY EXTORTION OF CONFESSIONS FROM VICTIMS

21 Textile Workers Are Framed Up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 28. — Positive evidence that the textile strikers arrested Tuesday in the strike area around Passaic on an alleged charge of bomb-throwing are being subjected to a third degree torture was brought to light today with the release of Teddy Tomachko, a seventeen-year old striker who has been held incommunicado by the police for four days.

Confronted with a statement of confession forged in his own handwriting, Tomachko related at strike headquarters this afternoon how a crowd of plain clothes detectives in an upstairs room of the Passaic police station attempted to force him to sign his name to a paper which he was not allowed to read. When he refused, young Tomachko said, the men began kicking him around the room.

Signed Documents.

Statements of confession which the detectives told him were written and signed by Joseph Bellene and Thomas Regan were also shown to him, Tomachko said. The statements named Tomachko as being implicated in the bomb throwings. He was informed that the men had told on him and on that he might just as well confess himself.

When he denied any knowledge of the charges made against him, the boy said the men began to kick and punch him around again. After an hour or more of such treatment by the "bombing squad," he was thrown into a cell and left to think it over for awhile. Then the ordeal was repeated.

Awakened At 2 A. M.

Once he was awakened at two o'clock in the morning and an attempt made to force a confession from him. Friday afternoon he was taken to the Clifton police headquarters where still another third degree took place. He was then released and told never to stick his nose around there again as he would be lynched.

Two of the prisoners, Tony Fuckno, now being held on $10,000 bail, and Michael Elesik, were being taken downstairs as he left, said Tomachko. He also saw Joseph Bellene, on whom the police have been focusing much of their attention, walking. He was swollen and battered, according to Tomachko, who saw him as he was being removed with a group of other strikers held prisoners, from Clifton to another jail.

Moved Around.

The strikers are moved around continually from one jail to another to make it difficult for their lawyers and friends to find out where they are and take measures for their release on writs of habeas corpus.

MISSIONAIRES KIDNAPPED BY WU BANDITS

British Press Fumes Over Government Helplessness

LONDON, Sept. 28.— Marshal Wu Pei Fu's bandit soldiers seem to have a special faculty for making trouble between Wu and the British governments meet. Their latest piece of political indiscretion was to seize six missionaries and hold them for ransom. Some of the missionaries are British.

The papers are getting quite angry over the tendency of the Chinese to take liberties with British subjects and are urging the government to take "appropriate action," but the government has its hands full and does not know what to do.

Russo-Asiatic Bank Closed.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 28.—The Russo-Asiatic Bank, established here in 1896, with a capital approximating $30,000,000, will close on instructions from Paris. The bank was organized originally by czarist Russians on capital borrowed from France.

The bank financed the Chinese Eastern Railway during the period of czarist expansion in north China.

THE GOVERNMENT IS GUILTY!

IN 63 AFFIDAVITS the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti buried the charge of "Guilty!" against the United States government in its efforts to send two innocent workers to death in the electric chair in order "to dispose of them," in the words of two agents (now out of the service) of the department of justice, Lawrence Letherman and Fred J. Weyand. The government, fearing these two workers and failing to get enough evidence to deport them, joined with the Massachusetts prosecutors in an effort to put them to death.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, who spent some time in the courtroom at Dedham, Mass., where Attorney William G. Thompson, for Sacco and Vanzetti, presented the 63 affidavits and argued in support of them, will review this damning evidence against the American capitalist tyranny in a series of short articles starting in The DAILY WORKER tomorrow.

Get workers everywhere acquainted with this new phase of the attack against Sacco and Vanzetti. Distribute bundles of The DAILY WORKER everywhere in an effort to develop new interest in the Sacco and Vanzetti case. Send orders to The DAILY WORKER, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

...TED STATES PORTS VOMITING "BLACK" COAL

U. S. Workers Help to Defeat Miners

By GORDON CASCADEN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 27.—Tens of thousands of tons of coal to break the British miners' strike are being shipped from Baltimore and Hampton Roads every day. For months the largest coal loading piers in North America have continued working day and night. Sunday and holiday and ordinary week-day are all alike in this gigantic effort of Premier Stanley Baldwin of the British Empire, commandant of the anti-labor army, to deliver a smashing blow to British Unionism.

Fifty-nine ships passed in and out of the Virginia Capes inside two days, only one lone schooner being in the list. Nearly all are engaged in the effort to supply "scab" coal.

During the last week 107 ships entered and cleared from Norfolk and Newport News. This number does not include United States ships bound from one American port to another. More than 100 ships are now in Hampton Roads, and only five of them are Americans.

A majority of the ships are of British registry, altho Norway and Italy are well represented. The ports of destination, for the most part, are in the British Isles. Several of the ships, however, sail for Italy and South America. The cargoes, of course, are alike—coal, coal, coal.

The amount of coal exported thru Norfolk during the last week is estimated at more than 300,000 tons. This figure does not include coastwise shipments. Newport News also held its own in coal shipments during the same period.

For the first three weeks of September, 66 ships carried 416,497 tons of coal from Baltimore, two-thirds of its going to the British Isles.

Large steamship lines are beginning to enter the coal carrying trade, the high coal freight charter rate being an inducement. The rate last week was $6.35 a ton with a prospect of $8.40 a ton if the strike continues. Time-chartered boats willing to re-let for early October coal to the British Isles will ask and get 28 shillings, almost $7.00 according to a New York financial report.

This indicement is leading the Atlantic Transport Line, one of the largest branches of the International Mercantile Marine, to enter the coal-carrying trade. Pierpont Morgan and other United States capitalists, along with their British brothers, are financially interested in these ships.

The Missouri, one of the largest Atlantic Transport liners, arrived here a few days ago from Antwerp to load coal for Birkenhead, England. She is being followed by the motor ship, Mississippi and the Maryland. All three have hitherto been used exclusively in the service they are now entering.

The Missouri has been laid up for 13 months and the Mississippi for three years.

Other ships, with names familiar to those who follow the sea, are being hurriedly placed in commission to aid Baldwin and international capital to starve the children, women and men of Britain's mining sections into submission.

Section No. 4 Membership Meeting.

A meeting of all party members of Section No. 4 will be held on Thursday, Sept. 30, at Frefnett Hall, 3309 West Roosevelt Road, at 8 p. m. Comrade Max Bedacht will be the chairman of the evening. There will be a report of the executive committee of the section and discussion by the members. Every member should attend this meeting. The Y. W. J. members of Section No. 4 are urged to attend.

9 KILLED, 21 INJURED IN CRASH OF TWO FLYERS AT BETHLEHEM, PA.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Sept. 27.—Nine persons were killed and twenty-one injured when the "Binghampton Flyer" of the Central Railroad of New Jersey crashed into the Buffalo-to-New York express train of the Lehigh Valley Road here today. The accident occurred at 5:55 a. m. as the Lehigh train was pulling into the station here.

The trucks of both rehels converge at a "V" angle at this point. The "Binghampton Flyer" struck the second coach of the Lehigh Limited squarely, tossing it, three other Pullman cars and a diner, off the track.

All of the dead and injured, with the exception of the engineer of the flyer, were on the Lehigh train.

Where Ironwood Miners Are Trapped

Unless one of the four agencies being used to rescue the forty-three miners as shown in the above diagram are successful, there will be small hope of finding the men alive after many more hours. Thirty-two families will be fatherless unless this race with time and death can be won.

GARLAND FUND IS EXHAUSTED; TO SHUT SHOP

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The American fund for public service which was created out of a gift of $1,674,000 from Charles Garland, much talked-of millionaire with a conscience, will be liquidating its affairs as soon as the balance of the money already pledged to various causes is disposed of.

The original contribution of $901,655 was inherited by Garland from his father. This sum was almost doubled in a few years by a rise in the stock of the First National Bank of New York.

Turned Down the Money.

Because Garland did not approve of the manner in which the money was accumulated he refused to accept it for his own personal use but decided to donate it to organizations purporting to serve the labor movement.

The board gave away $529,000 and $333,000 has been pledged. The balance of $457,000 is outstanding in loans.

H. L. MENCKEN is a bright and precocious. His Sunday sermons are considerably more interesting then those of many other preachers we could name. Last Sunday's Menckenism was an attempted piece of satire on war, but in his opening paragraph Henry was at a less how to be amusing, so he pulled a very old wheeze about the alleged antipathy of members of the I. W. W. to soap and water. The Wobbly is about the most misunderstood product of American society. There is more intellectuality and more silk socks in one wobbly recruiting union than one could find in the headquarters of the American Federation of labor at Washington, at least more intellectuality. It's hard to maintain a uniformly high standard in literary jazz without periodical rests but the least we might expect of Mencken is that he would not pull any loyal order of the Moose wheezes.

British Coal Mine Strike Leader Flays Trade Union Congress

ered with over 3,000,000 already donated by the Russian workers, is only to be characterized as disgraceful.

Governments Hate Russia.

"The capitalist governments of Europe, especially the Baldwin government, will never forgive the Russian workers for the help which they have given the British miners, and the Soviet government will have to suffer for what the Russian workers have done.

"Not only are the Russians being attacked by capitalist governments, but the T. U. C. General Council are joining in the onslaught.

Attack on Tomsky.

"What conclusion can we draw from the attack on Tomsky other than that there are members of the General Council who desire to see us defeated?

"The latest generous gift of the Russian workers of $1,675,000, of which we have already received $535,000, causes miners all the more to resent the attack upon Tomsky by the T. U. C.

"Tomsky's statement on the coal situation is mild compared with what ours would be had we not arrived at a mutual pact of silence with the General Council, which, however, was broken by Bromley without a protest from the General Council. In the light of what has happened I personally regret that this agreement was made.

In Defense of Miners.

"And yet these same people have the impudence to speak of Tomsky's abuse of courtesy!

"It was in defense of the miners that our comrades in Russia made their protest.

"It may ha that the General Council's reply to Tomsky will be used by reactionary trade union leaders in England and on the continent in order to sabotage the Anglo-Russian joint advisory committee.

"It is up to the rank and file to redouble their efforts in the country to the 2,000 foot shaft which leads only downward.

32 Married.

Most of the men trepped are well along in years. This fact, it is feared, combined with the physical strain to which they are subject, may make them more susceptible to madness.

On the surface are waiting their wives and their families. Thirty-two of the men are married.

* * *

By a Worker Correspondent.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 28.—The United States Steel Corporation is now on the job applying the whitewash brush in an effort to cover up on the cave-in in the G shaft of the Pabst mine of the Oliver Mining company properties in which three men went hurtling half a mile to death and 43 others are entombed since 11:30 a. m., Friday, Sept. 24.

One of the first moves of the company was to appoint an anonymous "spokesman" to give out dope to the newspaper boys, and one of the first things he did was to say:

"I don't know how you boys feel about it, but I feel like a drink."

This sounded good to the capitalist news writers, and the result is that the "information" being released by the officials is satisfactory to everybody.

Shaft Very Old.

The G shaft is 40 years old and miners state that they have reported conditions to the mine captains who have taken them up with the higher-ups. The cave-in came when the shaft was not sufficiently supported to withstand the heavy rains of the past three weeks.

Another lie found in the United Press reports was that white-collared clerks and officials were among those engaged in rescue work. Ask the miners if the officials are working underground in the rescue work, and they say bitterly:

"Hell."

Fables Circulated.

All sorts of stories about the good air and water which the miners are enjoying in their tomb on the eighth level are being given out by the officials, but the miners state the air and water and light and phone connections are all shattered in the cave-in, and that the men cannot live long in the blasting powder smoke and gas damp.

There is no explanation of why the safety "dogs" on the cage did not keep the cage from plunging almost half a mile to the bottom of the shaft when the cave-in occurred.

The cave-in occurred at 11:30 a. m. on Friday and it was covered up by the officials so that no word of it got onto the Associated Press wired at Ironwood which did not close until three o'clock in the afternoon.

The only official who could be reached during the night, when questioned about the cave-in, said:

"This is a hell of a time to wake a man up."

War Between the Czars of Auto Industry Offers Opportunity to Workers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

CIVIL war is rapidly developing in the auto industry between the giant Ford Motor corporation and the new colossus, the General Motors corporation.

During this growing struggle, which has been foretold for some time, the hundreds of thousands of workers massed behind these two powerful industrial giants can do either one of two things:

First:—They can remain loyal and obedient to their respective capitalist masters and aid them in their war for control of the industry, the Ford army against the General Motors army, for the victory of Ford profits against General Motors profits.

Second:—They can seize upon this excellent opportunity that presents itself to them and, during this lull in throat struggle between the profiteers of the industry, wring better conditions for themselves from their exploiters.

* * *

If the million auto workers, employed in the different branches of the industry, do not seize the opportunities offered during this internecine struggle as the part of the owners of the industry, then the triumphant group of profiteers will be in a better position then ever, when the war is over, to continue embattling the organization of the workers, to cut wages and lengthen the workday.

It is in this crisis that the American Federation of Labor, and especially its metal trades department, shows very little desire to even attempt the organization of the auto workers.

All the General Motors plants are running strong at the present time. The General Motors stockholders have just pocketed a 50 per cent stock dividend and capitalization is now fixed at $1,800,000,000. It is the huge capitalization that the General Motors' labor army is now toiling at break-neck speed to produce more profits.

The Ford speed-up system turns out practically only two cars, the cheap flivver, the Ford, and the much more expensive car, the Lincoln, the General Motors outfit turns out a host of cars of all makes and prices, in addition to trucks, motor coaches and taxicabs. Its accessory and parts divisions and companies offer them—make not only the things that go into automobiles, but electric refrigerators, materials for bicycles, farm lighting and power plants, washing machines and water pumps, all of which constitutes a dovetailing of facilities and strengthening of the General Motors organization.

Thus the General Motors offerings include the Chevrolets, that have been cutting deeply into the sale of the Ford flivvers, the Pontiacs, Oaklands, Oldsmobiles, Buicks and Cadillacs, together with the Chevrolet and Pontiac commercial vehicles, Herz Drivurself cars, Yellow cabs and trucks and GMC trucks.

The figures show that against the competition of the General Motors corporation, the Ford system is not gaining but losing. It is claimed that the falling off in Ford sales has forced, more than anything else, the institution of the five-day week in the Ford plants. While in St. Paul recently, I was told that the great Ford plant in that city was not working five days per week, but only two, three and four days per week, and on some of these days only part time.

Figures for the first half of 1925 show that Ford sales were 828,000. This fell for the first half of 1926 to 714,000 flivvers, a loss of over 100,000. During this period, however, the total output of the whole automobile industry showed a big increase. General Motors seems to have gotten its share. During the first half of 1925, 418,000 General Motors machines—Chevrolet, Dodges and Essex—were sold. The jump was made to 589,000 cars sold for the first half of this year. It is estimated that Ford's profits during 1925 totalled $94,560,397. Those of General Motors for the same period are reputed to have gone over the $100,000,000 mark.

These figures give some indication of the factors involved in the increasing intensity of the war for supremacy in the auto industry.

They do not take into consideration the great question that troubles the whole auto industry, which is, where is the point of saturation? How many more automobiles can be sold before the purchasing public in the United States cries "Enough!" The maximum guess so far made is 25,000,000 cars for the United States. This figure is being approached very rapidly. When the high point has been reached, as it soon will be, then only replacements will be necessary, and a plague of unemployment and short-time work will spread thru this highly efficient industry, organized and equipped for mass production on a scale never attempted in any other industry.

Henry Ford is a bitter foe of organized labor. His "$5 per day" looked big in pre-war days. The prevailing "$6 per day" doesn't loom so large today with the cost of living nearly doubled. It is hardly noticeable. Little is heard of "high Ford wages" any more. Instead the "Ford speed-up" is now in the limelight. This is the "speed-up" that is forcing workers to do in five days what they formerly did in six.

A Communist was distributing The Ford Worker, a shop paper, to workers going home in the street cars in the Ford section of Detroit.

"But how do you know you are giving this paper to Ford workers?" the distributor was asked. "You might make a mistake and give a copy to these who do not work at Ford's."

"Never," replied the distributer. "You can always pick out a Ford worker in a street car. They all look just about dead. They're different. The speed-up makes them that way."

The powers back of General Motors constitute some of the most vicious "open shop" interests in the land. Wall Street is enthroned on its board of directors. It is bank-controlled under the direction of Pierre S. DuPont, George F. Baker, Jr., Junius S. Morgan, Jr., and others. The DuPont powder producers got in early with the profits taken during the world war. The House of Morgan did the financeering for General Motors just as it created the United States Steel corporation. Under such direction the workers can expect nothing but the most bitter opposition from General Motors against their every effort to organize. But they must defeat this anti-labor power.

Organization of the auto industry will be a great help to the workers in several allied industries, especially the rubber workers, surely the steel workers and it ought to give added impetus to organization in the coal industry, where Wall Street is now exerting tremendous efforts to establish the open shop.

Labor has a great opportunity presented to it as a result of the conditions now prevailing in the auto industry. Labor must take advantage of this opportunity.

end to attend their branch meetings to see that the miners shall not be defeated after such an heroic struggle.

The Feker's Excuse.

"It is evident from the attitude of the German, French, Belgian, and American representatives at the international miners' meeting yesterday that the attack on the Russians by the T. U. C. is being used as an excuse to keep the Russian miners out of an all-inclusive international.

"The British delegates, however, were emphatic in moving a resolution in favor of the admission of the Russians into the Miners' International.

"It is true that the International decided to consider strike action on behalf of the British miners, but I have very little faith in an international which allows the importation into Britain of nearly a million tons of coal per week, while one of their sections is fighting a life and death struggle."

Embargo and a Trade Union Levy.

"Despite attacks by the T. U. C. and the futility of the Miners' International we would remind the rank and file of the British trade unions that it is not too late to declare in favor of an embargo on coal and a levy on all their members in work.

"There should be conferences of trades councils called in every area, and I believe that in spite of the attitude of the General Council there is enough spirit left in the rank and file to carry out this plan."

OBREGON KEPT FOES GUESSING THEN CUT LOOSE

Ingenuity Saved Many from Massacre

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 28.—General Obregon's iron nerve and ingenuity stood him in good stead when the train in which he was traveling was held up by an army of rabellious Indian catholics at Vicam in the province of Sonora.

General Obregon was warned before boarding the train in Nogales that the Indians were restless, but he decided to make the journey with an escort of 150 inexperienced soldiers. Another detail of troops was ordered to Buaymas to await developments. When the train reached Vicam armed Yaquis surrounded the coaches, explaining to General Obragon that Chief Mets desired to confer with him regarding the fate of Chief Rivera and 50 Yaquis who had been arrested. General Obregon refused, but sent a message to the governer of the state asking for information regarding the chief.

Delayed Proceedings.

For two hours General Obregon negotiated with the Yaquis, seeking every means of delaying the proceedings. Women and children aboard the train were placed in upper berths when it became dark and the troops were distributed to the best advantage around the train.

In the meantime the Yaquis had dug trenches on either side of the train and were becoming more threatening. A message then arrived from the governer, indicating that Chief Rivera had been released. The Yaquis were not satisfied and requested General Obregon to illuminate the train. He refused and promised to meet any attack with machine guns, altho he had no such weapons available.

Retired from Trenches.

The Indians lined up to attack just as a violent storm broke, causing them to retire to the trenches, which soon were flooded. At 4 a. m. the rain ceased and the Yaquis reoccupied the trenches and were preparing again to attack when another train approached. The Indians supposed it to be Chief Riviera, but the train contained General Manzo and reinforcements. A railroad torpedo was exploded by the approaching train end both sides opened fire.

Colonel is Executed.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 28.—Colonel Leopold Larrage was executed yesterday in the village of Velles, near Tampico. He was charged with conspiracy to organize a revolt for the purpose of seizing petroleum lands in the Huestoca region.

Third Degree Used on Passaic Strikers

held this morning with union officials and lawyers working on the cases of the strikers arrested recently on charges of alleged bomb throwing.

"The police of Passaic, Garfield and Clifton are again attempting to break the textile strike by arresting members of the union and grilling them in an attempt to implicate them in the recent bombing incidents. They hope by these methods to destroy the morale of the strikers and detract public sympathy from them.

22 Arrested.

"Twenty-one men and a boy have been arrested and some of them held incommunicado for several days. The distress of the wives and children of these men compelled to fill without lawful warrant and brutally beaten by the police to extort confessions from them, can be imagined.

"Since the beginning of the strike last January, the police have pursued a continuous policy of lawbreaking, clubbing, unlawful arrests and unreasonable bail. All this has failed to provoke the strikers to counter with like violence and lawbreaking. Now when the strike is about to be won, those strange bombings come into the picture.

Coppers "Plant."

"From an examination of the available evidence of these bomb cases, it appears highly probable that they are the result of a 'plant' by detective agencies attempting to break the strike by charging violence against the strikers. It will be noticed that the bombings have been going on since May and that no one has been injured and no property damage done. I am informed that some of the men implicated are present workers in the mills. Unless the facts are fully brought it is probable that these men will be shown to be detectives employed to incite strikers to violence."

Ex-Union Official, Held for Murder is Denied Bail by Judge

Roy Tagney, former union official, indicted for the slaying of Morris Markowitz, Laddie strong character, was denied freedom on bail pending trial in criminal court here today. The trial date was kept at October 18, altho counsel for Tagney urged that if he set ahead after bail had been refused.

CATHOLICS ARE VANQUISHED IN MEXICO FIGHT

Nothing Else to Do But Say Prayers

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 28.—The catholic issue in congress is as dead as the shinbone of Saint Anne. The opposition of a majority of the congress to the proposal to consider the petition presented by the Mexican episcopate has caused catholics to realize that there is no hope of obtaining any modification of the present anti-religious regulations.

In spite of the mood will toward the catholic clergy manifested by certain congressmen, a large majority of the congress, obeying the desires of the government, decided not to accept the catholic petition in any form. The government is determined not to change the constitutional clauses nor regulations and congress is backing the policy of President Calles to the fall.

At End of Rope.

Now that the petition has been touched upon and the general sentiment of the congress made known, the catholics admit that they have met with defeat and that there is nothing else they can do under the present regime to lessen the rigors of the present regulations. While the boycott is effective, catholics admit that the poorer classes, who are strictly maintaining the boycott, are suffering and that there are signs that they are getting tired of suffering for a cause which is now being generally considered as lost. It is clear that the boycott, while it has been a strong arm, is slowly losing its effectiveness, and in a short time the boycott, which has caused a deadlock almp in general business will be a thing of the past.

They Didn't Do It.

The only hope of the church to succeed in forcing amendments to the penal regulations was the influence of foreign countries, which were expected to indicate their displeasure to the Calles government. The stand taken by President Coolidge, that the church question was purely an internal affair of Mexico, was disappointing to the church, as the leading prelates believed that the United States as the champion of religious liberty would use pressure upon Mexico to have the religious laws changed. If the United States had adopted that attitude, other foreign countries would also have used pressure, and the prelates believed that the government would hasten to modify its policy toward the church.

All these ideas have been changed. The catholics are downhearted and at a loss to know what measures may be used to bring about a change in conditions. What attitude the catholics will adopt in the future is not known.

RUSSIAN UNIONS USE OPEN AIR GARDENS FOR EDUCATIONAL AND SPORT ACTIVITIES IN SUMMER

MOSCOW, (By Mail)—During the summer the educational activities of the trade unions in the U. S. S. R. are shifted from the clubs into the open air, the so-called garden clubs.

The best gardens in the cities and industrial towns have been turned over to the trade unions. These gardens have various sport fields (football, tennis, etc.), libraries, theaters, cinemas, open stages, etc. In the large cities the garden clubs have amphitheaters for many thousands of people from which the latter can watch the various games and matches.

Summer Activities.

During the summer theatricals, concerts, sports, mass excursions and picnics are held, general crowds of trade unionists participating in them.

To give an idea of the character and scope of summer educational activities we shall cite some of the figures contained in 36 reports for 1926 which deal with the activities of trade unions embracing some 48 per cent of the trade union membership in the U. S. S. R.

Nearly 7,000,000 Visit Gardens.

These organizations controlled 264 gardens with a total area of 4,422,600 square meters or an average of 1.7 hectars per garden. There were 633,000 rubles spent in 1925 in equipping 189 gardens. During the summer the gardens were visited by 6,-933,060 people.

There were 634 sport fields, the equipment of which cost 459,000 rubles. In the course of three months the sport fields were attended by 1,614,000 persons. In addition there were 35 shooting galleries, which were attended by 33,000 people.

Thousands of Excursions.

During the summer of 1925, 4,309 excursions were laid in which 317,000 people participated.

Many of the unions have water sport stations (swimming, rowing, water polo, etc.). A total of 80,000 people passed thru these.

As has already been mentioned above, these figures cover less than half of the trade union organizations. They give a sufficient indication, however, of the scope of the educational summer work performed by the trade unions in Soviet Russia. It should be added that this year the activities have developed on an even larger scale.

Much of Damage Claim by Americans Against Mexico May Be False

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—(FP) — American claims against Mexico due to civil war destructions are said to total over $600,00,000. The joint claims commission of 1926 dealt with claims to the total of $70,000,000 and found $4,125,000 justified.

Gainee To Hang.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 28. — Convicted of slaying his daughter, Sylvia, 22-year-old Smith College graduate, last June, Wallace C. Gaines, disabled war veteran, will be hanged at Walla-Walla state prison, Dec. 11.

FILIPINOS ARE FOR COMPLETE INDEPENDENCE

Nothing Else Will Do, Says Commission

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 28.—In an official statement issued by the press bureau of the Philippine Commission of Independence the charge is made that the statement of Dean Maximo Kalaw of the University of the Philippines is being interpreted to mean that the Filipinos are prepared to accept a settlement of the question that would fall short of independence.

This interpretation is entirely wrong, says the press bureau, and quotes the following cable from its Manila office:

"Before any step can be taken towards a satisfactory solution of the Philippine problem three things must be considered by the American people.

"First, the independence pledge is morally binding on the United States.

"Second, Filipino desires and aspirations must be interpreted by their own leaders in the light of their elections, and not by any American visitor or official, and

"Third, no relationship with the United States can be satisfactory unless it rests on the mutual consent of two peoples.

"The only settlement that will completely satisfy the Filipino people is the granting of immediate, complete and absolute independence, and if a solution other than this is arrived at it will not be because the Filipinos abandoned that goal, but because it is the very best they can get out of a situation over which they have no control."

Disarmament Committee Continues to Deny U. S. Technical Arm Demands

GENEVA, Sept. 28.—The disarmament commission today refused to grant the demand of Hugh Gibson, American delegate, that it issue new instructions to the military subcommission, ordering that body to confine itself to technical considerations, and decided only to ask the experts to hasten their work. The commission then adjourned, probably until February. Meanwhile the experts continue their work.

CHAO'S SPEECH CAUSES CRISIS AT LEAGUE MEET

Delegate Echoes Words of Radical Leaflet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Sept. 28. — As Lord Robert Cecil was making his way to the league of nations Assembly to deliver a speech in favor of the Slavery Convention, he met a group of Chinese students from Paris distributing leaflets outside the Salle de la Reformation.

The noble lord instructed his flunkey to accept one of the leaflets and tell him what it contained.

"A vile attack on His Majesty's government, sir," advised the flunkey after perusing the circular.

"Dash the blighters!" grunted Cecil "those infernal Bolsheviki are everywhere."

The Lord Was Amazed.

However he paid no more attention to the matter as the students were quite unofficial. But what was the lord's amasement on the following day when Chao-Hsin-chu, the official Chinese delegate at the league, the he only represents Peking, delivered a hot speech in which he threw the hooks into Great Britain, as if he had devoured the circulars distributed by the students and was coughing it up before the August assembly.

The British made such a fuss over Chao's speech that the president of the assembly announced that in the future no member would be given the floor unless he first informed the president what he was going to talk about and how he was going to say it. Here in brief is what got the assembly's goat:

"What a deception for us young Chinese to know that the most important member of the league of nations, Great Britain, delivered and still is delivering, brutal, barbarous assaults on the Chinese people.

Landed in Canton.

"On the fourth of September British forces landed in Canton and dragged cannon to the center of the town which was picketed by strikers who were aroused by the words of the English governor of Hong Kong calling them bandits and pirates. This was not only violating international law but was material and moral aggression which was intended without doubt, first, to prepare for new English massacres, following those in Shanghai and Shameen in 1925, and, secondly, to create a situation which would prevent the national government from pursuing a vigorous campaign which would have freed Chiun Wu Pei-fu, as everybody knows, is backed by the British in order to protect their political and economic interests."

Protest Savagery.

After stating the group's version of the Wanhsien bombardment the tract says: "Is it not a shame that such savagery exists in the twentieth century? Shame to those who lent themselves to cowardly butchery! Shame to these who looked on with arms folded!

"Mister delegates. If the league continues to permit England to do what she wishes—if nobody interferes in such cases—she is responsible for the war which is breeding in the Far East. We and future generations are ready to give our blood to save our dignity and national liberty.

They Hate To Do It.

"But it is a great sorrow to us, confirmed pacifists, to be forced to take recourse to arms. We wish to find means to bring Britain to reason when we are drawing the sword, even in the national defense. For that reason we turn to the league, which is charged to maintain peace.

Test of Big Powers.

"No protestation has been heard here. If the league of nations is only a machine of the great powers, which make it do what they please if others are impotent vis-à-vis those great powers; if those high words, justice and equality, are just masks hiding the faces of the great powers; if the league is only that, then it has no reason for being.

"If the league is an instrument of peace, then we ought to see it acting energetically against Great Britain's savagery and violation of international law."

When Travelling in Spain Don't Accept a Buggy Ride from King

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, Sept. 28. —American tourists traveling in this country are advised not to take a ride in Alfonso's car. Not that they may have to walk home, but because of the still mere serious possibility of being carried home.

Cicero bootleggers may operate in automobiles that look suspiciously like police flivvers and get away with it. But this is Spain where men are expert sharpshooters.

Japan's Envoy Fired On.

The above advice was handed out gratis by the Japanese ambassador to Spain, a jovial soul, after he had been fired on while nearing the Spanish border on his return from France. His car looked like the king's and some of Alfonso's loyal subjects threw a few shots into the limousine. Outside of a nasty wound inflicted on the first secretary of the Japanese embassy, there was no casualties.

VISITORS TO SOVIET UNION URGE COOLIDGE TO OPEN NEGOTIATIONS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 28.—A group of Americans that has just completed a stay of several weeks in the Soviet Union has signed a letter to President Coolidge urging that the United States open conversations with the Soviet government with a view to bringing about recognition.

The group signing the letter, headed by Sherwood Eddy, publicist and V. M. C. A. lecturer, says that a mutually satisfactory agreement can be reached. Among the group are editors, business men and social workers, a "wholly unofficial group endeavoring to make an objective study of actual conditions in Russia," their letter states.

POINCARE IN SUBTLE BLOW AT NEW PACT

Rift With Briand May Come Over Germany

PARIS, Sept. 28.—Profiting by the occasion, Raymond Poincare, France's premier, took advantage of his speech before the disabled war veterans at the Paris suburb of St. Germain, to warn Germany that France regarded the Germans as responsible for the world war, and by this means Poincare undoubtedly also aimed his words at Foreign Minister Briand, with whom he is at political outs.

Let Be died Attack on Briand.

Aitho Briand, following his recent secret meeting with Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany, announced a new rapprochement between France and Germany and hailed the dawn of peace between the two nations, Poincare took an entirely different course.

"Yes cannot forget," said Poincare, "that the warfare carried on on our soil, thru violation of a neutral state and by orders of the imperial staff, was conducted with cruelty."

Opposes New Accord.

"If the Germany of today would openly disavow certain procedures of the Germany of yesterday, it would be easier for us to turn our eyes away from the years and extend our hands to the authors of your wounds."

This is unquestionably in opposition to the accord reached by Briand and Stresemann, Stresemann meanwhile having refused to acknowledge that Germany alone was responsible for the war.

Soviet Chess Players Join International of Chess; Win Berlin Game

MOSCOW, (By Mail) — There is a very large number of chess players in the trade unions of the U. S. S. R. On Dec. 1, 1925, the chess sections of the trade union clubs had a membership of 45,000. The various trade union chess sections are headed by the chess section of the Central Council of Trade Unions.

At the end of last year the chess section received a formal invitation to join the Labor Chess International. On Dec. 3, 1925, the question of affiliation to the Chess International was officially discussed by the Central Council Presidium and the basic principles of affiliation were decided upon.

After the visit of the Russian trade union chess delegation to Germany (where the Chess International headquarters are located, and where, it may be mentioned in passing, the Soviet chess players won a brilliant victory over the German labor chess players) a complete understanding was reached, and the Central Council Presidium sanctioned the affiliation of the Chess section to the international, appointing comrades Levman and Grisanov as representatives of the Russian section in the Chess international Bureau.

Porto Rico Labor Leader Protests U. S. Plantation Regime

WASHINGTON — (FP) — Importation of Porto Rican workers into the cotton fields of Arizona is an indictment of the colonial system that has been fastened on Porto Rico, Santiago Iglesias points out in a statement protesting against the indifference of the Washington government to the economic misery of his people. Iglesias is head of the working class economic and political movements in the island, and in vain has sought enforcement of the 13th section of the Foraker act to small tracts. Huge plantations are now run by American companies, and the Porto Rican people are driven from the land. Wages are 60 to 70 cents a day and three-fourths of the wealth produced is exported.

14,000 "Slum Houses" in Glasgow

GLASGOW, Sept. 28.—Authorities of this city, after investigation into the housing conditions, have revealed some shocking disclosures. There are 14,000 "slum houses" in the city, accommodating 80,000 persons. Some of these are never penetrated by the sun, one being kept burning all summer and winter. Nearly 1,000 houses have been declared unfit for human habitation.

URUGUAYAN C. P. FORCES DEPUTY OUT OF CHAMBER

Opportunist Errors in Parliament Punished

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay — (By Mail) — The Communist deputy, Mibelli, has resigned from the chamber of deputies of Uruguay. This resignation is the result of the decision of the enlarged executive committee taken in the last days of July when Mibelli's attitude and activity in and out of parliament was severely condemned. He was declared unfit to represent the Communist Party in parliament and was instructed to resign.

Mibelli was accused of opportunism in the following instances:

Defends an Error.

1. When Mibelli proposed an increase of salary for the teachers of Uruguay he wrote that this "Communist project will definitely solve the economic problem of these public servants and the social problem of illiteracy."

When the executive committee pointed out the grave error of such a statement and the mistake in attempting to a bourgeois parliament the capacity of solving fundamental social problems, he persisted and defended his statement.

Wrong Headed on Franco.

2. When the Spanish military aviator France arrived in his flight from Spain to South America, Mibelli proposed in parliament, on his own initiative, in the name of the Communist Party, to grant Franco honorary Uruguayan citizenship.

He was told that Franco had fought against the Rif and had declared that he is going to return again to Morrocco—and that Mibelli's motion would help the chauvinist and militarist campaign. But Mibelli could not see that he was compromising the prestige of the Communist Party with the workers and tried to justify himself by comparing his motion with the fact that the soviet government hailed the North Pole aviators of the Norge.

Party Interested Only in Workers.

3. Mibelli supported in parliament a project according to which all deputies failing of re-election should be pensioned. He did not recognize, that Communist deputies have to defend only the interests of the workers and not of bourgeois deputies.

For all these reasons Mibelli was declared unfit to represent the party in parliament. He was, however, not expelled from the party as he submitted to the decision of the executive.

British-Italian Pact Against Thoiry Accord Belies Locarno Peace

PARIS, Sept. 28. — The "peace of Locarno" may be all right, but for Great Britain there is altogether too much peace since France and Germany got together in the persons of Briand and Stresemann at the Swiss village of Thoiry and formed a bloc which looks bad for John Bull.

As a result, Great Britain has suddenly become very friendly with Italy, and aims to create an English-Italian entente to include Spain ultimately, to balance up against the Franco-German rapprochement.

Sir Austin Chamberlain's visits and dickerings with Mussolini in the past months have laid the basis for the entente and may build a Mediterranean league with France left out, thus causing France to reinforce its naval power—of course to carry out the "peace of Locarno."

Mexico Orders Gold Ore Exports Banned To Strengthen Coin

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 28.—To step the drainage of gold from Mexico and thus strengthen the Mexican exchange and boost the price of silver, a presidential decree has been issued by the Calles government providing that gold ore which is exported from Mexico must be replaced by its equivalent value in gold deposited in the Bank of Mexico.

All gold ore of value over two grains per ton shall be manifested before leaving the country by assayers. After exportation, the exporting company is given a month to replace the equivalent in gold coin of any nation or gold bullion in the Mexican bank.

If this is not done, the government will levy a fine of 10 per cent on the exported gold.

To Fight State Constabulary

ST. LOUIS—(FP)—The Missouri State Federation of Labor received many new affiliations when it became known that a determined drive will be made in the next legislature to pass a state police bill.

The Railway Strike in Portuguese East Africa

By JAMES SHIELDS (Johannesburg).

For the past four months or so a stoppage of railway workers in Lourenco Marques has claimed the attention of the whole of South Africa, in this Portuguese colony affairs have been conducted in rather chaotic fashion since the great war, and continual changes of administration have only served to intensify matters further. High commissioner has followed high commissioner and still the faulty administration has continued until practically the whole colony has been reduced to a veritable state of bankruptcy. Within the past couple of years the cost of living has increased by over 100 per cent while the national and provincial currency has steadily depreciated in value.

This development nominally shows a reduction by almost half of the purchasing power of wages, so that the lot of the workers become exceedingly hard. On the 15th of November certain third of the total railway staff downed tools in opposition to the loss of all privileges coming on top of this fall in wages. This was followed by a general strike on November 19 as a protest against the cost of living, deprecated currency, etc. With the exception of shipping houses (which carried on business behind closed doors) and government departments, practically all business was at a standstill for about a fortnight. This was followed by a lightning strike in sympathy with the striking railwaymen or, more correctly, as a protest against the methods adopted by the government.

White Terror Rules.

The new railway reform regulations stated that from the 1st of December certain privileges hitherto enjoyed by the railway workers would cease, while 200 men would be discharged from the railways. In addition to this an extra four hours was to be tacked on to the existing week, and all medicine and cranmarily rights were to be abolished.

In the face of this attack strike action was met by the railwaymen's only alternative, and this they made use of. Right from the commencement of the struggle the strikers were opposed by a vicious reign of white terror. All sorts of unscrupulous methods have been employed against them, to the extent of forging copies of their strike bulletin, urging a return to work, of imprisonment, deportation and torture. Many have been imprisoned, others have been forced to hide in the bush while soldiers scour the country looking for more victims.

Raoul Ferreira, a staunch trade unionist, was murdered in the public streets. As accident occurred to a scab train run by blacklegs and over since imprisoned strikers have been taken and placed as hostages in open trucks in front of the engine, exposed to the burning rays of the African sun and the piercing cold of the bush veldt. Imprisoned strikers have also been subjected to the lash in an endeavor to force them to confess that the rail accident was an episode of strike sabotage. A number of strikers have been deported, while most have had their homes completely destroyed thru the violent acts of the police and soldiery.

In spite of this there is no sign of weakening in the workers' ranks so far. On the contrary their heroic and plucky fight has aroused the admiration of all working class elements. The Lourenco Marques Typograph workers refused to assist in producing the "O'Portingal," a violent anti-strike paper, and the South African workers sent £300 as donations towards the strike relief fund.

Portuguese Solidarity.

Attempts to procure blacklegs from Portugal have ended in failure, and the nine deportees from Mozambique were enthusiastically welcomed in Lisbon by a demonstration of workers 12,000 strong. A further batch of deportees still remain in the province owing to the sailors refusing to transport them to Portugal. The strikers' wives formed themselves into a commando and in spite of being fired on by the military carried on demonstrations and collected funds for strike relief.

The whole strike has been a remarkable avidence of working class solidarity, and all the more so when it is recognised that the men have had only the flimsiest trade union organisation. The confident tone of the government officials at the outset has now given way to an outlook of gloomy anxiety.

The kept press has come out with vilifying attacks against the "South African Worker," the organ of the South African Communist Party, because of its whole-hearted support and encouragement of the strikers' cause.

So great has been the dislocation of business in Lourenco Marques that the railway administration has agreed to continue the granting of all privileges if the men only return to work with the exception of the 200 due for retrenchment. These, they say, will be repatriated at government expense. The strikers, however, have replied that all men must be reinstated or none as all, and so the fight goes on.

The issue of the struggle seems doubtful at the moment, for while the government has perceptibly weakened in its attitude the gaunt spectre of hunger and want has made its appearance among the strikers. Nevertheless, no matter what the outcome is, a fierce and bitter hatred against the exploiting class has been sown in the ranks of the Provincial Portuguese workers, which must increase as time goes on until finally Mozambique comes under the rule of the working class.

CHICAGO SCHOOL CLASS TO BEGIN FRIDAY, OCT. 8

Bittelman to Conduct New Chicago Course

The class in Elements of Communism of the Chicago Workers School to be conducted by A. Bittelman will be the first class in America to use the new textbook, "Elements of Political Education," in its studies.

Edited By Bucharin.

The book is written by A. Berdnikov and F. Svetlov, under the general editorship of Bucharin. The explanatory notes to the American edition are by A. Bittelman.

The book covers a vast field, and is, at the same time, written so simply that it takes up little more than three hundred pages. It is in question and answer form, supplemented by bibliographies for additional reading.

The subjects are not dealt with in dry historical form, but are illustrated with events that every student of the subject is familiar with, for many of them have taken place during his life-time.

The first meeting of the class in Elements of Communism will take place on Friday, October 8th. Enrollment for this class can be brought in or sent in at once to the Chicago Workers School, 19 S. Lincoln St. The fee for the first semester is $1.50.

Gary Celebrates Formation of the Communist Party

GARY, Ind., Sept. 25.—The formation of the Communist Party of America and seven years of struggle for Communism in the United States was celebrated at a well-attended meeting of the Gary workers.

The meeting was arranged under the auspices of the local organization of the Workers (Communist) Party and the audience in attendance filled the Spanish Hall in which the meeting was held. Speeches were made by C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party in English; Paul Petras, a member of the first executive committee of the Communist Party, in Hungarian; Joseph Kowalski, in Polish, and S. Zinich in Croatian.

The meeting opened and closed with the singing of the International. The Young Pioneers Group of five members, led by Paul Bukes, all added to the evening's program by speeches and recitations. An orchestra led the meeting and the singing and rendered musical numbers during its progress. The meeting showed the growing influence of the Communist Party of Gary.

Wicks, Weinstone and Carey to Open Party Campaign in Pennsy

District Three, Philadelphia, will open the state election campaign with a spirited rally on Thursday, Sept. 30, 8 p. m. at the Machinists Temple 13th and Spring Garden Street.

The speakers will be Harry M. Wicks, candidate for governor of Pennsylvania, A. J. Carey candidate for the U. S. senate and William W. Weinstone, candidate for congress from the 20th Congressional District of New York running against Congressman La Guardia.

From all indications the campaign promises to be a successful one for party activity. Comrades are taking a keen interest in the work. The meeting on the 30th is only one of a whole series of meetings which will be run in Philadelphia and adjoining towns in the district. Admission to the meeting is free.

Gitlow in Buffalo, Sunday, Oct. 3, in the Party's Campaign

BUFFALO, N. Y. — Benjamin Gitlow, Communist candidate for governor in New York state, will speak in Buffalo, Sunday, Oct. 3, 2:30 p. m., at Schwabl's Hall, 361 Broadway, on "What Can the Workers Expect From the Elections?"

HALT THIS MURDER!

Statement by the Workers (Communist) Party for New England.

WHEREAS, William G. Thompson, an attorney of high standing in the state of Massachusetts, has made public during the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti certain serious charges against the local office of the United States department of justice and the former incumbent of the office of district attorney of Norfolk county, which charges have been supported by sworn affidavits of responsible persons connected with these departments of the government, and

Whereas, the charges and the evidence submitted give reason to believe:

1. That the machinery of the Boston office of the department of Justice and of the district attorney of Norfolk county has been used to secure the conviction and possible execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, two innocent working men.

2. That these two working men were spied upon, arrested and prosecuted by officers of the above named departments of the government solely because of their radical affiliations and activity in the labor movement.

3. That important evidence tending to prove the innocence of the convicted men was consciously withheld and access to the files of the department of justice containing such evidence was refused.

4. That the department of justice, for reasons of its own, maintains a secret record of certain men and women who are active in the labor movement and that the machinery of the law is used at times to penalize such men and women for their activity, and

Whereas, the labor movement is deeply concerned as to whether or not public funds are being used to support an organized system of espionage and prosecution directed against those who are actively engaged in the labor movement; therefore be it

Resolved, by the Workers' Party, District One, of New England, that we demand an immediate investigation into the conduct and activity of the department of justice and the office of the district attorney of Norfolk county in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and the policy of these departments of the government toward the labor movement in general; and be it further

Resolved, that this request be forwarded to Governor Alvan T. Fuller, State House, Boston, Mass., and to Senator William Morgan Butler, senate chamber, Washington, D. C., and to the press; and be it further

Resolved, that all labor organizations be urged to take similar action in order that the interests of the labor movement may be properly protected and safeguarded.

A LESSON OF THE FURRIERS' STRIKE

Why Every Worker Should Join the Communist Party

By LOUIS SISELMAN.

THE fur workers have just gone thru a struggle of 17 weeks, a struggle which was admired by the entire labor movement. The strike was merely for economic demands—to better the living conditions of the workers in the fur industry. However, as soon as the strike started the workers were faced with three kinds of enemies: 1. the bosses, 2. the police, judges and the rest of the state machinery, 3. the right wing, the socialist party and its official organ, the Jewish Daily Forward.

During the strike the workers realized that the whole state machinery, the police, judges, etc., was mobilized to crush them and break up their picket lines. The gangsters hired by the bosses to slug the strikers, and the bosses were never arrested but the strikers were when they attempted peaceful picketing. Why is it that the entire government machinery is used against workers whenever they attempt to better their miserable living conditions? It is because the present government is a capitalist government, supported by the bosses and aiding the bosses in the latter's attempt to crush the workers.

ONE of the aims of the Communist Party is to help organize all the workers, irrespective of nationality, race or trade, into a labor party—a labor party that will demand for the workers the right to strike; a labor party that will fight the right of bosses to use gangsters against strikers; a labor party that will not permit the bosses to use the police and judges against the strikers; a labor party that will be interested in helping and not impeding the right of workers to improve their conditions.

Another lesson that the fur workers learned from the strike is concerning the role of the right wing, the socialist party and its official organ, the Daily Forward. The Forward gave all possible aid to the bosses to break the strike. Representatives of the S. P., including the late Meyer London, had secret conferences with the bosses and went over the head of the workers in an effort to betray the workers. But thanks to the efficiency and sincerity of the Communist leaders, the workers were able to withstand attacks from all sides and ware victorious.

THE fur workers learned a further lesson in the strike, that the most militant and sincere fighters for the interests of the workers are the Communists. It is only the ideal that Ben Gold (the leader of the strike) had as a Communist—to fight to the last drop of blood for the workers' interests—that gave him and the rest of the leaders the courage and strength to withstand all attacks and carry the strike to a successful conclusion.

Every fur worker should realize these lessons and join the Communist Party and become a class conscious fighter for his class. In doing this, he will help improve the conditions of the workers and will aid in the organization of a mighty labor party that will unify all the workers for the purpose of establishing a government that will protect the workers and not the bosses. Joining the Workers (Communist) Party, the advanced fur worker will thus help to overthrow the rule of the bosses and bring about the final emancipation of the working class.

BIG OPPORTUNITY IN WISCONSIN FOR THE LABOR PARTY

Engdahl Points Out the Road to Class Action

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 28.—Analyzing the anti-labor role of both the LaFollette movement and the Berger faction of the socialist party in Wisconsin, J. Louis Engdahl, candidate of the Workers (Communist) Party for United States senator in Illinois, ended his tour of nine different states here tonight with an address at Miller Hall, urging the fight in this state for independent political action under the standards of the Labor Party.

All candidates in Wisconsin, from the reactionary Coolidge-Mellon supporters, thru the LaFollette political class and among the socialists, are unanimously parading under similar slogans, such as "honest," "able," "fearless," "efficient," ad nauseum.

Engdahl showed that all these fake slogans were merely camouflage under which these candidates were trying to hide their loyalty to the capitalist class. Engdahl pointed out that Berger had introduced a resolution in congress demanding the recognition of the Soviet Union with the statement, "Why not, even the bankers in Wall Street are now in favor of recognition."

"Thru his daily, the Milwaukee Leader, Berger keeps up a constant attack and smear against the Communist Party in this country and against the Soviet Union, but also against the left wing of the American labor movement," said Engdahl.

The speaker reviewed the struggle of the Farmer-Labor Party in Minnesota and urged a united labor front of all the workers and farmers in Wisconsin. Every indication points to the rapid disintegration of the LaFollette movement in Wisconsin as a result of the developing struggle on the part of its leading spokesmen for prominent places at the political pie counter.

"Labor must develop its own struggle as a class in Wisconsin, as everywhere else," said Engdahl. "The opportunity was never better than now, with the LaFollette (republican) movement disintegrating and the Berger socialists discredited."

Militarism in N. Y. City College Under Another Name Has Same Smell

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. — Incoming freshmen at City College may take a course in "civilian drill" as an alternative to the compulsory course in military training, it was made known yesterday by the faculty of the institution. The new course will be under direction of the hygiene department, whereas the classes in military science are supervised by army officers.

In November, 1925, the students' newspaper opposed compulsory training and suggested a student referendum on the subject. In a subsequent vote the undergraduates registered themselves as overwhelmingly against compulsory military courses.

The new course in civilian drill will be a "scientific experiment," according to Dr. Frederick B. Robinson, acting president. It will seek to determine the relative merits of civilian training and military drill.

Upper classmen who have already embarked on the two-year military course will have to continue. The entering freshmen may make their choices next week.

Roads to a Mass Communist Party

Growing Influence of Shop Nucleus Papers

Welcome—the Packard Worker.

In the Packard plant, the Workers Party shop nucleus has just issued the first issue of the Packard Worker. It is mimeographed and sells for one cent a copy. The open shop system is exposed. The bonus system is shown up as a means of making more money for the capitalists. A special clever dig is taken in the following lines:

"Packards give every worker a gold watch after he has slaved ten years for the company. And if he works long enough, he will be in line for a pair of crutches!"

The fall elections, the exploitation of the young workers, an appeal to read The DAILY WORKER, an item about Soviet Russia, are among the other features that make up this little paper of the Packard workers.

Even Baldwin Locomotive Gets Factory Paper.

During the 1922 shopmen's strike, one of the directors of the Baldwin Locomotive Works boasted that no strike could take place in the Baldwin Works—that no union man or agitator could remain in or get near the plant without finding himself in jail very soon. Now, in 1926, a paper called the Baldwin Worker, is being issued by a nucleus of the Workers (Communist) Party, composed of workers who toil in the Baldwin Locomotive Works. This paper is being sold to the workers of the factory. It is a live sheet dealing blow after blow to the Baldwin interests. Its immediate program is:

1. The organization of the workers into unions.
2. Working class political action.
3. Fight for the betterment of working conditions and wages.

Stories and Cartoons Have Punch.

Several bright cartoons liven up this little paper. Many of the stories describe vividly how the workers have to toil in this plant, which is one of the largest of its kind in the country. One of these items follows:

"CONDEMNED!

By Jim Waters.

"To hell with you!
You ain't the whole earth,
Not by a dam sight!

"You sneak around shaking your fat paunch, shouting:
"I'm losing money—hurry up, pull out.
Step on it!"—and you 'can' anybody that take back.
I've seen your kind before—always losing money—
Riding in limousines, showing off on the golf links,
And talking open shop at the Union Club.
On Sunday you go to church and tell everybody
What a nice employer you are—
On Monday you go blue in the face cursing your men.
You can't bull-dose me!
To hell with you!
You ain't the whole earth,
Not by a damn sight!"

Bread Appeal to Workers.

Several other fine items appear in the Baldwin Worker. An appeal for the British miners, for organizing the unorganized, the corruption in the capitalist parties, preparation for the fall elections, the Sesqui-centennial celebration, a labor party—all these are among some of the main features of the first issue of the Baldwin Worker.

This paper is meeting with a hearty response from the employes of the Baldwin Works. The next issue is to be printed and will be as fine as the first one.

First Clothing Workers' Shop Paper.

The first clothing workers' shop bulletin has made its appearance in the clothing factory of Alfred Decker and Cohen factory in Chicago. It is called the Rebel Worker, and is the expression of the Workers (Communist) Party shop nucleus in the factory. It deals with many items of interest to the workers in the shop—and also takes up the problem of the organization of the workers, the conditions in the factory, the role of the workers in the coming congressional elections, the position of the Workers (Communist) Party, etc. Several realistic drawings by one of the workers enliven this first number of the Rebel Worker.

New Nets in Labor Ranks.

These papers are striking a new note in labor journalism. They are written by the workers in the factory and are read by the workers whom the Workers (Communist) Party wishes to reach. The fact that the number of such publications has increased and met with such success—about 40 of the party nuclei are now publishing shop bulletins in the United States—points to one outstanding fact. It is proof that the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop and street nuclei has been a lifesaver for the Communist movement in this country.

The writer is in a position to know that the reactionary bureaucrats of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor have been giving special attention to the growing influence of these shop papers, which together made a total circulation of considerable size. One of the benefits of these shop papers has been that they bring the party closer to the workers in the shops, and the workers in the shops closer to the party. The forty shop nuclei of the Workers (Communist) Party now publishing these shop bulletins are making themselves felt in the daily life of the workers thruout the country.

For the Labor Movement

For three years "Our Daily" has raised the banner of all militant labor—The DAILY WORKER has made a good fight.

The Passaic strikers, the furriers, the garment workers, the miners and every unit of the working class that has been in struggle in the last three years—say "Keep the Daily Worker." They know the value of The Daily Worker from experience.

To those workers for whom it has struggled—and to ALL LABOR—it now appeals for funds to be able to continue the fight for another year.

Ten thousand dollars must be collected at once—fifty thousand in the next three months. If the campaign is a success we can "Keep the Daily Worker"—FOR THE MILITANT LABOR MOVEMENT.

COMPANY UNION DEMANDS RAISE OF MILL OWNERS

Amoskeag Headed for a Serious Conflict

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANCHESTER, Sept. 28.—(FP)—Amoskeag Mills Workers' Congress or company union asks 10 per cent wage increase for the 14,000 cotton and woolen textile workers, and rejects the company's proposals for wage reductions. Two hundred and fifty delegates from all departments of the mills were in session.

Sliding Scale Slides Downhill.

The company's plan, as set forth by Agent Parker Straw, calls for a sliding scale of wage cuts to be based on reductions in the prices of goods sold. Whenever a large order was booked at prices below those regularly quoted the management was to confer with the company union and confer on the advisability of lowering wages sufficiently to get the new business—without sacrifice on the part of the company.

Company Union Took Wage Cut.

Wage agreements expire October 1. Last year wages were unchanged but October 1924 there was a 10 per cent cut. At that time Agent Straw demanded 20 per cent off but a compromise of 10 per cent with the company union was finally secured. The United Textile Workers' union then asserted that this 10 per cent cut was not accepted by the rank and file of the workers but by petty bosses in the Workers' Congress.

Real Union May Return.

Trade union organizers see in the company union wage demands hope for the return of a real trade union. They base this on the knowledge that the company union cannot deliver the goods in the way of wages,—that its machinery is too closely related to the management to permit it to be used to wrest concessions of such an important nature as a substantial wage increase.

And that the company union delegates who yield to the pressure from the rank and file of the workers by making the 10 per cent wage demand will not be able to explain their refusal to act when the bosses' answer says nothing doing. The United Textile Workers' Union was well represented in the plant until the defeat of the long 1922 strike wiped it out there.

Youthful Cloak Model, Out of Work, Suicide

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Dorothy Smith, 23, of Holden, Mass., a cloak model out of work, fled to the window of a fourth-floor apartment today and leaped to the brick-paved yard. She was found, dying.

She jumped, she said, when three men entered the room where she was sitting with a friend. It was the apartment of Francis Murphy, 23, a broker.

SHIRTMAKERS FIND A STRIKE WINS DEMANDS AND BEATS WAGE CUTS

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. —(FP)— Nearly 1,000 men's shirt makers returned to work in inside and independent shops which settled with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union almost as soon as a strike was called. Independent shops are required to put $500 bond guarantee that non-union workers will not be used. Contractors have been demanding 15% wage cuts.

PASSAIC STRIKERS FIGHTING COMPANY UNIONISM TO A FINISH

By ROBERT W. DUNN.

THE Botany Mills of Passaic offered their workers nothing new when they called the scabs into the mill yard and proposed the company union as the solution of the present strike. It will be remembered that several months ago, early in the strike, a statement signed by all the mills appeared in an advertisement in the favorable capitalist papers. This statement was also a proposal for "works councils" or some form of "employe representation"—in other words, a company union.

At the time this offer was made the workers laughed at it. They refused to yield an inch in their desire to have a real labor union instead of a boss-controlled company union. They waved their union cards aloft and shouted down the company's proposition. They did the same when the Botany came forward again with this old offer.

THE workers in Passaic have had a taste of the company union. This explains their refusal to be tricked by it now. Since 1919, when the workers organized in the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America were disorganized by the use of the spy system and the blacklist, the company union has been in operation at the Forstmann & Huffmann plants. It has been a farce from the beginning. The workers have been permitted to elect representatives to an "assembly" which meets four times a year to consider such questions and grievances as the company's personal manager, Mr. Reinhold, allows them to discuss. Dozens of affidavits made by the striking Forstmann & Huffmann workers attest to the hypocrisy and insincerity of the plan. It has proved a mere snare to further enslave the workers. It did not solve any of the spy system and the blacklist, the company union has been in operation at the Forstmann & Huffmann plants. It has been a farce from the beginning. The workers have been permitted to elect representatives to an "assembly" which meets four times a year to consider such questions and grievances as the company's personal manager, Mr. Reinhold, allows them to discuss. Dozens of affidavits made by the striking Forstmann & Huffmann workers attest to the hypocrisy and insincerity of the plan. It has proved a mere snare to further enslave the workers. It did not solve any of the workers' problems, as is evidenced by the fact that the Forstmann workers joined the strike and have been among the best fighters. Neither has the company union broken the strike, altho some of the company suckers on the assembly have done all they could to help the company persuade the workers to return to the mills and to the tyranny of the company union.

FORSTMANN & HUFFMANN CO. is not the only textile concern in America that has tried the company union racket. Some of the biggest cotton corporations in New England, such as the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co. of Manchester, N. H., and the Pacific Mills of Lawrence, Mass., have installed this instrument for the purpose of keeping their workers out of a real labor union. As a matter of fact the defeat of the United Textile Workers of the A. F. of L. organization that formerly controlled the Amoskeag workers is due in large part to the introduction of the company union. The Pacific Mills also put in a company union in order to liquidate the labor union sentiment among their employes. In both cases the company union has been a means of introducing wage cuts, speed-up systems and longer hours.

Knowing this experience of the company union in such textile mills, the Passaic workers have put on an aggressive resistance to every proposal that a company union be instituted as a "solution" of the labor problem in that city. The company union is thoroly discredited here and the workers are so enraged against it that they would prefer no union at all to such a deceitful and insidious device.

THE Botany's talk about having dealings only with its own workers and about their "freedom to organize in a union" is regarded as the last gasp of pure open-shoppism. This statement of the Botany was of course incited by the resolution of the Passaic workers to join the United Textile Workers, which the Botany managers had indicated they might recognize. The Botany did not think the Passaic workers had enough intelligence to get into the A. F. of L. as soon as they discovered their intentions to join the U. T. W. they hurried to make this 100 pct. open shop declaration concerning the company union. In this stand the Botany had the backing of all the national employers' organizations that have been trying to crush this strike from the start, the open shop department of the National Association of Manufacturers, the National Security League and the other "patriotic" associations as well as the local Citizens' Committee and other strike-breaking agencies.

HOWEVER, a certain sentiment among the decent citizens is reflecting itself even in the local capitalist press. This sentiment sees the Botany going too far in refusing to deal with the A. F. of L. It calls the Botany "Prussian" and other harsh names, which they of, course, deny. Whether this sentiment will grow during the next few days remains to be seen. Whether it will help the workers to make the Botany change its mind is also a matter for the next few days to decide. If the police, at the behest of the Botany, break out into further orgies of violence, the position of the strikers and their supporters will be greatly strengthened and they may draw in other elements of support in addition to the so-called civic committee and all of the A. F. of L. unions.

WHATEVER the next few days or weeks may bring about, the workers of Passaic are determined that their lines will not be broken as they are on the very eve of victory. The relief stations must be kept open. Their bread tickets must continue, their babies must continue to get the milk that the labor movement can provide. It is the duty of every worker who reads these lines to double his energies on behalf of the Passaic workers who are battling valiantly against the company union. The struggle of the Passaic mills is a struggle against the labor union. Bread and money will make certain a victory for real unionism.

Church Seeks to Fight Calles Thru A. F. of L.

the fact that a good many of the labor leaders of the American Federation of Labor are catholics.

Attack or Desertion.

Thru the A. F. of L., therefore, the church is aiming to exert added influence against the anti-clerical Mexican Federation of Labor and the Calles government. This will bring the question into the foreground at the A. F. of L. 46th annual convention to meet at Detroit on Oct. 4, and the church has its way that convention will take a stand openly against the Calles government, reversing its recognition of approval at the last convention at Atlantic City, or as a second choice, stating its "neutrality"—which is deserting the Mexican Federation of Labor in the struggle.

Catholic leaders were recently in conference in Baltimore and Washington deliberating the line of action to be taken to influence if not control the A. F. of L. convention.

Catholics Among the Bureaucracy.

At the top of the A. F. of L. is the bureaucracy. Among the big bureaucrats the church counts a surprising number: James Duncan of the Granite Cutters, Matthew Woll of the Photo Engravers; Frank Duffy, Jacob Fischer, Martin F. Ryan and James P. Noonan are members of the executive council. Daniel Tobin is treasurer. James O'Connell of the Metal Trades department. All catholics, as well as many lesser figures.

Woll Fears for Monroe Doctrine.

Among these there is a division on whether to take an openly hostile stand or desert the Mexican federation by a gesture of "neutrality." Duncan favors an open break. Woll is more cautious. He is treasurer of the Pan-American Federation of Labor and is afraid of destroying his policy of subjugating the Latin American movement which he aptly calls, "A Monroe Doctrine for the working class."

In the current issue of the "American Photo-Engraver," official organ of the Photo Engravers' Union, Woll has this to say about the Mexican controversy:

Advises Mexican Labor to Desert Calles.

"American labor will do well to extend a helping hand: First, by promoting the spirit of toleration here as well as in Mexico, and second, by counselling Mexican labor that the way to success is not by the appeal to blind passion, religous perjudice or by the force of government, but by the gaining of the good-will and co-operation of the people at large."

In the above Woll plainly says that while we cannot be violent about our support of the catholic church, it is our duty to tell the Mexican Federation of Labor to quit supporting the government and the force of government" in that government's effort to make the catholic church obey the law.

A Disguised Attack.

From indications given out at the time the A. F. of L. executive council met at Montreal to deliberate its report to the coming convention, this disguised attack, this desertion of Mexican labor, will be the way out for the bureaucracy at the convention.

Labor in all other Latin American countries is behind that of Mexico in its fight against clerical despotism. Even Santo Iglesias of Porto Rico, the a sort of adopted member of the reactionary A. F. of L. bureaucracy and one of the two secretaries of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, is anti-clerical and backs Luis N. Morones, outstanding leader of Mexican labor and a minister of the Calles government.

SHOE WORKERS' CONVENTION IN BITTER FIGHT

Left Wing Hits Hard at Reactionaries

By HERBERT BENJAMIN.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 28. — A bitter struggle is being waged in the first convention of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union since its merger with the United Boot and Shoe Workers over the expulsion policy and incompetency of the president and secretary-treasurer.

Delegates from the largest locals of the organization, particularly those of Haverhill and New York, are making a determined effort to reinstate P. Pascal Cosgrove, organiser of the New York district of the organization, who was notified just two days before the convention opened that he has been deprived of membership rights. Similarly, a hard fight is looming for the reinstatement of David Bancroft of Haverhill, Mass.

Shows Up Nolen's Report.

A minority report was presented by the committee charged with the duty of reporting on the president's report. In a scathing six-page statement, the committee showed that the organization, far from making progress under the present administration, has lost every strike outside of New York and many members and locals. The statement showed that these losses were due to the wrong policies advocated and practiced by the president and secretary.

An especially bitter attack was made against the class-collaboration schemes which the president in his report recommended.

Class Collaboration Scored.

Delegates from Haverhill and New York point out that the interests of the workers are being sacrificed and that they are robbed of their fighting spirit by the president and secretary, who seek to curry favor with the bosses. Attention is called to the report of the president, wherein he is compelled to admit that "subsequent events prove that the membership exercised better judgment" then he whom they refused to accept the "peace pact" offered by the bosses of Haverhill.

But in the same report the president goes on to boast of a joint field day participated in by the Employers' Association, the Chamber of commerce and civic organizations as a means of establishing "good will" between the employers and their exploited slaves. This he regards as a great achievement and is, in fact, the only achievement of which his report boasts.

Expulsions Aid the Bosses.

The expulsion of Cosgrove is an effort to eliminate a man who represents the workers who oppose these policies of collaboration between the bosses and union officials. It comes on the heels of an election in which the workers launched a "sticker" campaign to elect Cosgrove against Fitzgorsid, the present secretary-treasurer. Fitzgerald incidentally was never elected to this office, but was appointed on the resignation of the regularly elected secretary-treasurer.

David Bancroft, the other expelled member, was, nine years business agent of the Boot and Shoe workers' local in Haverhill. He built up this organization from 83 to over 1,000 members. His expulsion by the general council was the result of his support of the insistent demand by the rank and file of his local, that the administration take steps to organise the craft in other cities. The charter of this local was revoked by the administration and was not returned till after Bancroft was expelled.

Despite the fact that he was expelled the members of his local elected him by an overwhelming majority, also in a "sticker" campaign, to continue to serve as their business agent. But the administration went to court to secure an injunction to prevent his serving and appointed the man he defeated to the office.

Unfortunately, the opposition failed to organize its forces in advance and the delegation is divided on all kinds of petty craft questions. This is utilized by the machine, which has good prospects of coming out the victor.

Cosgrove Wins Floor for Appeal.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 28. — Delegates to the convention of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union voted 88½ against 30 to permit P. Pascal Cosgrove to appear before the convention to appeal against his expulsion. The machine created a near riot when they sought to override this decision by a show of hands vote. The machine is backed by the small locals that have sent hand-picked delegates.

President Nolan was finally forced to admit that the effort to override the will of the majority is illegal and Cosgrove was permitted to appear.

WORKING WOMEN CONSIDER DRIVE FOR LABOR PARTY

Successful Conference at Waukegan, Ill.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WAUKEGAN, Ill.—The Seventh Interstate Conference of the Women's Trade Union League and auxiliary organizations closed its work here after a three-day session.

Sixty delegates representing 18 local unions, eight women's auxiliary organizations, two state federations, (Illinois and Wisconsin), two city organizations (Milwaukee and Chicago) and a delegate from the joint board of, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union of Chicago, were present during the conference.

Urge Organization Drive.

The conference adopted resolutions calling for an organization campaign to organize the unorganized women, and for the building of relief organizations in time of strikes by the participating organizations.

The first day's session was given over to the reports of the various organizations participating in the conference. On the second day, Tom Tippet, of the United Mine Workers of America made a report on workers' education which was followed by a lively discussion. The evening session of the same day, the Milwaukee Women's Trade Union League presented the one-act play "Bread" showing the situation of the miners.

Seek Reduction in Hours.

The legislative committee submitted a report made by Miss Agnes Nestor on the work of the Women's Trade Union League during the last year in the field of legislation in the interests of the workers.

The enactment of a law, now challenged as to its constitutionality, by the Illinois state legislature limiting the use of the injunction and the effort to amend the law governing the hours worked by women, to reduce these from ten to eight, were the chief points of this report.

At the Saturday afternoon's session, the conference was turned into an institute of organization and Lillian Herstein, of the Chicago Teachers' Union, opened the discussion with a speech showing the need of organization from among the women workers. Recommendations made during the discussion of this report were referred to the committee on organization, with Anna E. David of the Chicago Millinery Workers' Union was the secretary.

The organization committee at the Sunday session, submitted the following resolutions which were adopted unanimously:

Resolution on Organizing the Women Workers.

Whereas, there are in every city and community thousands of women workers, who, because they are unorganized, are forced to accept wages, hours and submit to bad working conditions, and,

Whereas, it is the opinion of the women workers could be materially improved by the organization in trade unions, and,

Whereas, it is necessary, in order to organize these women workers, that there be a center to conduct the initial agitation to interest the workers in the trade union organization, now therefore be it

Resolved, that the convention recommends to its affiliated organizations the setting up in each city a committee made up of representatives of W. T. U. L. and the Auxiliaries and representatives of trade union workers to initiate a campaign of organization among the women workers, and be it further

Resolved, that the W. T. U. L. should take the initiative in forming such a committee and should seek the endorsement of the central labor body in each city for such a committee.

Resolution on Organization of Relief Committee.

Whereas, whenever the workers are forced to go on strike, immediate hardships and suffering result for the strikers and their families, and,

Whereas, many strikes thru which the workers seek a better standard of living for themselves and their families are lost because the employers starve the workers into submission, and,

Whereas, the workers' interests are in direct conflict with those of the employers politically as well as industrially, and,

Whereas, the republican and democratic parties have shown in every case involving the interests of the workers that they are instruments of the employers; now, therefore be it

Resolved, that this convention declares itself for independent political action by the workers thru the formation of a labor party and instructs its officers and affiliated organizations to support the movement for the formation of a labor party.

Considerable discussion developed on this resolution. An effort was made to have the resolution withdrawn but the sponsors of the resolution refused to do this, and finally, a motion by Mrs. Cornia Alexander, representing the Chicago Federation of Labor, to refer the resolution to the respective Executive Committees of the Women's Trade Union Leagues participating, was adopted.

A NEW NOVEL

OIL!

By Upton Sinclair

(Copyright, 1926, by Upton Sinclair)

For two days Ruth waited on venter-hooks, holding her breath every time the phone rang; and at last there was the voice of Jake Coffey—Bunny answered, and he turned from the receiver right quick, saying, "Telegram from Congressman Leathers, the War Department reports that Paul is at Irkutsk and well." Ruth gave a cry—she was standing by the dining table, and she grabbed at it and missed, and went swaying, and Bunny had to drop the receiver and catch her. And there she was, by golly, white and cold and senseless, they had to lay her out on the floor and sprinkle water on her face. And when she came to, all she could do was to cry and cry like a baby. Presently Bunny remembered the telephone receiver hanging, and went and apologized to Mr. Coffey and thanked him and it was all Bunny could do to keep his own voice straight; the truth was, he and Dad had been more worried about Paul than they were willing to admit.

After Ruth was able to sit up and smile, Dad said, "Irkutsk, where is that?" And the girl said at once, "It's on Lake Baikal, in the middle of Siberia." Said Dad, "Hello, where did you git your geography?" It turned out there was an old atlas among Paul's books, and Ruth had the Siberia part clear by heart—the names of every station on the Trans-Siberian Railway—Omsk, Tomsk, Tobolsk—Dad thought it was funny and made her say them off—by golly, if there had been a time-table attached, she'd have known when the night-freight was due at Vladivostok. He knew the physical geography of the country, the races which inhabited it, the flora and fauna and principal commercial interests, furs, lumber, wheat, dairy products.

The only trouble was, her information was twenty years out of date! So now, what was she going to do but take the stage to Roseville that afternoon, and in the library she would find a big new atlas, and maybe books on the subject. Bunny said he'd drive her; so he did, and they found an atlas with a picture of Irkutsk, a public square with some buildings, churches or mosques or whatever they were called, with round domes going to a point on top; there was snow on the ground and sledges with big high harness up over the horses' necks. It was dreadful cold there, Ruth said, Paul wasn't used to such weather; but Bunny laughed and told her not to worry about that, Paul would have plenty to wear, this was the best taken care of army in history, and so long as they had the railroad open, nobody would suffer.

But that was not enough for Ruth, what she wanted was for Paul to come home. Surely, now that the war was over, he ought to be on the way! But Bunny said she'd have to make up her mind to wait, because an armistice wasn't the same as a peace; there was a lot of negotiating to be done, and the army would sit right meantime. But when peace was declared, then surely Paul would come back, because we certainly weren't going on running the Trans-Siberian Railway after the war was over. Bunny said that with a laugh, meaning it to be funny, and Ruth smiled, but it sounded funny to her; so innocent they were of the intricacies of world diplomacy, these two babes in the California woods!

XI

Bunny spent a week hunting quail with Dad, or wandering over the hills by himself, thinking things over. At last he sat down to have it out. "Dad, I'm afraid you're going to be disappointed in me, but this is the truth—I want to go to college."

"College! Gosh, son, what's that for?" There was a look of amazement on Dad's face, but he was an old hypocrite, he knew perfectly well that Bunny was thinking about college, and had thought about it a lot himself.

"I just don't feel I've got enough education, Dad."

"What is it you want to know?"

"Well, that's something you can't say; you don't know just what you'll get till you've got it. But I have a feeling, I want to know more about things."

Dad looked forlorn—pitifully, but quite innocently and unintentionally. "It means you just ain't interested in oil."

"Well, no, Dad, that's not quite fair. I can study for a while and then come back to the business."

But Dad knew better than that. "No, son, if you go to college, you'll get so high up above us oil fellers, you won't know we're here. If you want to be an oil man, the thing to study is oil."

"Well, Dad, the truth is, I'm really too young to know what I want to be. If I wanted to do something else, surely we've got money enough—"

"It's not the money, son, it's the job. You know how I feel—I like to have you with me—"

"I don't mean to go away," Bunny hastened to put in. "There's plenty of colleges around here, and I can live at home. And we can come up for week-ends and holidays, the same as always. I'm not going to lose my interest in Paradise, Dad, but I really won't be happy to buckle down to business until I've had a chance to learn more."

Dad had to give way to that. There was that curious war in his own mind, a mingling of respect for knowledge, of awe in the presence of cultured people, along with fear of "notions" that him unfit to be the heir and custodian of twenty million dollars worth of Ross Consolidated.

Brophy's Open Letter

The Lewis machine in the United Mine Workers faces the biggest fight of its career.

The issues in the campaign to make the U. M. W. of A. a fighting instrument of coal miners—organized and unorganized—instead of a tool in the hands of a corrupt officialdom, have been set forth by John Brophy, opposing John L. Lewis for the presidency, in his open letter to the officers and members of the union.

The Brophy letter raises sharply a number of issues about which the miners have been thinking for a long time. The union is in danger. That cannot be denied. On all sides it is attacked by the coal capitalists.

In the unionized fields there have been systematic and constant violations of the Jacksonville agreement which began the day after it was signed. The coal capitalists considered correctly that "the gentlemen's agreement" made with Lewis at Jacksonville to the effect that 200,000 miners were to be driven from the industry and small mines frozen out, gave them a license to close their mines and use the weapon of starvation against the union miners.

After this policy was followed for a period which the operators believed long enough to starve the miners into submission, announcements were posted that the mines would reopen at the 1917 scale or even lower in some cases.

The Lewis machine has had no counter policy. Likewise it has permitted violations of the wage and working agreements until the operators have established standards as precedents far below the agreement provisions.

Hand in hand with this policy in the union fields the coal operators' association has encouraged the opening of new mines in West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, and in other non-union fields as well as stimulating production in mines already operating there.

This coal has been shipped into the union territories in huge quantities, has been sold at a lower price than union-mined coal and the union fields gradually strangled.

The solution for the union lies in the organization of the non-union territories—the raising of the wages in these districts to the level of the union fields.

This obviously necessary program has been neglected almost entirely by the Lewis machine. It wasted a million dollars in an abortive campaign in Alabama, which does not compete with the union fields, when West Virginia and Kentucky fields were the logical places to concentrate all efforts.

Its so-called organisation campaigns in West Virginia have been devoted to getting votes for the machine than to organizing miners.

The expulsion of militant members of the union who insisted on a well-organized fight to build the union and organize the non-union fields has been a deliberate plan, consistently carried out by the Lewis machine. It has fought the rank and file and those who wanted the union to prepare for struggle far harder than it ever fought the operators.

The anthracite agreement was a disgrace. Signed for five years it surrenders the closed shop and replaces it with arbitration. Already the Hudson Coal company, one of the largest operators in the anthracite field, has challenged the right of the union to organise miners working in and around its properties.

The exposure of President Farrington of District 12, Illinois, as a $25,000 per year tool of the operators in the union has merely confirmed statements made as long as three years ago by the militant members of the union.

That this corruption runs straight thru the whole officialdom is shown by the fact that Lewis has now made a united front with the Farrington machine against the membership in Illinois.

Organization of the unorganized fields, nationalization of the mines with workers' control, democratization of the union, destruction of the coal capitalist influence in the union, no wage cuts when the bituminous agreement expires next year, anthracite and bituminous agreements to expire on the same date, preparation of the union for a struggle to save it, build it and strengthen it, the formation of a labor party based on the trade unions, these are the high spots touched by Brophy in his statement.

The beginning of the struggle for a fighting miners' union which Brophy's statement brings into the open is of tremendous importance for the whole American labor movement.

It is the most clear-cut challenge on basic issues in the trade union movement ever thrown down to a powerful bureaucracy by a still more powerful opposition in a decisive union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Every honest worker will welcome it and every sincere and intelligent miner will support the program and the slate.

Conflicting Policies in France

The clash of conflicting policies in France is seen in the struggle between Briand and Poincare.

Briand is for a Franco-German bloc, the chief economic basis of which is the pact between French and German coal and steel interests.

Poincare, whose policy previously has been that of French hegemony in Europe, is forced by his struggle with Briand to orient himself more towards Great Britain.

Great Britain is faced by a menace to her iron and steel trade and to her political supremacy in Europe far more dangerous and, potentially more powerful, than the pre-war Germany. If the alliance between France and Germany is perfected (it is still in the formative stage and is meeting the opposition of the German monarchists) the English channel becomes Britain's first line of defense.

The German who broke the world's record in swimming the channel recently may be a symbol of the new grouping on the continent.

WHAT Samuel Gompers always referred to as "that great parliament of American labor"—the convention of the American Federation of Labor—opens its forty-sixth annual session on October 4 in Detroit.

It will be dominated by the most reactionary officialdom of the most reactionary labor movement in the world. The convention will reflect only as a distorted form the needs of the American workingclass.

It will make its own review of its own activities; its own estimate of the status of the American labor movement, draw its own conclusions, put forward its own program as the program of American labor.

IN the last year large sections of the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor have made a long step towards agreement with American capitalism. The official movement has abandoned even purely trade union struggles almost entirely. "Worker-employer co-operation" has been ever on its lips. Mass opposition to this policy is developing slowly but surely.

There has been a certain continuity in the policy of A. F. of L. officialdom for the last four years. Its causes and its effects on the mass of the American workingclass must be determined in order that they may be counteracted effectively.

THESE articles are an attempt to describe the American labor movement as it is under the leadership of A. F. of L. officialdom, to determine the strength of the two currents—to the right from above, to the left from below—and to estimate the possibilities for our party and the left wing in the next immediate period.

ARTICLE I.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

WHAT is the present status of the American labor movement?

In what direction is the American Federation of Labor, as a whole, trending? Is it going to the right or to the left?

Is it moving as a solid bloc or are there divergent tendencies to be seen?

Are the present tendencies in the labor movement of a permanent character or can the process be traced over a long period?

In what sections of the labor movement are the dominant tendencies most marked—where is the clearest division between left and right?

What issues and demands are raised by the official labor leadership?

What are the possibilities for the crystallization of a substantial oppositional bloc in the trade union movement?

What demands will bring the maximum response from the trade unions?

THESE are questions raised sharply by certain recent developments in the trade union movement and they are being asked by every worker alarmed by manifestations which point to reaction in official labor circles and apathy in the ranks of labor.

The endorsement of Citizens' Military Training Camps by the leading members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, the arbitrary denunciation of the Passaic strike, the open warfare waged on the proposed trade union delegation to the Soviet Union, the attitude of labor officialdom in the Mexican crisis, a close approach to purely capitalist policies and methods by labor leaders, all these are matters of grave concern to the workingclass.

THE manner in which the labor officialdom chained the labor movement to the imperialist machine when America entered the world war to rescue Morgan's millions is too well-known to need description here. But there followed a period in which the militancy of American labor reached a high level and which culminated in the great steel, coal and railway strikes of 1919-22, with substantial beginning of a farmer-labor party as their political expression.

These strikes were defeated, a period of industrial depression already had set in and when the labor movement began to emerge from its militancy was replaced by reaction.

THEN came the boom period when records for industrial activity were broken (especially in building and manufacture) but with the sole exception of the anthracite strike (ending in a disgraceful boss-dictated settlement) and needle trades strikes (outside the main current of the American trade union movement) there is no struggle either there are signs of desire to struggle.

A LONG series of statements indicating policy, and applications of policy, are to be noted since 1923 beginning with the attack on our party by the Lewis bureaucracy which was endorsed by Samuel Gompers and which, explained by labor officialdom as the begining of a campaign "to purge the trade union movement" was an infantile childdisease like the headship of the American trade union movement was shaping its policy to bring it more in line with that of American imperialist government.

THERE had been the break with the trade union wing of the farmer-labor party movement in the Chicago convention of July 3 and this had shown the tremendous pressure which the A. F. of L. machine was exerting on the lower strata of labor officialdom and had our party been skilled enuf at the time we might have minimized the bad results which accrued not only to our party but to the whole labor movement.

Then followed in rapid succession a series of events which even taken separately are of tremendous significance but of which the cumulative effect upon the labor movement is paralyzing. They cover a period of three years and fit into general pattern with all the nicety of an ancient mosaic:

1. The unseating of William F. Dunne at the Portland convention for membership in the Communist Party of the American Federation of Labor and the nationwide attack on our party thruout the trade union movement. This was accompanied by an organized attack on the Soviet Union.

(a) This was followed by the expulsion campaign of Communists and left wingers in the international Ladies' Garment Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the United Mine Workers—the three most progressive unions in the trade union movement and for this reason indicative of the wide sweep of the reactionary drive.

(b) Expulsion campaigns against Communists and left wingers in various general labor councils (Minneapolis and Seattle) and disciplinary measures and threats of disciplinary measures against central labor councils and state federations of labor "harboring" left wing elements.

2. The El Paso convention and its declaration of the "Monroe Doctrine of American Labor"—announcement of the hegemony of the A. F. of L. leadership over the labor movements in American colonies in opposition to the idea of international labor solidarity—the extension of the fight on our party and left wing to the Mexican labor movement.

(a) The united front set up with the Diaz plan unions of Germany—the warm greeting to Grassman (the first fraternal delegate from the German social-democratic unions since the war).

(b) Official endorsement of the "Baltimore and Ohio" plan.

(c) Endorsement of "labor" banking.

(d) Liquidation of the movement towards a break with the two old capitalist parties shown in the endorsement of Coolidge and the return to the support of old capitalist party candidates.

3. Endorsement of C. M. T. C.

4. The Atlantic City convention and its insult to the left wing of the British trade union movement as represented at that time by Purcell—its reiterated denunciation of the Soviet Union.

5. The elaboration of the following policies:

(a) The credentials given to the social-democratic Dawes plan German union officials for their tour of study American industrial efficiency methods.

(b) Theorizing and elaboration of "worker-employer co-operation," i. e., the necessity of higher wages because of increased productivity of the workers.

(c) Extension of the B. and O. plan to other railways (Northwestern and Canadian National).

(d) Endorsement of "labor" insurance companies.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

By N. BUCHARIN.

The Results of the Election Campaign.

IN this connection I must say a few words on the recent Soviet election campaign.

The last election campaign is the first which we have carried out without recourse to administrative pressure. We have applied new methods for the first time, and have transferred our preponderant attention to gaining the convictions of the voters and to exercising an ideological influence over them, and thus the various strata, to whom our constitution accords the suffrage, enjoyed a greater amount of freedom at this election. What was the result of the elections? The result was that in the villages the proportion of Communists elected was lessened, and that elements have thus been admitted to the village Soviets, and in part to the city soviets, which have hitherto been practically suppressed. This circumstance has given our opposition the opportunity to maintain that this is evidence of our becoming submerged in the petty bourgeoisie, and that the pressure put upon us by the petty bourgeoisie is here expressed by the machine of state slipping from the proletarian rails.

TO this the following may be observed: In the first place very many comrades have observed the following in the provinces: If there have been fewer Communists elected to the village soviets than at the last election and in many places this is doubtless the case), those Communists who have been elected this time, are supported by the whole village, whilst hitherto they have only been formally elected, and in actual fact they were simply appointed, and possessed no authority among the villagers. It is true that there were more Communists last time; but these Communists had no contact with the masses and did not lead the masses. But at the present moment, when we are drawing the total balance of our soviet elections, we may confidently state that even where only a small proportion of Communists have been elected to the lower stories of our soviet building, this does not signify any weakening of our growth, but is rather an expression of our growth, the proof that we are basing our leadership upon ideological conviction. One Communist backed up by his whole village is worth ten Communists standing alone.

EVERY great maneuver, and every considerable change of course, incurs expenses and renders a regrouping necessary. When we declared at the XIV Party Conference that regrouping had become necessary, some of our comrades lost their heads. They did not know what to do. Some abandoned their own party opinions and yielded to the pressure exercised upon them by the petty bourgeoisie, others. Others again completely lost their bearings and did not know which way to turn. The real regrouping did not begin until after a considerable time. It is true that we have admitted a great number of peasants into the peasants' soviets without bringing them everywhere sufficiently under our influence at the same time. This has been our misfortune. We have not been able to rearrange our ranks with sufficient speed, but still we had to take the first step in this direction. We had to change our course in order to advance more rapidly upon the new path. There is really nothing terrible about this. Our ranks now rearranged, we are now beginning to influence fresh masses hitherto not quite within our reach.

AT one time Comrade Zinoviev proposed that non-party conferences should be held, and a newspaper published for the non-party peasants' faction, whilst Comrade Sokolnikov demanded the legalisation of the Mensheviks and of the S. R. They made these proposals when they felt the ground somewhat insecure beneath their feet. They were prepared to abandon any position because the villages actually were grumbling against the soviet power at that time. But when we make a carefully calculated evolution, calmly and collectively, without fearing anything, and strictly calculating the proportions, then they shriek that we are slipping down. We are not slipping down, we are establishing the proletarian dictatorship more firmly, and tomorrow we shall establish it more firmly still, if we do not deviate from the line which we are now following, but pursue a correct policy.

In concluding my remarks on the problem of our power, I repeat and emphasise that even if the opposition had no doubts on the class character of our power at the time of the XIV Party Congress, there is now an undeniable tone of doubt, of skepticism, of disbelief in the proletarian character of our power.

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Bucharin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

Education in Workers' Children's Camps

By MIRIAM GERBERT.

BESIDES the vacation value and the importance to the health of the worker's child who is brought to the camp from the slums and tenements, the camp affords us an opportunity to develop the class consciousness of the children and to draw them closer to the Pioneer organization. It also gives us an opportunity to train the Pioneers to work among workers' children and give them a clear understanding of their functions as Pioneers.

Forms of Activity.

Every phase of camp life can be utilised to teach the children the lessons which we want to bring home to them. This we can utilize discussions, readings of books and newspapers, lectures, dramatics, slogans, correspondence to the Young Comrade and labor press, cartoons, living newspapers, camp bulletins, clippings and news bulletins, wall papers, games, songs, excursions and even camp discipline.

What to Teach.

We must teach the children certain fundamental lessons which they need to know as children of the workers. We must teach them about the capitalist system, about the class struggle, the role of the government, the role of the schools, of the press, movies, etc.

The children must also learn about working class solidarity, the persecutions of the workers, about working class heroes, the importance of organizations such as unions, labor party the Communist Party and the Young Communist League to the working class. In this connection our Pioneers will be able to approach the more advanced children and teach them the role of the Pioneers and the Communists. At this point especially will our Pioneers get their most valuable training.

The discussion on religion must be approached with great care. The problem can be best handled in small groups or in individual discussions. It will be easy to explain the class character of religion if the leader is armed with specific facts, such as the attitude of a whole section of the clergy in the Passaic strike, the role of the church in Mexico, etc. In addition we must give the children a scientific approach to all problems, a scientific attitude. We must explain to them natural phenomena that surround them, give them the naturalistic explanation of religion and teach them the lessons of evolution. Then, we must teach them the elemental lessons of sex and sanitation.

Current Events.

In the discussion we must utilize current events to illustrate the points we wish to develop. Discussions must not always be formal, but should be encouraged at any and all times when the children are talking about their experiences or telling stories, or preparing to do something. The leader must be alert and must be able to make use of these discussions and give them a definite turn. Our Pioneers also must be taught to do this. When discussions are prepared for in advance it may prove profitable to have a Pioneer prepare to lead or introduce the given topic. We must make sure to draw lessons from Russia and the lives of the workers there. Lectures as such should not be held frequently. We should make special efforts, however, to have workers relate their experiences in the shops, the struggles they actually went thru. These must not be long talks, nor must they be abstract. The workers invited must tell of their own actual experiences and the lessons to be drawn from these experiences should then be discussed by the children. The talks should be of such a nature that one or two of the lessons mentioned above be made clear to the children. The leaders at camp should help in the preparation of these talks, as otherwise they may be rambling, abstract and boring for the listeners.

Reading Material.

Reading material can be utilized with great advantage. Workers' fairy tales, Jack London stories, Upton Sinclair, etc. If the story is too long to be read in one sitting it is advisable to form reading circles to read the book thru. We must discuss and point out the lessons to be drawn as we go along. Take, for example, the "Apostate," by Jack London. The boy miner there renounces the faith of toil and decides never to work again. Certainly this is not the solution for the emancipation of the working class and this story should be utilized to explain just this point. Many similar examples can be found where we may have to use negative examples to teach our lessons.

Newspaper Corner.

There should be a special newspaper corner at camp, where the children can come and read the daily newspapers. Here, too, we should have the party press, strike bulletins and The DAILY WORKER, and scientific and educational magazines (geographical magazines, science and inventilen, mechanics, etc.). We might in connection with this work have a bulletin board with clippings and cartoons from the daily newspapers on important items or we might mark special articles to draw the attention of the children to them. We must not be afraid to use the capitalist press and even pictorial newspapers for this. We can make marginal notes or comments for the bulletin board on certain news items to counteract the influence of the capitalist press and to help clarify the children.

Must Be Weeks.

In closing, too much emphasis cannot be laid upon the need for seriousness and resourcefulness of the leaders. This article is not meant to be an exhaustive study of the subject, but simply to offer a few suggestions as to the work at the camps. The leaders of the camps should discuss these suggestions on the basis of their own experiences and exchange their experiences with the comrades at other camps. Only thru the exchange of experiences can we build up a strong workers' children's camp movement.

Youth Fellowship Demands Remove Troops from Haiti

President Coolidge was asked to remove American military occupation from Haiti by the Fellowship of Reconciliation and the Fellowship of Youth for Peace, which held a joint conference at Watch Hill, R. I., Sept. 11. The latter organization has become the youth section of the Fellowship of Reconciliation. "The Haitian occupation was denounced as 'grievous error' and an impetus to the 'independent people of a republic almost as old as our own' and an impetus to the 'growing fear of American power among all southern republics.'"

ENTOMBED MINERS FOUND ALIVE

Laurence Brents

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

AN alien property custodian who did not steal money from the government or accept graft, is as rare as a skinny brewary driver. We have followed the trial of Col. Miller, who with our old friend Harry Daugherty is being prosecuted for sharing in a "honorarium" of $441,000 for running thru a claim for a German emgnate. Now, A. Mitchell Palmer, he of the red raids and the super-hesated patriotism, is made co-defendant with a Joseph Guffey of Pittsburgh in a suit to recover over five million dollars from the sale of the Bosch Magneto company.

* * *

WHO got the "German gold" that was supposed to be distributed so lavishly by the agents of the kaiser during the war? Every time a group of workers went on strike, the strike leaders were accused of getting their palms greased with German money. When a well intentioned body of citizens took steps in favor of peace the press shrieked for their heads and looked for the mark under the heel. But one does not have to read many columns of the capitalists press nowadays to learn the secret. The boys who got the German gold were the lads who shrieked loudest from a safe place for the kaiser's head.

* * *

GENTLEMEN may prefer blondes but Coolidge prefers undertakers —to morticians. This is how it came to be told. A delegation of body plantcare visited Cal, to offer him their support. Being used to dead bodies, the undertakers ignored the doorman and walked right by Cal's desk. There were over one hundred of them there and as the first of the procession passed, Cal asked his messenger boy what they were. The lad did not know, so he went higher-up for information. The stable boy who manages Cal's electric hobby horse informed the messenger that the delegates were morticians. By the time the last got back to Cal the word morticians was transformed into "bricklayers." So Cal may be expecting a heavy labor vote next election but he may get political embalming fluid instead.

A CATHOLIC weekly published in Bellaville, Illinois, comes to hand and strange to relate carries the following editorial comment from an exchange:

"It is not safe to conclude, as a catholic news agency does, from the present condition of socialism among us, that there is no danger from socialism in America. True, the socialist party is almost dead from inanition, but in its place there is arising a radical socialism (Communism), which is a much greater danger. When once our laboring classes perceive that there is no hope for them under the present

FINNISH WHITE GUARD BUTCHER NABBED IN WEST

Keikko Sippola Under Arrest in Frisco

During the white terror in Finland in 1918, after the overthrow of the Socialist Workers' Government, there was one man who excelled everyone in blood-thirsty cruelty. His name was Veikko Sippola. Some time after, strong pressure from the workers compelled the "white" government, established under the auspices of the German kaiser—to open procedure against him. This was of course a joke. The man himself had already disappeared.

Now word comes from San Francisco that a Finn, arrested there for illegal entrance into this country and calling himself Jalo Anttila, is Veikki Sippola, the man who was charged in Finland, with the murder of workers. Under the circumstances, it was too great even for the white guard government and they have been forced to take steps against him.

He established himself in San Francisco, married (altho already married in Finland), and kept close connections with the "respectable" Finnish bourgeois colony there, according to information.

It is understood that he intends to fight against deportation and deliverance to Finnish officials, who of course, would be embarrassed to have one of their "heroes" delivered to them and charged with cold-blooded murder of many workers—officially he is accused of five murders.

BRUTAL POLICE METHODS USED IN 'BOMB' PLOT

Freed Prisoner Tells of Violent Threats

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 29.—Details of the latest crude bombing frame-up which the police of the Passaic textile strike area have tried to perpetrate recently on the striking members of Local 1603 of the United Textile Workers of America, are gradually coming to light.

Michael Elastik, a member of the general strike committee and a picket lieutenant, who was arrested Wednesday morning without a warrant, was released yesterday on $2,000 bail. Held five days practically incommunicado, Elastik was forced by violent threats to sign a statement which he repudiated at once as soon as he was released. Elastik said he was shown a group of strike prisoners whose faces were black and blue and swollen, and told that he would fare worse if he did not confess to the charge of assaulting two mill foremen whom he had never seen.

Bloody Threat.

He was also shown a bloody stretcher as he was being taken to a cell in the basement of the Clifton jail where he was kept for 24 hours after his removal from the Passaic jail. It was hinted to him that he might come to know the use of this stretcher if he did not come across with the desired confession.

After trying in vain to implicate him in the bombing frame-up, the police contented themselves with wresting a false confession from him of assault on one of the two foremen said to have been attacked last week near Randolph street and Acker-man avenue. He was released on $2,000 bail.

Seven Held in Passaic.

In the Passaic county jail at Paterson, seven strikers are arrested during the early part of the week are still being held on exorbitant bail. Two of them are held without bail and for the other five $50,000 is demanded. Tony Pochan, charged with being implicated in four bombings is held on $100,000.

Joseph Bellano, Paul Ormeck and Alex Costomachs are held on $75,000 each, and Charles Current for $25,000. No bail on the bombing charges has been set for the other two, Tom Winnik and William Short.

Five in Bergen.

In the Bergen county jail at Hackensack, five more men are being held without bail on the framed-up bombing charges. These are Joseph Toth, Tom Rexau, Nicholas Shillaci, Adolph Wisnefski and Paul Kovasch.

Attorneys for the defense, Henry Hunt, formerly a member of the railroad labor board, J. L. Hughes, of the American Civil Liberties Union, Joseph Brodsky, of New York, and Sigmund Unger, Passaic lawyer, have been working on the strikers' cases.

Make It a Day's Pay TODAY to Keep the Daily Worker

SPECIAL FORD NUMBER

THE announcement that Ford is GIVING his workers a five-day week with six days pay has become the talk not only of the bosses thruout the country but is a topic of conversation among the workers.

Just what is it all about? Is Ford generous?

Is he actually GIVING the workers something for nothing?

The DAILY WORKER will answer these questions in a special edition to appear under the date of Thursday, October 7. Working-class writers will analyze this new departure and explain whether Ford is actuated by a desire to improve the standards of the workers or is simply using a new method to squeeze more work and consequently more profits out of his wage slaves.

"Forged in Swindling Manner" Stalin's Reply to Leader Lie

Joseph Stalin has nailed another American newspaper lie. The general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union has personally replied to this latest of many falsehoods not because it was spread by capitalist newspapers, Hearst's to be exact, but because a "quasi-socialist weekly," the New Leader of New York, echoed the lie. Stalin has cabled The DAILY WORKER branding the New Leader story as "a most complete and ignorant forgery."

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party had called the New Leader to account at the time the bogus story was printed and made known a cable from the Communist International branding the story as a lie. An insolent reply was received from the editor of the New Leader. The latter then sent a cable to Stalin which demanded a yes or no answer on the authenticity of the story which, by the way, the New Leader stole from the Hearst service.

Stalin did not reply to the New Leader. His cable to The DAILY WORKER said that he did not consider it possible for him to enter into correspondence "with an organ which itself forged in a swindling manner 'remarks' from my speech, and now has the audacity to ask me, with the appearance of innocence, about the genuineness of these remarks."

Stalin's cablegram follows:

Moscow, September 28.

To the Editorial Board of the Central Organ of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, THE DAILY WORKER.

Dear Comrades: Editor:

Kindly insert the following statement in your paper:

On August 14th, the New York quasi-socialist weekly, the "New Leader" printed, without indicating the source, falsified concluding remarks from an alleged and falsified version of a speech of mine at the plenum of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. I have neither the possibility nor the desire to read all the inventions of the bourgeois and semi-bourgeois papers concerning Soviet public man, and would not have paid attention to this usual falsehood of the capitalist press and their underlings. However, a month after printing these falsified remarks the "New Leader" sent me a telegram in which it asked me to "affirm all July severe criticism of Zinoviev attributed to you in American papers report proceedings central committee Russian Communist Party."

Not considering it possible to enter into correspondence with an organ which itself forged in a swindling manner "remarks" from my speech, and now has the audacity to ask me, with the appearance of innocence, about the genuineness of these "remarks," I ask you to allow me to state thru your paper that the report on the "remarks of Stalin," published in the "New Leader" of August 14, 1926, had absolutely nothing in common with my speech at the plenum of the Central Committee, either in content or in form or in tone, and that this report is thus a most complete and ignorant forgery.

With Communist greetings,

STALIN.

INDIANA KLAN LEADER SERVING LIFE TERM FOR MURDER, INJURED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Sept. 29.—D. C. Stephenson, former Indiana klan leader serving a life sentance in the Indiana state prison, is back on his job in the chair factory today nursing minor injuries as a result of a fall suffered Monday while walking down the stairs leading from the main floor to the second cell tier.

Stephenson slipped and fell four steps to the cement floor.

PHILADELPHIA BUILDING TRADES NEED ALL COMBINED UNIONS FOR FIGHT ON OPEN SHOP INJUNCTION

By ALEX BAIL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29.—The granting by Judge McDevitt of an injunction to plumbing contractor Daniel Keating against the unions of the Building Trades Council, is attracting wide attention in union circles here. It is well understood that the issue involved is one of primary importance in which the very life of the union is concerned.

Starts Open Shop Drive.

One must be quite naive to believe that Mr. Keating stands alone in his efforts to destroy the council. The attendance in court of Mr. Anderson, one of the largest contractors in this city, is quite significant. The decision in Keating's favor will be the signal for many more large contractors to enter pleas for similar injunctions. If the Building Trades Council is to retain its control over the building industry in Philadelphia and to maintain union standards and union conditions it must rally all its forces in an effort to defeat the beginning of a huge open shop drive in the industry.

The injunction is very far reaching in scope and might be used not only in Philadelphia but also in any other part of the state.

Plainly Open Shop.

The injunction prohibits the Building Trades Council:

"a. From combining or conspiring in any way for the purpose of compelling or coercing plaintiff to discharge non-union men in his employ

TRADES UNION CONGRESS SEES STALKING GHOST

Leaders Dodge Discussion of Betrayal

By ALCEN HUTT.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOURNEMOUTH, England. — The Trades Union Congress is over. It met under more historic circumstances than any congress previously. How has it faced up to its task?

Let us make no bones about it: this congress was haunted—haunted by the memory of the general strike—and the General Council, backed by the serried phalanx of officialdom, simply refused to lay the ghost.

The contrast with Scarborough has been remarkable: at Bournsmouth all the right wing elements have displayed a united front that has been admirable in its solidarity—while the left wing that was so prominent last year has softly and silently vanished away.

This is not to say that the general body of delegates had moved to the right. Nothing of the kind. The most striking proof of this was the spirited way in which delegates from all parts of the hall spontaneously supported the miners on Thursday in their historic demonstration of protest against the General Council's provocative appointment of Bromley to second the resolution on the lockout.

Willing to Respond.

I have noticed the same readiness to respond, in a less spectacular degree, however, to a left wing lead whenever it has been given. This was the case in the sharp questioning of the General Council (arising out of its report) on amalgamations, the failure to give any effect to the Scarborough resolution on factory committees. Its failure to do the most that could be done to develop the trades councils. It was equally the case with the keen discussion of the powers of the General Council, its right to refuse discussion of the general strike at congress, the Labor leaders' defense on the weakly liberal resolution on E. P. A. and the fight which won the resolution in favor of industrial unionism.

The Scarborough Temper.

It was a small group of delegates who are supporters of the minority movement who gave the lead on these and many other points. They were aided by left, right and center like Ellen Wilkinson and John Jagger (N. U. D. A. W.). But of other left wing leadership, as I said, there was not even a small left.

Why, it may be asked, was not more achieved by the leftwing opposition, if the temper of the congress was not fundamentally different from Scarborough? For a very simple reason: the spirit of trade union discipline is very strong, and delegations have yet an uncanny habit of doing what their general secretary, with the votes in his hand, tells them to do. Equally a left winger may be alone or in a minority on his delegation—and while he speaks one way, the votes of his society perform go another.

Cold Feet.

It was the cold feet of the general secretaries which—after the heavy artillery of Bevin, Clynes and Cramp—

BRITISH MILLS HIT BY COAL FAMINE AS MINE UNION MEETS

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Four hundred mills in the Lancashire district engaged in the spinning of American cotton today announced that they had decided to operate only one week in every three because high coal prices make running expenses much too high.

The decision gives a concrete example of the paralyzing effects of the long coal strike.

Miners' delegates today assembled for a conference in Kirkeswey Hall to discuss the government's proposal that they proceed with district settlements of the strike demands.

This action follows the passage yesterday by the house of commons of a motion continuing the "state of emergency" for another month.

INJURED MINERS GET NO SUPPORT IN DISTRICT ONE

Officials Reluctant to Fight Cases

ARTICLE IV.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 29. — Not a single doctor is employed by District One to look after the welfare of the members of the United Mine Workers here who may be, and who constantly are, being injured in their dangerous work.

Practically every doctor in the district is either on the payroll of the coal companies or under their influence.

The anthracite miners come under the Pennsylvania compensation law but in President Cappelini's district the law is administered by company lawyers, the company officials and company doctors.

A Recent Instance.

A recent instance of the lack of union control over the administration of a law which was considered an organized labor measure when it was passed is that of a miner who had his index finger broken by a falling rock.

The finger was set carelessly by the company doctor and when it healed stuck out rigidly, being worse than no finger at all as it was in the way. It must be amputated in order that the miner can be able to work again at his trade.

No Aid From Officials.

Properly cared for the finger should have been practically as good as ever and one doctor, whom the miner consulted, was honest anuf to say so.

The miner was offered a settlement by the company but refused it as it in no way compensated him for his injury and loss of wages. He took

TURN YOUR EYES TOWARD DETROIT!

NEXT MONDAY morning the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor convenes in the capital city of the auto industry, Detroit, Michigan.

It will be an important gathering, not only for the organized workers of this country, but for the whole American working class.

All labor must turn its eyes toward Detroit during the two weeks that follow and carefully watch the A. F. of L. at work.

It can only do this thru the columns of The DAILY WORKER. No other daily newspaper in the land, in the English language, will give the story of this convention that the rank and file of labor must have in order to become acquainted with its own problems. That story will be carried in The DAILY WORKER, from day to day, while the convention is in session.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, who was at the Atlantic City convention of the A. F. of L. last year, will be in Detroit this year, sending the news and comment direct from the convention floor. An increased number of workers should read The DAILY WORKER during

OF PROFIT IN 'BLACK' COAL

700,000 Tons from One Port in One Week

The weekly coal trade paper Black Diamond, published in Chicago, gives some interesting statistics on the movement of American coal used to break the British miners' strike. It says that from Hampton Roads alone 700,000 tons were shipped last week and shipments continue heavy.

Constantly Increase.

Railway figures shows exports of American coal from Hampton Roads for the period Aug. 23 to 28, amounted to 324,789 tons; Aug. 30-Sept. 4, 303,178 tons; Sept. 6-11, 342,505 tons.

Total exports from Hampton Roads, Jan. 1 to Sept. 18, as reported by the bureau of mines, were 6,680,292 tons, against exports of 3,335,997 tons, for the same period of 1925. Exports from all American tidewater ports from Jan. 1, 1926, to Aug. 31 were 8,835,316 tons, against 3,875,187 tons for the same period of 1925.

Exports for the month of August, 1926, alone amounted to 2,826,679 tons, 70 per cent as much as all last year's exports up to Aug. 31.

The increase of American exports amounting to 4,939,029 tons in eight months is, however, but a small part of the increase of coal production this year caused by domestic industrial activity. Up to Sept. 11, American soft coal mines produced 374,753,000 tons, against 236,100,000 for the same period last year—a gain of 48,645,000 tons, nearly ten times the amount of the gain in exports.

Non-Union Mines Lead.

West Virginia appears to be getting the lion's share of the export business caused by the British strike. Production of that non-union state for the five weeks ending Labor Day was, by weeks: 2,920,000, 3,110,000, 2,972,000, 2,660,000, and 1,777,000 tons. The drop the last week was due to the influence of the holiday.

In the same weeks the production of Illinois mines was 1,230,000, 1,230,000, 1,288,000, 1,406,000, and 1,218,000 tons. A few years ago Illinois and West Virginia were running neck and neck in tonnage. Just at present, however, the surprisingly large production of the Illinois mines is a feature of the coal trade.

Illinois, which long sagged below non-union Kentucky, has again taken the lead over that state. In the five weeks' production race Kentucky's tonnage was 1,147,000, 1,205,000, 1,168,000, 1,148,000, and 814,000, Illinois leading every week.

Gen. Hines Is Demoted.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Maj. Gen. John L. Hines, who will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall will be installed as chief of staff on November 21.

industrial and social system—which awakening is inevitable sooner or later—they will turn, as the true radical of Bolshevism, and we shall witness a revolution compared with which that which has taken place in Russia will appear as child's play. Qui vivra verra!"

Not so bad!

IGNORANCE handicaps a man in life, but it is no handicap to a catholic who is concerned with nothing else except getting to heaven. A learned catholic is an incapable of understanding the dogmas and mysteries of his catholic faith as an ignorant catholic. We have the authority of a catholic publication for this. And we defy any intelligent reader to make either head or tail of the following question and answer:

* * *

"Q. IS there not a vast difference between the faith of a learned and an ignorant catholic? A. 'Both believe the same, inasmuch as both believe on the authority of god revealing, as witnessed infallibly by a divine, authoritive teacher, speaking in the name of Jesus Christ—the catholic church. The trained theologian may know more facts, have a better grasp of principles, and be better able to defend catholic doctrine than the average catholic; still, the self-same dogmas must be believed by both under penalty of ex-communication." Now you tell one!

* * *

CRIME is on the increase in Russia, according to a story in a capitalist news service. Various causes are given for this alleged condition, including "the high cost of living and unemployment" but perhaps the cause knowing what we'll never be held responsible.

The General Council, to put it bluntly, has taken a long step in the direction of supervising—the word is not too strong—the T. U. C. as the supreme body in the trade union movement.

OF course the most ardent supporter of the Soviet government will not claim that all crime vanished within twenty four hours after the Red Flag was raised over the Kremlin. The population that was brutalized under the czarist regime is still there. And the economic conditions that are largely responsible for crime and criminals are only in the process of being eliminated. As I am writing this a headline in a Chicago afternoon paper catches my eye. It reads: "Twelve murdor trials on docket for October court term." That is not so bad. It has been worse. American newspapers hunting for crims records need not go beyond their own doorsteps.

* * *

RECENTLY while having a cup of coffee in a restaurant with two acquaintances, the latter began to argue violently over some trifling matter. What they were disputing about not he proven without recourse to atlas or map. But still the battle raged. I was reading a newspaper at my leisure and happened to light on the following: "Usually the only man that is sure of a feet is the man who knows only one thing about the subject. People argue most over things they know least about." This stopped the heys for a while but one of them, wiser and younger then the other aftor thinking severely retorted: "You should know enough not to believe anything you read in the capitalist press."

Loss of Life Due to Mexican Hurricane Is Now Reduced to Two

VERA CRUZ, Sept. 29—A check-up after yesterday's hurricane showed lato today that only one woman and one child had been reported killed in the city of Vera Cruz.

Communication with the surrounding territory was cut off and it was therefore impossible to ascertain authoritatively the amount of damage or possible loss of life.

No foreigners have been reported killed or injured.

Extensive property damage was caused both in the city and in the surrounding country.

Leaders Dodge Discussion of Betrayal

brought the superficially overwhelming defeat of the proposition for more powers to the General Council.

I think it is worth while to emphasize here the fact that, on the first time the minority movement has in any way come up for a vote by the T. U. C., it secured nearly three-quarters of a million votes.

Certainly there were nearly two and three-quarter million against it, but a comparison of the votes it received with the numbers of workers represented at minority movement conferences is close enough to be very significant.

Refuse to Discuss Betrayal.

A fine point needs to be stressed—and to be stressed in the strongest manner possible. That is the sinister precedent that has been established by the General Council's refusal to discuss the general strike on the already familiar ground that its responsibility lies on the conference of executives. The General Council maintained its point, in spite of determined opposition.

The protests came, not alone from the left wing, but from so extreme a right winger as Mr. Naylor (L. S. C.), who pointed out with perfect truth that the General Council was elected by the T. U. C. and was responsible to it for all its activities, and not to the conference of executives. Further, that since the present General Council retires this week—and the conference of executives will be held god

The General Council is supreme.

Building Trades in Philadelphia Fight Open Shop Injunction

or for the purpose of compelling him to employ union men.

"b. From committing any and all acts in any way calculated to prejudice any person or corporation now under contract with plaintiff, against maintaining or establishing contractual relations with the plaintiff because of the failure of the plaintiff to comply with the demands of the defendants (the Building Trades Council—A. B.)

"c. From ordering, directing or persuading any person or persons to strike or refuse to work upon any building or structure in the city of Philadelphia and vicinity or elsewhere by reason of the fact that the plaintiff's employes are engaged in work thereon."

Council Must be Strengthened.

Union control in the building industry or for that matter in any other industry can be maintained not thru the good will of the contractors but thru the organisad power of the workers in the industry.

Mr. Keating in his complaint, said:

"The members of the union are very numerous and when concerted action is obtained thru the agency of the council make the rules, penalties and demands of the council and its affiliated unions. If the same be permitted a powerful instrument for the oppression of the members of the unions, employers and others."

A Lesson in It.

The building trades men should realize that there is a valuable lesson to be learned from the above paragraph. It is the combined front of the various unions to which Mr. Keating objects. It is this very instrument—The Building Trades Council—which must be broadened and strengthened.

There are powerful unions in the industry in Philadelphia which are not yet affiliated with the council. The carpenters, bricklayers and others are outside of the council and must be urged to join. The interests of the various crafts in the industry are so interlocked as to make common action a burning necessity. The Keating affair is a case in point: The plumbers would have been helpless were it not for the solidarity shown by the hoisting engineers.

The Building Trades Council must take the initiative in the campaign for the unification of all forces in the industry. Petty jurisdictional friction must be forgotten in face of the common danger.

Organization the Answer.

The unions in the building industry must not stand by idly during this injunction fight. The open shop campaign must be answered by a general organization drive in the industry. Organization committees should be elected in every union and the campaign begun under the leadership of the council. If necessary the initiation fees should be lowered to make effective organisation work possible.

Stronger unions in the industry and a council including all the unions are the best guarantee against injunctions and open shop drives by the employers.

PHILADELPHIA STRUCK BY COURT INJUNCTION

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29—Judge Harry S. McDevitt granted an injunction against the Building Trades Council of Philadelphia on the plea of Plumbing Contractor Daniel Keating.

The terms of the injunction are so sweeping as to make impossible any effort of any of the unions of the council—in the direction of organization or the maintenance of a living wage and fit working conditions.

Officials of the council stated that the following council meeting to be held shortly will determine their attitude.

DEAD AROSE AT ELLER'S ORDERS AND CAST VOTES

Even the Grave Gives Up Its Secrets

Dead men may tell no tales but they are darned good voters if they can get away with it. This is the political philosophy of Morris Eller, the popular boss of the 20th ward, enjoying a member of the Crowe-Barratt-Galpin wing of the G. O. P. and monarch of all he surveys in the Maxwell street district.

When Morris makes up his mind to turn his ward over to a candidate he makes his bailiwack stand up. He does not roll over at will. Morris is proud of his ability to deliver and divers relatives and relatives are happy because Morris puts them on some friendly payroll with everything eliminated except the salary.

A Fine Machine.

"This is how I build my machine, and it's a darned good one," admitted Mr. Eller proudly at the slush fund inquiry.

Such honesty was so novel that the hardboiled Missouri senator, Jim Reed, almost swallowed his cigar.

Conny Judge Edmund K. Jarecki spilled the dirt on Eller for the good reason that Eller did not line up his ruling cameraries for the judge. Morris made them live, work and vote for Stete's Attorney Crowe's man. Savage.

Here is the Story.

The following results were revealed by an investigation of ten precincts:

One hundred thirty-nine persons did not vote, but are recorded as having voted.

Eighty-four voted from non-existant addresses.

Nine voted from vacant lots.

Seventy-six voted from vacant buildings.

One hundred and three voted twice.

Four voted three times.

Five hundred and twenty-nine persons voted, but moved before the primary.

Fifteen hundred and three names on the poll books were unknown at the addresses given.

Twelve died before primary day, altho the books show they voted.

Five hundred were those of children.

Fourteen outside of the precinct.

One is serving a life term in the penitentiary.

Recapitulation shows 2,630 fraudulent votes were cast. The recount shows 21,245 votes were falsely canvassed.

Injured Miners Get No Support in District No. 1

the case up with the district officials and, after considerable difficulty in getting a hearing, was informed that he had hotter sottic as the district office did not want any trouble on this issue.

Miners Lose Compensation.

Knowing that the district office will not make a fight for miners who are maimed by careless treatment, or who are allowed compensation far below that which should be paid, the coal companies systematically make it unpleasant for a miner who contests their offers of settlement.

The result is that thousands of dollars which the injured miners are entitled to remain in the coffers of the coal companies.

All of this tends to weaken the confidence of the miners in their union and the total result is not confined to a money gain for the operators but results in strengthening of their position as against the union.

Operators Aggressive.

Since the acceptance of the 5-year anthracite agreement with arbitration and the surrender of the check-off by the Lewis-Cappelini machine the operators are more hard-boiled than ever in their administration of the compensation law.

On this one issue alone the anthracite miners can be rallied for the national ticket headed by Brophy, Blaveson and Brennan which is pledged to abolish operators' influence in the union.

"Guilty!" Charge Hurled Against U. S. Government in Sacco-Vanzetti Case

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

ON the night of Nov. 18, 1925, a runner in the Dedham jail at Dedham, Mass., the name of Miller, handed a magazine thru the bars of the cell of Nicola Sacco, known the world over as one of the many class war prisoners of America's greed.

Miller told Sacco the magazine was from a fellow prisoner, Celestino Madeiros, and that he (Sacco) should look inside. Sacco found within the magazine a slip of paper containing the following:

"I herphy confess to being in the South Braintree shoe company crime, and Sacco and Vanzetti were not in said crime. (Signed) Celestino Medeiros."

Thus the actual assassins appear five and one-half years after the payroll holdup at South Braintree, Mass., with its resulting murders, which the United States government in common with the Massachusetts' Prosecutors have deliberately used as a means with which to send the two workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, to death in the electric chair.

The little slip of paper with the admission by Madeiros is the keystone in the bridge across which it is hoped to return both Sacco and Vanzetti from capitalism's death chamber to freedom and the working class. It ought to be one of the clinching arguments in the demand for a new trial. But will it? Judge Webster Thayer thru the trial of the whole case has shown himself a willing tool of the capitalist class. He has been loyal to the employers' interests all thru the more than six years that the case has dragged thru the exploiters' courts.

It was previous to Nov. 18, 1925, that Madeiros said to Sacco: "Nick, I know who did the South Braintree job." The note in the magazine, which has been presented in open court and is now in the possession of Sacco's lawyer, William G. Thompson, came later, a piercing ray of sunlight into the pitch-black dungeon gloom of Dedham jail.

Thus the frame-up of the government is effectually blasted in the minds of all thinking workers. Or, it should be.

In the frame-up of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings, in California, the witnesses one by one, as years passed, confessed that they had perjured themselves on the witness stand. The jurors, pondering these admissions of perjury, joined in the demand for a new trial. But those actually involved in the 1916 Preparedness Day bomb blast in San Francisco have never come forward and confessed to the crime. This, while it has actually taken place in the Sacco-Vanzetti case thru the admissions of Madeiros corroborated by others in numerous supporting affidavits.

The affidavit of Madeiros, secured by Attorney Thompson, was but one of 63 presented in open court. Two of these affidavits were signed by Fred J. Weyand and Lawrence Letherman, former agents of the department of justice, who claimed that all the department of justice agents know that Sacco and Vanzetti were not highway robbers, and had nothing to do with the South Braintree crime, but that the government wanted "to dispose of them."

Judge Thayer at this hour, the second week after the reading of the affidavits and the hearing of the arguments in open court, still has the case "under consideration." He is reading the affidavits and studying the record, at least that is what he said he was going to do, and declared it would take him several weeks if not months to do it.

Attorney Thompson told Judge Thayer, in view of the fact that the prosecution had not refuted the vital matters presented in the affidavits offered on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti, that it shouldn't require five minutes to render a decision ordering a new trial.

* * *

But the court continues to delay. While the judge is "considering" what his decision shall be, The DAILY WORKER, from day to day, will present to its readers the damaging facts brought forward in the 63 affidavits and the arguments made in their favor. The whole American working class must be made familiar with these new developments that show the United States government deliberately framed up two workers and tried to put them to death when its agents were fully aware of their innocence.

Dedham, Mass., where this historic labor case is being enacted, that ought to shake the very foundations of capitalism in this country, dates back in American colonial history nearly three centuries to 1635. According to the census of 1900 its population totalled 7,467 with less than one-third, or 2,186 foreign-born.

A free school, one of the first in America to be supported by direct taxation was established in Dedham in 1645. It did not get a public library, however, until 1854. It is not the typical New England factory town, with a huge foreign-born population, but contents itself with the manufacture on a small scale of carpets, handkerchiefs and woolen goods.

The atmosphere here is saturated with the familiarly reactionary New England pride, bitterly hostile to foreigners.

Unlike every other court room I have ever been in, this Dedham courtroom in the Norfolk county court house has a great steel cage to the right of the judge's chair, the kind of cage that is used to house animals in the zoo. It is painted a sickly yellow. The judge, a diminutive specimen of humanity, full of self-assurance and self-importance, struts about in a flowing black robe that drags the floor as he walks. Not a very imposing hangman of the working class.

It was into this atmosphere that the two Italian workers, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, were brought six years ago to fight for their lives, confined like wild animals in the courtroom cage, while guards and militiaman, heavily armed, hovered everywhere about during the entire trial that resulted in their conviction and sentence to death. It was a drama well staged by the ruling class. During the hearings two weeks ago Sacco and Vanzetti were not in the courtroom. The cage was empty.

* * *

But the last act has not yet been played. The red-baiting of the year 1920, has passed to a very great extent and America's workers should now be able to consider the Sacco-Vanzetti case without prejudice. Labor is in a better position now than ever before to take up the fight for Sacco-Vanzetti as its fight. For it is the struggle of the American working class against the American capitalist class and its lackey, the capitalist government. The 63 affidavits put American capitalism on trial. In the minds of America's workers the capitalist government must be declared "Guilty!"

MEET PAYMENTS, SAYS SCHURMAN

U. S. Ambassador Notes Franco-German Amity

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Germany will meet her reparations payment of 1,500,000,000 marks just as she paid to the last cent the 1,320,000,000 marks during the year just closed, Jacob Gould Schurman, American ambassador to Berlin, predicted today following a call on President Coolidge. The ambassador is taking a two months' vacation in this country.

Schurman reported conditions in Germany to be excellent. The only real problem, he said, is the 1,500,000 of unemployed.

The most amazing thing, the ambassador said, is the change in the relations between Germany and France. Where fifteen months ago a bitter and open hatred existed between the two countries, he said this has been now virtually wiped out.

DISTRICT, THIRD, LAUNCHES BIG DRIVE TO KEEP THE DAILY WORKER

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10.—(Special to The Daily Worker)—The Political Committee of District 3 at its last meeting of September 1 gave careful consideration to the crisis of The DAILY WORKER, and took immediate steps to raise the quota of $5,000.

The critical condition of The DAILY WORKER was reported by Acting District Organizer Bell to the Baltimore membership meeting on Sunday, September 12. The comrades responded enthusiastically pledging themselves to raise the sum of $500.

To Your District on Campaign.

A short tour has been arranged for Comrade Bell and DAILY WORKER Agent Spivack covering the following cities:

September 26—Baltimore, Md.
October 1—Washington, D. C.
October 3—Richmond, Va.
October 3—Norfolk, Va.
October 4—Trenton, N. J.
Philadelphia to Raise $2,000.

The campaign was launched in Philadelphia thru a general functionaries' meeting followed by section membership meetings held during the past week. In all cases the comrades responded loyally to the appeal of the party to keep The DAILY WORKER. Not a single member which attended the meetings failed to make his contribution. Various plans were devised at the section meeting to assure the reaching of the quota set by each section meeting. In spite of the numerous local difficulties which the comrades have to face, they are determined to oversubscribe their quota.

The district organization will raise $500 thru the arrangement of a bazaar and thru the soliciting of funds among the numerous sympathizers and friends of the movement.

Sections Act.

The past weeks the sections met with the following results.

Section 1—Has set for itself a quota of $500 and immediately contributed in cash and pledges $121.00. A Save The DAILY WORKER affair has been arranged for Saturday, Oct. 23, at 1601 S. Camac street.

BOSTON WORKERS' SCHOOL TO OPEN WITH MANY CLASSES ON OCTOBER 1

BY HARRY J. CANTER.

The Workers School of Boston begins its second season on Oct. 1, with classes in various subjects of interest to those in the labor movement. The school aims to make better fighters of these workers, to fit them for more effective participation in the class struggle.

English classes, which have proved so popular and interesting in the past year will be conducted in many centers in the district. These classes will take up reading and writing working class English, and will also include training in American citizenship. The instructors are Al Bloch, Phyllis Fanigston, Lillian Futran, Joseph Derman, ele. A group of workers in any city may organize a class and a teacher will be secured.

The course in the Fundamentals of Communism is a basic course essential for every party member. Comrades cannot qualify for other classes until they have completed this fundamental course. Lewis Works will instruct this class.

Imperialism, a study of the final stage of capitalism, will trace the development of finance-capitalism, and will pay special attention of the part played by the United States in the fight for world domination. Harry J. Canter will conduct.

Students qualified to take advanced course in the theory of our movement should attend the class given by Max Lerner on Marxism. This will take up the study of economics, historical materialism, etc., based on the works of Marx, Engels, Lenin, Bukharin and other Communist classics.

Trade Union Work.

Comrades active in the trade unions particularly will welcome the class on Theory and Practice of Trade Union Work, conducted by H. S. Bloomfield. Actual problems arising in the trade union struggle will be analyzed in the course of study. Only party and league members are eligible.

Comrade Bert Miller, district organizer of the party, will conduct a class in Party Theory and Practice which will take up various stages and phases in the development of the Communist movement based largely on the history of the Russian and German parties.

Yiddish Class.

A class in the Fundamentals will be conducted in Yiddish by Comrade L. E. Clark and other language classes as well as classes in Worker Correspondence, Literature and ido will be conducted where registration warrants.

Registration for all classes is going on now and party members are urged to enroll at once and bring along their non-party fellow workers. The fee for each class is $2.00.

Stage Play to Aid Daily Worker Drive

One of the most attractive features of the affair which local Chicago has arranged for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER on October 24th at Douglas Park Auditorium, will be the play by Elmer Rice entitled, "The Adding Machine."

This was given several seasons ago on Broadway and scored a great hit with the intelligent theater-goers of New York. The play deals with a certain Mr. Zero, a bookkeeper who, when his labor power is replaced by an adding machine, ups and kills his boss, is sent to trial and condemned to death. The rest of the play deals with his adventures in heaven and hell.

The Studio Players, who have already given it several times in their little theater at 826 N. Clark St., consider it one of their best presentations.

In addition to the play, a banquet will be served at 7 p. m. and dancing will begin at 9 p. m. There will be a charge of 50c. for the play, and the banquet and dancing additional.

COMPENSATION LAW IS URGED

Various Plutes Favor Longer Hours

Legislative means for improving the operation of the Workmen's compensation act were suggested by Miss Frances Perkins to the New York State Industrial Survey Commission at its session in the Bar Association Building.

More Rosy Cheeks.

Miss Perkins told of the health of young women under the old regulation of 60 hours a week as compared with the present law allowing but 54 hours a week. She declared that the six hours meant more red cheeks, a greater interest in work and more time for leisure. She added that when the law provided for a 48-hour week there would still be greater joys and greater production.

Urges Amendments.

To increase the value of the act Miss Perkins urged several amendments. She asked that the limit of $3,500 for a temporary total disability be increased to $5,000; that the board of review be empowered to act on the reclassification of disabilities; that the section governing the review of awards be amended to give to the reviewing board power to take into consideration factors other than wages in deciding the final award; that the rules of evidence and procedure be relaxed to permit the admission of hearsay evidence when obtained from a reliable source, and that the uninsured employer and insurance company be obliged to pay into the rehabilitation fund.

Textile Berons' Alibi.

Mr. Smith said that in New York his textile firm found it impossible to compete with the mills in South Carolina and that in Massachusetts the mills were working only thirty hours a week while in South Carolina they were allowed to permit the addition of hearsay evidence when obtained from a reliable source, and that the uninsured employer and insurance company be obliged to pay into the rehabilitation fund.

Textile Berons' Alibi.

Mr. Smith said that in New York his textile firm found it impossible to compete with the mills in South Carolina and that in Massachusetts the mills were working only thirty hours a week while in South Carolina they were allowed to work 55 hours. On an average of sixty-five hours a week. This, he said, permitted the mills of South Carolina to operate at a cost so much lower than in either New York or Massachusetts that it would be only a question of time when the mills in Massachusetts would be forced to close down. He declared that the eight-hour day would bring about a bad economic condition as compared with other states.

Peter Fer Long Hours.

Mr. Sallabury said that three companies in New York state provided 35 per cent of the total pottery output of the country. This applied mainly to dishes. About 35 per cent of the employes were women and most of them worked on a piece basis. He declared that the adoption of a forty-eight-hour week would disrupt the present system employed in these places and be a slight hardship on the employer.

Missouri Compensation Law Up for Referendum

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 29. — (FP) — Whether Missouri labor is to have the protection of a workmens' compensation law depends upon the result of a referendum in the general election, Nov. 2, the last legislature passed a law which has been jointly approved by the Missouri State Federation of Labor and the employers' organizations.

The measure was suspended pending a referendum, largely the work of professional damage suit attorneys whose business is at stake, President Green, of the A. F. of L., has issued an appeal for ratification of the law. Missouri is the only important industrial state without a compensation law.

All Fire Fighters Get Raise

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Every member of the Intl. Assn. of Fire Fighters —some 20,000 in all—has secured a wage increase which averages $1000 a year since the international was formed in 1918. This is the high light in the annual report to be presented to its convention which opens Oct. 4 in Philadelphia. In the fire departments that have been unionized the personnel has been increased from 20 to 80% in the same period as a means of reducing long hours on duty.

COOPERATION IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR Comrade Editor: — We say [illegible] get down over. We succeed! Not as much as always doing as we planned, but in doing something! We lay a better foundation for a better attempt.

In The DAILY WORKER issues of August 9, 10, 12, and 16, you published the beginnings of my efforts to establish delivery routes in Chicago by means of the house canvassing method for "serve" subscribers. My work in this locality is about finished and a detailed report will be left with the city circulation department.

The results are: About 2,500 families canvassed, 600 either not seen at all, or refused an interview; 600 purchased one or more copies; 310 made a trial order; 40 of these became permanent readers as long as weekly collection and daily delivery could be continued; 30 of these became subscribers by paying a subscription in advance, with mail delivery. The rest were practically non-committal.

The difficulties and defects are: Lack of canvassers to cover our working class residential areas. Lack of boys, or others, to deliver routes. One must travel four miles to deliver 40 papers; also, the Saturday collection is a considerable chore.

Lessons: The canvassing must be done. Subscriptions must be taken for mail delivery. Deliveries are found, not made in process of canvass. The paper's message, however, in some form, must be sold to everyone in every home. One copy of the paper, a specially prepared handbook, etc.

A letter from The DAILY WORKER to prospective subscribers must be invariably used. A record, house by house, must be kept. Back calls and special trips must be avoided; also arguments and explanations. Let the literature and economic circumstances do that. Do not bother about bread and butter for yourself. I have followed this work all my life and never have been unreasonably hungry or uncomfortable. More workers on this job! Especially those who cannot function in shop nuclei.

It is my intention to carry on this work in Oakland, California, including San Francisco and the Bay district. Other comrades and myself expect to have Organizers for San Francisco and Oakland by Nov. 1.

In California all political parties, except the old parties, are practically prohibited. The petitions required for new parties are not only large, but hedged about by supposedly impossible requirements. A big political campaign will be on there in 1928. By beginning now we can force a new party on the ballot in 1928. The same canvass that gets readers for The DAILY WORKER can prepare the minds of thousands for signing our petitions. Each party canvassed can be told about this and their minds prepared so that they will register Farmer-Labor. Then we will know where these people are and the regular canvassing force already functioning, with others who come to life only in campaigns, can quickly prepare any size of petition the "smart alex" politicians may require.

TO prospective canvassers, say: Where, let me say that there is a living, even a good living, in this work for anyone who will select an area in any working class district and stick to it. The income depends upon finding those who are willing to repeatedly renew their subscriptions. At first a lot of canvassing is necessary. The income will be small, it being necessary to sell something in addition to the paper to piece out. As time passes, the job of canvassing will decrease and that of collecting will increase until a satisfactory means of employment and income will be established.

A canvasser now for every 20,000 workers in California.

A monster political petition for California in 1928.

Ten thousand DAILY WORKER subscribers in California by 1928.

Every other state in proportion.

Do it now!

Fraternally, P. B. Cowdery.

Make it a weekly habit.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

A POLICY FOR LABOR SPORTS.

IN spite of the tremendous development and popularity of sports in this country, in spite of the great extent to which the bosses use sports to control the thoughts and actions of the workers, there is, as yet, no mass opposition sports' movement organized by the workers. We have of course a few workers' sports groups, but these are scattered by and composed of foreign speaking workers—and cannot, yet, be said to constitute in American workers' sports movement.

What are the main reasons why no workers' sports movement has been developed in America, the classic land of sports and athletics? The reasons are three-fold. The first and most important is of course that the American working class is very backward politically, it is still permeated to a large extent with class collaboration-ist ideology.

The second is that the bosses have thoroly organized sports, have obtained almost a complete monopoly on the sports activities of the workers, has trained them to come to the capitalist controlled gymnasiums, fields and organizations.

The third is that the class-conscious section of the workers and workers' athletes have paid entirely too little attention to the problem. It is especially with the last factor that we must deal.

In the past the workers' sports movement has made the mistake of being too narrow in its work, of confining the sports organization only to the advanced workers. This is a fatal mistake. We do not organize the sports movement only for class conscious workers; we organize it to help make workers class conscious. In the past the work was done in jerks; it started and it stopped. The building of the workers' sports movement demands system, clarity and a correct policy. These are some of the points which should be stressed in all workers' sports organizations.

Try to Bar Children of Chinese from the Schools of Oakland

OAKLAND, Sept. 29.—Agitation for segregation of Chinese in Oakland schools was under way here today. Already parents of 75 white pupils have kept their children away from the public schools until school authorities remove Chinese students from the institution.

Superintendent of Schools Fred M. Hunter declared that he had no intention of segregating the Chinese pupils and said that if the children were not sent back to school prosecution under the compulsory education law will follow.

"CIVILIAN DRILL" FOR N. Y. COLLEGE STUDENTS REPLACES ARMY COURSE

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Civilian drill is the answer of the New York City College authorities to last year's student protest against compulsory military training. The new course, tarmed by one professor as a "scientific experiment," is an alternative for entering students to military training under supervision of army officers. Upper classman who have already had military training must finish, but freshman may take their choice.

SAYS ENGLISH MUZZLED WOMEN

General Council Used Large Steam-Roller

BOURNEMOUTH, England, Sept. 12.—(By Mail.)—Indignation against the conduct of the reactionary trade union bureaucracy at the Trade Union Congress continues to grow.

Ellen Wilkinson, former member of the Communist Party, who quit that organization because she thought its methods were not conducive to quick success in revolutionizing the masses, is bitter in her arraignment of the leaders who betrayed the general strike and who are now proving to Miss Wilkinson's satisfaction, that there is nothing to expect from them except further betrayal. Miss Wilkinson is probably learning that the Communist policy is the shortest cut to the revolution after all.

In an interview to a correspondent of the Sunday Worker, Miss Wilkinson has the following to say on the machine methods used by Margaret Bondfield to still the voices of the delegates who participated in the women's conference. She said in part:

Miss Bondfield's Promise.

"The General Council having almost completely steam-rollered the Trades Union Congress, tried similar machine methods on the women's conference.

"Only the promise of the chairman, Margaret Bondfield, that there would be no similar tactics next year prevented the moving of the adjournment of the conference before it had really begun business.

"The women delegates have been pressing for a conference at which there could be discussion on the appalling fall in women's trade union membership, and on the general apathy among working women.

Not a Rival Congress.

"They had made it clear that they did not want any kind of 'rival' conference in which to discuss things that ought really to be dealt with on the floor of congress itself. The General Council seemed to think that it was only under the most careful shepherding that the women delegates could be allowed to come together at all.

"Of the four resolutions, one was a pious expression of hope that some day women would be organized; the second made provision for the wives of trade unionists, while the third dealt with education in trade unionism for the children. The fourth dealt with family allowances, a matter surely more suitable for the Women's Co-operative Guild or the women's sections of the labor party.

Futile Resolutions.

"Not one resolution concerned any issue in which the unmerried factory girl, the business girl, or the wage-earning woman is primarily interested. No mention was made of the appalling conditions under which so many single girls have to exist today. As the this was not sufficient, of the five speakers officially appointed by congress, only one was a woman.

"The women made their protest. They are willing to make allowences for a first attempt, but it is to be hoped that next year the General Council will realize that the women want to get their teeth into this special problem of organizing women into the unions, and the treatment they receive when they get there. They want a whole day for the job, and they want the Council to make a special point to the unions with women members that women delegates should be appointed. At this conference only 33 unions out of 75 who were eligible sent delegates at all, and of these 35 were men and 44 women.

"Miss Horan, the delegate from the General Workers, in the course of her excellent speech said that the General Council must get away from the idea of thinking that women only wanted to be amused. They wanted a serious conference not a 'happy evening for the poor.'

"And her remarks summed up accurately the opinion of most of the women delegates.

"Next year the women delegates to the T. U. C. will insist on something radically different from this unsatisfactory effort."

Mortgage China's Age Old Treasures to Aid Reactionary Generals

(Special to The Federated Press.)

TIENTSIN, China, Sept. 29. — The recently reorganized committee, which has the custody of the museum and palace effects of the former emperor at Peking, is accused of having negotiated a $30,000,000 loan with Japanese bankers, the invaluable national relics and treasures of the Manchu palace being the security. The money will be used to prosecute the campaign against the Kuomintang.

Both Chang Tso-lin and Wu Pei Fu have approved the terms of the loan. Chang Tso-lin is known to favor either the restoration of the Boy Emperor Hsuan Tung, who has been living since he fled from Peking several years ago in the British settlement here, or taking that power into his own hands. Wu Pei Fu is stated to have opposed the exhibition, but the plan for funds previously his scruples.

Air

MADRID, Sept. 28.—General Primo de Rivera, Spanish dictator, claims to be "in an emphatic period" of his life, in an interview published in La Nacion that he is "living at full pressure."

He added, however, that he feels it necessary to continue in power for perhaps three more years until the national spectacle works out the national reconstruction and revises the election laws, and until it produces a new group of men from whom the king can choose a government.

Admits He's a Fine Fellow.

I hope then to continue my military career and never again mix in politics, he said. "I am not vain, nor despotic, and realize my limitations. I also realize that I have had divine aid. I shall be satisfied if I can resign with the esteem of my compatriots."

BRITISH UNION LEADER SPEAKS TO CHICAGOANS

Amsterdam Delegation Visits Metal Trades

A large delegation representing the Amsterdam International Federation of Metal Workers, comprising its president and secretary, is in this country, making a tour of several cities prior to a visit to the convention of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, it is learned from the delegates' stop in Chicago.

Brownlie Speaks.

While here, the Chicago Metal Trades Council tendered the delegation a banquet at the Palmer House, at which J. T. Brownlie of England, president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, spoke.

Brownlie expressed a belief that present society is built on a wrong basis. He revealed to American workers to join the Amsterdam federation and make common cause with European workers against an "almost useless class whose mission and object is profit."

Against Profit Class.

"This useless and dissipated minority class is destroying humanity and making cogs of the workers," the speaker said, "and we would refuse to be a party to its continuance.

Referring to the intense speed up of the American workers, Brownlie pointed out that its relatively inefficient wage returns left no margin for "the evenings of life of the worker."

"Capital," he said, "knows no country or creed, but only profit." "Organize into one group with one objective," was Brownlie's advice.

The delegation is declining to state its specific mission in the United States, but it is believed that the commission to visit the convention of the Metal Trades Department.

Australia Trying to Introduce Speed-Up; Labor Unions Oppose

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

MELBOURNE, Aus., (By Mail.)—The Australian federal government has decided to send to the United States a mission of employers and employees to investigate the "reasons why American manufacturers can pay high wages and maintain the enormous output of their factories." The mission has been urged by the employers who are itching to introduce American methods—speeding-up, bonus payments, piece work, etc. —into Australian factories.

Altho the government will doubtless succeed in inducing some union representatives of the Sam Gompers' type to "represent" the workers on the mission, the rank and file of the workers in Australia are strongly opposed to the mission being sent to the United States. They say they are already well informed regarding the tricks resorted to by the American factory owners to speed up production and do not need any further education in that direction.

Australian workers are determined that on no account will they allow speeding-up, piece work or bonus systems to operate in Australia. They hold that they give their employers fair returns for the wages they receive and do not intend to increase production for the mere purpose of adding to the profits of wealthy corporations.

Give More to Kaiser's Family Than He Owned; To Get $250,000,000

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—A complete settlement has been reached between a representative of the Prussian state and the Hohenzollern family, according to Leipsic newspapers, whereby the former kaiser, crown prince and their families will get 1,000,000,000 gold marks (about $250,000,000) for a quit-claim against Germany.

Before the war the former kaiser's fortune was estimated at $125,000,000. It is said the former family collateral his claims to many castles.

ARMED FORCE IN CHINA BIG

$3,000,000 a Month Is Boast of Editor

By JAMES H. DOLSEN.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 29. — Radicals have repeatedly charged that the navies of the Great Powers are weapons employed to protect the capitalists of one nation in their exploitation of the people of another country, particularly of the so-called "backward" lands. This contention is again proven correct by an editorial in the Orient, a Shanghai journal published "in the interests of the United States Military and Naval Forces." The statement emphasizes the great stake which traders in the Orient, Europeans as well as Americans, have in the continued presence in those waters of such great fleets.

Fleet Insures Imperialist Profits.

"Did you ever hear of an insurance company that paid you a nice fat monthly premium for the privilege of insuring you?" is the editor's opening remark.

"That is a new light in which Far Eastern merchants and businessmen might well regard the American defense forces in the Orient," he continues.

$6,000,000 a Month.

"Three million of Uncle Sam's good gold dollars every one of the twelve months in the year!

"Aside from giving American interests out here better protection than is afforded by the most liberal insurance policy ever written in that they prevent losses whereas the insurance companies only make good on them, this is the monthly premium paid out by the three arms of the service in the Far East.

How it Is Spent.

"Official estimates just gathered by The Orient place the combined payrolls of the Asiatic Fleet, Legation Guards, 15th Infantry (at Tientsin), and the army contingents in the Philippines at $2,000,000 a month, virtually all of which is spent right here where it is paid out." He declares there are "approximately 6,900 officers and men in the Asiatic fleet, with slightly more than that many in the Philippine detachments, more than 1,000 at Tientsin, and another 300 at Peking."

"The monthly payroll of the active vessels of the Asiatic Fleet, according to these figures, is about $612,000 (gold) monthly. In addition to this huge amount there are heavy payrolls handed out monthly at Cavite and Olongapo (naval bases in the Philippines), where hundreds of men are employed, many of them skilled mechanics drawing top wages, together with crews of yard craft and other auxiliary vessels. The army payrolls account for the tremendous balance, but in the total there has not been included the wages of the officers and men of either the Philippine Scouts or the Philippine Constabulary, which would carry Uncle Sam's military payroll in the Orient much higher still.

Benefits Business.

"There is hardly a class of businessman along the China coast, in the up-river cities, in Japan, or in the Philippines which does not benefit directly or indirectly and drew his share of this big 'premium.'"

Besides the payroll, the American Asiatic fleet expends monthly with ships chandlers and provision merchants of the Orient $200,000 (gold) and turns over to oil companies $600,000 (gold) for fuel oil. In addition to all the above, the United States navy department is now preparing to start the construction at the Kiangnan Dock & Engineering company, at Shanghai, of six new gunboats for the Yangtze patrol at a cost of no less than $4,200,000 (gold)."

They All Do It.

What is true of the American fleet in the Orient is similarly true of the British and the Japanese fleets. The business of supplying the thousands of sailors thus employed with the necessities of life and the other locally supplied needs of such armadas is an enormously profitable capitalist enterprise. The groups engaged in such trade are a powerful reinforcement to the mighty international financial magnates whose needs dictate the policies of America, Great Britain and Japan in such countries as China.

Concessions in China Traded for Ammunition to Reactionary Armies

(Special to The Federated Press.)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 29. — According to a French wireless reported by the Reuter news service, a Hemburg firm has obtained a concession for the exploitation of lead and antimony mines in China in return for deliveries of arms and ammunition.

Two Killed in Plane Crash.

STOCKTON, Cal., Sept. 29.—Two aviators were burned to death near here today when their airplane collapsed 100 feet in the air and burst into flames the minute it struck the ground.

The dead: Captain William Gregg, 44, world war veteran, and Carl Cody, 20-year-old youth of Linden, near Stockton.

ILLEGAL ARMS SHIPMENTS TO CHINESE REACTION

(Special to The Federated Press)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 28. — Charges of conspiracy to sell munitions of war to Chinese have been dismissed in a hearing before Commissioner Lurton of the United States Court for China on the ground that such traffic is no violation of the District of Columbia criminal code, to which Americans residing in China are subject. J. W. Mahoney, a star on the local baseball team, and R. Barrett, defendants, have been released.

Among the provisions agreed upon at the Washington Conference in 1922, was one binding the nine nations there represented to place their official ban on exporting arms to China. By the commissioner's decision the situation has been created whereby it is perfectly legal for Americans residing in China to supply the militarists with munitions at the same time that the American government is officially pledged to do its best to prevent such shipments to China.

GERMAN PRESS HITS POINCARE ON WAR GUILT

Tries to Cover Up His Own War Making

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—While government officialdom today maintains a calm attitude toward Premier Poincaire's outbursts on the subject of Germany's war guilt, the entire German press continues its attacks on M. Poincaire. The papers accuse him of reinjecting a spirit of hatred and bitterness into Franco-German relations at a moment when Foreign Ministers Briand and Stresseman are trying to lay the foundation for a lasting peace.

The general view is that M. Poincaire will be unable to wreck the Franco-German understanding, especially since France will need Germany's support to stabilize French finances.

Charge Covers His Own Guilt.

The democratic organ Berliner Tageblatt says: "M. Poincare is always troubled by bad dreams. He talks about war guilt even in his sleep. The French premier, who incessantly reverts to the same charge against Germany, creates the impression that he is actually trying to defend himself against his own guilt. It would be better if the accomplices of the war were not poisoned by this talk of vengeance."

Poincare One War Conspirator.

Herr Stresseman's mouthpiece, Tageliche Rundschau, says: "Poincare has every reason to keep quiet regarding the question of war guilt, since he personally was one of the conspirators who caused the war. But Franco-German conciliation will march onward despite M. Poincaire's speeches."

The moderate nationalist organ, Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, says: "M. Poincaire should co-operate with Germany rather than with Wall Street, whose mentality is a riddle to him. The imbecile old Adam is vainly trying to save his face."

To All Trade Unions and Workingclass Organizations

To All Workers

Dear Sirs and Brothers:

TODAY there is only one out-and-out, aggressive and militant working class daily in the English language in the United States—a country with more than thirty millions of workers. This is The DAILY WORKER.

Being part of the American labor movement, you can readily see the burning need for such a paper as The DAILY WORKER—a daily which unceasingly and fearlessly fights for the workers in every city of the land and in every struggle of the oppressed and exploited. Race, creed, color, nationality don't count one bit with The DAILY WORKER when there is to be a call to action or a mobilization for a fight against the capitalist class anywhere and at any time.

You know that it costs piles of money to get out a daily paper and to keep it going. The American employing class spends nearly a billion dollars year in and year out only thru the subsidy of advertising to keep its press going full speed against the working people and the impoverished farming masses. The eleven thousand American millionaires are doing more than their bit pouring out many millions in many other ways to keep their press on the job fighting the workers.

Of course, you know that THE WORKERS MUST BUILD AND HAVE A POWERFUL PRESS OF THEIR OWN. But this is a hard job. It costs very much. And yet we cannot possibly get along well without a mighty working class press to battle courageously and unflinchingly for the interests and demands of the exploited masses. THIS IS EXACTLY WHAT THE DAILY WORKER HAS BEEN DOING FROM THE VERY FIRST DAY OF ITS EXISTENCE

NOW THE DAILY WORKER IS UP AGAINST IT. We are having a very hard time to keep going. We have no advertising revenue from the bosses and bankers or any other sort of subsidy from the exploiters of labor. We will continue publication only if YOU say so! The DAILY WORKER IS YOUR PAPER. Invest in it. KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

If you will ask for references, we will not be able to give you the same ones that the New York Times or World, or the Chicago Tribune, or the Los Angeles Times, or any of the other hundreds of prosperous employing class dailies will give you. Not a single banking house, not a single broker on "the street," not a single manufacturing corporation in the whole country will tell you to put your money in an investment to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

The best we can do in giving you proof of our reliability is to refer you to hundreds of labor unions and working class organizations and thousands of exploited workers thruout the country.

If you want to know why YOU should support The DAILY WORKER and make an immediate contribution, as best you can, to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER, then ask:

1. The thousands of heroic striking textile workers in Passaic.
2. The thousands of victorious fur workers in New York City.
3. The thousands of garment workers bravely battling against vicious injunctions.
4. The growing progressive forces fighting to save the Miners' Union.
5. The scores of thousands of badly underpaid workers in the rubber factories in Akron, in the automobile plants in Detroit, in the steel mills in Pittsburgh and Gary.
6. The thousands of workers striving to build an American labor party.
7. The many thousands of persecuted foreign-born workers.
8. The increasing thousands of fearless fighters for the defense of the workers' right to the freedom of speech, press, assembly and organization.
9. The scores of thousands of progressive and left wing workers in the trade union movement.
10. The hundreds of thousands striving for the establishment of a workers' and farmers' republic and the abolition of capitalism in the United States

HORWITZ FINDS JOBS SCANTY IN A. MELLON'S CITY

But Thinks Pittsburgh's Slaves Awakening

By JOHN HURWITZ
(Worker Correspondent)

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 28.—Signs of the much vaunted Coolidge-Mellon prosperity seem to be completely lacking in this city, the home and hellwich of Andy Mellon. The only jobs I have found open in the slave market all week have been railroad construction jobs which pay the very high sum of 40 cents an hour for the hardest kind of pick and shovel work. Out of such wages as these the men are expected to pay from a dollar and a half to two dollars a day for lodging which in these camps are of the most primitive kind usually consisting of condemned box cars for sleeping quarters and the food served consists of three different varieties three times a day.

Coffee and Beans.

Namely the following: beans, bread and coffee for breakfast; bread, coffee and beans for dinner, and coffee, beans and bread for supper, seven days a week. In addition to that they are forced to buy all their clothing and other supplies from a company agent who charges anywhere from 10 to 300 per cent higher than the regular price for his wares. Nevertheless in spite of this, the agencies do not fail to get recruits as a great many are utterly destitute and will grasp at any straw which gives hope of enabling them to keep life in their bodies.

White and Colored.

A significant feature of these agencies is that they will only hire whits or colored man separately. Thus the Wabash Railroad advertises for whites in one agency and for colored in another. This shows that the railroads are keeping up their policy of keeping the whits and colored workers separated and therefore mutually misunderstanding, distrustful and to a certain extent hostile to each other. As is bitterly remembered by a great many railwaymen it was this attitude together with the criminal stupidity of the union officials, which had a great deal to do with the failure of the shopmens' strike of 1922. However a hopeful sign was that both white and colored workers commented upon this fact and seemed to have a fairly clear viewpoint of its intent.

UNSAFE BRIDGE SENDS LOGGERS TO THE GRAVE

Another Bridge Used Menaces Other Men

By a Worker Correspondent.

BAYVIEW, Wash., Sept. 29.—Recently at the English Logging Camp, 25 miles south of Mount Vernon, a logging train crossing a bridge forty feet high went down into the gully when the bridge collapsed.

The Price of Lumber Trust Profit.

The fireman was crushed against the boiler and scalded to death. The engineer was so badly hurt that he is near death. The two brakemen jumped, one caught a broken rail and pulled himself up to safety, the other caught hold of a timber, but was struck by a flying tie and fell forty feet onto the rocks below and was badly injured.

The "accident" was preventable. The bridge had been built of unpeeled hemlock and was considered unsafe two years ago as the timbers were as rotten as they could be and still stand up.

Another Slaughter Prepared.

Another bridge near the same camp 140 feet long is nearly as bad and yet trains run over it daily and haul a mixed train of "mulligan cars"—the cars the men ride to and from work on, and logs on the same trains.

This is surely preparing another "accidental" slaughter of workers. But life of the workers is cheap under capitalism.

RESERVISTS IN GRAND POW-WOW OVER COMMUNISM

Arm Chair Soldiers Discuss "Menace"

By MAX COHEN
(Worker Correspondent)

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 29.—"Reserve Officers Study Communism" was the headline in the local press. This sounded rather interesting, as did the news item following it. It went something like this—"Major Arthur Boettcher, executive officer of the 343rd infantry reserve, also in charge of organized reserve corps activities in this district, and Captain L. C. Ives will address tonight's meeting of the Reserve Officer's Association in the Federal Building at 7:30 o'clock."

The writer managed to get hold of the prepared speech of one officer, the main speaker. The "study" proved to be nothing but nonsence about "the enemy trying to eliminate the military" and an exhortation to 100 per cent patriotism. The men were urged to read "Ye Shall Know the Truth" by Fred Marvin, "Reds in America" by R. M. Whitney and the New York Commercial, in order to rouse them to fury against the "pacifists" and "reds."

Against Gas.

Listen to this: "Their point of attack is the chemical warfare service. There are two purposes for first attacking the chemical service. The enemy fears the gas division more than anything else (by the enemy, I mean the Reds). THEY CAN PULL NONE OF THEIR TRAITOROUS DIRTY TRICKS AS LONG AS THE GAS DIVISION FUNCTIONS. AS YOU MEN KNOW. It is the elimination of the chemical warfare service (poisoned gas) as they so falsely and cunningly state, that is the first step in the final elimination."

"They have fomented dissension, controversy and ill-feeling in the various divisions of the army. All this has been brot to pass by the combined drive of Russia and her confederates, the pacifists in the U. S. A."

Denver Labor Back of Foreign-Born Protection Fight

By LEE W. LANG,
Worker Correspondent.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 29.—On Friday evening, Sept. 17, a large crowd of workers and sympathisers met at Waiters' Hall to organize a Council for the Protection of Foreign-Born Workers.

James A. Ayres called the meeting to order. He also read a number of bills pending before congress, which, if enacted into law, will mean the persecution of foreign born workers. Quite a number present made short talks on the necessity of organizing for the protection of foreign-born workers.

Delegates were present representing labor organizations and a delegation representing the Denver Trades Assembly. Mary Krasich was elected temporary secretary. It was decided to call a mass meeting for Sunday evening, Oct. 3, at which time permanent officers will be elected and the organization perfected.

N. Y. Pressmen's Union Head Pledges Support to Passaic Strikers

By a Worker Correspondent.

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 29. — "You are bound to win if you continue to exercise such magnificent solidarity," were the words of greeting Philip Umstadter, president of Pressmen's Union No. 51 of New York, brot the Passaic strikers last night. Umstadter who is the leader of 9,500 progressive printers affiliated with the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union of North America and who is secretary of the Interstate Pressroom Council, pledged further financial support from his union and praised the textile strikers for their good sense in affiliating with the American Federation of Labor.

Umstadter, who led the fight for the 44-hour week in New York told the workers of the great sacrifices made in the formative period of his union and how the workers had won in spite of obstacles similar to those now faced by the Passaic textile strikers.

A. F. OF L. CATHOLIC LEADERS SIDE WITH CATHOLICS AGAINST MEXICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

ARTICLE II.
(By a Special Correspondent.)

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 28.—President William Green is expected to adopt a "middle-of-the-road," "safe and sane" course when the catholic attack on Mexico comes before the convention of the A. F. of L. in Detroit next month.

He does not want to displease Matthew Woll and his catholic aides. Neither does he care to alienate those of other religions. He is in the difficult position of also trying to hold the support of the various labor organizations of Latin-American countries which make up the Pan-American Federation of Labor. He is expected to declare his support of the Mexican Federation of Labor (the C. R. O. M.) as a labor union, without endorsation or condemnation of its attitude toward clericalism. In other words, to veil the desertion of Mexican labor in so pathetic terms better than even Woll advises.

Another Way of Saying It.

In an editorial in the current issue of the American Federationist, the A. F. of L.'s official publication, he declares the A. F. of L. holds aloof from the religious attitude of the Mexican labor movement, while supporting its economic activities.

John A. Ryan, priest, director of the social service department of the National Roman Catholic Welfare Conference and recognized expert of the Roman Catholic University of America, is supposed to counsel "diplomacy" and favor Woll's "left-handed compliment" instead of James Duncan's openly hostile attack on Mexican labor.

But another "labor expert" takes the platform.

Collins Gets a Living That Way.

He is supposed to favor a resolution which would certainly bring a break between the A. F. of L. and the various labor organizations of Mexico and all other Latin-American countries which form the Pan-American Federation of Labor.

This lay priest is none other than Peter Collins, the old-time enemy of socialist "free love."

For a score or more of years Collins has been the Don Quixote of the Knights of Columbus, that secret organization which would turn the world back into the days of the inquisition. He it was who made frequent tours of the country, counteracting fantastical socialist theories out of twisted quotations from Marx and other economists to poison the minds of the ignorant and mentally lazy.

Wrote Boomerang Resolution.

Now that the socialist party is dead he turns his attention to "Bolshevism" and "Communism."

Collins is credited with part authorship of the Mexican resolution adopted by the K. of C. convention held in Philadelphia recently. It called on the A. F. of L. to join in the war on Mexico as a land whose present rulers are steeped in the "poisonous doctrines of Soviet Russia."

Forced to Back Up.

This resolution, however, acted as a boomerang. Its denunciation was so vicious and exaggerated, its claims of "Mexican atrocities" so completely without foundation that the general reaction of non-catholics greatly modified the well-planned impression upon them created by the Eucharistic Congress. The church had to beat a hasty diplomatic retreat, as it has often been forced to do in its fight for temporal power.

Catholic Boosted Da La Huerta.

Collins, however, is undismayed. He passes as an authority on Mexico. His friend to be is Joseph Scott, counsel of a notorious priest by the name of Kelly, who is bishop of Omaha. Kelly put his name to a book championing Victoriano de la Huerta, a fascist reactionary and freebooter who supported the catholic hierarchy in Mexico in return for its backing of him as a contender for dictator.

CITY ENGINEERS BEHIND FIREMEN IN CLASS VIEWS

Pay Raise Mostly Goes to Highly Paid Chiefs

By CARL HAESSLER, Fed. Press.

While the engineers employed by the city of Chicago have learned the first lesson of solidarity, which is to join the union of their craft before they go on strike, they will lag behind the municipal firefighters in their attitude toward wage increases.

The Firemen's Association, Local No. 2, of the International Association of Firefighters, has been working several years for a flat increase of $300 a year to be applied to every one in the service. The $7200-a-year fireman would get his $300 raise just as soon and just as much as the $8000-a-year chief.

The engineers, after an unorganized walkout last year, pulled a successful organized strike this year and got the wage increases they demanded. The chief engineer and all the others joined the union, which is Local No. 14 of the draftsmen and technical engineers international, and all came in for the increases. But while the rank and filer averages a raise of $618 a year the chief engineer gets a $2000 raise to $10,000 a year and the chief water construction engineer gets a $2100 raise to $4500.

"The lowest paid man needs the greatest increase," the fireman say, but we compromise by asking for a flat raise all around."

$77 Passaic Children's Relief Collected at the U. C. W. H. Street Meet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The United Council of Workingclass Housewives has held a very successful open air demonstration for the Passaic strikers at 110th street and Fifth avenue, New York City.

Two thousand workers listened steadily for three hours to the speakers, in all over 5,000 workers attended this meeting. Women strikers and strikers' wives from Passaic attended and spoke. Other speakers were Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Fanny Warshavsky, Lucy Brauham and Kate Gitlow. Leona Smith acted as chairman.

The collection amounted to $77.

The U. C. W. H. has the task of maintaining two kitchens, where 1,000 children are being fed every day.

Send funds quickly to the United Council of Workingclass Housewives, 80 East 11th street, room 327, New York City.

Worried Over Butler's Prospects.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Cabinet members will join the administration speakers now working in Massachusetts to save Senator Butler from defeat at the hands of David I. Walsh, former governor.

NEGRO LEADER ARRESTED FOR UNION SPEECH

Rapped Negro Theaters for Open Shop Wage

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Richard B. Moore, Negro labor leader was arrested here for violating an injunction obtained by the Negro-owned Lafayette theater of Harlem, against speaking and agitating in the vicinity of the theater, for the organization of employes of the place. Thinking this was a little raw, the police later changed the charge to disorderly conduct.

Moore was denouncing the Negro theaters who pay scab wages to movie operators. The police first tried to break up the crowd by driving a police car recklessly into the people.

A protest meeting of various organizations under joint auspices was held in Liberty Hall on 135th street, to protest the arrest. Here Moore declared:

"The emancipation of the Negro may have been made with the Civil War, but we are not free yet. Harlem, once the Mecca of the New Negro, is being governed by the politicians, and not the working class as we are supposed to believe."

One Fireman Killed, 300 Girls Menaced in Big 2-11 Fire

One fireman is believed to have been burned to death in flames which temporarily trapped 25 others on the third floor of the blesing Allen B. Wrisley Company building here today, driving 300 girl employes of the American Railway Express Company, next door, to the street.

Chicago's dreaded 2-11 fire alarm was sounded as explosions of materials used in the manufacture of soap, for which the Wrisley building is used, threatened to send the flames into a paper warehouse nearby.

The fireman is believed to have been caught in an explosion on the third floor.

Shorter Work-Week Than 54 Hours Need of Working Women

NEW YORK, Sept. 29. — (FP) — More red cheeks for working women followed the adoption of the law reducing the maximum hours of work for women from 60 to 54 a week. Frances Perkins told the New York State Industrial Survey Commission at its session in the Bar Association Building.

But 54 hours was still far too long, she pointed out, urging a 48-hour law. The shorter work week was opposed by two capitalists—Henry G. Smith, president of the Art Metals Co. of Jamestown, and R. G. Salisbury, a [illegible] of pottery.

CHAPTER TEN

THE UNIVERSITY

Southern Pacific University had been launched by a California land baron as a Methodist Sunday school; its professors were all required to be Methodists, and it featured scores of religious courses. It had grown enormous upon the money of an oil king who had bribed half a dozen successive governments in Mexico and the United States, and being therefore in doubt as to the safety of his soul, gave large sums to professional soul-savers. Apparently uncertain which group had the right "dope," he gave equally to both Catholics and Protestants, and they used the money to denounce and undermine each other.

If Dad had known that his son was to be educated by the donations of Pete O'Reilly, he would have been at once amused and reassured. Not knowing about it, he paid a visit to the place, to see at least the outside of Bunny's future environment. The university had started far out in the suburbs of Angel City, but now the community had grown around it—which meant another large endowment, contributed by all rent-payers. Its buildings were elaborate, which impressed Dad; the fact that they were crowded with five thousand young men and women impressed him still more, for when Dad saw a great number of people doing the same thing, he concluded it was normal and safe.

Still more reassuring was his meeting with President Alonzo T. Cowper, D. D., Ph. D., L. L. D., For Dr. Cowper was in the business of interviewing dads; he had been selected by his millionaire trustees because of his skill in interviewing trustees. Dr. Cowper knew how a scholar could be at the same time dignified and deferential. Our Dad, being thoroughly money-conscious, read the doctor's mind as completely as if he had been inside it: if this founder of Ross Consolidated is pleased with the education his son receives, he may some day donate a building for the teaching of oil chemistry, or at least endow a chair of research in oil geology. That seemed to Dad exactly the proper attitude for a clergyman-educator to take; everybody in the world was in the business of getting money, and this was a very high-toned way.

Both Dad and Bunny took the university with the seriousness it expected. Neither of them doubted that money which had been gained by subsidizing political parties, and bribing legislators and executive officials and judges and juries—that such money could be turned at once into the highest type of culture, wholesale, by executive order. Bunny plunged into the excitements of courses and credits, he raced from English 5A to Spanish 2, and from there to Sociology 7 and Modern History 14, and accumulated a stack of text-books and listened to lectures, and wrote notes, and stowed in his mind a mass of dates and other details.

It took him a long time to realize that the "English" was cruelly dull, and that the young man who taught it was bored to tears by what he was doing; that the "Spanish" had a French accent, and that the professor was secretly patronizing bootleggers to console himself for having to live in what he considered a land of barbarians; that the "Sociology" was an elaborate structure of classifications, wholly artificial, devised by learned gentlemen in search of something to be learned about; and that the Modern History was taught from text-books which had undergone the scrutiny of thousands of sharp eyes, in order to spare the sensibilities of Mr. Pete O'Reilly, and avoid giving to any student the slightest hint concerning the forces which control the modern world.

II

With equal seriousness Bunny took the social life of this enormous institution. It was the far-off wonderful goal to which all high school students had looked; a few lucky ones had got there, and he was among them. His sister's chum had a brother who was a senior and belonged to the best possible fraternity; so the word was spoken, and Bunny was snapped up. They were a fast, free-spending crowd, aggressive, self-confident, slangy, voluble over the prospects of this year's track team. Bunny was a runner, they had a reason for welcoming him that was more presentable than his old man's oil.

Like all western universities, Southern Pacific was co-educational; so Bunny was exposed to the impact of a mass of femininity, the distilled and concentrated essence of allurement. Such swarms of graceful figures, trim ankles, dimpled white and brown arms, costumes the color of Brazilian butterflies; a kaleidescope of smiles and flashing eyes, a perpetual zephyr of soft scents, blown from lilac-bushes and jasmine vines and miles upon miles of California orange and lemon-orchards. Something was bound to happen to a young idealist in such an environment—especially when he had just spent the summer in a training-camp for men only.

Not all these bundles of feminine charm were accustomed to follow the market reports upon Ross Consolidated; yet somehow they managed to learn about the discoverer and heir-apparent of the Paradise oil field. Many sets of quick wits were concentrated upon him, he was invited to scores of dances and hundreds of fudge parties and thousands of motor rides. Then a strange rumor spread, here was an unimaginable phenomenon, a young millionaire who would not "pet!" One by one the champion spell-weavers of Southern Pacific wove in vain; before long there were odds posted, and quite a trade in bets as to who would be the first girl that Bunny Ross would kiss! Researches were conducted in the Beach City high school, and word came that the young oil prince carried in his bosom a broken heart; which, of course, made him a romantic figure, and added enormously to his prestige.

Democracy in Excelsis

The "peepul" rule in this great and glorious land.

They rule because they have the right of the franchise, that high and sacred privilege which makes freemen of serfs.

Nor is it necessary, say the soothsayers of American democracy, for the wide masses of the workers of farm and factory to have a party of their own. Their interests are fully protected and their spokesmen can be chosen without fear or favor thru the medium of the primary elections—that apotheosis of democracy of which only America can boast.

An investigation of the recent primary election in the twentieth ward of the city of Chicago has just been concluded.

The honest and thrifty citizenry of this ward acknowledge Morry Eller as their chieftain and they go to the polls in serried ranks to uphold the best traditions of men whose forefathers have fought entrenched tyranny and stormed the bulwarks of ancient privilege in many lands.

A stroll thru the twentieth ward furnishes ample evidence that the allegemen of Morry Eller love personal liberty. There are more saloons to the square block in twentieth ward than anywhere else in Chicago. One who knows Chicago will feel at once that no more needs to be said.

No dreary despotism for the twentieth ward. The right of franchise is inviolable and it was invoked with a vengeance. The investigation of the manner in which the bootleggers, gamblers, second-story workers, ladies of the evening, brothel keepers and other honest burghers of the twentieth ward, armed only with the franchise, hurled the invader back from the battlements, discloses the chief, hurled the invader back from the battlements, discloses the chief following facts and are now history engraved on the court records of Cook county.

They show that:

Two hundred thirty-nine persons did not vote, but are recorded as having voted.

Eighty-four voted from non-existant addresses.

Nine voted from vacant lots.

Seventy-six voted from vacant buildings.

One hundred and three voted twice. One voted three times.

Five hundred and twenty-nine persons voted, but moved before the primary.

Fifteen hundred and three names on the poll books were unknown at the addresses given.

Twelve died before primary day, altho the books show they voted.

Five names were those of children.

Fourteen outside of the precinct.

One is serving a life term in the penitentiary.

The right of the franchise in the twentieth ward is sacred. It does not pass away with death. Crime, illness or change of residence have no effect upon it.

Great is the primary law which assures the rule of the "peepul," guaranteeing to the initiate the right of voting as often as necessity requires.

If voting once makes a freeman, what shall we say of a twentieth ward citizenry who crowds a life time of balloting into one all too brief election day?

Vox Populi, Vox Dei.

Bnnk.

What a mess a labor party will have to clean up.

Poland, Britain and the Soviet Union

The terrorizing of the Polish Sejm by Pilsudski and his army, news of which is contained in the latest dispatches from Poland, shows the progress of the dictatorship in Poland.

The deputies demanded the withdrawal of two members of the Bartel cabinet, but Pilsudski staged a military demonstration and threatened dissolution of parliament unless the deputies withdrew their demands.

Pilsudski's action is extremely significant when coupled with news from England to the effect that Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, has sounded out Briand as to the attitude of France in the event of a new offensive against the Soviet Union. Pilsudski is Great Britain's puppet, but his popular support is weak and Britain can take no chance with the Polish parliament.

The British offensive against the Soviet Union is being carried on under the guise of "establishing a defensive zone" to protect Poland and contemplates conquest of the Ukraine. The sincerity of the diplomatic phrases concerning a "defensive zone" are understood when we recall that the Soviet Union's offer to Poland of a guarantee treaty against attack was refused.

The Paris correspondent of the Sunday Worker states in its issue for September 12:

The British foreign office is at the moment engaged actively in promoting a league of all border states against Russia. Proposals were made to Poland in the last days of August which constitute at once a bribery and a blackmail manoeuver.

At a time when Britain needs every financial resource she can spare, she is spending and promising to spend enormous sums of money in subsidizing Baltic and Central European states to attack Russia.

The reports are that Briand's reply to Chamberlain was to the effect that France did not want trouble in Eastern Europe and that Poland would not get French support in an anti-Soviet offensive, or even in case Poland was attacked.

Due to the financial crisis in France and the rapprochement between France and Germany, Britain is forced for the time being at least to play a lone hand in Poland.

That Britain, convulsed by the miners' strike, driven to distraction by the victorious advance of the Chinese national revolution and worried by the disaffection of the "white" colonies (Canada, South Africa and the Irish Free State), still plots against the Soviet Union and spends money like water to subsidize military adventures from the Baltic to the Aegean, is proof that the British ruling class knows that the workers' and peasants' government of Russia is the most powerful enemy of British and world capitalism and the greatest source of inspiration to the rising British working class and the millions of colonial workers and peasants.

From the Idea of Freedom for Groups —to the Idea of Political Democracy in the Whole Country.

NOW pass on the fourth problem, the problem of party mechanism in the system of the proletarian dictatorship. You are aware that up to now we Leninists have regarded the unity and coherence of our party as the first prerequisite for the maintenance and firmer establishment of the proletarian dictatorship. We Leninists have always imagined that the proletarian dictatorship can only be secure in our country, if our party plays its role properly, and when this party is in the first place the sole party in our country, that is, when the legal existence of other parties is made impossible, and in the second place the party is consistent in its structure, that is, represents a structure excluding any independent and autonomous groups, fractions, organized currents, etc.

I SHALL not remind you, comrades, of the expenditure of energy, the many words and the many gestures, which we have witnessed from Comrade Zinoviev, from this very platform, in his efforts to demonstrate this elementary Leninist truth. And now this has all changed at one blow. Now the whole opposition, the whole oppositionist block—Trotsky, Kamenev, Zinoviev, Krupskaya, etc.—demands freedom for fractions within the party. The first signal for this change of front was given by Comrade Zinoviev from the platform of our XIV Party Congress. As you will know, Comrade Zinoviev declared on this occasion that we should call upon all former oppositional groups to share the leadership of the party. The germ has since developed, not merely into a bud, but into a full grown, if not particularly sweet smelling and aromatic flower. (Laughter.)....

IT must be observed that if the opposition now insists on having our party reconstructed on a basis permitting a freedom to form groups and fractions, some of the comrades of the opposition are arriving at conclusions of which we must take careful note if we want to know which way the wind is blowing. Comrade Ossovsky, of whom we have already spoken as a member of the opposition, pronounces the following judgment in the article quoted: In our country there is no unity of economic interests. The working class has its interests, and the peasant class has its interests, differing somewhat. And then there are private capitalists in the nation, again a third group of interests. But we have only one party. And if we have only one party, and will not legalise other parties, then we must arrange matters so that there can be elements within our party itself who represent capitalist interests. I am telling you all this in my own words, but Comrade Ossovsky writes in a learned language as follows:

"The positive solution of this question (that is, the question of the unity of our party) would not be difficult if we had not to prove the possibility of the unity of a party not the only legal one." (Laughter.) If there were other parties as well.) "We should then be the sole ruling party, but not the only party in the country. It is a much more complicated matter to prove the possibility of absolute unity in the sole legal party in a country containing extremely multitudinous economic tendencies. No one denies that our economics include spheres in which capitalist spirit of enterprise could play a positive role. In this case the party, remaining a united and sole party, has to actually protect all the interests in the country, including those of capitalist enterprise."

Labor Speeding Up Relief for Passaic

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 29.—The General Relief Committee Textile Strike, 742 Main avenue, announced today the receipt of $162.84 from the Springfield conference for relief of the Passaic strikers, a body composed of unions and workers' fraternal organizations, as the result of a house collection—

The sum of $130 was also received from the St. Louis relief conference as the result of a tag day in that city.

From every city come encouraging reports of increased activity and intensification of strike relief efforts. Organized labor is bent on showing the mill bosses that labor is behind the Passaic strikers in the full power of its many millions.

WE have received congratulations from [illegible] on the occasion of the Fourth Convention of the American Federation of Labor, which is now in session in this forty-sixth annual convention in Cincinnati.

It will be dominated by the most reactionary officialdom of the most reactionary labor movement in the world. The convention will reflect only in a distorted form the needs of the American workingmen.

It will make its own review of its own activities, its own estimate of the status of the American labor movement, draw its own conclusions, put forward its own program as the program of American labor.

IN the last year large sections of the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor have made a long step towards agreement with American capitalism. The official movement has abandoned even purely trade union struggles almost entirely. "Worker-employer co-operation" has been ever on its lips. Mass opposition to this policy is developing slowly but surely.

There has been a certain continuity in the policy of A. F. of L. officialdom for the last four years. Its causes and its effects on the mass of the American workingclass must be determined in order that they may be counteracted effectively.

ARTICLE TWO.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

SO far the history of the drive to the right of the official labor leadership falls naturally into periods marked by A. F. of L. conventions. But since the Atlantic City convention there has been a sort of a geometrical progression towards complete reaction which, since the early part of the year, deserves special attention. It has been marked by:

1—The defeat of the anthracite strike thru a combination of negative and positive betrayals, which furnish a cross-section of the official policy. They are:

a) Failure to call out the maintenance men.

b) Failure to call a sympathetic strike of the bituminous miners which was more than justified by the continual violations of the Jacksonville agreement.

c) Signing of a five-year agreement.

d) Abandonment of the check-off, i. e., the closed shop.

e) Acceptance of arbitration.

By a process of deception probably without parallel in the American labor movement, the anthracite miners were cajoled into accepting what is in effect a "B. and O." plan for the industry.

2—The legalization of the "workers' and employer co-operation" doctrine which is the basis of the "B. and O." plan by the passage of the Watson-Parker bill supported by the whole officialdom of the railway unions—A. F. of L. and Big Four brotherhoods.

a) The failure of the railway union heads to oppose the appointment by Coolidge to the mediation board authorized by the law, of known and avowed enemies of labor.

b) The eulogy of this collection of Wall Street tools individually and collectively in the leading official journals of the railway unions.

c) The united front of the railway executives and railway union heads for the passage of the bill and the appointment of the mediation board.

3—The entertainment of the London Daily Mail delegation of fake trade union leaders by the executive council of the A. F. of L.

Organized by the principal labor-baiting sheet in Great Britain, the Daily Mail, this delegation was sent here to study speed-up systems and make recommendations for their installation in British industry. On their return to Great Britain they issued a statement praising the most powerful open shop corporations in the U. S.

4—The organization of a "labor" life insurance company under the auspices of the A. F. of L. with the heads of forty national and international unions as directors and Matthew Woll, vice-president of the A. F. of L. as president.

5—The organization of a real estate corporation by a group of New York trade union officials.

6—The fight carried on by the A. F. of L. executive against the trade union delegation to the Soviet Union organized by officials, economists and attorneys of A. F. of L. and Railway Brotherhood unions.

7—The sabotage of the Passaic strike for a long period culminating in a public statement denouncing it as "a Communist enterprise and attempting to stop further financial aid to the strikers.

8—Matthew Woll's article in "The Photo-Engravers Journal" (republished in the New York Times) proposing a conference of farmer organizations, labor organizations and BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS, under the leadership of Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, to devise ways and means of SAVING WASTE IN INDUSTRY.

In this article Woll raises the idea of the "MONROE DOCTRINE OF AMERICAN INDUSTRY"—a combination of the MONROE DOCTRINE OF IMPERIALISM. He cites the danger to "American democracy of the example of the revolutionary upheavals in Europe.

9—The failure of the Chicago Federation of Labor officialdom (capitulant because of its former militancy in this respect) to wage a struggle against the lockout of 21 members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union for violation of an injunction against picketing or to do anything for their release beyond making a private appeal (which was refused) to Governor Small.

10—The failure of the A. F. of L. executive council to give even symbolic support to the Mexican labor movement in its struggle against catholic fendalism and American imperialism in the recent crisis.

a) The public statement of Green declaring neutrality.

b) The statement of Woll—in effect an apology for not interfering in support of the catholic church.

11—The endorsement by Green and leading members of the executive council, after being entertained at the Citizens' Military Training Camps and the offer of the A. F. of L. apparatus to aid in popularizing them.

12—The attempt of President Green to force a settlement of the strike of the Furriers' Union by urging acceptance of conditions ignoring the basic demand of the 40-hour week.

a) The unprecedented investigation of the Furriers' Union, after its victory in strike, in violation of the principles of union autonomy, ordered by the Cincinnati session of the executive council.

13—The exposure of Frank Ferrington, president of District 12, United Mine Workers of America as a paid agent of the Peabody Coal company in the miners' union. (This has been interpreted as a move to the left by the Lewis machine by hopeful liberals but it is, nothing of the kind. Designed to further entrench the Lewis bureaucracy by a creating a semblance of honesty, its real purpose is shown by the fact that Lewis has now made a united front against the progressives with the operator-controlled Fishwick-Sneed executive board of District 12—Ferrington's machine, in other words.)

SO far we have been considering only manifestations of right tendencies on the part of labor officialdom. But there are important indications that the organised labor movement (with certain exceptions that will be noted) end important sections even of the unorganised masses are approaching a stalemate in action, seriously affected by the upward movement of American capitalism and lulled into quiescence by the various welfare, insurance, pension, stock distribution and company union schemes inaugurated by the capitalists and demoralised by the class peace-worker-employer cooperation policies of trade union officialdom.

(To Be Continued)

OUR industrial system is in a state of flux. This is particularly true of the coal industry. The United Mine Workers of America—the "labor" organization of coal miners—is "on the rocks."

The coal mine owners, like other employers of labor, have tried various devices for ensuring real labor peace. Sometimes they succeed and sometimes they have tried to run the workers "loyal" thru a process of "education" petting. They have employed high-salaried "labor experts" and "personal managers" and Y. M. C. A. glad hand mix-makers. They have attempted to satisfy their workers with all sorts of soothing syrup of the welfare specie.

Now, in common with other employers in America, they are trying out the company union. Other means having failed, the workers, having refused to be fooled, they now offer the company union sell-out scheme. They come to the worker and make the most lavish promises. They paint their new toy in the most glittering and attractive colors. They say in effect to the workers: "Look what a pretty little union you are getting you new. Isn't it cute?" No deep, no duties, no responsibilities, no strikes. Nothing to do but work hard! And yet you get a nice committee to listen to your grievances if you really have any. You get all this industrial democracy free of charge. You get more work and a perfect heaven on earth. And you may call it anything you like. 'Work council,' 'efficiency committee,' 'production joint conferences,' 'employes representation,' it's all grafting for the asking, if you will please go and stay away from the United Mine Workers of America."

Some tall promises the bosses make. Of course they don't explain just how all this millenium is to be achieved. They simply assure the workers that the U. M. W. of A. is a bad, terrible, Bolshevik organization and that the new virgin company union is a sweet, cheap, satisfactory and altogether beautiful substitute.

And the worker—if he is solid ivory from the collar up—may be inclined to swallow this applesauce. However, if he is a worker of average intelligence with a little knowledge of labor history he certainly will not fall for this line of hunk. For among other things he will know a little about the origin and development of the company union.

He will know, for example, that the company union has been tried in American industry now for over 10 years and that one of the first of these devices ever installed was hatched by Mr. John D. Rockefeller in 1915 after the Ludow massacre of the coal miners on strike in Colorado against the Rockefeller-controlled Colorado Fuel and Iron Co. After shooting his workers back to the pits and starving their wives and children, Mr. Rockefeller and his son kindly installed the company union. These workers have been in bondage ever since.

STUDIES by impartial persons show that the Rockefeller company union is without any vestige of economic power—a beautiful entomohile without an engine. They show that the "employee representation plan," as it is called, is nothing but a trap to keep down wages, slash them as well, and to keep the workers powerless to protest against the tyranny of the company. Within the last few months workers who protested against wage cuts and who refused to work at the reduced scale have been kicked out of the employ of the company. The workers have no security, no status as equal agents in a collective bargaining arrangement, no ability to strike back. They are simply made helpless and defenseless by the company union. The device disarms them and leaves the economic power in the hands of the company. This is the heaven of company unionism.

Not only among the workers of Colorado but elsewhere has the company union, no matter what name it uses to disguise itself, been shown to be a snare to trap the workers into wage cuts and lowered standard of wages and living. Readers of this article will remember the strike of a few of the workers on the lines of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in New York City in the summer of 1926. It will be recalled how easily the ranks of these workers were broken and how easily they were driven back to their "pits"—the underground lines on which they work. Why were they so easily crushed? Because they had been living under the slavery of the company union for 10 years. In fact this strike was an attempted revolt against the yoke of the company union. But it was broken swiftly by reason of the fact that the workers' spirit had been paralyzed and their economic power completely sifted out thru the company union system. And this I. R. T. company "brotherhood" is only typical of hundreds of others that have been installed in recent years to break unions and to break strikes. And many of them, like the "brotherhood" on the New York transit lines, have carried with them no speakable "yellow dog contracts." These contracts, as mine workers know, are used to bind the workers to an agreement not to join any real union. When used in connection with a company union they bind the workers to membership in the company union and against membership in every other kind of union. In other words, they compel a "closed shop" in favor of the company union.

The company union is also one of the most effective propaganda agencies of the mine workers. Thru "efficiency committees," etc., they drill into the workers' minds various economic lies that tend to make the worker lose faith in his own strength and organized power. A worker who accepts the bosses in one of these company unions is also sure to have certain special favors shown him if he carries out the companies' wishes. The whole thing is a method of capitalistic cures to lobby for legislation favorable to the owners and inimical to the workers' interests. Thus in many years the tools and succors of the company are used to serve the purpose of the owners against the workers.

The company union has no appeal to the workers who know anything about how it has operated in other fields. Particularly are the young workers who have the fighting and organized spirit of youth, opposed to company union tricks. Some of the old workers, broken in health, tired and with no more hope in life, may possibly be fooled and misled by the company's tricks. They may be afraid to buck the company and possibly lose their jobs by so doing. But the red-blooded young worker knows that his only strength lies in the strength of all the miners banded together, not in a dummy union controlled by the company, but in the United Mine Workers of America. Fortunately, the company union has not made much headway among coal miners, because the coal miners have always been the most independent and self-reliant workers, relying on their own organized strength and not on company favors and gifts. But as the mines become more and more mechanized, and they become more and more like factories, the mine owners will try to introduce the "big family" idea of "unionism." It is then that the young workers must be most vigilant for the real union that has won them their conditions, the union in which they have achieved their strength and protection they have. They must fight with corresponding vigor against any "substitute" for real unionism that may be suggested by the coal mine owners.

THE councils of efficiency," the "federated unions," the "arbitration committee,"are all names for the company associations. They are all part of the prodigious open-shop anti-union campaign that is waging all around us wherever they see a favorable opportunity. These schemes must be resisted shoulder to shoulder by all the miners who have any strength in their hearts and time in their veins.

The young miners, especially, must remember that the company union is the employers' latest and most insidious weapon in the battle to destroy the real union. The company union has received the blessing of all the employers' associations, manufacturers' bodies and the open-shop affiliances. Every labor-hater and union-breaker in America counts on the company union as a most effective weapon. The young miners should prepare to break this weapon and build their own union strongest. For the United Mine Workers must fight for the life and death struggle with the company union menace.

Smoking an Increase.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—The United States will smoke about 97,000,000,000 cigarets this year. Figures on tobacco taxes issued today by the bureau of internal revenue show an increase of about 12,000,000,000 in the use of cigarets since 1926.

They rule because they have ... high and sacred privilege which makes freemen of serfs.

Nor is it necessary, say the soothsayers of American democracy, for the wide masses of the workers of farm and factory to have a party of their own. Their interests are fully protected and their spokesmen can be chosen without fear or favor thru the mediums of the primary elections—that apotheosis of democracy of which only America can boast.

An investigation of the recent primary election in the twentieth ward of the city of Chicago has just been concluded.

The honest and thrifty citizenry of this ward acknowledge Morry Eller as their chieftain and they go to the polls in serried ranks to uphold the best traditions of men whose forefathers have fought entrenched tyranny and stormed the bulwarks of ancient privilege in many lands.

A stroll thru the twentieth ward furnishes ample evidence that the liegemen of Morry Eller love personal liberty. There are more saloons to the square block in twentieth ward than anywhere else in Chicago. One who knows Chicago will feel at once that no more needs to be said.

No dreary despotism for the twentieth ward. The right of franchise is inviolable and it was invoked with a vengeance. The investigation of the manner in which the bootleggers, gamblers, second-story workers, ladies of the evening, brothel-keepers and other honest burghers of the twentieth ward, armed only with the franchise, hurled the invader back from the battlements, discloses the following facts and are now history engraved on the court records of Cook county.

They show that:

Two hundred thirty-nine persons did not vote, but are recorded as having voted.

Eighty-four voted from non-existant addresses.

Nine voted from vacant lots.

Seventy-six voted from vacant buildings.

One hundred and three voted twice. One voted three times.

Five hundred and twenty-nine persons voted, but moved before the primary.

Fifteen hundred and three names on the poll books were unknown at the addresses given.

Twelve died before primary day, altho the books show they voted.

Five names were those of children.

Fourteen outside of the precinct.

One is serving a life term in the penitentiary.

The right of the franchise in the twentieth ward is sacred. It does not pass away with death. Crime, illness or change of residence have no effect upon it.

Great is the primary law which assures the rule of the "peepnl," guaranteeing to the initiate the right of voting as often as necessity requires.

If voting once makes a freeman, what shall we say of a twentith ward citizenry who crowds a life time of balloting into one all too brief election day?

Vox Populi, Vox Dei.

Bnnk.

What a mess a labor party will have to clean up.

Poland, Britain and the Soviet Union

The terrorizing of the Polish Sejm by Pilsudski and his army, news of which is contained in the latest dispatches from Poland, shows the progress of the dictatorship in Poland.

The deputies demanded the withdrawal of two members of the Bartel cabinet, but Pilsudski staged a military demonstration and threatened dissolution of parliament unless the deputies withdrew their demands.

Pilsudski's action is extremely significant when coupled with news from England to the effect that Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, has sounded out Briand as to the attitude of France in the event of a new offensive against the Soviet Union. Pilsudski is Great Britain's puppet, but his popular support is weak and Britain can take no chance with the Polish parliament.

The British offensive against the Soviet Union is being carried on under the guise of "establishing a defensive zone" to protect Poland and contemplates conquest of the Ukraine. The sincerity of the diplomatic phrases concerning a "defensive zone" are understood when we recall that the Soviet Union's offer to Poland of a guarantee treaty against attack was refused.

The Paris correspondent of the Sunday Worker states in its issue for September 12:

The British foreign office is at the moment engaged actively in promoting a league of all border states against Russia. Proposals were made to Poland in the last days of August which constitute at once a bribery and a blackmail maneuver. At a time when Britain needs every financial resource she can spare, she is spending and promising to spend enormous sums of money in subsidizing Baltic and Central European states to attack Russia.

The reports are that Briand's reply to Chamberlain was to the effect that France did not want trouble in Eastern Europe and that Poland would not get French support in an anti-Soviet offensive, or even in case Poland was attacked.

Due to the financial crisis in France and the rapprochement between Fraace and Germany, Britain is forced for the time being at least to play a lone hand in Poland.

That Britain, convulsed by the miners' strike, driven to distraction by the victorious advance of the Chinese national revution and worried by the disaffection of the "white" colonies (Canada, South Africa and the Irish Free State), still plots against the Soviet Union and spends money like water to subsidise military adventures from the Baltic to the Aegean, is proof that the British ruling class knows that the workers' and peasants' government of Russia is the most powerful enemy of British and world capitalism and the greatest source of inspiration to the rising British working class and the millions of colonial workers and peasants.

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

By N. BUCHARIN.

From the Idea of Freedom for Groups to the Idea of Political Democracy in the Whole Country.

I NOW pass on the fourth problem. the problem of party mechanism in the system of the proletarian dictatorship. You are aware that up to now we Leninists have regarded the unity and coherence of our party as the first prerequisite for the maintenance and firmer establishment of the proletarian dictatorship. We Leninists have always imagined that the proletarian dictatorship can only be secure in our country, if our party plays its role properly, and when this party is in the first place the sole party in our country, that is, when the legal existence of other parties is made impossible, and in the second place the party is consistent in its structure, that is, represents a structure excluding any independent and autonomous groups, fractions, organised currents, etc.

I SHALL not remind you, comrades, of the expenditure of energy, the many words and the many gestures, which we have witnessed from Comrade Zinoviev, from this very platform, in his efforts to demonstrate this elementary Leninist truth. And now this has all changed at one blow. Now the whole opposition, the whole oppositionist block—Trotsky, Kamenev, Zinoviev, Krupskaya, etc.—demands freedom for fractions within the party. The first signal for this change of front was given by Comrade Zinoviev from the platform of our XIV Party Congress. As you will know, Comrade Zinoviev declared on this occasion that we should call upon all former oppositional groups to share the leadership of the party. This germ has since developed, not merely into a bud, but into a full grown, if not particularly sweet smelling and aromatic flower. (Laughter).

IT must be observed that if the opposition now insists on having our party reconstructed on a basis permitting a freedom to form groups and fractions, some of the comrades of the opposition are arriving at conclusions of which we must take careful note if we want to know which way the wind is blowing. Comrade Ossovsky, of whom we have already spoken as a member of the opposition, pronounces the following judgment in the article quoted: In our country there is no unity of economic interests. The working class has its interests, and the peasant class has its interests, differing somewhat. And then there are private capitalists in the union, again a third group of interests. But we have only one party. And we have only one party, and will not legalise other parties, then we must arrange matters so that there can be struggle within our party itself who represent capitalist interests. I am telling you all this in my own words, but Comrade Ossovsky writes in a learned language as follows:

THE present controversy within the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is neither a sign—nor will it be the cause—of a retreat of the revolution. Quite the contrary. It is a clear indication of its victorious onward march.

To give a clear understanding as well of the present problems of the Russian Revolution as also of the controversy over the solution of these problems, we are publishing herewith a report made by Comrade Bucharin at the functionaries' meeting of the Leningrad organization of the Communist Party. The report speaks for itself and needs no further elucidation. It is clear and convincing and answers the lies about the retreat of the Russian Revolution.

"The positive solution of this question (that is, the question of the unity of our party) would not be difficult if we had not to prove the possibility of the unity of a party not the only legal one." (That is, if there were other parties as well.) "We should then be the sole ruling party, but not the only party in the country. It is a much more complicated matter to prove the possibility of absolute unity in the sole legal party in a country containing extremely multitudinous economic tendencies. No one denies that our economics include spheres in which capitalist spirit of enterprise could play a positive role. In this case the party, remaining a united and sole party, has to actually protect all the interests in the country, including those of capitalist enterprise."

HENRY FORD is looked on as the big butter of that part of the industry. Did he not [illegible] $5.00 a day wage universal, [illegible] when such pay was [illegible] high? And now he comes out with the announcement that he will put his plants on a five-day week, a six-hour day basis with six days' pay for five days' work. Of course, as Bainbridge Colby, the Democratic candidate for President, has said, that these workers who cannot produce as much or more in five days as they did in six will be shown the door to go home.

OUR special Ford edition will give the low-down on Henry's philanthropy, about that more anon. What led me to comment on Ford's generosity is a news item in yesterday's paper which tells of Ford's efforts to recover a specially constructed mortar car which he presented to a "Baron O. Frederick E. Von Krupp, Jr." alias George K. Baker, who is not a baron at all but a New York barrow of trade after he sold Henry's gift limousine. Oh, Henry is wise alright. He is an industrial wizard, but he nods occasionally. So did Homer for that matter.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, the famous Hindoo poet, is a philosopher who takes considerable nonsense if we are to believe the press. In Berlin he proclaimed the collapse of "Materialism" and the survival of the Oriental. "You western nations possess all material wealth and are observing yourselves intellectually," said. We who have nothing, believe we have caught the reflection of the infinite." This is the kind of philosophy that makes a hit with people who are too lazy to think or investigate. Also it makes the speaker who holds the opinion [illegible] Tagore, because he does.

THE difference between the occidental mind and the oriental mind is disappearing amidst the hum of machinery and the clatter of machine-made five. The Hindoo, who sat on a bed of nails dreaming a place of industry and the Hindoo who is directing the speed of several spindles are now entirely different Hindoos the day they worship the hump on the left shoulder and second when they see a Mohammedan. The penetration of capitalism into the Orient and the growing consciousness on the part of the masses that they are being exploited is relegating spiritualists like Tagore to a back seat. In fact those patients must now go west for an hour, as the Orientals are picking up their trusty rifles and permitting the Tagores to sell their squirrel full of mystic perfume to the tourist parasites of the western world.

WESTERN civilization is not crumbling, but the capitalist order it [illegible] will be almost as bad for the Tagores as for the royal parasites and the less royal but wealthier monarchs of industry. A newer and better civilization will arise on the ruins of the present social order and when the hordes of the Orient throw off the yoke of foreign parasitism the east and west shall meet but not until then.

MUSSOLINI AND CHAMBERLAIN IN SECRET CONFAB

Organizing Hostile Bloc Against France

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 30. — One of the most important meetings taking place since the end of the world war, will be held today on board an Italian warship in the Mediterranean Sea, between Benito Mussolini, the fascist dictator and Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary of the British government.

Held on the heels of the adjournment of the league of nations assembly the meeting sheds a brilliant light on the futility of the league as an instrument to prevent war. Of course, every intelligent person knows that the league was never intended as an instrument of peace but as a weapon to be used by the big powers to divide the spoils of the earth between them. However, they cannot agree. Hence the meeting between Mussolini and Chamberlain today following the conference between Briand and Stresemann last week. A British-Italian alliance against a French-German entente. This is the motive behind the powwow on the Mediterranean.

Sending Out Decoys.

The British foreign office is assiduously seeking to create the impression that Britain's object in arriving at a closer understanding with Italy is a desire to curb the warlike emotions of Mussolini for whom Chamberlain professes a deep regard. This diplomatic subterfuge will not fool well-informed people. The conference is a throne to France.

Downing street stresses its desire to maintain an entente with France but the rapid progress of the negotiations between Germany and France, in the direction of an accord, leaves England out in the cold and facing the unpleasant alternative of a continental bloc which could not be shaken off England's historic policy of her balance of power across the channel.

Gesture Towards Italy.

A France-German combination would dominate Europe and this fact is responsible for England's gesture towards Italy. France and Italy are always heads because of Italy's need for territory at the expense of some other nation. Whether Italy grabs territory from Turkey or from France is in the lap of opportunity. It is quite possible that Chamberlain and Mussolini will cast covetous eyes at French territory in North Africa

INJUNCTION AGAINST FEDERAL COMMISSION SHIELDS FLOUR TRUST

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—An injunction issued in a local federal court restrains the federal trade commission from requiring the leasing and milling association of the United States to open its books to federal inspection. The senate had ordered the commission to investigate the flour millers' earnings and profits in the handling of the farmers' wheat. This is the third big industry that has been shielded from inquiry by federal court orders.

SPECIAL FORD NUMBER

THE announcement that Ford is GIVING his workers a five-day week with six days pay has become the talk not only of the bosses thruout the country but is a topic of conversation among the workers.

Just what is it all about? Is Ford generous?

Is he actually GIVING the workers something for nothing?

The DAILY WORKER will answer these questions in a special edition to appear under the date of Thursday, October 7. Working-class writers will analyze this new departure and explain whether Ford is actuated by a desire to improve the standard of [illegible] or is simply using a new method to squeeze more work and consequently more profits out of his wage slaves.

ANTHRACITE MINERS ASK LEWIS WHAT HAPPENED TO CHECK-OFF

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LANSFORD, Pa., Sept. 30.—Delegates to District No. 7, United Mine Workers, convention discussed the failure of the operators and board of conciliation to institute the check-off system expected by the miners when the anthracite agreement was signed. Delegates urged that President John L. Lewis and Hugh Grant of Columbus, O., be invited to meet with the conciliation board and go over the whole matter of check-off. Madrew Mattay was re-elected president of the district; Hugh Cannon, vice-president; John Yourishin, secretary-treasurer; and Neal Perry, international board member.

The check-off exists in the organized bituminous districts.

Conowingo Dam Project; Where Blood and Stone Mix for 40 Cents an Hour

ED. NOTE:—This story is printed on Page 1 of The DAILY WORKER, first because of its unusual merit as a workers' correspondent contribution and second, because it exposes the operations of one of the biggest employers of labor in the country.

• • • •

By N. B., Worker Correspondent.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 30.—A short while ago the writer was out of work and traveling around the southern part of Pennsylvania looking for a job. I heard of the great Conowingo dam being built on the Susquehanna River and made my way in that direction.

As I came upon the construction camp, five miles up the river from the nearest town, I was met by an armed guard who stopped me and asked me my business. I asked if I could get in to see the boss about a job. The guard laughed and told me there was no hiring on Saturday and to get off the premises or I'd get run in.

Stone & Webster are the contractors. The place is about four miles around and fenced off with barbed wire. At intervals there are guards in sentry boxes—as if there was martial law.

Conditions Bad.

As the workers came streaming out with their checks, I stopped several of them and asked them about the place. Each one answered that the conditions were very bad and the pay poor. In addition the work was extremely dangerous. Only that day two men were killed. There is not enough precaution taken on the drills and little safety for those touching off the charges.

40c an Hour.

Laborers, I found, receive 40c an hour. Mechanics get 50 to 90c an hour while a helper's wage is from 50 to 70c. Of this, $8.50 must go to board and 5c a day for hospital fee.

There are about three thousand workers in the Stone & Webster section of the project and about two-thirds of these are Negroes. These Negro workers are made to suffer the usual abuses and discriminations. They have a separate camp of their own and are deceived in many ways, especially when they are hurt. Their families are not allowed to visit them in the hospital.

Bootleg Concessions.

The Stone & Webster outfit asks $1,000 a week for concessions to operate pool rooms and liquor joints near the camp. Liquor of the vilest sort is sold in the camp itself and gambling devices of all kinds are immediately available to whoever wishes to play. The men that run the games stand in with the company. In addition there is a large camp following of prostitutes operating under the same proprietorship as the gambling concessions.

Eight Workers Killed.

The workers on the job are mostly of foreign extraction and appear to be, partly for this reason, difficult to organize. Such is the "Great Conowingo Dam Project."

It will take several more years to complete it and in the meantime many more workers will pay with their lives for the avarice and greed of the capitalist interests in charge of the work. So far eight workers have been killed.

GARMENT BOSSES REFUSE TO MEET UNION OFFICERS

Warned Not to Count on Arbitration

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 30.—Stating that, by their refusal to attend the conference called by Raymond V. Ingersoll, impartial chairman, both the Industrial Council and the cloak jobbers, show "singular ill grace" in characterizing the union demands in the present strike as "destructive." Louis Hyman, chairman of the general strike committee, in a letter to Mr. Ingersoll, replied to the charges made by Henry H. Finder, chairman of the council.

Mr. Hyman reiterated the union's opposition to arbitration, further declaring that "we do not propose to submit to any arbitrary limitation of discussion of our demands."

The union last night interpreted 11 applications received yesterday from industrial council members for individual settlements as a definite break from Finder's tyranny. The firm of Cohen and Whellan, an industriel council shop, 2 West 33rd street, employing four sub-manufacturers and 150 workers, was the first to settle in defiance of Finder's control.

Greek Elections Put Off Till November 7; Trouble Is Foreseen

ATHENS, Sept. 30.—The general elections today were postponed from October 24 until November 7, and a difficult situation is possible as a result.

The anti-Venizelist or monarchist faction, which has demanded the retirement of Premier Kondylis, recently issued an ultimatum that if the elections were delayed they would refrain from voting.

The premier offered his resignation to the president but it was not accepted. The purpose of the delay is to give an opportunity for reconstruction of the cabinet before the polls are opened.

French Worried Over Anglo-Italian Accord

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The proposed interview between Mussolini and Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister of Great Britain, is taken as a menace by the French.

France sees in this an attempt by England to aid Italy's influence in the Balkans in order that the influence over the "little entente" by France may be weakened and French Premier Poincare may be hampered. French anxiety is quite open at this new development, which is aimed to offset the Franco-German accord on the continent.

STRIKERS TO WIN IF THEY HOLD TO NOV.

Industry Dying; Union Districts to Vote

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 30. — If the British miners can hold out on strike until November, the government and the mine owners will be beaten. This is seen in the figures admitted by the government of the small production being made, and the fact that in spite of intense hardship only 180,000 out of more than 1,000,000 miners have returned to the pits.

British Industry Hard Hit.

British industry itself in normal times uses 5,000,000 of the 5,000,000 tons weekly produced when all miners are working. Now only 800,000 tons are produced, but one-sixth of what is needed for British industrial consumption alone.

In addition 1,000,000 tons weekly is normally used in homes for family purposes. Thus the 4,000,000 tons demanded by England for use within the island has only 800,000 tons or one-eighth that amount, to supply it. The normal export of 1,000,000 tons weekly is cut off and thus production is only 10 per cent of normal.

Scab Coal Poor and Costly.

While scab coal shipments from the continent and America is fairly plentiful, it is costly, selling for $12.50 a ton, too high for all but a few ales and it is heavily disliked by all coal users because of its poor quality.

Heavy industry, which relies on cheap coal, is hard hit. It cannot run at a profit on high-priced imported coal, altho September imports are reckoned at 5,000,000 tons, even this leaving a big gap between supply and normal demand.

Blast furnaces are cold. About 140 were going in April before the strike. In August 124 were going. But now only six are working. The slump in industry is thus clearly seen as terrific.

In addition, Britain is losing her export coal trade to other countries' coal merchants. And of still more gravity is the loss of general commodity trade, which is costing British business about $15,000,000 a day according to the economist Sir Hugh Bell. Industry in Birmingham, Sheffield and other manufacturing cities is crippled to an extent that it cannot supply orders and fears that if buyers are held off until after November, these orders will be withdrawn and placed in foreign countries.

For these reasons the miners' union, at its delegate conference now in ses-

Sickness and Death for Workers Is Lightened by Own Organization

On Page six of this issue, workers will read with interest some facts about the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, an organization of self-protection for the workers that, without end in view serves the purpose of the capitalist insurance companies minus their private profits for the owners and the graft for which they are notorious.

MINERS CALMLY AWAITED RESCUE IN DEEP PRISON

(Special to The Daily Worker)

IRONWOOD, Mich., Sept. 30.—Stepping out of the ghastly darkness of the pit that by the merest chance was prevented from serving as their grave, forty-three iron ore miners blinked their eyes as they saw the light of day for the first time in six days.

The hardihood and bravery of these toilers, some of them well along in years, was exceedingly great.

This, and the fact that they organized themselves to withstand their fate when they knew they were trapped, held off the danger of insanity, always a menace to entombed miners.

Make Birch Tea.

Birch tea, made from the bark of the shaft timbering, was their only food. They assigned watch duty, sang songs and tabulated time to keep themselves occupied and their spirits high. When the rescue party finally reached them on Wednesday night, the miners were beginning to feel the pangs of starvation and the fever of exhaustion, aided by the extreme cold of their underground prison.

As soon as they were brought to the surface company officials rushed them to the hospital. All of them had walked out of the mine—from their place of imprisonment—a long and tortuous route. With few exceptions, they seemed exceptionally well preserved considering their ordeal. There was some speculation whether or not their being rushed to the hospital was for their well-being or a company precaution against too much being told of the disaster.

Demand Investigation.

Already there are demands being made for a federal investigation. John B. Chapple of the Ashland Daily Press, wired President Coolidge for an investigating committee to be appointed to place responsibility for the collapse of the shaft. The president's secretary answered that the matter had been referred to the labor department

U. S. SHIPS CARRY COAL TO ENGLAND

Shipping Board Ships Enter Scab Trade

This story of the direct aid given by the U. S. government to the British Tory government in its wealthy, titled mine owners in the strike of the British miners is [illegible] the utterance of Ed. Keen, editor of the capitalist daily, Washington Post and one of those connected with the Teapot Dome scandal, made at the time the British strike began.

McLean urged that the American government send aid thru the [illegible] government against the miners. It is also recalled that when A. A. Purcell, British labor leader, was visiting America a year ago urging workers' trade union unity, McLean openly advocated that Purcell should be deported.—Editor.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 30. — Entrance of the United States government into the business of shipping "scab" coal from this country to smash the British miners' strike is expected within the next few days.

Preparations are being made for extensive use of United States government-owned ships to carry coal to Britain.

Ships sold or leased to private interests by the United States Shipping Board are surprisingly low figures already taking part in this lucrative traffic.

Proposal of Senator.

The direct request for use of government-owned ships to carry the "scab" coal, strangely enough, comes from a politician who says he wants to help American labor.

Senator O. E. Weller of Maryland is making an appeal for votes in the November elections on the strength of his effort to have from 25 to 30 government-owned boats carry needed coal from Baltimore to British ports.

Government Wants Scab Profits.

The new policy of the United States Shipping Board concentrates on assignation of shipping for government-owned boats.

General A. C. Dalton, president of the Emergency Fleet corporation, who announced it, hopes the new policy will build up trade while eliminating the shipping board deficit. Baltimore and Norfolk interests are rushing to take advantage.

Senator Weller, who visited the head office of the shipping board here,

What The Daily Worker Means

By ISRAEL AMTER

"YOU may not agree with the whole policy of The DAILY WORKER, for it is a Communist paper, but you will have to admit that its labor policy is correct." This was my statement to a member of the District Building Trades Council of Cleveland, a statement which he affirmed.

What does it mean when men who have been long in the labor movement of this country and abroad recognise that the trade union policy of our paper, The DAILY WORKER, is correct? It means that progressive trade union leaders realise the bankruptcy of the present bureaucracy of the American labor movement, and are signaling for a new, somewhat more realistic, something militant to aid labor in getting out of the impasse into which it has been led. Communist trade union policy pronounced correct!

If our trade union policy is correct —even in the skeleton form which the progressives can pretend today—then we Communists know that our political policy will gradually be understood as correct, for we know full well that militant trade union policy, organization of the unorganized, militant action to improve the conditions of the workers, etc., necessarily at this stage of the struggle in imperialistic America will lead to conflict with and struggle against the capitalist state, just as the British trade unions faced the British state on May 1.

The DAILY WORKER must become the organ of the organized workers—or at least that section of the trade unionists who today have their eyes open and are looking for leadership. With a growing recognition of the achievements of the Soviet Union, with a somewhat hazy understanding of the British general strike, with the capitalists of this country extracting their ounces of blood from the veins of American labor, the American workers are beginning to recognise that something is wrong and are groping for a new program, for new methods.

The DAILY WORKER must become the guiding organ of these masses of workers, whom we call progressives. We must make them readers of our English organ, for until we have the American-born and American-speaking workers following the lead of the Workers (Communist) Party, our Party will continue to be regarded as a foreign product.

Is there a field for our party and The DAILY WORKER? One has but to regard the exploitation in American industry, to realise that not only The DAILY WORKER but the party should become a powerful factor among the American workers. Perhaps the following incident will emphasize the growing influence of the party. In a certain town, where the workers are organising, the [illegible] shop fearless issued a bulletin. The same day the writer was at the headquarters of the union, when a member of the union entered and [illegible] to the organizer, asked if [illegible] could get a book [illegible] copies of the bulletin. When [illegible] to the writer, and after it was [illegible] to him that if he distributed the bulletin he might get into trouble he [illegible] rejected, and that he would have to distribute it on his own responsibility, he replied: "I don't give a damn. It is good stuff and I am going to distribute it."

He did so. A few weeks later, when the question of the Negro workers in the plant came up, this worker [illegible] vulged himself as one of the most violent ku klusers. A delegation of workers, who is willing to fight not only for the right of organization but for decent conditions for the Negroes, [illegible] he was born in Georgia and [illegible] have his ingrained hatred of the Negro driven out of him.

The campaign for the [illegible] must be rounded on the most IMPORTANT assignment. [illegible] a campaign that must [illegible] members of the party. It must [illegible] realize that the [illegible] DAILY WORKER, [illegible] organs of our party, but as the most IMPORTANT organ, since it is [illegible] the legal organ of the [illegible] workers. Then [illegible] WORKER will be put on its feet.

SEATTLE, Sept. 30.—The Farmer-Labor Party has held a convention here as required under the state laws. The convention was only formal in its nature as a previous convention of delegates from the organizations supporting the Farmer-Labor Party had been held during the month of August.

The convention nominated A. L. Freeman as a candidate for United States senator. In addition, nominations for candidates for state legislature will be made thruout the state.

The Farmer-Labor Party of Washington polled nearly 90,000 votes in the last presidential campaign altho the LaFollette ticket was on the ballot in opposition to the Farmer-Labor Party ticket.

A campaign has been initiated in the state of Washington to build up the Farmer-Labor Party thru securing the affiliation of trade unions and farmers' organizations on a larger scale than heretofore.

Secret Conference Between Mussolini and Chamberlain

from the turrets of the conference battleship.

British lines of communication to India are no longer guaranteed by the Gibraltar fortifications and the Cyprus base. Naw methods of warfare, such as the airplane and the submarine have spelled the old watch-dog's teeth. The Mediterranean is no longer a British lake but a trap.

Italy's gestures towards an alliance with Spain, and support of the latter's claim to Tangier was instrumental in forcing England to come to some agreement with Italy. It is now likely that Spain will be asked to drop the Tangier claim in return for some other consideration, perhaps a British loan, as Spain is at the end of her colonial rope, and finds her colonial possessions a bunch of a white elephant as her tangoing king.

A Complete Change.

The Mussolini-Chamberlain conference will go completely into the question of complete reorientation of the diplomatic map. Not only will the two powers discuss Tangier and Abyssinia, but the Balkan states that are now under British control will be called into conferences after Chamberlain gets thru with Mussolini. Already the Bulgarian foreign minister has been invited to Rome and a sharp struggle is taking place in Greece between Britain and France for the control of that country. Bulgaria is a dependency of the British government.

Should the Franco-German negotiations fructify into a treaty between the two countries, Europe would be divided into two hostile camps, led by England and Italy on one side and by France and Germany on the other. The Franco-German combination would undoubtedly be the strongest from the military point of view with the Anglo-Italian combination dominating on the sea. But diplomatic alignments are subject to change at a moment's notice. In these days of capitalist decline and nobody knows what new alliance the morrow may bring.

Soviet Influence.

It should not be forgotten that the Soviet Union wields a tremendous influence in the chancelleries of Europe and cannot be left out of consideration. People are asking what will happen to Poland if the Franco-German deal goes thru.

It is reported that Mussolini intends to lay Italy's demand for more territory before the league of nations accompanied by a subtle threat to seize what he wants unless the league hands him a chunk of soil somewhere. A joint loan to the government of Abyssinia is said to be the favorite solution of the British and Italian governments of the Abyssinian muddle.

PANI BOUNCED BY CALLES OUT OF MEX. CABINET

Finance Minister Was Tool of Church

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 30.—Alberto J. Pani, finance minister in the Calles cabinet will drop his portfolio next week. Owing to serious differences with Calles over the policy to be adopted towards the catholic church and the American oil and mining interests Pani has been slated to go for a long time.

Church is Defeated.

While the catholic agitation was at its height and the attitude of the American government was still in doubt, Calles hesitated to give Pani walking papers. Now that the church has suffered a complete defeat and the Washington policy towards Mexico is definitely one of non-interference on the religious questions, Calles is in a position to force all those who are at loggerheads with his policy, out of the government.

That Pani was a secret tool of the church inside the cabinet is indicated by the fact that he is being talked of in clerical circles as a possible candidate against Calles in the 1928 elections.

Cook Accuses Government.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, left by airplane before the session adjourned to attend the convention of the Miners' International at Ostend, Belgium.

In a speech to the delegate conference before he left Cook said that starvation had forced a few of the miners to weaken in their determination. He accused Premier Baldwin of open backing of the mine owners. But he also pointed out that only a small per cent, 150,000 of the 1,000,000 strikers, had returned and production was but 10 per cent, or 500,000 tons a week, of the 5,000,000 tons normally produced.

...E SAVED BY POSTMASTERS

Instruction Is Issued by Chief Harry New

By LAURENCE TODD, Fed. Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30. — That Postmaster General Harry New has in fact sent out to 15,000 postmasters a "frozen invitation" to "act heavy, politically" to save congress for Coolidge, is the charge made by the National Civil Service Reform League, its official organ, Good Government, the league analyzes New's recent circular on the restrictions applying to political activity by federal employes.

"While accurately stating the political prohibitions applying to employes and officials of the post office department," says the league, "the postmaster general so interprets these restrictions and so emphasizes the asserted 'political rights and privileges' of postal employes thru the use of italics, as to nullify the plain intent of the law."

Harry is Old Hand.

Harry New is an old and seasoned Indiana machine politician, and his manipulation of postoffice appointments and postal personnel legislation has been so tricky as to bring down upon him at intervals the wrath of the civil service reform organizations.

Thus Harry New announces that ordinary civil service employes in his department must refrain from "public activity and management of political campaigns," but that postmasters appointed by the president "are allowed to take such a part in political campaigns as is taken by any private citizen."

Now watch your postmaster in the congressional campaign.

Glancing back over the newspaper clippings of years ago, I find such headlines as the following: "Sacco Gun Main Defense Point"; "Sacco Files New Appeal; Excerpts from Ruling that Pistol Barrels Were Interchanged"; "Pistol Barrels Exchanged in Sacco-Vanzetti Case; Interchange of Parts Used for Comparative Purpose Admitted by Defense Expert—Without Effect on Motion for New Trial, Says Court." So it has been going for six years. Instead of a fight over principles—working class principles—it has been a struggle for the identification of bullets, guns, automobiles and a question of the number of witnesses that could be won to support the lie that they saw Sacco and Vanzetti at the scene of the holdup.

Attorney William G. Thompson, who is now making the legal fight for Sacco and Vanzetti, visited Madeiros in prison on Nov. 20, 1925 after Amleto Fabbri, of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, had brought to him the confession of Madeiros smuggled to Sacco by a runner in the Dedham jail reading as follows:

"I hereby confess to being in the South Braintree Shoe company crime, and Sacco and Vanzetti was not in the crime.

(Signed) Celestino Madeiros."

Here is the story, therefore, of one who actually participated in the crime that the United States government charged against Sacco and Vanzetti. Madeiros says the eventful day, April 15, 1920, began for him at four o'clock in the morning. He says he was picked up at that time at his boarding house, 180 N. Main Street, Providence, Rhode Island, by four Italians who came in an open Hudson touring car.

• • •

Then the story proceeds. With the Italians, Madeiros says, he drove from Providence to Randolph, and there changed to a Buick car which was brought by another Italian. The Hudson car was left in the woods and was taken again after the robbery had been done. The Buick was left in charge of a man who, Madeiros understood, drove away and left it in another part of the woods. After the job at South Braintree, and after changing into the Hudson car, the party passed thru Randolph, and was seen by a boy named Thomas ... ter. Madeiros says ... aimed with the boy ... when he came to ... with his pal, James ... the same street. ...ty started from Prov... m. on the day of the ... murder. It went first ...en back to Providence, ... South Braintree, ar... noon. The men spent ... in a "speak-easy" in ...ntree, two or three miles ...lace of the crime.

On a visit to Boston a stop was made in Andrew Square. Magdiros remained in the car while the others went into a saloon to get information, as they told him, about the payroll money that was to be sent to South Braintree.

Madeiros said he had never before been in South Braintree. These four men had persuaded him to go with them two or three nights previously, in a saloon in Providence. Two were men from 30 to 35 years of age, one was about 40, and the fourth about 55. Madeiros was then 18, which means that he is now only 24.

Two men did the shooting, the oldest one and one other man. When the party broke up it was agreed that the others should meet Madeiros in a Providence saloon the next night to divide the money (more than $15,000 was taken) that they had obtained. Madeiros went to the saloon but the others did not come.

Madeiros said that during the payroll robbery he remained in the back seat of the automobile; that he had a Colt automatic pistol, but did not use it. He was told that he was there to help back the crowd in case a rush was made.

Madeiros says that two of these men lived on South Main Street, and two on North Main Street, in lodging houses, and that he had known them three or four months. The oldest man was called Mike, another one was called William, or "Bill," and he did not remember what the others were called, but said that their names did not amount to anything because they changed their names frequently.

Madeiros again reiterates in his affidavit that Sacco and Vanzetti had nothing to do with this crime, that it was entirely "pat up" by the oldest of the Italians in Providence, in an antotation later in writing on the margin of his affidavit. Madeiros claims that he knows the real names of all four of the men, but that he refuses to disclose them.

This is the simple story of the South Braintree hold-up and murder, admitted by one of the participants. It is a repetition of the story of hundreds of similar holdups and sometimes murders in other sections of the country, with which labor has had as little to do as Sacco and Vanzetti were concerned in the South Braintree affair.

Sacco and Vanzetti are still in prison sentenced to death in the electric chair. A capitalist judge is pondering whether he shall grant them a new trial on this new evidence disclosed.

Labor over the land must thunder its demand, not only that Sacco and Vanzetti be granted a new trial, but that they be unconditionally freed on the ground that the government's frame-up has been blasted to bits with the truth after six long years of delay. Working class justice for Sacco and Vanzetti!

Former Investigator in Hall-Mills Murder Case Is Under Arrest

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.— Startling secrets of the blocked first investigation into the Hall-Mills murders are expected to be revealed today, when Harry L. Dickman, former New Jersey state trooper, is questioned by investigators at Governors Island here.

Dickman, who was ousted before he vanished from sight saying "he had solved the case," was brought east as an army prisoner from the military prison at Alcatraz Island, in San Francisco Bay, by the war department at the request of Governor Moore of New Jersey.

Author of "Mystery."

After other investigators had been withdrawn in the first investigation, Dickman continued to probe the murders. He subsequently enlisted in the army and deserted, and is now serving time for this offense.

Dickman will be asked whether he received a large sum of money to disappear, investigators said.

says that he has also conferred w... J. Harry Philbin, of Baltimore, vice president of the Emergency Fleet corporation.

Senator's Letter.

Here is a letter he has written Philbin:

"Due to the coal strike in England there is an unusually great demand for American coal at this time. Our coal mines are wholly adequate to meet the demand. The only difficulty lies in transportation. It lies within the power of the United States Shipping Board to remedy this, and I shall be more than grateful to you than I can express if you will look into the matter promptly and bring about much-needed relief.

"The greatest danger probably lies in the rapid advance in rates which the scarcity of vessels is causing.

"Interest of Labor" to Seek.

"If the shipping board would place twenty-five to fifty boats in this trade for prompt loading they could be readily chartered and prompt dispatch given.

"In taking this matter up with you I am bearing in mind not only the interest of the mine owners and coal dealers, but also the miners, railroad men and other workers, who are vitally affected in that many of them are laid off when the mines are not working full time."

Hampton Roads Side for Ships.

Hampton Roads, according to information received here today, will also ask for the use of government-owned ships in transportation of coal from Norfolk and Newport News to the British Isles.

"This should mean a great thing for Hampton Roads," W. A. Cox, of Norfolk, director of the State Port Authority of Virginia, declared in commenting on General Dalton's announcement that the government will now solicit business for its ships.

Capitalist Government Aids Scabbing.

Boats leased or owned by the government are now loading at Norfolk for shipment of coal to break the British miners' union.

The first ship flying the United States flag to leave Norfolk for the British Isles with a full cargo of coal sailed for Queenstown, Ireland, ... orders, the other day. She was the Sudawsonco, of the Transmarine line, and her captain boasted that she was manned by a complete crew of United States citizens."

Many U. S. Boats Ready.

This boat, which had more than 7,000 tons of "scab" coal as her cargo, arrived at Norfolk from Newark, N. J., in ballast. At least twelve more ships of the same line, all of which have been tied up for a considerable time, will be placed in this coal-carrying trade.

The commercial Pathfinder, a Moore and McCormack (commercial) line ship, which was purchased from the United States government for a very small sum, carried 6,508 tons of scab coal from Baltimore to Queenstown, Ireland, for orders, on Aug. 28.

Several ships of other United States lines have also carried part cargoes of coal from Norfolk and Baltimore.

Fill British Foreign Market.

The Saucoa, a shipping board ship, as far back as July, left Hampton Roads, with a part cargo of coal for Genoa, Italy. The American Republic line, which is owned by Moore and McCormack, is taking part cargoes of coal to South American ports while the American Export line is carrying part cargoes of coal to Mediterranean ports.

The Union Sulphur line, another United States company, according to reports current along the Baltimore and Norfolk waterfronts, may soon engage in transport of coal from this country to smash the British miners' union.

...Are Power Fascist Dictator

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Sept. 20. — It has been ... for some time that a strong ... of the Spanish bourgeoisie ... an insult against Dictator Primo de Rivera. This is certified by the recent alliance of old party heads to bring pressure upon the ... King to oust De Rivera before he can assume a false power of the national assembly which he is to pick by hand to give him the form of a legal instrument.

Threatens Alfonso's Rule.

This alliance is headed by Count Romanones, one of if not the most wealthy man in Spain and head of the Liberal party, Sanchez Guerra of the conservative party and Melquedes Alvarez, president of the house of deputies before De Rivera dissolved it. These have threatened the king that if he permits the proposed fake assembly to be established, they will consider a movement to displace Alfonso with the king's third son or even to set up a republic.

Primo de Rivera aims to constitute an assembly by picking carefully elected supporters among the upper classes and adding forty "workers" from the socialists, whose party has always supported the dictator and been free from repression such as that suffered by the Communists.

Socialists Aid Dictator.

This parallels in a way the collaboration of the Italian socialists with Italian fascism, only moving much more openly. The socialist-controlled general federation of labor has issued a call for a convention to determine the attitude toward the fake assembly, and it is expected that the socialist leaders wish to accept the forty seats offered by Primo de Rivera, thus bringing the federation into official collaboration with the dictator.

In the proposed assembly, De Rivera's ally, La Cierva, a man more shrewd and ruthless than De Rivera, is aiming at coming forward with an even stronger dictatorship than the present. La Cierva was the man who represented the Catalonian separatist movement with blood and iron and he would be a fascist dictator of the real type.

FRANCO-GERMAN PACT WELCOMED BY WASHINGTON

U. S. Sees Outlet for Capital and Goods

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—American foreign trade and finance will profit materially by successful negotiation of the Stresseman-Briand accord, linking Germany and France politically and commercially, government economic experts declared today.

Experts see two important developments from the American standpoint:

(1) Rehabilitated markets in both countries, leading to an increase in the sale of American goods.

Outlet For U. S. Capital.

(2) A safe outlet for surplus American capital, this, in the case of France, hinging on ratification of the debt pact.

Prosperity in Germany and France are inter-dependent, in the opinion of American officials, who declared that popular sentiment in both countries eventually will yield to important concessions to make the accord possible.

Germany is particularly anxious to see stabilization of the franc and France restored to financial normalcy, observers said.

France Undersells Germany.

"Under present conditions, owing to the decline of the franc, France is able to undersell German producers not only abroad but in Germany. French competition of this sort must be eliminated if Germany is to be successful in its battle to regain prewar position in the world markets.

"Germany probably needs stabilization of the franc more than any other country," an official explained.

Form Huge Combines.

There is every indication that French and German industrial and commercial interests "look eye to eye" on important economic questions, according to experts. This is evidenced by the organization of huge cartels or trusts in the iron and steel and other industries, which comprise no national boundaries.

"Both France and Germany realize that they have certain interests in common," an official declared. "The French finances weak, Germany is now in a position to drive a bargain," the official added.

Forget How War Started.

"If French economic conditions improve they will soon forget to accuse Germany of war responsibility. In fact we are now forgetting how the war started. The chief point is to consolidate the existing ...

...HIM AND REBELLION STIRS MILITARY

By a Spanish Worker.

MADRID (By Mail)—Primo de Rivera's coup d'etat on September 13, 1923, was possible and was easily carried out because he was backed by the big Spanish bourgeoisie in opposition to the old political parties, by the army, especially responsible for the shameful military defeat of 1921 in Morocco which was on the point of being exposed by the "chamber of deputies," and even by King Alfonso, who was also anxious to stop the proceedings against those responsible for the African venture in which he participated.

Old Support, Vacillates.

But this backing by some sections of the nation has disappeared and a strong reaction against Primo de Rivera's government is invading the whole country. Primo de Rivera's dictatorship is probably the most unpopular government in Europe.

The Spanish proletariat, the bourgeoisie and political parties of all tendencies with the exception of the socialist leaders, are hostile to Primo de Rivera.

Two Army Revolts.

The army, since 1924 has been protesting and planning all sorts of plots against the government. The two more serious ones were that of the 24th day of June and that of August 5.

In June it was of an entirely political nature, guided by the leading generals of that belong to the old political parties, including some republican officers and the artillery corps.

The Artillery Revolt.

The revolt of the artillery was produced by a professional question. The appointment of officers has always been carried out by seniority, with a view of avoiding favoritism and corruption. Primo de Rivera issued a decree by which the appointments were to be made by "merits and services" and granted by the government.

The officers of the 'artillery corps made a definite and strong protest against this decree and organized a rebellion to oppose the carrying out of the measure.

Cause of Failure.

The artillery was prepared to fight the government. On August 5 the cannon were ready to answer Primo de Rivera if he intended to force the artillery to follow his orders. All Spain that morning lived in the atmosphere of civil war.

But in the afternoon of the same day news spread about that the artillery had ceased its attitude against the government and Primo de Rivera triumphantly published a "communique" to the country announcing that the rebellion had ended with the defeat of the artillery.

Nobody could understand what had happened: Without any fight, the barracks that some hours before were ready to resist any attack, were handed over to Primo de Rivera's government. The fact could not be explained.

King Alfonso Tricked Leaders.

Some days later it was known that the leaders of the rebellion had backed down, personally influenced by the king, who was clever enough to awake their monarchial feeling and promise them a satisfactory answer to their demands.

So the generals gave the order to stop the revolt. And the order was carried out because the lower officers thought it was produced by a triumph of their demands. But when the facts were known, the discontent and protest of the artillery were very hot. They consider the surrender as a treason of their chiefs.

Gravity of the Moment.

By a royal decree Primo de Rivera dismissed the artillery officers from their commands. The command of artillery barracks was given to infantry and cavalry. This and the trials began against the artillery officers gave an apparent strength to the government.

But the position of Primo de Rivera is each day more difficult. He is constantly menaced by military insurrection. The end of Primo de Rivera's dictatorship is approaching.

British Government Refuses to Use Its Force on Mine Owners

LONDON, Sept. 20. — In the argument in the House of Commons over the coal strike negotiations, David Lloyd George demanded that the government take over the coal mines and compel the mine owners to accept arbitration.

Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, who conducted the unsuccessful negotiations in the absence of Premier Baldwin recently and who had proposed that the miners' national union practically abdicate its powers to a government arbitration board, did not approve of the suggestion that the mine owners accede to the same sort of proposal.

"We have no intention whatever," said Churchill, "of being led into a course of action which would lead to temporary nationalization of the coal industry."

SOUTH AFRICAN PREMIER HINTS AT SECESSION

British Empire Rapidly Losing Its Power

SOUTH AFRICA—(By Mail) — In announcing his intention of demanding an independent national status for South Africa at the forthcoming imperial conference, General Hertzog points out that Ireland and Canada, too, will make similar demands.

Hertzog denies that he stands for "secession," but his disclaimer is not credited here, particularly after the speech made on the eve of his departure.

Empire a Joke.

"The government stands for continuing our relations with the empire," he said, "but only if the full integrity of our national status is declared to the world."

He added that the new national flag was necessary as a symbol of "independence already achieved."

The British empire has sustained a number of severe shocks since the war, but after the conference London will have difficulty in convincing even Henry Dubb that the empire exists off paper.

CATHOLIC CHURCH PRESSING U. S. LABOR TO BREAK WITH MEXICAN UNIONS ON SUPPORT TO CALLES

ARTICLE III.

(By a Special Correspondent)

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 20.—Peter Collins, who is to lead the onslaught on "Bolshevism" in the United States, is director of the fight against Mexican labor unionists in labor circles of this country, according to men who should know whereof they speak.

He was the principal speaker at the annual outing of the Knights of Columbus of Maryland at Pen-Mar recently.

The "Baltimore Catholic Review" refers to him as "the noted lecturer on economic subjects." This official organ of the church in Baltimore, a citadel of catholicism in the United States, continues:

"Holds a Commission"

"Mr. Collins, who has held a commission in the American Federation of Labor for twenty-five years, is an authority on Communism. His speech was in line with the action taken by the Knights at their annual convention in Philadelphia to conduct a campaign of education against Communism."

These passages from the harangue made by Collins at Pen-Mar have the familiar ring of his old-time anti-radical diatribes:

Attacks Mexican Labor Federation.

"In throwing its support to the Mexican Crom, the American Federation played into the hands of Communists and put President Calles in a position to say that American labor is backing him in his war against religion.

"On November 26, 1924, while I was attending a meeting of the American Federation of Labor at El Paso, the suggestion was made by leaders of the Federation that they attend in a body the inauguration of President Calles. I protested to Gompers and other labor leaders. I declared such action would undoubtedly work havoc to the American Federation. I called the attention of Mr. Gompers and others to the anti-religious celebration being conducted by Obregon, Calles and others.

"Reds," "Blood"—and So On.

"Calles, the Red dictator of Mexico, and his Sovietized gunmen are trying to crucify Christianity on the cross of Communism, while America is in indifferent self-complacency at the very foot of this bloody cross.

"It is unfortunate that due to the failure of the American government to recognize its responsibility and also to the failure of American labor in an organized movement of its leaders to repudiate Calles and his Red radicals in Mexico in their Russian methods, the success of Calles and his regime is no small degree due.

"Marriage, under the so-called Constitution of Mexico, loses its sacred position and becomes, as in Russia, a tool of Soviet enterprise.

Fairy Tales of "Bovietism."

"In Mexico today, education loses its standing and prestige as a potent factor in the cause of civilization by the shackles of Bolshevism. Red internationalism is the dominant note in every act of the rulers of Mexico today, and they vie with Trotsky and the poet dictator of Russia, now deposed, Lenin, in making Red radicalism supreme in the republic at our doors.

"The Constitution of Mexico, put into effect at the plenal point (like the Constitution of Russia, framed on a clause for clause similar to that of the Russian constitution and contains Bolshevik principles and enactments which defy intolerance and atheism."

The Baltimore "Sun" in its report of Collins' talk, says:

"Declaring that the Calles government in Mexico is a Bolshevistic regime," Peter Collins, in an address today before the Knights of Columbus assembled here, urged the American Federation of Labor to sever all relations with the Mexican Federation of Labor.

"Mr. Collins, who for eight years was international secretary of the Electricians' Union of the American Federation of Labor, spoke to approximately 400 persons who came here from Baltimore on the Knights of Columbus annual excursion.

"Mr. Collins said the American Declaration of Independence set forth that all should have religious freedom. As the American Federation of Labor subscribed to this doctrine, he asserted, it should refuse to continue negotiations with any body that did not believe in this fundamental doctrine."

Governor Wents Child Labor.

"Baltimore Catholic Review" quite significantly, does not say that Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland also spoke. But the "Sun" report declares "the governor condemned the proposed twentieth amendment to the Constitution, regulating child labor."

Collins, whom the catholic paper asserts "has held a commission in the American Federation of Labor for twenty-five years," made no protest.

U. S. Navy Aids Hated Nicaraguan Dictator to Maintain Control

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 20.—An indication of how deeply the United States is involved in trying to suppress the liberal revolution against Dictator Chamorro in Nicaragua is seen in the report that planes housed in Chamorro's hangar at Managua "have been used by United States aviators employed by the constabulary in reconnoitring against the revolutionists."

Another evidence of American imperialism's interference is plain in the fact that two U. S. destroyers arrived at Bluefields to reinforce the six gunboats already in Nicaraguan waters.

The "armistice" forced upon the revolutionists by the United States appear to be badgered by some of the forces, since the hangar mentioned was damaged by a bomb explosion caused by someone hostile to the government which rules only by U. S. armed support. In addition, Chamorro has dispatched a strong detachment to Coco, to prevent any

To ... and Workingclass Organizations

To All Workers

Dear Sirs and Brothers:

TODAY there is only one out-and-out, aggressive and militant working class daily in the English language in the United States—a country with more than thirty millions of workers. This is The DAILY WORKER.

Being part of the American labor movement, you can readily see the burning need for such a paper as The DAILY WORKER—a daily which unceasingly and fearlessly fights for the workers in every city of the land and in every struggle of the oppressed and exploited. Race, creed, color, nationality don't count one bit with The DAILY WORKER when there is to be a call to action or a mobilization for a fight against the capitalist class anywhere and at any time.

You know that it costs piles of money to get out a daily paper and to keep it going. The American employing class spends nearly a billion dollars year in and year out only thru the subsidy of advertising to keep its press going full speed against the working people and the impoverished farming masses. The eleven thousand American millionaires are doing more than their bit pouring out many millions in many other ways to keep their press on the job fighting the workers.

Of course, you know that THE WORKERS MUST BUILD AND HAVE A POWERFUL PRESS OF THEIR OWN. But this is a hard job. It costs very much. And yet we cannot possibly get laong well without a mighty working class press to battle courageously and unflinchingly for the interests and demands of the exploited masses. THIS IS EXACTLY WHAT THE DAILY WORKER HAS BEEN DOING FROM THE VERY FIRST DAY OF ITS EXISTENCE

NOW THE DAILY WORKER IS UP AGAINST IT. We are having a very hard time to keep going. We have no advertising revenue from the bosses and bankers or any other sort of subsidy from the exploiters of labor. We will continue publication only if YOU say so. The DAILY WORKER IS YOUR PAPER. Invest in it. KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

If you will ask for references, we will not be able to give you the same ones that the New York Times or World, or the Chicago Tribune, or the Los Angeles Times, or any of the other hundreds of prosperous employing class dailies will give you. Not a single banking house, not a single broker on "the street," not a single manufacturing corporation in the whole country will tell you to put your money in an investment to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER.

The best we can do in giving you proof of our reliability is to refer you to hundreds of labor unions and working class organizations and thousands of exploited workers thruout the country.

If you want to know why YOU should support The DAILY WORKER and make an immediate contribution, as best you can, to KEEP THE DAILY WORKER, then ask:

1. The thousands of heroic striking textile workers in Passaic.
2. The thousands of victorious fur workers in New York City.
3. The thousands of garment workers bravely battling against vicious injunctions.
4. The growing progressive forces fighting to save the Miners' Union.
5. The scores of thousands of badly underpaid workers in the rubber factories in Akron, in the automobile plants in Detroit, in the steel mills in Pittsburgh and Gary.
6. The thousands of workers striving to build an American labor party.
7. The many thousands of persecuted foreign-born workers.
8. The increasing thousands of fearless fighters for the defense of the workers' right to the freedom of speech, press, assembly and organization.
9. The scores of thousands of progressive and left wing workers in the trade union movement.
10. The hundreds of thousands striving for the establishment of a workers' and farmers' republic and the abolition of capitalism in the United States.

WHAT BETTER REASONS AND WHAT MORE RELIABLE REFERENCES CAN WE OFFER YOU FOR YOU AND YOUR ORGANIZATION GIVING NOW—TODAY—IMMEDIATELY TO

U. M. W. LOCAL AN EXAMPLE TO PROGRESSIVES

Real Support to Many Labor Measures

By GEORGE BROWN
Worker Correspondent.

W. BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 30.—Our local of the U. M. W., Local No. 2230, sets an example for our sister local unions in the U. M. W. A. and in the rest of the labor movement in America. Take for example what a local union can do when its members become real active. Our local was the first one to start a fight against, and call a conference to fight the hills that were against the foreign-born workers before the last congress.

Assessment to Aid British.

We called a conference in our territory on the question of the British miners' strike. We assessed ourselves $1.00 every two weeks. 40 per cent goes to the British miners, 60 per cent goes to the miners in our own district to fight the Pittsburgh Coal company and other coal companies for trying to force our brothers to work on the 1917 scale by starving and terrorizing them. We also recently sent $49.00 to the British miners from a picnic which we had two weeks ago.

On the question of the Passaic textile strike, we also participated in the raising of the money for the Passaic textile strikers. At the same time we helped to organize the Passaic textile relief conference in the Brownsville section. Our local alone raised over $70.00 for the Passaic strike.

The members of our local union realize that we workers must have independent political action. That is to have a political party which will oppose the democratic party and the republican party and which will be able to fight in behalf of the whole labor movement, so when the West Brownsville Trades Council called a conference in Washington county to organize such an affair our local union elected a committee to attend this conference which was held recently at Charleroi.

We also donated $20.00 to the conference for the carrying on of work to build up a Washington county labor party in this section of the country.

This local union stands one hundred per cent for John Brophy who is now opposing John L. Lewis in the coming elections in the U. M. W. A. It also stands behind all followers of John Brophy who are opposing the machine and who are for the building up of the union.

Ladies' Garment Union Issues Periodical to Help Organize Workers

By a Worker Correspondent.

The Ladies' Garment Worker, published by the Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers in Chicago, has made its appearance. It is a neatly printed four-page sheet which aims "to uncover the injustices committed by the so-called operators of the ladies' garment industry, meaning the employers."

The snappy little sheet is militant and cannot fail but be of great service in the union's aim to bring every tailor employed on ladies' clothes into the organization.

In addition to articles about conditions in the non-union shops and other matters that are of particular interest to the garment workers, the international secrets of the class struggle are introduced.

The first number of the Ladies' Garment Worker is good. We wish it success. Garment-workers who see this notice and who as not yet secured a copy of the little paper are invited to write to the offices of the I. L. G. W. U., 328 W. Van Buren street.

PORTO RICANS IMPORTED FOR COTTON FIELDS

Suffer Awful Misery in Arizona Valley

By WILLIAM O'BRIEN
(Worker Correspondent)

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 22 (By Mail)—The Cotton Growers' Association is importing Porto Rican labor, men, women and children into the valley to pick cotton. But the promises made them are not lived up to and the workers are suffering such terrible conditions that they are forced to appeal to the Phoenix Central Labor Council for aid.

Report Children Dead of Exposure.

The Labor Hall was packed with them, a pitiful sight. Babies in arms of sick and homeless mothers. They walked into Phoenix from different parts of the valley in search of food, shelter and medical attention for the sick women and children. Three or four children are reported to have died from exposure and hunger.

At a special meeting of the Central Labor Council, Brother Chavey of the Porto Ricans who spoke good English explained the situation:

Labor Agents Lied.

"The agents of the Cotton Growers contracted with us in Porto Rico that we were to get $3 a day and a house to live in, all children over ten years to get the same pay. But many picked cotton for three days with nothing to eat, drinking water from ditches and living along the canal banks without shelter. Children became sick from exposure. No medical attention was available."

"We were sold like sheep to the farmers who paid only one and a quarter cents per pound, and could not average over 25 pounds a day. Therefore we are forced to leave and appeal to our fellow workers for aid and assistance to return to our homes."

Shipboads Coming.

Brother Chavey reports that several hundred are already in the valley, another thousand on the way and a ship about to leave Porto Rico with a thousand more. The agents show them pictures of nice houses where they are supposed to live to trick them into signing up.

There are many mechanics, carpenters, bricklayers, printers and painters among them, and undoubtedly the Chamber of Commerce hoped to fight the building trades with them as strike breakers, but the Porto Ricans are not that kind of stuff.

Mexicans were previously imported and abused the same way, but since the Calles government exists they are going back to Mexico, not coming.

MINE INSPECTION IN PENNSYLVANIA ONLY A PRETENSE

Company and Inspector Work Hand in Hand

By ZERO, Worker Correspondent.

DAISYTOWN, Pa., Sept. 30.—There are laws made by the Pennsylvania legislature to protect the life and limb of coal miners. But these laws are not observed. There are state mine inspectors whose duty it is to see that such laws are obeyed. But they do not do their duty. This story tells how and why.

448 Injured in Six Months.

Vesta Mine No. 4 is a dangerous mine. In the first six months of this year there were 448 miners who received first aid in the company hospital. Some of them are now beyond any aid.

There was much carelessness in spite of the "safety first" slogan of the company. So a few weeks ago when the company started to do some badly needed cleaning of side swipers, pulling down of bad roof, taking down loose coal, posting up manway at places and so on, we wondered what was coming off. We didn't have to wait long.

Knew Inspector Was Coming.

One fine morning assistant mine foremen and fire bosses were rushing from place to place and instructing the men to put their places in as safe condition as possible, as the state mine inspector was coming.

The inspector came around with some of the mine officials and went away again. But he saw the mine only where the company wanted him to see it. He did not see any place else and apparently did not want to see any place else.

Very Easily Satisfied.

He never saw the dangerous places the place where a few weeks ago four men riding on the man trip were hurt by a fall of loose roof coal. He did not see the place where a man was killed by loose rock. He did not see the place where another man was squeezed by a loaded wagon and died after three months of suffering in the company hospital.

But the point of the incident is: How in hell do the bosses know when the mine inspector is coming? Is there a connection between the state mine inspector's office and the coal company?

It is plain that the state and the coal operators work hand in hand and the inspection is merely bluff to white-wash the company, for the miners derive no real benefit from it.

It is also plain that this will continue until the miners themselves elect the inspectors and the union supervises their work.

...MENT UNION HOLDS FAST ON PICKET LINES

...liance Needed as the Bosses Face Crisis

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 30.—While cloakmakers' general strike committee announced last night that union officials have been invited to attend a conference of all factors of the cloak industry at the office of Raymond V. Ingersoll, impartial chairman, in the hope of settling the present strike of 40,000, it firmly decided all reports current yesterday that any informal conferences have been held or any, tentative settlements have been reached with cloak manufacturers.

Striking cloakmakers are warned not to be diverted, by these reports, from continuous activity on the picket line or other strict adherence to their various duties. It was pointed out that, at the present crucial period in the strike with manufacturers unable to obtain any sizable amount of production, it was important not to relax any vigilance on the picket line.

About 150 cloak strikers were arraigned before Magistrate Harry Gordon in Jefferson Market court on charges of congregating in the garment zone. Many received $3 or $5 fines which were paid by the union. Among those arrested yesterday were Charles Zimmerman, vice-chairman of the general strike committee, and Silas Marks, secretary of the general picket committee. Both Zimmerman and Marks were discharged.

NEW YORK.—(FP)— The Literary Employes' Union composed of employee of the New York Public Library and its branches and claiming to have the support of the Central Trades and Labor Council, sent yesterday to Mayor Walker and other members of the board of estimate a petition asking that the city government take over control of the library and all its branches and administer them under civil service regulations.

The appeal complains of favoritism under present methods of management and asks equalization of salaries for employes in Queens and Richmond who perform a similar line of duties with those in Manhattan and Brooklyn who receive higher pay.

INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM DISCUSSED AT BRITISH TRADE UNION CONGRESS

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH.

The discussion at the British Trade Union Congress on the question of industrial unionism versus "One Big Union" requires a certain understanding of the structure of some of the British unions.

At first sight, it might appear that the One Big Union idea is the most there, and the most "Left." This, however, is by no means the case; and, at a congress where so much cowardice was shown by leaders, and where the big mechanical voting powers were wielded in their favor, it is some consolation to know that the idea of one union for each industry gained the congresses' approval by 2,164,000 to 1,650,000.

The One Big Union was defended by several reactionaries—not by craft union reactionaries as much as by the representatives of the "general workers' unions."

Unions of Skilled Labor.

Like most countries where capitalist development began early, the first unions of Britain were unions of skilled workers. During years these organizations grew and thrived. In the meantime, however, the growing improvement in the productive technical apparatus introduced into industry an increasing number of unskilled. The unskilled workers—the vendors of raw labor power—were looked upon with a certain contempt by the skilled toilers, who had not the sense to realise that increasing mechanical efficiency was undermining their own position as skilled men. The unskilled were not admitted to most of the older craft unions.

Then came the great forward movement of the 1880's, culminating in the great dock strike of 1888. At this period were born the organisations of unskilled workers, which were the parents of the present unions of general workers. These unions admitted to membership the unskilled laborers who were debarred from entry into the older craft bodies.

Mass Unions.

Thus there have grown up in Britain unions which organize masses of workers in all industries. The two principal ones are the Workers' Union and the General and Municipal Workers' Union. The Transport Workers' Union has also now broadened its field and admits general workers also.

As in most industries, the skilled workers were already organised, the members of these general unions are, in great majority, the unskilled workers in those industries where the craft unions do not cater for them. Thus we have the specials of these great mass unions competing with the older unions for membership. The general workers' unions are not industrial unions, as they confine their field to no single industry, but accept recruits from any branch of production.

Industrial Unions.

Besides the craft unions and the general workers' unions, there are also industrial unions, such as the miners. Thus the three forms of unionism exist.

The general workers' unions have been permeated with a most reactionary ideology, and count among their leaders the worst of the opponents of the left wing. The lack of homogeneity, which must prevail in a union which masses together workers of various industries, enables the leaders to impose their will more easily upon the membership.

Most Reactionary.

It was the leaders of these loose, octopus unions of general workers who opposed the idea of industrial unionism—one union for each industry—at the Trades Union Congress at Bournemouth. They did so for excellent reason: the formation of industrial unions would mean the allocation of various sections of their own members to their appropriate industrial unions, and would thus mean the finish of the "mixed" or general workers' unions.

These reactionary leaders, therefore, sought to oppose the industrial union idea by supporting the fine-sounding "revolutionary" and "advanced" concept of One Big Union for all workers. They condemned the industrial union as not being sufficiently inclusive, and sought to show that there is greater solidarity in a union to which all workers belong.

It was curious to hear these reactionaries speaking of solidarity and using revolutionary terms. For they have been amongst the worst saboteurs of the miners' struggle, and have also been fighting the British minority movement with all their strength. In the General Workers' Union, for example, of which Clynes is president, the leaders have forbidden their branches to affiliate, or send delegates to, the minority movement, and in Liverpool have even expelled two members who were active supporters of the minority movement.

Would Not Work.

Certain craft union leaders also supported the One Big Union idea, not because they really believed in it, but because they knew well it was impossible of fulfilment, whereas industrial unionism — a far more practical change—threatened their own comfortable jobs.

The reactionary supporters of One Big Union, therefore, have been defeated. But we must not be overhopeful because of this. The adoption of the resolution in favor of industrial unionism means but little unless the General Council is forced to translate it into action. Only by calling together the various unions and planning definite amalgamations of the unions can industrial unionism be furthered. And with the personnel of the General Council, we cannot expect much action on these lines, unless their hand is forced by the determined pressure of the rank and file, expressed thru the growing minority movement.

R. R. SHOPMEN JUMP FROM THEIR COMPANY UNION FRYING PAN INTO FIRE OF GOVERNMENT "MEDIATION"

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Shopmen employed by the Boston & Maine railroad who turned their company union into a rebel camp some months ago have appealed to the U. S. Railroad Mediation Board in Washington and have been promised its "services." Commissioner Hanger is scheduled to arrive in Boston Sept. 20, and to take up this dispute after dealing with two other industrial difficulties involving the Boston & Maine.

Company Union Changes Gears.

Some months ago the company union in the B. & M. shops sent a delegation of five men to lay certain proposals before the management. The company officials did not like their tone and sent them away with an emphatic refusal. Then the five delegates were dismissed. Whereupon the humble spirit of the members of the company union disappeared and sentiment in favor of a strike rapidly developed.

After much discussion the leaders persuaded the men to apply instead for affiliation with one of the independent unions—the American Federation of Railroad Workers. This organization made formal application to Washington for mediation.

It charged that the company had unjustly refused to establish adjustment boards to settle the shopmen's grievance as was contemplated in the Watson-Parker railroad labor act.

Appeal from Capital to Capitalist Government.

Officials of both independent and standard rail labor organisations are keenly interested in this case because it is the first one under which the members of a company union have risen in revolt and made application to the mediation board for its help in settling a dispute with a big railroad corporation.

The board has recognised the right of the independent union to which these B. & M. employes have affiliated to act as their spokesmen in summoning the company's representatives to explain why the new law has been ignored.

Coolidge Finally Rules.

If the board is unable to adjust the grievance—if the company does not back down and reinstate the men and recognise their right to enter as local labor unions—then the case will go forward to an emergency board to be appointed by the president. This last tribunal will issue a report urging settlement according to its own findings of fact.

Auto Body Workers Continue Strike for Union in Elizabeth

ELIZABETH, N. J. Sept. 30.—(FP)—Mass picketing of the Hays-Hunt body plant of Durant Motor corporation has begun to make the strike of body workers effective. A mass meeting of the Hays-Hunt and Durant workers voted a general walk-out in sympathy with the upholsterers and trimmers who have been on strike for two weeks. There are 2,000 workers in the plants involved. Mass strike meetings are held daily. The strikers' demand recognition of their union, reinstatement of discharged active union workers and recognition of shop committees.

The upholsterers and trimmers are organized in Local 13 and affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, to which they are appealing for aid. The strike is backed by A. F. of L. Organiser Edward McGrady and, New Jersey State Federation of Labor officials: Henry Hilfers, J. H. Connolly and Hugh Reilly. The Flint Motors corporation is having its bodies made at the Hays-Hunt plant along with various Durant cars.

RACIAL BIAS AT WISCONSIN "U", HEBREWS CHARGE

President Glenn Frank Will Investigate

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 30. — There will be no racial prejudice at the University of Wisconsin and complaints of racial discrimination will be investigated by President Glenn Frank personally as an outgrowth of claims made by Milwaukee hebrews that Alex Stern had been denied a position in the university library because of his faith, it was learned today.

High Recommendations.

Stern, a student at the university from Milwaukee, applied for a library position with high recommendations from M. B. Dudgeon, Milwaukee public librarian. Dudgeon received a reply from Miss Alice V. King, university employment officer, which is alleged to have declared, "No Jewish students are acceptable."

Refused To Comment.

Miss King, when interviewed today, refused to comment on the letter she is said to have written. She declared she had not communicated with Stern and that her correspondence had been with Mr. Dudgeon only. She asserted that any information must come from President Frank.

President Frank was emphatic in his declaration that there can be no racial or religious discrimination at the university and that no such policy exists in any branch of the university.

MISMANAGEMENT AND SOUTHERN CHEAP LABOR COMPETITION ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR TEXTILE SLUMP

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

That easy profits from cheap labor encourage backwardness in management is shown in the story of the cotton industry in Fall River, Mass. A Wall Street Journal article on this greatest textile center holds lack of material initiative quite as much as southern competition responsible for the depression which has made part-time and unemployment characteristic of the last four or five years.

"Fall River mills," says the journal, "have been developed, financed and managed by local interests to a much greater extent than other manufacturing centers. With little new blood from the outside, a policy of nepotism over a period of years has in numerous cases dulled the initiative of managements. When they could afford to do so the mills did not change their machinery and manufacturing methods to meet the new demands."

Less than $1,000 a year.

Wages in Fall River cotton mills in 1914, the journal shows, averaged only $420 for the entire year's work. In only one year since has the average reached $1,000. That was in 1920, when mill workers earned an average of $1,045. In 1924, the last year covered by the Wall Street Journal, the annual wage fell to $822.

In spite of these extremely low wages, less than the barest family subsistence, and in spite of operations in the last few years running as low as 50 per cent of capacity, Fall River dividends continue. In 1920 they rose to $11,065,900, more than nine times the pre-war figure; and in 1924, with operations throttled down to half of capacity, Fall River cotton mill dividends were 65 per cent above 1924.

Dividend Figures.

Figures showing for each year since 1914 the value of Fall River cotton mill products, the wages paid, and dividends are:

| Fall River Cotton Mills | Value of Products | Total Wages | Total Dividends |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1914 | $ 49,816,037 | $13,081,876 | $1,226,792 |
| 1915 | 45,363,724 | 12,707,665 | 1,145,156 |
| 1918 | 65,374,314 | 15,736,473 | 3,372,464 |
| 1917 | 92,148,372 | 16,681,438 | 4,321,261 |
| 1918 | 113,876,688 | 20,352,783 | 6,142,266 |
| 1919 | 136,788,717 | 25,997,213 | 4,926,145 |
| 1920 | 149,323,703 | 31,002,421 | 1,1065,900 |
| 1921 | 67,860,875 | 24,242,108 | 3,084,875 |
| 1922 | 91,753,656 | 26,214,713 | 2,605,500 |
| 1923 | 100,875,536 | 28,216,724 | 4,691,544 |
| 1924 | 60,923,718 | 18,680,407 | 2,372,450 |

No Share in Prosperity.

The figures show that labor had no share in the great prosperity of the war years. In 1917 when the total value of the product increased 26 per cent over 1914, wages had increased only 42 per cent. In 1918 the value of their output was up 140 per cent, but wages were 55 per cent. In 1919 the figures were 175 per cent and 98 per cent, and in 1920, when the value of the product was 202 per cent over pre-war, wages were up only 137 per cent. This means that the percentage of wages to the total value of the product fell from 26.4 per cent in 1914 to a low point of 17.1 per cent in 1918.

In 1924, when the dividends paid by these mills were 85 per cent over 1914, wages totaled only 45 per cent above that year.

Describing the position of Fall River in the industry the Wall Street Journal says: "Today Fall River has more looms than any other city in the United States, some 4,000,000. Like New Bedford, it is essentially a city of cotton manufacturing, to which is devoted 70 per cent or more of its manufacturing activity. There are around 35 major cotton mills. There is also in Fall River the largest American Printing Co., with 250,000 spindles, 8,000 looms and 42 printing machines, all capable of producing 2,000,000 yards of cloth a week and printing 6,000,000 yards."

These things go by contraries, and the girl who landed Bunny did so because she did not try. The family of Henrietta Ashleigh had money for generations, and so could afford to look down upon it, and all those who sought it. This was the way to impress Bunny, who was aware that his money was painfully new. Never would he attain to the aggressive self-assurance of his sister; he was looking for something better than himself, and for a while he found it in the Ashleighs, with their perfect manners and well trained servants and mansion full of the debris of culture.

Henrietta was tall and slender, gentle, soft of voice, and reserved to the point of primness. Her mother had just died, and for a year she wore black, which of course was very conspicuous. She was high church Episcopal, and on Sunday mornings wore long kid gloves and carried a little prayer-book and hymnal joined together, bound in black leather with a gold border. She took Bunny to church and he learned that one does not have to take ancient Hebrew mythology with vulgar literalness, but may have its symbolic meaning explained by a white-haired old gentleman with a trace of English accent.

What Henrietta meant to Bunny was a refuge from the anguish and tumult of illegitimate desire. He fled to her as to a saint, and madonna alive and visible upon a college campus. She was far above the glaring crudeness of the smart set; she did not use paint nor powder—nothing so common as perspiration would presume to appear on her delicately chiseled nose. You might dream of kissing her, but it would remain a dream; she would call you "Mr. Ross" during the first six months of your acquaintance, and after that she would call you "Arnold," finding it dignified, perhaps because of Matthew. So long as you knew and truly appreciated her, you would make the highest grades in class, and, as the little black and gold prayer-book phrased it, "honor and obey the civil authorities, and submit yourself to all your governors, teachers, spiritual pastors and masters."

III

Bunny went up to Paradise for his Christmas holidays, and there was the first word from Paul, a plain card, bearing the stamp of the American Expeditionary Force, but no place; no picture post-card with "Scenes in Urkutsk" or "Camel-sleigh on the Volga," or anything like that! "Dear Ruth," it said: "Just a line to let you know that I am well and everything is all right. I have received three letters from you. Please write often. We are busy and I am having an interesting time. Give my love to all the family and to Bunny and Mr. Ross. Affectionately, Paul."

Ruth had had this treasure for several days, and there was no telling how many times she had read it, and studied every word on both sides. It seemed to Bunny a cold and unsatisfactory note, but he did not say so to Ruth; he asked Dad about it, and Dad said there would necessarily be a great deal of censoring of soldier's mail, and Paul had probably written this bare message to make sure it got through. Why did there have to be so much censoring? Bunny asked; and Dad answered that these were ticklish times, and the army had to protect itself against enemy propaganda.

Dad had been reading a magazine article which explained what was happening in the world... The German and Austrian empires had come down with a crash, and that was a great triumph for democracy. But now the friends of democracy had a second big job to do, which was to crush the wild beast of Bolshevism. They were starving it by a blockade on every front, and wherever the well-behaved and respectable Russians had set up a government on the borders, the allies were helping them with money and supplies. General Denikin had taken possession of south Russia; on the west a lot of new states had been set up; on the north, at Archangel, an anti-Bolshevik group was making headway under British and American protection. As to Siberia, there had been a Socialist government, holding over from the Kerensky days; but these Socialists were a lot of talkers and now they had been kicked out and replaced by a real fighting man, Admiral Kolchak, who had once commanded the Tsar's fleet. It was this he-admiral the allies were backing to run Siberia, and our troops were there to keep the railroad open for him. Of course the Bolsheviks and their sympathizers in this country were making a fuss about it, and telling all the lies they could; that was why we had to have a censorship, said Dad.

Bunny accepted this explanation without question. He had been in a training-camp for seven months, and had acquired the military point of view. He was keenly alert to the danger of Bolshevik propaganda and determined that if ever he ran into any of it, he would hasten to denounce it. So innocent was he, and so little aware of the subtlety of the enemy—he never dreamed that he was at this time absorbing the poison; and—of all places in the world—in one of the class rooms of his most Christian and conservative university.

It was hard on a poor overworked university president. Dr. Cowper's most trusted dean had engaged this young instructor, upon recommendation of high-up Y. M. C. A. authorities. The young man had been doing relief work in Saloniki, and was the son of a prominent Methodist pastor; he bore the name of Daniel Webster Irving, and how was anyone to imagine that a man with such a name might be suffering from political shell-shock?

This young instructor was subtle in his method; he did not say anything that could be pinned down on him, but would sow his seeds of doubt by asking questions and advising students to "think for themselves." There are always in every college class one or more "sore-heads," the sons of unorthodox parents; one in Bunny's class was an avowed "rationalist," and another had a Russian name. All that a teacher had to do was to let these fellows ask questions, and quickly the whole group would be wandering in a maze, demoralized by what the Japanese government in its control of education describes as "dangerous thoughts."

President Wilson had gone to Europe, in order to bring about the reign of justice he had promised. He was having a triumphal progress through England and France, and our newspapers were full of the wonders of what he was about to achieve. But in Mr. Irving's class Bunny heard it pointed out that the president had dropped from mention the most important of his "fourteen points," the demand for "freedom of the seas." Could it be that this had been the price of British support for his program? And then, more startling yet, Bunny learned that the secret treaties which the allies had signed among themselves were now laid on the peace table, and made the basis of jealous bickerings. Bunny had never forgotten about those treaties, how Dad had assured Paul that they would turn out to be Bolshevik forgeries. But here the allies were admitting them to be genuine, and furthermore, setting out to enforce them, regardless of any promises of fair play which President Wilson had made to the Germans!

European Intrigue—The Menace of Imperialist War

Over the heads of the Briand-Stresemann love feast comes the shadow aboard an Italian warship of Sir Austen Chamberlain and Mussolini.

While nominally maintaining friendly relations with France, the menace of the proposed Franco-German pact forces Great Britain to make a counter move which the recent activity of Italy in the Mediterranean area also makes necessary.

British imperialism finds its lines of communication to India and Australia endangered by the Spanish-Italian alliance which decrees Italian participation in governing Tangier, from which Gibraltar can be made impotent as a British base controlling the western entrance to the Mediterranean and by the development of Italian submarine warfare which place Cyprus and its intermediate naval bases, at the mercy of a powerful strategically situated Mediterranean power such as Italy is.

Hence the alliance of Britain's ally France and France against Italy without breaking with Britain is the present problem of British diplomacy.

Great Britain already has agreed to a division of Abyssinia with Italy to placate the latter power, but Italian imperialists ambitions do not end there. They contemplate expansion eastward and the Balkan question likewise will be one of the major topics of conversation between Chamberlain and Mussolini. The Italian minister to Albania and the foreign minister of Bulgaria are coming to Rome to consult with Mussolini after his conference with Chamberlain.

Herein lies the greatest immediate danger for the Soviet Union. If Great Britain can engineer an Italian offensive against Turkey, to which Bulgaria and other Balkan nations would take part, the Soviet Union frontiers would be endangered. In addition, the Soviet Union could not remain passive in the event of an offensive against Turkey by western imperialist powers.

In all probability Great Britain will also try to get Italy's endorsement of her activities in Poland where both French and British diplomacy has suffered a defeat with the signing of the new Soviet Union-Lithuanian treaty which sustains the right of Lithuania to Vilna and is thus a challenge to the league of nations.

Not since the early days of 1914 has there been such feverish activity in the European foreign offices.

The alignments for the next world war are being made.

Only the Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions point out to the world's working class the imminent danger of a new war, call upon the labor movement to organize to prevent imperialist war and point out the only way it can be prevented—by the unity of the world labor movement and militant struggle on all fronts.

Henry Ford—the A. F. of L.'s Messiah

Trade union leaders, according to interviews secured by the Federated Press, hail the five-day week announcement of Henry Ford as a victory for organized labor.

This, of course, means that Henry Ford is regarded by these leaders as a friend of workers—"a good employer."

Secretary Davison of the International Association of Machinists hails the Ford five-day week as "taking up of the slack in employment in the industry."

Nothing could be farther from the truth. As a matter of fact, the Ford plants have been running on a five-day basis for a long time during which every conceivable device for increasing production has been tried out on the working force.

The experiments have been successful—altho many of the patients have died from the operation—and for months before the recent announcement Ford's plants have been getting a six-day output in five days.

More than that, it is stated by Ford's technicians that it will be possible to get with the five-day week a full six-day production with a SMALLER force of workers.

What becomes of the theory that the five-day week as established in Ford's plants reduces unemployment?

The Federated Press correspondent falls into the same error when he characterises Ford's plan as a "decision to pass employment around by establishing the five-day working week."

Even Ford himself does not pretend that he is trying to rednce unemployment.

The "good employer" theory as it affects the viewpoint of A. F. of L. officialdom is well illustrated by the following paragraph from a Washington dispatch dealing with the Ford announcement:

At headquarters of the American Federation of Labor the Ford announcement was hailed with pleasure. It gave President Green the opportunity to open the annual convention, October 1 in Detroit with the assertion that in that citadel of non-unionism one of the vital reforms advocated thruout its history by the Federation had just been triumphant.

The bankrupt character of the Federation leadership, when we recall that it decided against undertaking an organisation campaign in the automobile industry. Yet now it calls Ford's plan a victory for organized labor.

The contrary is true and in making these statements the leaders of the trade unions are playing directly into the hands of Ford's so-called company union and others more pronouncedly inimical to the trade union movement.

There are at least 10,000 Ford workers—readers of the shop bulletin issued by the Communist nucleus in the Ford plant—who will curse when they read the truckling tributes to Ford by A. F. of L. officials.

Onward to Detroit

WHAT formed Gompers always referred to as "that great parliament of American labor"—the convention of the American Federation of Labor—opens its forty-sixth annual session in Detroit, October 2.

It will be dominated by the most reactionary officialdom of the most conservative labor movement in the world. The convention will reflect only in a distorted form the needs of the American workingclass.

It will make its own review of its own activities, its own estimate of the status of the American labor movement, draw its own conclusions, put forward its own program as the program of American labor.

IN the last year large sections of the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor have made a long step towards agreement with American capitalism. The official movement has abandoned even purely trade union struggles almost entirely. "Worker-employer co-operation" has been over on its hips. Mass opposition to this policy is developing slowly but surely.

There has been a certain continuity in the policy of A. F. of L. officialdom for the last four years. Its causes and its effects on the mass of the American workingclass must be determined in order that they may be counteracted effectively.

THESE articles are an attempt to describe the American labor movement as it is under the leadership of A. F. of L. officialdom, to determine the strength of the two currents—to the right from above, to the left from below—and to estimate the possibilities for our party and the left wing in the next immediate period.

ARTICLE THREE.
By WM. F. DUNNE.

WHAT is the situation in the trade union movement and how far has the non-strike co-operation policy of officialdom had its reflection in the rank and file of the trade union movement?

One of the indications of the militancy of the trade union membership is the number of strikes and the number of strikes particularly in a period of industrial activity such has been noticeable in the United States from the latter part of 1922 until today (with certain minor fluctuations).

The record of strikes for this period is as follows:

| | 1922 | 1923 | 1924 | 1925 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Building | 112 | 206 | 267 | 309 |
| Clothing | 215 | 357 | 223 | 191 |
| Furniture | 4 | 12 | 34 | 37 |
| Iron & Steel | 10 | 7 | 7 | 4 |
| Leather | 17 | 17 | 5 | 2 |
| Lumber | 10 | 19 | 6 | 6 |
| Metal Trades | 82 | 111 | 57 | 42 |
| Mining | 49 | 159 | 177 | 92 |
| Paper Mfg. | 12 | 16 | 6 | 4 |
| Printing & Publishing | 56 | 19 | 12 | 10 |
| Shipbuilding | 4 | 6 | 1 | — |
| Slaughtering | 6 | 14 | — | — |
| Stone Work | 61 | 15 | 15 | 10 |
| Textiles | 115 | 134 | 79 | 114 |
| Tobacco | 12 | 16 | 12 | 3 |
| Transportation | 67 | 30 | 16 | — |

(Figures taken from the American Labor Year Book for 1926).

THERE are some facts that must be considered when estimating the significance of these figures. In general there is a progressive decline in the number of strikes and this is strong evidence of a decrease in the militancy of the masses—organized and unorganized—because these figures cover both.

The building trades are not decisive because it is a decentralized and fluctuating industry but a considerable there has been a great decrease as compared with 1919-20-21 when there were 473, 521, 553 strikes respectively.

THE clothing trades, where there is a great distinction between the North due to increase in contracting and a shift to small towns outside the big centers, and where the workers are the most class conscious, shows a big progressive decrease.

The same is true of mining. In the soft coal industry the southern non-union fields now are producing the greater amount of coal, there has been a big shift of the industry, constant violations of the Jacksonville agreement by the mine owners, hnt the number of strikes is the lowest (with the sole exception of 1923) since 1916. (The anthracite strike will be dealt with later).

TEXTILES show an increase in strikes over 1924 and this is to be accounted for by the shift in the industry to the south, the terrible conditions of the workers in the industry and the wage-cut policy of the textile capitalists.

In the metal-trades strikes have shown a sharp decline.

In iron and steel and transportation, printing and publishing, meat packing and shipbuilding, strikes have either ceased entirely or dropped to a negligible number.

IN addition to the huge decrease in the number of strikes the number of workers involved has shown a progressive decline as follows:

1922—1,608,321
1923— 744,948
1924— 654,483
1925— 406,996

If we remember that the strike of 150,000 anthracite miners began in September and is included in the above figures we will better appreciate the lack of mass character of the other 828 strikes which make up the 1925 total.

The American working class, especially its organized section, the trade union movement, in the last four years, has practically abandoned the strike weapon.

Nor is the cessation of strike activity the only sign the official peace policy of the trade union leadership has placed its stamp on the labor movement. The trade unions essentially are organs of struggle and if for one reason or another this function is sacrificed the interest of great masses of workers in their organizations ceases.

IN the July number of "Current History" is an article entitled "Industrial Welfare Movement Sapping American Trade Unions" by Abraham Epstein, Research Director of the Pennsylvania Old Age Commission. The article, on the whole of a tone sympathetic to the labor movement, has, in my opinion, been given insufficient attention by the labor and revolutionary press, in sets forth facts of fundamental importance to the working class and the conclusions reached relative to the reasons for the failure of the trade unions to rally any large numbers of the workers for struggle are formulated shrewdly.

THE author's premise is that the trade union movement with its present policy and leadership has entered a period of decay and submits a number of important facts to prove his case.

Quoting the bulletin issued by the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor on the "Present Situation of the Labor Movement," which was based upon replies received in answer to a questionnaire sent to "labor men of high rank" the leading query being: "Does your experience reveal a rather general state of indifference on the part of the rank and file of organized workers?" Epstein says:

Seventy-two of the twenty-six responses received unequivocally declared that their experience reveals a general state of indifference at the present time more pronounced than ever before.

THE reasons given by these union officials for the apathy they encountered are in themselves proof of the charges made by the Communists, i. e. that the present labor leadership has no understanding of the problems of the labor movement, that it has nothing but the most superficial view of the period and that where it is not merely superficial it is reactionary and without any program except that of dependence upon the capitalist class. I quote again:

IN explaining the causes of this inertia, the labor leaders blamed the present stagnation upon themselves, upon the war, business conditions, on the automobile, the radio, the desire for pleasure, jazz, the movies, games, good times, the bad times, President Coolidge, the ignorance of the workers, the Communists, the autocratic and corrupt management of the unions, the gross materialism of the labor movement, the capitalist press, the lack of a labor press, the church, the general disillusionment and the like.

IN other words there were just as many reasons given as there were labor leaders questioned and with one or two exceptions which we may be sure represented a negligibly small minority of the labor officials replying to the questionnaire, the answers are a complete confession of bankruptcy. The replies reads like a symposium on "What's Wrong With the World" written by a collection of hell-fire evangelists.

But the lack of interest in union activities on the part of the rank and file noted by these officials is a fact a dangerous and obvious fact which demands the most serious attention and a remedy.

A FEW concrete illustrations will show that union attendance is at what is probably the lowest ebb reached in years. The Chicago two local unions of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes have a total membership of 20,000. Yet it is on rare occasions that the attendance at a meeting is in excess of 100.

A local union of machinists helpers whose members are employed in the largest and worst paid shops in the city of Chicago, and which has a total membership, of around 600, has an average attendance of 15 or 20.

IN the building trades the local union meetings are little more than committee sessions unless there is some matter of unusual importance.

Even in the local meetings of the United Mine Workers of America, where attendance has always been on a far higher average than in the rest of the trade unions, reliable reports state that attendance is now at a minimum in spite of the bad external conditions and the interest in the struggle now going on inside the union. This is especially true in the anthracite district.

THE conventions of important state federations of labor held this year —Illinois, New York, Minnesota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan—have witnessed triumphs of reaction and as a consequence have been as dead as the proverbial herring.

Almost all of them have been greeted by the chamber of commerce in the convention city and as a correspondent who attended the Illinois convention writes, quoting a reporter working for a capitalist sheet, "it is almost impossible to tell this gathering from a meeting of the chamber of commerce."

The C. P. S. U. and the Opposition Block

By N. BUCHARIN.

THESE are the super-clever theoretical arguments with which Comrade Ossovsky seeks to justify the demand for freedom to form fractions. If you want one party only in the country, he says, and there are various interests to be considered, then strive to give "freedom" to those who protect the interests of the rich peasantry and the capitalists. It is difficult to defend the interests of the rich peasantry and the capitalists within the confines of our party constitution. Let us open the door, and you will have a fraction of NEP-men, a fraction of the petty bourgeoisie, and all this together with the Social Democrats. Then the dictatorship will flourish in our country, for then the party will correspond to a workers' and peasants' state. Strictly speaking, we could go even further in the same direction. Presently he will be saying: "Workers', Peasants' and NEP-men's State." Then everything will be in the best of order. Workers'-Peasants'-NEP-men's State, Workers'-Peasants'-NEP-men's Party, one sole party in the whole country, and everything in perfect order. (Laughter.) You will now understand what lies at the bottom of all this. The fractional groups in our party are naturally based upon various social currents, and if we permit the formation of fractional groups, if we permit the existance of fractions, then the next stage will be nothing more nor less than the legalization of other parties.

AN example: There is a Medvedyev fraction, whose standpoint has been made known to you in an article published in the Pravda. (See Inprecorr, Vol. 6, Nr. 54, July 29, 1926, p. 904, "The Right Danger in our Party.") Comrade Medvedyev demands that our state industry be placed in the hands of the concession capitalists, and that the Comintern and the R. I. L. U. be liquidated; he demands immediate affiliation to the Amsterdam international; he demands the cessation of all discussion on the peasantry, for the peasantry is—the "dreary village." This is a well-developed Menshevist program.

WE are told that we should grant freedom to this legitimate view, to this fraction. Do they not call themselves, seriously, the "Workers' Opposition"? It does not matter that they want to dissolve the Comintern and perform other revolutionary wonders; all this signifies nothing if only they call themselves the "Workers' Opposition."

LET us assume that we permit the existence of these fractions, and that our party includes a legally recognized Medvedyev fraction. Then the Menshevists would not come to us and say: We ask for nothing more, at present we only want what Medvedyev wants: close the Comintern, destroy the Red International of Labor Unions, pursue a policy of extensive concessions, and ignore the peasant, for why should you bother with him. They would say to us: "Why, will you not legalize us, since there is already one such legal fraction in your party?" It is obvious that we should than have to legalize the Menshevists. If we legalize a fraction as this in the party, we legalize by this another party, and if we legalise another party, then we are truly slipping down from the line of proletarian dictatorship to the line of political democracy. That is, to the line so long advocated by the Menshevists, by Kautsky, by the S. R. and by many others of our political enemies.

BUILD THE DAILY WITH A SUB.

...ANCE FA...
...ALIST INSURANCE FA...

The story of history relates the reverses of today like a dull lesson of elementary; he heeded terse into gold; but into gold rolling steel, and into mail and overpowered the workers.

The [illegible] (of the [illegible] factory), trade unionist Jack Whitehall, the president (of Meadow Farm) [illegible] no matter what origin, today they belong to the most robbed castes of capitalism, subject to the unlimited and minted gold in the world.

Likewise the workmen's compensation and insurance. Since [illegible] player hasn't time a suit for damages to [illegible] part of his own pocket he still sees about the loss of life and limb of "his" workers (observe crossing disasters in coal mines, oil production, railroad, steel etc.), how many workers pass successfully the mines and masses of red scars are wound about these state departments! And how many millions of dollars do the workers pay every year in legal and illegal graft!

No Red Tape.

In the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund there is no red tape. It is conducted all the way thru by working men who know what delay means to a suffering fellow worker; and there is no graft. The highest paid officer of this organization of 59,000 members receives a weekly wage of $50 for 44 hours' work a week.

Be Prepared.

Workers! Be prepared!

Steadily growing the it is—as the table points out—this, the only mutual aid society which is open to class conscious workers, is not growing fast enough to fight against the two fronts of fake state insurance and fraudulent trade union insurance.

Workers! Join! Protect yourselves! Meet some of the class conscious fellow workers in your town!

There is probably one of the many Finnish speaking branches of this organization right near where you live. Write to the main office for information, or to THE DAILY WORKER, or ask your friend who is a member.

The Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund is an organ of self-protection of the working class.

Founded in the year 1884, it has now more than 57,000 members in 346 branches in 29 states of this country. It paid till December 31, 1925, to its members: for sick benefit, $2,483,781.81; for death benefit, $3,481,371.10; together, $11,951,152.91.

Total assets on Dec. 31, 1925, $2,530,781.96.

The society organ, "Solidarity," is free for every member.

Rules for Initiation.

Men and women of the working class, who are in good health, not under 16 nor over 45 years of age, may join the organization.

Women can be insured for death benefit only.

AVERAGE RAILROAD WAGE DURING JUNE $136.00; A SLIGHT INCREASE ALSO IN NUMBER OF MEN WORKING

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

A gain of 1.4 per cent in railroad employment between May and June brings the total number of rail workers at the half year mark to 1,833,621 or 53,925 ahead of June, 1925, according to the interstate commerce commission. This June the railroads distributed $249,055,495 in wages or about $9,000,000 more than in 1925.

During the first half of 1926 the carriers employed an average of 1,772,875 workers. This means the railroad furnished about 27,274 more steady jobs than in the same period of 1925. Railroad wages for the half year total $1,456,069,668 or $37,996,117 more than the first six months last year. The employes so far this year received about 49.1 per cent of the railroad dollar, compared with 48.4 per cent the first half of 1925.

Dollar a Month More.

The average wage of all railroad workers, including high-salaried executives, was $136 in June, 1926, compared with $135 a year previous. This slight gain the commission attributes to an increase in the average number of hours worked per employe. In the half year period the average employe earned $833, compared with $813 the first half of 1925. The gain is 1 per cent.

How typical railroad employes made out in the half year, compared with the first six months of 1925, appears in the following table:

| 6-Month Rail Wage | 1925 | 1926 |
|---|---|---|
| Clerks (class B) | $767 | $776 |
| Freight handlers | 548 | 551 |
| Track labor | 447 | 439 |
| Machinists | 924 | 941 |
| Elec. workers (class A) | 948 | 933 |
| Freight carmen | 846 | 846 |
| Common shop labor | 480 | 484 |
| Teleg. and Telephoners | 977 | 904 |
| Engineers (freight) | 1,516 | 1,546 |
| Firemen (freight) | 1,007 | 1,103 |
| Conductors (freight) | 1,185 | 1,189 |
| Brakemen (freight) | 1,000 | 1,017 |

Only in the case of the telegraph and the [illegible] shop labor [illegible] show gains of about 3 per cent. Wages of shop mechanics and of train service employes show gains of between 1 and 2 per cent. Gains by other groups are hardly worth recording.

The improvement in employment affects all classes of employes except the shopmen. Compared with June, 1925, there are 3,546 more clerical workers, 25,932 more maintenance of way employes, 1,263 more workers in the various terminal groups and 11,775 more train and engine service employes. The number of shopmen is down 1,250.

Maintenance Workers Badly Paid.

The penper wage paid the quarter of a million adult male workers in the maintenance of way department remains the sorest spot in the industry. In the first half of 1926 these track workers averaged only $439, which would give them less than $900 for the full year's work. No man can support a family on that wage. Such a minimum wage tends to pull down all other wages in the industry.

LABOR WAITS EARLY DECISION IN SACCO AND VANZETTI CASE

By ART SHIELDS, Federated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Reports that Judge Webster Thayer will hand down his decision on the new trial demand of Sacco and Vanzetti some time in the second half of October are circulating among newspapermen in Boston. The amazing revelations stating the department of justice with the plot against the two defendants and the circumstantial affidavits of Celestino Madeiros and his corroborators argue strongly for a favorable decision but the cold sarcastic manner of the judge at the hearings does not indicate a change in bias.

Madeiros' execution for the Wrentham murder is set for October 27. If Thayer listens to the new evidence and rules for a new trial Madeiros will have to receive an extension of life so that he may testify in the second Sacco-Vanzetti trial. But if the judge follows his ancient custom and again shuts his eyes to the Sacco-Vanzetti arguments an attempt will be made to rush Madeiros to his doom. Such a move would, of course, be fought by the defense which would appeal the Sacco case again to the supreme court and need Madeiros again for his vital testimony if the new trial were later granted.

International Move.

There is much speculation as to the effect the expose of the federal government's part in the conspiracy will have on international agitation. The general opinion is that European labor will enter into the case again with an ardor that will eclipse all previous agitation.

The facts are these: For years European labor has been asking Washington: What about our two comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti? And Washington has always answered, in effect: The federal government is not interested in the prosecution. It belongs solely to the criminal courts of Massachusetts.

Pass Buck.

Five years ago the Italian parliament queried Washington and got that answer. Italian ambassadors and consuls have taken up the case and the buck has always been passed to Massachusetts. Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy, tells two years ago in the Saturday Evening Post how he was daily besieged in Rome with inquiries about Sacco and Vanzetti and how he asked the state department about the case and got the conventional answer that it was solely up to Massachusetts. Since then practically every European labor movement has asked Washington the same question, under the regimes of Wilson, Harding and Coolidge alike, and always got the same answer.

Agents Confess.

New Lawrence Letherman and Fred J. Weyand, former department of justice agents—two of 12 who worked on the case—said they were assigned to help convict Sacco and Vanzetti as one way of disposing of two radicals. Assistant District Attorney Ranney of Norfolk county admits the truth of this, but complains about the baring of department secrets. Attorney General Sergeant refuses to open the files that Letherman and Weyand say would prove the belief of the agents themselves in the innocence of the two men.

Gurley Flynn Comments.

"Certainly," said Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, commenting on the case, "the federal government can no longer say it is not interested in Sacco and Vanzetti."

Two of the last big European labor groups to protest were the British labor party and the German socialist delegation in the Reichstag.

And now the Europeans find they have been lied to. The American government is shown up in its own Dreyfus case, only in this case not a middle-class Jewish captain but two radical immigrant workers whose case has been taken up by the labor movement of the world.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE London correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, who tells us that Britain is striving to keep Mussolini in leash lest the fascist mad-dog break loose and start another world war out of his turn, must extremely naive or very willing to hide diplomatic line of Downing street along as facts. Every trained newspaper man knows that 99 per cent of government official statements are lies meant to cover up the truth. That Mussolini intended to meet Chamberlain at Leghorn he had the fascist papers say that he was going somewhere else. The idea is to throw the people off the track.

THE kaleidoscopic changes that are taking place in the political relationships between the European powers are of tremendous importance. The new alignments that are now throwing their shadows on the political waters are but the forerunners of another war more catastrophic than the last. The former chief rivals on the continent of Europe, the former so-called "traditional enemies," France and Germany, may be allies in the next war. How often has it been said that France and Germady could not get together because of differences of "blood"? But the basis for an alliance was found in coal and iron, just as coal and iron, separated by a frontier, were the two principal causes of the enmity between the two countries prior to the world war.

THOSE who have the time could spend it to less advantage than to read the war files of the capitalist papers. In those days it was "glorious France" and "barbarous Germany." It is not so today. The American bankers, thru the Dawes plan, put the German capitalists on their feet, and now England is learning that she only pushed the dagger deeper into her own commercial heart when she affixed her signature to the Dawes plan. For every mark in reparations her former enemies get from Germany they lose two marks worth of market. The United States was not an "ally" in the late war, but just an "associate." And now the papers have nice things to say about the Germans, while they keep mooning on England and France with befuddled boots.

• • •

THE papers will not tell the truth about what actually happened at the Mussolini-Chamberlain conference. But anyone who is acquainted with the financial, commercial and political rivalries of Europe will not be far wrong in assuming that England and Italy are framing up on France and Germany. And no doubt Briand and Stresseman, when they meet again will not cherish the most cordial sentiments towards England and Italy. The antagonism of England and Italy towards France puts the latter in a mood to make valuable concessions to Germany. Tho defeated on the battlefield only eight years ago, Germany is today more stable than either one of the allies.

POLISH CRISIS INCREASES; ARMY OFFICERS ASSAULT A MINISTER

WARSAW, Oct. 1.—Extreme tension today followed the resignation of the Bartel ministry as a result of the government's failure to obtain a vote of confidence on the budget proposals.

The serious nature of the friction between the enemies and adherents of Marshal Pilsudski was indicated when several officers early today raided the bedroom of former finance minister Vichowski, leader of the opposition.

The ex-cabinet member was beaten into unconsciousness and a gas bomb was left in his room.

WARSAW, Oct. 1.—Pilsudski today was charged by parliament with the task of forming a new cabinet, following the failure of the Bartel ministry to obtain a vote of confidence on the budget question. He accepted, and began the process of political dickers.

METAL TRADES DEPT. TO JOIN AMSTERDAM

Said to Forecast A. F. of L. Action

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL
(Special to The Daily Worker).

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 1. — Affiliation of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor with the International Metal Workers Federation was practically assured as the result of action taken here today by representatives of American Metal Trades Unions gathered at the Hotel Tuller. Final action was referred to the executive council to adjust such details as the per capita tax to be paid and American representation in the world organization. But affiliation is assured.

Reassure Americans

Metal workers in the union of Soviet Republics are not affiliated with the International Metal Workers Federation and Robert Dissman, socialdemocratic member of the German reichstag who heads the delegation from Europe now attending the convention here, promised the American labor leaders that the workers of the Soviet union would not be admitted until they provide assurances that they will not use affiliation as an instrument to interfere in the internal affairs and politics of other countries." This is the usual argument used by capitalist countries against Soviet recognition, especially by the American government.

A. F. of L. as Buffer.

It is felt here that affiliation of the American trade unions is highly desired as a buffer against the growing influence of the Soviet unions in western Europe.

In adjourning the convention of the metal trades organizations today, President James O'Connell, addressing the foreign delegation, declared:

"You have given us a new fire and a new spirit. Say to your friends and your colleagues when you return home that we are hand in hand with you

CONTINENTAL STEEL TRUST ESTABLISHED

Europeans Combine to Control Markets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BRUSSELS, Oct. 1. — A giant steel combination of French, German, Belgian, Luxemburg and Saar Valley interests is being formed to end competition and divide the market in fixed proportion.

The consortium output will be from a minimum of 26,000,000 tons to a maximum of 30,000,000 tons. The percentages allotted the different members are: Germany 43.18; France 31.19; Belgium 11.68; Luxemburg 5.33 and the Saar Valley 8.77.

Divide Up Production.

This gives a monthly output of 795,000 tons to Germany; 670,000 to France; 295,000 to Belgium; 310,000 to Luxemburg and 320,000 to the Saar Valley.

Each country is to deposit $1 in a common fund for each ton of steel turned out within its percentage. For each ton over such percentage it is charged $4. A repayment of $2 a ton will be paid any country failing in any one year to produce its percentage of steel out of the minimum of 26,000,000 tons.

British and U. S. Hit.

A central international office is to be established and all accounts balanced yearly.

As the British and American interests are not party to this combine, both, particularly the British who claim the continental market, are faced with the combine's strong competition.

TO FIGHT FOR 5 DAY WEEK, SAYS WILLIAM GREEN

Calls Furriers and the Printers Pioneers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1. — Encouraged by action of Henry Ford in adopting the five-day week, the American Federation of Labor will fight vigorously for a shorter working week in industry, William Green, president, declared today.

Green does not believe that there will be universal acceptance immediately of the five-day week, but he thinks that in a few years employers will realize that with the increased production thru time saving machines, wages will be increased and working hours reduced.

The federation, not Ford, should be given credit for first bringing about the shorter week, Green said.

Praises Furriers.

"Ford seems merely to have accepted the philosophy of the federation in regard to hours, wages and production," Green declared.

Thru the federation's activity, the five-day week already has been established in two important trades, printing and fur working, said Green.

"The week now for the day printing trade is 44 hours, or, five and one half days," Green explained. "In most of the night printing trades, it is 40 hours, or, five days.

"Two months ago, we made agreements whereby the fur working trade has a 40-hour week, or, five days, as Ford has now established."

In Confined Trades.

The five-day week will come first in the so-called confining trades, Green said.

"It is essential in these trades, where the workers labor at top speed and under confining and oftentimes unsatisfactory conditions that the hours should be reduced," he said, "Drudgery

TEN STRIKERS STILL HELD ON EXCESSIVE BAIL

Winnick Is Freed After Brutal Grilling

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 1.—Tom Winnik is out. Winnik was released from the Passaic county jail on $1,000 bail after unsuccessful attempts had been made to implicate him in the bombing frame-up, and after he had been held without bail for days while police attempted to force a confession from him. They hoped to make him implicate himself and his fellow-pickets in the bombing frame-up.

Ten strikers are still being held under the excessive bail of $450,000, and for one man, at all has been set. Justice Charles W. Parker, who recently set bail for Mrs. Hall when she was first arrested on suspicion of murder, at $15,000, yesterday named $80,000 as the collective bail for the five textile strikers in Hackensack jail. These men have been held without bail since their arrest last week. In addition there are the five men held in Passaic county jail at Paterson on $859,000. William Sikora is being held there without bail.

When the $80,000 bail was set at the hearing before Judge Parker, Jack Rinsler, attorney for the defense, asked prosecuting attorney, A. C. Hart, to produce the confessions which he claims the accused strikers have made, and on which the men are supposed to be held. According to the reporter of the Passaic Daily Herald present at the time, "Mr. Hart admitted that he did not have signed statements and that he could not get them."

Weakened Condition.

Frank Hall, wife of the slain chief's days' growth of beard on his pale face, Winnik was too unnerved to tell a connected story when questioned at strike headquarters. In disjointed phrases he told only a little of what happened after his arrest.

"Fire-station near the jail," said Winnik. ""Beaten up there first—was knocked out—senseless—don't remember—don't know how long—hungry—nothing to eat there—." Winnik looked dully at his young wife who had been waiting around anxiously at headquarters for hours. "He hardly seemed to comprehend who she was.

Negro Editors Are Victims of Sedition Charges in Kentucky

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. — Two colored editors of Louisville, Kentucky, I. Willis Cole and William Warley, have been offered the aid of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in defending themselves for alleged violation of "criminal syndicalism" and "sedition" sections of Kentucky law. The two Negro editors, Cole of the Louisville Leader and Warley of the Louisville News, are accused for an editorial which condemned the 5th standard of justice prevailing in Kentucky.

A colored man charged with murder and assault had been promptly hung whereas a white man charged with assault upon an 11-year old colored girl had been declared insane without any questioning of his guilt. The county attorney charged that the editorial "was designedly written to create race hatred."

PETITIONS FOR W. P. CANDIDATES MUST BE IN BY 10 A. M. TODAY

The district office of the Chicago Workers Party requests that all comrades having signed petitions to put the party candidates on the state ticket in the coming election, turn them in to the district office, 19 S. Lincoln St. by 10 a. m. today, Saturday. The need for additional petitions is urgent.

POLICE, PRESS AND SPIES COMBINE IN HUGE PLOT TO FRAME-UP STRIKE LEADERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 1.—All the minions of the Passaic mill barons, the police, the press, private detectives and labor spy agencies, are combining in a monstrous conspiracy to break the strike thru the medium of the most brazen frame-up in the history of labor struggles.

Passaic newspapers carry screaming headlines accusing the strike leaders of throwing bombs and assaulting police. The police have reverted to the methods of the inquisition to impose fake "confessions" on maltreated strike leaders. Professional labor spies do their share by planting bombs, that so far have injured no one, but that serve the purpose of the frame-up artist.

The conspirators have only begun on their unjuitous program of frame-up. It is high time for the workers of the land to turn their eyes towards Passaic and to be ready to help their fighting brothers in the brave battle that at no time in its long career has been as critical as it is now.

"Riot Law" Is Proved Fiction in New Jersey

By Federated Press.

NEW YORK—(FP)—"Riot law" invented by sheriff George Ntimmo of Bergen county, New Jersey, is a vicious fiction, without standing in the legal statutes. Proof of this is found in the dismissal of cases brot against New York friends of Passaic strikers who were arrested in the sheriff's assault on a picket line five months ago. Norman Thomas and Robert Dunn, both Civil Liberties representatives, are free after being out on $10,000 bail each since their three-day imprisonment.

Esther Lowell, Federated Press correspondent who was arrested after helping up a woman knocked down by police, has been out on $1,500 bail. Hazle Reben Powell, a writer, was on $5,000 bail for asserting his civil right to stand on a Passaic sidewalk. Thomas will make the test suit for false arrest.

Petitions for writs of habeas corpus to release seven Passaic textile strikers held without complaints or warrants for alleged implication in a bombing affair are being argued by John Larkin Hughes, Civil Liberties attorney, in Jersey City.

Henry T. Hunt, another Civil Liberties attorney and counsel for Passaic Local 1603, United Textile Workers, asserts that the bombing charge has all the appearance of a frame-up. Thirty strikers were held incommunicado without complaints or warrants, supposedly for connection with the bombing. Hunt says the bombs were probably planted by "some detective acting under the hire of the mill owners."

Cal Glad of Chance to Have Comedian as White House Guest

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—President Coolidge this morning knows exactly what's wrong with Europe and what should be done to rectify conditions. He got a complete earfull of lowdown on the situation last night from America's self-appointed diplomat, Will Rogers, by name.

The gum-chewing comedian, just returned from Europe from whence he sent innumerable postal cards of advice to the president, is a White House guest. He wired Everett Sanders, the Coolidge secretary, yesterday afternoon that he would be in Washington for a few hours and would like, if possible, to pay his respects to the office.

When the president heard this, he directed Sanders to ascertain when Rogers' train arrived so that a White House automobile might be on hand to meet him, and to extend an invitation to stay overnight.

A long telegram came back immediately, its tenor being in effect: "Oh hey! isn't this swell? I've never been in the White House before. You bet I accept!" And in conclusion, the master of the lariat stated. "Sanders, if this is a joke, for God's sake head me off at Philadelphia."

N. Y. GRAPHIC HELPS UNCOVER PASSAIC PLOT

Metropolitan Journal Charges Frame-Up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 1.—The latest attempt of the police of Passaic and Garfield to break the big textile strike has been marked with such acts of atrocious brutality and out-and-out framing-up of strike leaders as to invite the severest condemnation of the New York capitalist press.

The New York Graphic, one of the leading New York evening papers, yesterday printed several photographs showing some of the arrested strike leaders after they had been beaten up by the police and forced by the most inhuman degree methods to sign unread statements implicating themselves in the latest fantastic plot of the mill-controlled police. The following editorial appeared in the same issue:

JERSEY JUSTICE.

If Gov. Moore of New Jersey wants something to think about let him contemplate the spectacle in New Brunswick and compare it with what is taking place in Passaic.

While Mrs. Hall, the chief figure in a four-year-old murder case, is enjoying freedom on bail of $50,000 on a charge of first degree murder, a group of underpaid and almost starving workers who dared to protest because their wages were cut in the textile mills are held under bonds of $850,000.

One striker is held under bonds of $100,000. The prisoners are hustled from one jail to another at night to prevent their lawyers from serving writs of habeas corpus. The imprisoned strikers refuse to admit the charges against them in written confessions they are brutally beaten with lead pipes, the mark was stamped to the bars of his cell with leathern thongs and struck until he was almost unconscious.

That is the method which the police of Passaic and other textile towns in New Jersey are using to break the mill strike. Some 12,000 workers are still out and they have been taken into the fold of the American Federation of Labor. This seems to have infuriated the police.

If Gov. Moore wants to be the champion of justice in New Jersey, as indicated by his activity in New Brunswick, there is a broad field for him to exemplify it in the textile zone.

Who elects the governor in New Jersey? Is it the people who work for a livelihood or the textile manufacturers?

We will send sample copies of The DAILY WORKER to your friends—send us name and address.

RED CROSS RAPS FLORIDA STATE OFFICERS FOR BLOCKING RELIEF

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—By minimizing the loss in Florida's hurricane, state officials, including Governor Martin, and real estate operators "have seriously handicapped" the Red Cross in its efforts to provide relief for the storm victims, John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, declared today in a message to C. C. Pinckney, chairman of the Richmond, Va., chapter.

"The poor people have suffered as regarded as of less consequence than the hotel and tourist interests of Florida," said Payne.

Aid Garment Strike

NEW YORK CITY, [illegible] their strike of 40,000 [illegible] Garment Manufacturers' Association, [illegible] strikers, and from 35 to 40 per week for married men and women.

Answer to Bosses.

The move was announced last night [illegible] strikers' answer to the refusal of the [illegible] for peace conference with the [illegible] manufacturers and [illegible] strike leader. The union was also able to announce that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America [illegible] voted $25,000 to the cloak strikers [illegible]. A check for $10,000 being received [illegible].

Sidney Hyman, chairman of the General Strike Committee, stated that the [illegible] for funds, made to American Federation of Labor international unions and other sympathetic bodies, [illegible] a favorable response and money has begun to pour in. Speakers were applauded when they declared the union is prepared to strike into next season if necessary with unabated strength.

Cloaks, Faw and Goetly.

It was pointed out that, in the trade [illegible] buyers and retailers are complaining there is a serious shortage of cloaks. These cloaks which are on [illegible], they complain, are being offered at profiteering prices and warning being given manufacturers, who are taking advantage of the present crisis, that they will regret it, when the strike is settled. Others who spoke at Webster Hall yesterday included Morris Rubin and Joseph Boruchowitz.

The temporary injunction against the I. L. G. W. picketing was made permanent, or technically speaking "continued," by Supreme Court Justice Phoenix Ingram. It was first issued by Justice Charles L. Guy and has brought the New York trade unions generally into a realization of the genius of injunctions against labor.

Justice Ingram adds a new wrinkle to definitions of "crime." It is not necessary, he opinion says in effect, to show actual violence on the part of pickets. It is only necessary to show that they picketed en masse, that there were lots of pickets, enough to create an impression of "mass power" enough to be effective. His exact words are:

"It suffices to say that on several occasions hundreds of the strikers, or so-called pickets, have been arrested and brought before city magistrates.

The courts have already commented upon the vast numbers of strikers who daily congregate in front of and in the vicinity of the places of business of the manufacturers. Such acts in the particular neighborhood ripe for disorder, impede traffic and have a tendency to incite violence."

Student Paper Raps Domination of "U" Life by Athletics

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 1.— Articles on the subject of the institution in which [illegible] and athletics pay homage to [illegible] appeared in the Daily Northwestern, official publication of Northwestern University here.

Colleges today, the editorial declared, have become merely annexes of football stadiums, and the prominent athlete, regardless of his talent in studies, dominates the campus and the student.

Rumors of Scandal.

The ticket shortage gave rise to numerous rumors, chief among them one that a scandalous situation would be uncovered when speculators began to unload—at high prices—the vast number of reserved seat tickets they have had purchased.

At the Yankee business office yesterday announced that all reserved seat tickets had been sold and that no general admission bleacher seats would be put on sale on the morning of games one, two and six, which are to be played in this city.

The Story.

Ed Barrow, Yank manager, was too busy to discuss the situation. A report that Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, arbiter of the baseball world, had been unable to obtain a prompt allotment of seats was denied by the judge, who is at the Hotel Roosevelt.

"I probably have not had all the tickets I want for the minor leagues —they are entitled to them, you know—or for other people thruout the country," said the judge, "but I think I have enuf to cover the demand."

Admits Speculation.

When asked whether he had heard a report that thousands of tickets had fallen into the hands of speculators, he said: "A certain percentage of tickets for the world series inevitably fall into the hands of the scalpers. There does not seem to be any way to prevent it."

WORLD SERIES TICKETS SHORTAGE RAKE-OFF IS BIG

Fans Suspect Motives Behind Shortage

NEW YORK, Oct. —Infuriated subscribers for world series tickets, who have held up scats that are not available, besieged the baseball parks' office today. More than 18,000 fans have been unable to secure tickets.

The ticket shortage gave rise to numerous rumors, chief among them one that a scandalous situation would be uncovered when speculators began to unload—at high prices—the vast number of reserved seat tickets they have had purchased.

At the Yankee business office yesterday announced that all reserved seat tickets had been sold and that no general admission bleacher seats would be put on sale on the morning of games one, two and six, which are to be played in this city.

ARMOUR SWINDLE IS CONDONED BY BOARD OF TRADE

Sensational Charge Is Made by College Head

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—The pits of the Chicago board of trade buzzed with speculation today in the wake of the charges and insinuations concerning the Armour Grain company's alleged adulteration of rye, contained in the open letter to John A. Bunnell, president of the board, published in the current issue of the round-up.

College Chief Charges.

The letter is signed by J. Ralph Pickell, chief of the round-up college of scientific price-fixing, of which "the round-up" is the official publication. Additional weight was laid to his remarks on the floor of the exchange because of the close relationship said to exist between the colleges and Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine.

Most of the charges, contained in the letter are hidden in questions directed at Bunnell. All deals with the alleged mixing of rye sereenings with first quality grain with which Armour company was charged and later exonerated by a board of trade directors.

Among the questions which Pickell asks are: "If you, as president of the board, saw that report containing specific evidence of criminality, did you act immediately?"

"Would you like to have me print that report and at the same time explain why you failed to act on it until about five months later?"

"Can you tell me how five cars of rye were loaded out of the Northwestern Public Elevator when, according to the records, there were but 598.52 bushels in the elevator?"

"Do you know that it seems to be only the Chicago board of trade among the exchanges, that condones criminality?"

Bunnell has not, as yet, issued an official answer to the letter.

Seab Building Busy.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Construction of a $5,000,000 apartment house on a 12-acre tract near Rock Creek Park is announced as the next job of Harry Wardman, one of the organized building trades in the District of Columbia. The local building trades council has for the past two years been conducting a long-distance picket of the British government to prevent its giving to Wardman the construction of its new embassy building.

Governor Al Smith.

Gov. Al Smith of New York will be governor for the fifth time if he is elected over his opponents, which he probably will be. Al Smith's political career has been consistently built up thru many years of steady nobility to feal the workers of New York into putting the Tammany man into the State House at Albany. Ben Gitlow, the workers' party candidate and a worker himself is telling the exploited millions of the empire state that Al Smith is a tool of the bosses—and is proving it.
